CONCORDANCE TO SWEDENBORG.

Stability. See ESTABLISH—stabilire.

Stable. Stabulum.

S. 26³. See MANGER, here.

M. 76². Stables seen . . . (which)=instructions.

T. 328². The concupiscences of the flesh may be compared to stables in which are asses, he-goats, and swine; and the affections of the spirit, to stables in which are thoroughbred horses, and also sheep and lambs.

D. 3817. See ODOUR, here.

Stacte. Stacte.

A. 3263^o. 'Camels carrying stacte,' etc. (Gen.xxxvii. 25)=the interior goods of such. (=interior natural truths conjoined with the good in the natural man. 4748.)

4748². 'Stacte,' etc.=interior truths in the Natural which are from the good there; for truths by themselves do not make the Natural; but good by truths. Hence its varieties are according to the quality of truth conjoined with good . . .

5621. 'Wax and stacte' (Gen.xliii.11)=the truths of good of the interior Natural . . . 'Stacte'=truth from good. The reason these=what is of the interior Natural, is that these spices are purer than 'resin, and honey.'

10292. 'Stacte' (Ex.xxx.34)=the affection of sensuous truth; for 'stacte'=sensuous truth. The reason it=the affection of this truth, is its fragrance . . .

—2. The reason 'stacte'=the affection of sensuous truth, is that it is here mentioned first; for the incense was made up of four spices . . . and the one mentioned first is the most external.

—4. That 'stacte'=the affection of sensuous truth, cannot be confirmed from other places in the Word, because it is not mentioned anywhere else; but stacte of another kind, which is also expressed by a different Hebrew word, is mentioned among the spices which were carried down into Egypt (Gen.xxxvii. and xliii.), and things carried down there involve such as are in the external or natural man.

E. 324²⁶. Mentioned.

Staff. Bacillum. D.2763.

Staff. Scipio.

See ROD—baculus.

A. 4876⁴. 'The Lord . . . taketh away from Jerusalem the rod—baculum, and the staff' (Is.iii.1). Ex.

VOL. VI.

9028. 'If he rise again and walk abroad upon his staff' (Ex.xxi.19)=the forces of life therein. . . 'Staff'=forces) for 'a rod'=the power which belongs to truth, thus forces; and 'a staff' in like manner, but in reference to those who are not in good health; in which sense it is mentioned in, 'Jehovah was my stay' (Ps. xviii.18), which=power. In Isaiah, 'to remove the rod and the staff' (iii.1)=the power and the forces of life from truth and good. . . In the Original Language, 'a staff' is so called from leaning upon and being supported, which, in the Spiritual World, is effected through truth and good. E.433³³.

T. 74. Like a hand when its staff is broken.

E. 727⁹. 'A man whose staff is in his hand for multitude of days' (Zech.viii.4)=the wise who trust not at all in themselves, but in the Lord alone.

Stag. Cervus, Cervinus.

A. 7176. The bulls and cows (in Mercury) approach a species of stags and hinds. See D.3262.

T. 815. Free nations are like the great stags with lofty horns, which roam the plains, groves, and forests in full freedom.

D. 5995. Dippel appeared like a wild stag in bonds. Zinzendorf loosed his bonds, and set him at me, and he rushed furiously at me to lacerate and destroy me. (A dog then) rushed at the stag which was over me and evilly entreated it; and that huge stag was afterwards sent away into bonds elsewhere. The stag was Dippel . . . J.(Post.)40.

E. 455²⁰. 'He shall leap as a hart' (Is.xxxv.6)=he shall have joy from the perception of truth.

1200³. In the World of Spirits are seen stags, etc.

D. Love viii. Mentioned.

Stage. See under BOARDED, and THEATRE.

Stage-player. See PRIZEFIGHTER.

Stagger. Titubare.

A. 1066. Of the Church when vastated it is predicated that 'it shall stagger like a drunken man,' etc. (Is.xxiv. 20). E.304⁴.

1072⁶. 'They stagger, but not with strong drink' (Is.xxix.9). Ex. E.376³².

[A.] 5120⁸. 'They shall reel to and fro' (Jer.xxv.16). Ex.

H. 35. He who ascends from a lower Heaven . . . falters in his voice . . .

E. 235⁷. 'To stagger in judgment' (Is.xxviii.7)=senselessness. 260⁶. (=that they do not see the truths which belong to intelligence. 376³¹.)

400⁵. See NOD, here.

Stagnant. Stagnatus.

See LAKE-stagnum.

P. 117. Like impure waters, stopped up, or stagnant.

304². The general delight in Hell is smelled as stagnant water . . .

Stain. Labes.

W. 432¹. From his hereditary stain, man is born into evils of every kind . . . and this stain is not removed unless the higher degrees are opened. D.Wis.iii.4².

Stairs. See under LADDER.

Stake. Palus. D.3006.

See PEG.

Stalk. See under CANE-Calamus.

Stalk. Culmus.

A. 7604. 'The flag was a stalk' (Ex.ix.31)=that the truth stood forth, and looked downwards. Ex.

Stalk. Stipula.

A. 7131. 'To gather stalks for straw' (Ex.v.12)=to find some scientific truth. . . For 'a stalk'=such truth as is accommodated to what is scientific . . . The reason 'a stalk'=such truth, is that what is meant is the stem -calamus-at the top of which is the seed; and 'seeds'=truths and goods; and thus the stem which is beneath them=a general vessel of truth; thus scientific truth. Ex.

8285. 'It devourereth them as stubble' (Ex.xv.7)=devastation and damnation as of themselves. . . It is said 'as stubble,' because plenary devastation is signified.

T. 383². Evil . . . consumes faith like stubble . . .

E. 357⁵. That evils and falsities are dispersed as it were to nothing, is signified by 'as the dust, and as the driven stubble' (Is.xli.2).

448¹¹. 'The house of Esau shall be for stubble' (Obad.18). Ex.

540³. 'Every worker of wickedness shall be stubble' (Mal.iv.1). Ex.

Stall. See under FATTED.

Stamen. Stamen.

A. 5726². The first stamina may be called little vessels . . .

5894⁶. From the first thread of life . . . 9296².

7408². Series of the purest filaments . . .

W. 6. This first form, as a stamen or initiaiment . . . D.Loveii⁶.

D. Wis. vii.2⁴. The Spiritual accompanies every thread . . .

4. Staminatum, occurs.

Stammerer. Balbus.

A. 7225³. Why Moses, because he was a stammerer, calls himself 'uncircumcised in lips.'

E. 455¹⁹. 'The tongue of the stammerers shall be swift to speak' (Is.xxxii.4)=that those who can with difficulty apprehend the truths of the Church will confess them from affection.

Stamp. Cudere. T.32C.

Stand. Stare.

See under CONSIST.

A. 2247. 'Abraham, he stood yet before Jehovah' (Gen.xviii.22)=the Lord's thought from the Human.

3065. 'I stand by the fountain of waters' (Gen.xxiv.13)=the state of conjunction of truth Divine in the Human.

3136. 'He stood by the camels' (ver.30)=presence in general scientifics.

3141. 'Why standest thou without?' (ver.31)=somewhat therefrom.

5196. 'Behold he was standing by the river' (Gen.xli.2)=from boundary to boundary. Ex.

5336. 'When he stood before Pharaoh king of Egypt' (ver.46)=when his presence was in the Natural. . . 'To stand' before anyone=presence.

5638. 'They stood before Joseph' (Gen.xliii.15)=the presence of the Celestial of the Spiritual there.

5869⁶. 'All that stood with him' (Gen.xlv.1)=such things as hinder conjunction. 5872.

7068. They who are in truth stand erect . . .

7159. 'To stand in the way' (Ex.v.20)=manifestation.

7530. 'Not to be able to stand' before anyone (Ex.ix.11)=not to be able to be present.

7548. 'For this have I made thee stand' (ver.16)=that as yet communication remained, and they passed through states according to order. Ex.

7593. 'Ye shall stand no longer' (ver.28)=to be no longer detained.

8686. 'The people stood by Moses' (Ex.xviii.13)=obedience then from truth Divine. Ex. 8690.

8918. 'They stood afar off' (Ex.xx.18)=removal from internal things.

10549. 'They stood at the door of the tent' (Ex.xxxiii.8)= . . . that they were outside what is holy of the worship, etc. 10551.

H. 144⁶. In Heaven no one is allowed to stand at another's back . . .

R. 366. 'Standing before the throne . . .' (Rev.vii.9)=hearing the Lord and doing what He commands 'To stand before God'=to hear and do what He commands. Ill. 369. 390. 493.

417⁴. They were seen as if lying down while they were deliberating; and as standing when they had come to a conclusion.

510. 'To stand upon their feet' (Rev.xi.11)=natural life accordant with spiritual life; thus to be vivified by the Lord. E.666.

866. 'To stand before God' (Rev.xx.12)=to be presented and gathered together to Judgment.

M. 16. They stood round the table . . . and whispered devout praise to the Lord.

415⁵. They stood, now, near the Angel; now, near the Satans, favouring those they stood near.

D. 3117. Certain appear standing in their places who told me they were walking.

E. 336⁹. 'To stand' is predicated of truth.

414. 'Who is able to stand?' (Rev.vi.17)=who will endure and live?

—. The word 'stand,' like 'walk,' and 'sit,'=to be and to live; and 'stand' has a similar signification to 'stand firm—consistere,' and 'stand still—subsistere.' Ill. 666.

456. 'Standing before the throne . . . '=those in the Lord's Kingdom.

462. 'Stood around the throne' (Rev.vii.11)=conjunction . . . 489.

606. 'To stand upon them' (Rev.x.5)=that they are subject to Him.

62S. 'The Angel stood near—adstitit' (Rev.xi.1)=the will of the Lord, and command.

638⁷. 'To stand near Him' (Zech.iv.14)=to be and to come forth from Him.

639. 'Which stand before the God of the earth' (ver. 4)=which are Divine things proceeding from the Lord, and are His in Heaven and the Church. . . 'To stand before Him'=to be from Him; thus what is His in Heaven and the Church.

—². 'To stand before God,' when said in the Word of Angels and the men of the Church,=to be from Him . . . for all the esse of Heaven and the world proceeds from the Lord . . . This proceeding Divine is called 'the Word,' which is called the Divine truth . . . and as this extends itself around the Lord in every direction, it is that which is properly said 'to stand before Him' . . . for it looks to the Lord as its centre, and so therefore do the Angels who are recipients of it . . . from which it is that the Angels are said 'to stand before the Lord;' for 'to stand' is properly said of the Divine truth, because it encompasses the Lord as a Sun.

—³. 'To stand before God'=to be in the Divine truth, consequently with the Lord, in the following passages. Ill.

—⁴. (Thus) 'to stand before the God of the earth'=the Divine which proceeds from the Lord, which is His in Heaven and the Church. That this, and those in it, are meant, may be evident from the fact, that 'to stand before the God of the earth' is said of the two olive-trees, and of the two candlesticks, by which are signified good and truth, consequently the proceeding Divine.

666³. (Thus) 'to stand upon the feet'=new life such as belongs to a regenerate man. Ill.

687⁶. 'To stand' (Ps.i.1)=what belongs to the life of the intention from the will.

—¹⁷. 'To stand' before Him=to regard and to understand what He wills.

771. 'I stood upon the sand of the sea' (Rev.xiii.1)=a continuation of the state . . .

934. 'Standing near the sea of glass' (Rev.xv.2)=because they were in truths from the Word. . . 'To stand near it'=to be in them.

1171. 'They stood afar off' (Rev.xviii.17)=not so much in these things, through fear.

Stand in the way. See OBSTACLE.

Standard. See BANNER.

Star. Astrum.

D. 3411. He said he was from the stars.

E. 175¹². 'The stars—astra seu stellae' (Lnke xxi.25)=the Knowledges of good and truth. 304⁴⁷. A.1808⁷.

Star. Sidus.

A. 537⁷. The very stars correspond: it is the Societies of Heaven and their habitations with which there is a correspondence of the stars; not that they are there; but that they are in such an order.

T. 759². See star—stella, here. A.8379.

E. 304⁵. 'The stars—stellae—and constellations' (Is. xiii.10)=the Knowledges of good and truth. 401¹². A.1326³. 1808³. 8902².

Starry. Stelliferus.

A. 184. A little star (appears at man's resuscitation from the dead).

940². Wandering stars seen around a Spirit=Falsities; but not so when the stars are not wandering.

1525. They sometimes see a heaven . . . beautifully studded with little stars.

1527. When the Lord pleases, good Spirits appear to others, and also to themselves, as bright stars, which sparkle according to the quality of their charity and faith.

1806. When one contemplates the starry heaven, and thinks of the Lord's Kingdom.

1808. 'Number the stars' (Gen.xv.5)=a representation of goods and truths in a mental view of the constellations; (for) 'stars'=goods and truths. 'Stars,' wherever mentioned in the Word,=goods and truths; and, in the contrary sense, evils and falsities; or, what is the same, they=Angels, or Societies of them; or evil Spirits and their companies. When they=the former, they are fixed stars; but when the latter, they are wandering stars.

—². When the starry heaven appears (there), and the stars therein are fixed, it is known at once that they=goods and truths; and when the stars appear wandering, that they=evils and falsities. From the very glow and sparkling of the stars, it may be evident of what quality they are.

—³. That 'stars'=goods and truths. Ill.

—⁵. That 'stars'=goods and truths, or, what is the same, those in goods and truths, as the Angels. Ill.

—^e. 'The stars' (Luke xxi.25)=goods and truths, or the Knowledges of good and truth, which at the consummation of the age . . . are thus darkened.

1984³. The Knowledges of good and truth, which are 'the stars' (Matt.xxiv.29), and which are here called 'the powers of the heavens,' will thus fall down and vanish. (=the Knowledges of faith. 2120.) 2495, Ill.

2849. 'As the stars of the heavens' (Gen.xxii.17)=the multitude of the Knowledges of good and truth.

—, The spiritual are they who here and there in the Word are compared to 'the stars,' and this from the Knowledges of good and truth which they have; but not the celestial, because they have not Knowledges, but perceptions. Besides, the stars illumine the night, and the spiritual have a nocturnal light, as from the moon and stars, relatively to the light of day in which the celestial are.

2850. 'The stars,' or Knowledges, have relation to the Rational.

3353³. 'The stars have withdrawn their shining' (Joel ii.10)=the Knowledges of good and truth . . .

3378. 'I will multiply thy seed as the stars of the heavens' (Gen.xxvi.4)=truths, and the Knowledges of faith.

3448^e. It is chiefly the stars which are called 'the army of the heavens;' and by 'the stars' are signified truths; and, in the opposite, falsities. 3614³.

3707^e. 'Stars' of the heavens'=rational things.

3820⁴. Such suppose that the learned will there shine as the stars . . . But the learned, wise, and intelligent =those who are in good . . . and it is these who will shine as the stars.

4050. I then saw a little star about the region of the left eye; and afterwards many little stars of a bright red colour, gleaming whitely. . . Lastly I saw as it were the starry heaven . . . These things represented the infundibulum in the brain, above which was the brain itself, which was signified by the starry heaven.

4060⁴. 'The stars shall fall from heaven' (Matt.xxiv.) =that the Knowledges of good and truth will perish. 10604⁴. H.1². S.14². R.27^e.

4627⁴. Those who relate to the interiors of the nostrils . . . have apertures opening at the side, through which they see as it were heaven with stars in a blue sky.

4697. 'Eleven stars' (Gen.xxxvii.9)=the Knowledges of good and truth.

—, The reason 'stars'=these Knowledges, is that they are small luminaries which shine at night, when they give forth into our atmosphere gleams of light, just as Knowledges give forth gleams of good and truth. Ill.

—⁸. As 'stars'=the Knowledges of good and truth, they=also the doctrinals of the Church; for these are Knowledges.

4769³. That 'the army of the heavens,' and 'the stars'=the Knowledges of good and truth. Ref.

5128⁸. Those (sensuous things) which are in the centre receive light through the Rational, and (appear there) as little stars which gleam and shed light around . . .

5393⁹. In those of (these infernals) in whom there is regard for what is good, this is sometimes represented by little stars, almost fiery, but not bright white. D.1068.

5566. A Spirit who appeared like a black cloud, around which were wandering stars. When wandering stars appear there, they=falsities; but fixed stars, truths. 7803².

5912². Good makes every truth like a little star, in the midst of which there is a luminosity.

6015⁸. That then the Knowledges of good and truth perish, is signified by, 'I will darken the stars of the heavens,' and 'all the luminaries of light' (Ezek.xxxii.7,8). E.372³. 401¹³.

6926. The Spirits of Mercury go forth outside the sphere of this world, into the starry heaven.

6952⁴. 'The stars of heaven' (Rev.xii.4)=the Knowledges of good and truth; 'to cast them to the earth'=to destroy them.

7988². 'The stars'=the Knowledges of good and truth.

—⁴. For the angelic abodes shine like stars; as is stated in Dan.xii.3.

8030. Those in that Heaven appear clothed in azure, spotted with little golden stars . . . When, in the world, they contemplate the starry heaven, they call it the abode of the Angels . . .

8112. When there is any slight disagreement among (the Spirits of Jupiter), there appears to them as it were a thin bright white ray . . . or a little wreath-fasciola, in which are sparkling stars. . . When the stars sparkle and wander at the same time, it is not a good sign; but sparkling fixed stars are a good sign. (=falsity, or truth, respectively. U.50.)

8153^e. For by the starry heaven is signified the angelic Heaven.

8379. The dwellings (in Jupiter) within, are spotted round about and above as with little stars, after the image of the heavens; for they want to exhibit within their houses a likeness of the visible heavens with their stars—sideribus; because they believe the abodes of the Angels to be there.

8906³. 'Stars'=the Knowledges of good and truth, which will no longer have light from faith and love, thus from Heaven, which is 'to withdraw their brightness' (Joel ii.). E.400³.

9438. On the Earths in the starry heaven. Gen.art. U.123.

9642^e. 'To cast some of the army and of the stars down to the earth' (Dan.viii.10)=to destroy the goods and truths of Heaven, and the very Knowledges of good and truth.

9643^e. 'The morning stars' (Job xxxviii.7) = the Knowledges of good and truth from good . . . These are said 'to sing' when they arise.

9697. Their sun is one of the lesser stars. 10162, Ex.

10445. 'I will multiply your seed as the stars of the heavens' (Ex.xxxii.13) = goods and truths, and the Knowledges of them.

—^e. For by 'the stars' are signified goods and truths as to Knowledges.

10589. It was found that (the Spirits of the Fourth Earth) were from a star, which is their sun, very distant from the sun of our system; that its position is low down near the milky way; and that that star is among the lesser ones.

10771. The sun (of the Fifth Earth) which to us is a star . . .

10810. This human form appeared in a flaming beam, around which were little stars of the same colour. Thus did the Lord present Himself . . .

10834. The sun (of the Sixth Earth) which to us is a star . . .

H. 69. An angelic Society (was seen) as a cloud . . . with little stars round about . . . These little stars were Angels, who so appeared from light from the Lord.

119^e. In these passages, 'stars'=the Knowledges of good and truth, which are said 'to be blackened,' 'to lose their light,' and 'to fall from heaven,' when they are no longer.

S. 13². 'A star fallen from heaven' (Rev.ix.1)=the Knowledges of truth destroyed.

23³. 'The star which went before them' (Matt.ii.)= Knowledge from Heaven.

61. Many have believed that they would shine as the stars . . .

112^e. 'The stars' (Matt.xxiv.)=the Lord as to the Knowledges of good and truth.

F. 56^e. 'The stars of Heaven' (which the dragon dragged down with his tail)=the Knowledges of truth.

W. 316³. The stellar forms in the brain.

366³. The multitude of the glands of the brain may be compared to that of the stars; and the multitude of the fibrils from them, to that of the rays which go forth from the stars.

P. 35. If wisdom is not conjoined with love, it is like a falling star.

R. 51. 'In His right hand seven stars' (Rev.i.16)=all the Knowledges of good and truth in the Word, which are from it with Angels of Heaven and men of the Church. E.72, Ex. and Ill.

— . When the Angels are below the Heavens, there appear around them as it were little stars in great abundance; and in like manner around those Spirits who, while they lived in the world, acquired the Knowledges of good and truth, or truths of life and of doctrine. These little stars appear fixed with those who are in genuine truths from the Word; but wandering with those who are in falsified truths. . . Hence it is evident that by 'stars' are signified the Knowledges of good and truth from the Word. —², Ill.

64. 'The mystery of the seven stars which thou sawest in My right hand' (ver.20)=the arcana in the visions concerning the New Heaven. 'The seven stars'=the Church in the Heavens. (=revelation of goods and truths, which are all from Him. E.88.)

65. 'The seven stars are the Angels of the seven Churches' (id.)=the New Church in the Heavens, which is the New Heaven. (=those who receive goods and truths from the Lord. E.90.) R.237.

— . There appears in the Spiritual World a heavenly expanse full of stars, as (here); it appears from the angelic Societies in Heaven; each Society there shines as a star to those below. From this they know in what situation the angelic Societies are.

74. 'These things saith He that holdeth the seven stars in His right hand' (Rev.ii.1)=the Lord from whom are all truths, through the Word. . . 'The seven stars in His right hand'=all the Knowledges of good and truth in the Word, which are thence from the Lord with the Angels of Heaven and the men of the Church. E.96.

151. 'I will give him the morning star' (ver.28)=intelligence and wisdom then. (=intelligence and wisdom from the Lord's Divine Human. E.179.)

— . 'Stars'=the Knowledges of good and truth; and as through these there is intelligence and wisdom, these are signified by 'the morning star.' The reason it is called the morning star, is that intelligence and wisdom will be given them by the Lord when He will come to inaugurate the New Church. Ex.

155. 'These things saith He that hath . . . the seven stars' (Rev.iii.1)=the Lord, from whom are . . . all the Knowledges of good and truth. E.184.

[R.] 333. 'The stars of heaven fell unto the earth' (Rev.vi.13)=that all the Knowledges of good and truth have disappeared. E.402.

— In the Spiritual World, stars appear to fall from Heaven to the earth there, where the Knowledges of good and truth are perishing.

408. 'There fell from heaven a great star burning as it were a torch' (Rev.viii.10)=the appearance of Own intelligence from conceit which arises from infernal love. (=the truth of the Word falsified from man's Own love. E.517.)

410. 'The name of that star is called Wormwood . . .' (ver.11)=the infernal falsity from which is their Own intelligence. (=truth mixed with the falsity of evil. E.519.)

413. 'A third part of the stars was smitten' (ver.12)=that on account of evils from falsities and falsities from evils, they did not know . . . what any truth is. . . 'Stars'=the Knowledges of truth and good from the Word. (=that all the Knowledge of good and truth had perished. E.525.)

414. By the light of the sun is signified Divine truth spiritual; and by the light of the moon and stars, Divine truth natural, both from the Word . . .

420. 'I saw a star fallen from heaven unto the earth' (Rev.ix.1)=Divine truth spiritual inflowing from Heaven into the Church with them, exploring and manifesting. 'A star,' here,=Divine truth spiritual, because it fell from the Spiritual Heaven. (=Knowledges of truth which have been falsified, and thus turned into falsities. E.535.)

—^e. The like is signified by 'a star,' in the singular, in Rev.ii.28: xxii.16; for by 'stars,' in the plural, are signified the Knowledges of good and truth; and through these there is intelligence.

447². See ARMY, here.

534. 'Upon her head a crown of twelve stars' (Rev.xii.1)=its wisdom and intelligence from the Knowledges of Divine good and Divine truth from the Word. (=the wisdom and intelligence of those who are of that Church through doctrinal things and the Knowledges of all things of truth and good from the Word. E.709.)

541. 'His tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and cast them unto the earth' (ver.4)=that through falsifications of the truths of the Word they have alienated from the Church all spiritual Knowledges of good and truth, and have utterly destroyed them through applications to falsities. (=the falsification and adulteration of all the Truths of the Word. E.718. 714¹³.)

566³. That paper, when written on from the Word, shone like a star.

875³. As the Angels withdrew . . . stars appeared around their heads.

954. 'The bright and morning star' (Rev.xxii.16)=that He was then the light, and that He will come with new light, which will arise before His New Church . . . He is called 'the bright star' from the light with which

He came into the world; on which account He is called 'a star.' Ill. And He is called 'the morning star' from the light which will arise from Him before the New Church . . . For by 'a star' is signified the light from Him, which in its essence is wisdom and intelligence . . .

M. 15. The prince's robe was set with stars of a silver colour wrought in needle-work.

533. The paper on which the arcana were written, . . . while it was in the Spiritual World, shone like a star . . .

T. 32⁵. The infinity of God the Creator may be seen from the infinite number of the stars, which are so many suns, and thence so many worlds.

79³. (The notion that) the stars are only luminaries which originated from our sun.

209. The Word, in the shrines of the temples there, shines like a great star, and sometimes like the sun.

—⁴. When the Angels descend from Heaven to perform any duty below, they appear encompassed with little stars, especially around the head; which is a sign that Divine truths from the Word are in them.

335. I saw fatuous lights, some like sheets of paper full of writing, which . . . at last appeared like falling stars, which in their descent vanished in the air. Ex.

348^e. Faith in the Lord, when destitute of Truths, may be compared to a new star appearing in the expanse of Heaven, which in time grows dim; but faith in the Lord, together with Truths, may be compared to a fixed star which remains constant. . . The faith of Truths shines in Heaven like a star.

379^e. That the Lord is the Son of the living God, is like the morning star to all who enter His Church.

666. Round the Angel's head appeared a lucid band, in which were minute stars.

750². They viewed predestination as a star descending from heaven . . . not knowing that a falling star is a meteor of fatuous light, which, when it falls into the brain, can confirm every falsity . . . until it is believed to be the true light, and is decreed to be a fixed star:

and finally is sworn to be the star of stars—sidus siderum.

770. Whether they believe that the stars of heaven will fall upon the earth, which is smaller than a single one of them.

D. 417. The fall of Spirits from Heaven as stars.

461. On the seats of some in Heaven who are called stars.

463. On those who are called stars of the dragon.

466. That a star in the zenith fell down with the rest.

615. The appearance of little stars is a good sign.

912. Evil stars also have stars around them.

998. On little stars.

1211. Their face appears beset with many wandering stars . . . These wandering stars = an appearance of what is honourable in externals.

2645. Around (this evil Spirit) were small wandering stars in abundance.

2676. On the appearances to Spirits of little fires, and stars.

2677. They who are in Truths of faith, that is, who are led by the Lord, appear like bright little stars in the hemisphere.

3420. That there is no fixed star which has not its Earths around it.

3901. On inhabitants of the starry heaven.

3911. There appeared an azure starry heaven . . .

4379. Evil Spirits seen around me as innumerable wandering stars.

5426. See LAST JUDGMENT, here. 5373.

E. 275¹⁶. 'The ordinances of the moon and stars, from which is the light by night' (Jer.xxxi.35)=truths from spiritual good, and from Knowledges, from which there is intelligence.

316¹⁶. That he-goat then appears to tread the stars under his feet. (Just as in Dan.viii.10.)

355³³. 'The stars from their courses fought against Sisera' (Judg.v.20)=the Knowledges of truth, and combat from them against the falsities of evil. 447⁴.

401²². 'Stars of light' (Ps.cxlvi.3)=the Knowledges of truth from good.

402. The stars cannot fall to the earth, because they are larger than the earth; consequently by them are signified such things as are of heavenly light, and give light, which are the Knowledges of good and truth. Moreover, stars appear in the angelic Heaven; but they are appearances from the Knowledges of good and truth; and therefore they appear around those who are in such Knowledges, especially when they are turning them over in their minds, and when they long to know them.

410⁵. 'To set it among the stars' (Obad.4)=in the heights where those dwell who are in the Knowledges of truth.

422²⁰. As the Lord is the east, a star was seen by those from the east; and, as they were in Knowledge about the advent of the Lord from the representatives among them, the star was seen and went before them, first to Jerusalem, by which was represented the Church as to doctrine and as to the Word, and thence to the place where the infant Lord was. Moreover, 'a star'=the Knowledges of good and truth; and, in the supreme sense, Knowledge about the Lord.

518². When 'to fall' is predicated of the stars—by which are meant the Knowledges of good and truth from the Word—it=to perish; for when Divine truth in the Spiritual World falls out of Heaven to the earth there, where the evil are, it is turned into falsity. Ex.

573³. 'Stars'=the Knowledges of truth and good. 632⁵. 1029¹³.

—⁸. 'Stars'=falsities in general.

726². That the Lord has infinite power, may be evident from the fact that . . . He has created the universe, full of such innumerable stars, which are suns . . .

1063³. Profaners of this kind appear at first with a face of a human colour around which float many wandering stars . . .

J. (Post.) 120°. Those (Africans) who had believed that God had been born a man, saw a bright star in the air.

A. 613. The six states of man's regeneration. Sig. and Defined. 29°. 48.

190. The third state of the Most Ancient Church.

561. See REMAINS, here. 1738. 1906. —². —³. —⁴.

—². All these states are so preserved . . . that not the least of them is lost. (For) every state of a man, from infancy to old age, not only remains in the other life, but also returns, and that exactly as they had been while he lived in the world; thus not only the goods and truths of the memory, but also all the states of innocence and charity; and, when the states of evil and falsity recur . . . these states are tempered by the Lord by means of the [good states]. 1906.

823°. But with the good all their good states . . . return.

833–836. The four states after temptation. Tr. 863. 880. 889.

1274. Places and distances there are nothing but varieties of state. 1376.

1280. The four states of the first Ancient Church. Tr.

1318°. When the state is changed, the end also is changed; and, with the end, the thought.

1355. The beginning of the ninth state, which was the last. Sig.

1376. The Angels are not in the idea of place and time, but in that of states.

1377. They never change their places except as their state is changed; and, as the state is changed, the places and distances with them are also varied. But as everyone has a general state . . . and the particular and individual changes of state relate to the general, after these changes they come back to their own situation.

[A.] 1379. (Thus) the walking about and translations, and the progressions, of Spirits . . . are nothing but changes of state. 1463.

1401. The Lord advanced from an obscure state to one more lucid. (The five states of this advance. Enum. and Sig.) 1414. 1439. 1440. 1450.

1458. Progression into a lucid state. Sig. and Ex.

— There are neither quarters nor times (there), but states. . . The states of intellectual things are as the states of the times of the day and year, and also as those of the quarters. The states of the day are those of evening, night, morning, and noon; the states of the year are those of autumn, winter, spring, and summer; and the states of the quarters are those of the sun, in its relation to the west, north, east, and south. Similar to these are the states of intellectual things. . . In Heaven, those are in light who are in a state of wisdom and intelligence, exactly according to their state; and those are in the greatest light who are in a state of the highest wisdom and intelligence. 3708³.

1463. Therefore, whenever travelling, sojourning, and passing from place to place, occur in the Word, nothing else is suggested to the Angels than such change of state as they have. There are changes of state of both the thoughts and the affections. Changes of state of the thoughts are Knowledges, which (there) are produced by instructions.

1548. There are two states from which there is heavenly light. Ex.

1615. The Lord's sixth state. Sig.

1618^e. By external worship . . . man is gifted with states of holiness . . . which are preserved to him by the Lord for the use of eternal life; for all the states of his life return (there).

2315. The four states of those who are against charity in that Spiritual Church. Enum. 2449.

2334. After temptation, there remain from it many states of truth and good, to which their thoughts can afterwards be bent . . .

2487. These (organic) forms are varied and changed according to the changes of the state of the affections and persuasions.

2625. They afterwards perceive that space and time are not there, but state instead; and that (there) states correspond to spaces and times in nature; to spaces, states as to being; and to times, states as to manifestation—existere.

—³. 'Ages,' as 'old age,' = states.

2636. A full state of union. Sig. and Ex.

2660. The Lord's first state, when He thought of that Rational being separated from Himself: that it was a state of grief from love. Sig.

2664. A change of state towards that Rational. Sig.

2678. The first state of those being reformed and becoming spiritual . . . is that they think they do good and think truth from themselves . . . 2679, Sig. 2902. 2946.

2682². The second state of those being reformed, is that they are reduced to ignorance . . . even to despair. Tr.

2684^e. The state of thought of those who are in desolation of truth, and in consequent despair. Sig. 2689.

2692. (What inflows from the Lord) manifests itself only by a change of state of the man's affection.

2693. That the Lord thoroughly knew its state. Sig.

2694². This is effected by the state of anxiety and grief even to despair. What is good, blessed, and happy, no one can perceive with exquisite sense, unless he has been in (a contrary) state.

—³. (Although convinced by reasons) their state of thought about their own prudence is not changed by it, except at the moment . . . and, after the lapse of a few moments, they return to their former state of opinion . . . for unless the affection is subdued, the thought remains in its own state . . . But when anxiety and grief are induced upon them . . . even to despair, their persuasion is broken, and their state is changed. (Another examp.)

—^e. (This is why) those being reformed . . . are reduced into (this) state of vastation, and, when they are in this state even to despair, they then for the first time have comfort and help from the Lord.

2699. The first state after desolation, which was a state of consolation and of the hope of help, was described in the preceding verse; and their second state after desolation, which is a state of enlightenment and consequent refreshment, is described in this verse.

As these states are unknown in the world . . . we may describe the state of those being regenerated in the other life . . .

2704. This state, which is one of instruction, treated of in this verse, is the third state of those coming out of desolation . . .

2775. A place and state of temptation. Sig. and Ex.

2786. The Lord's state at that time according to perception. Sig. and Ex.

— The state the Lord took on . . . when He underwent the most grievous and the inmost temptations. Tr. His first preparation for this state was that He entered into a state of peace and innocence . . . 2795,enum.

—². Many states exist together, and these distinct from one another.

— The Lord from His Divine could induce upon Himself whatever states He pleased; and He prepared Himself for temptations by inducing many states.

2796. (These) puttings on by the Lord of various states must be unknown to man, because he never reflects upon his changes of state, which are nevertheless going on continually . . . All his states are from (the action of the Spirits and Angels with him), and thus are directed by the Lord to eternal ends.

— In every state there are a great many others, which do not appear, and which together appear as one general state; and these states are disposed in relation to the states which follow in order in their series. With man, these things are done by the Lord; but with the Lord . . . they were done by Himself.

—². The changes of state . . . with man, and the order in which they follow, and the series through which they pass, and thus how they are bent by the Lord as far as possible to good (are most minutely perceived by the Angels).

2878°. The Lord alone knows the times and states.

2904. The times and states of the Church as to the truths Divine which had preceded. Sig. and Ex.

2915. The first state (of the new Spiritual Church). Sig. and Ex. 2945. 2946.

2960. Their second state, in which they indeed give assent, but still wish it to be from themselves; (and) their third state, which is a state of belief that they are reformed by the Lord. Sig.

— Their fourth state follows, in which they perceive it to be from the Lord.

2967. Adapted to their state. Sig. and Ex.

—². All being regenerated are gifted with charity and faith . . . but each according to his capacity and state. Ex.

3116°. (For) the Lord alone sees man's state; not only his present, but also his future one to eternity.

3183. For man, when first born, is introduced into a state of innocence, that it may be a plane for all the rest of the states, and be the inmost in them . . . Next, he is introduced into a state of the affection of celestial good . . . afterwards into a state of the affection of spiritual good . . . As he advances in age, he is introduced into a state of the affection of truth . . . The last state is a state of wisdom, in which is the innocence of infancy; and thus the first state and the last are united.

3200. These states did not exist once only; but continually during the Lord's whole life.

3212. A new state. Sig. and Ex.

— The new state is the state of glorification of the Rational . . . in respect to truth.

—³. The change of state (effected by regeneration) cannot be seen in the man's body, but in his spirit.

3251. A state representative of the Lord as to the Divine itself. Sig. and Ex.

3254. A new state. Sig.

— The Angels have no idea of the ages of man . . . but instead they have the idea of states. Enum.

3296°. As the Lord completely changed His human state into the Divine one, so, when He regenerates man, He completely changes his state.

3353°. 'An earthquake' = a change in the state of the Church. 3355, Ill.

3356. That motion means a change of state. Ex.

— In themselves, the space and time (there) are changes of state; for this is their origin. . . By changes of state induced in others, Spirits cause them to appear in another place. . . Man himself, in so far as he is in a state of affections and thence of joy; and in a state of thoughts, and thence of absence from the body, is not in time . . . because his spirit has states to which the spaces and times in the external man correspond. Motion, therefore, being successive progression in space and time, is, in the internal sense, change of state.

—³. The Angels derive nothing from time and space; but from state as to being and as to manifestation.

3405. 'A year' = the entire state here treated of.

3466°. For of interior things is predicated state, which is signified by place; but of exterior things, doctrine.

3469. A state of temptation as to the natural good of truth. Sig. and Ex.

— 'Years' = states. Refs.

—². (External things cannot be brought into) obedience to the internal man, except . . . by many new states into which the man is introduced, which are states of acknowledgment of [the quality of] self, and of acknowledgment of the Lord . . . thus states of humiliation . . .

3487. The first state of the perversion of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

3488. The second state of the perversion of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

3492. When the state was at hand. Sig. and Ex. 3497.

[A.] 3539³. The state of the regeneration of man; here, the quality of his first state . . . for this state is entirely inverted relatively to that in which man is when he has been regenerated. Tr.

3548^o. Still less (can man perceive) the changes of state (of the good and truth of the Natural).

3570². If man's ends are for good . . . he is in a state of regeneration; but if the ends are for evil . . . he is in no state of regeneration.

3587. Progression and change of state. Sig. and Ex.

3593. A great alteration about the inversion of state. Sig. and Ex. 3597². 3607.

— (For) in the state before regeneration, truths apparently dominate; whereas in the state after regeneration, good receives the dominion. Refs. 3603².

3603³. In man's fourth age . . . the state is full. Ex.

3693⁴. The Angels have changes of state between the highest degree of light, and a less degree . . . and these changes of state are as the morning . . . the midday . . . the evening . . . and then the morning again.

3742. When the Angels are in a fuller state of reception, they are in their peace and happiness; otherwise they are in a state of unrest and of some anxiety.

3750³. For in the other life everyone may easily be let into a state of life which he had had here, because the state of his life remains with everyone after death. 4658².

3754. It has treated of three states of the perversion of good and truth in the Church; and here it treats of the fourth state, which is also the last. (These four states enum.)

3796³. (In judging his ends) a man should attend to the various states in which he is; for the states themselves very much vary the perception.

3814. A new state of life. Sig. and Ex.

— All times=states; thus years, months, and days; but the quality of the states is evident from the numbers affixed. But when a year, month, or day is mentioned in the singular, it=an entire state; thus the end of a preceding, and the beginning of a subsequent state.

3845. See WEEK, here.

— All states, also, have their periods; that is, their beginning, successive progress, and end; yet in the other life these are not perceived as times; but as states and their evolutions.

3846. A full and holy state. Sig. and Ex.

3862. All affections . . . are variations of that celestial and spiritual light . . . and hence come the changes of state.

3901⁴. The first state of the Church is described by 'the lion' (Dan.vii.).

3913. For when man is being regenerated . . . he is led through many states. The general states are what are designated by the twelve sons, and afterwards by the twelve tribes.

3938. As the Angels are not in space and time, they have ideas of state.

—². There are two states, a state which corresponds to space, and a state which corresponds to time. The (former) state is state as to being; and the (latter) state is state as to manifestation . . . 4814, below.

3957². (The superiority of the state after death.)

3998. But with the Lord there are no states; for all with Him is eternal and infinite.

4001. The first state of innocence. Sig. and Ex.

4005^o. (These things) are varied according to all the states of life; and the states of life are varied in general according to the ages; and in particular according to the affections.

4043. In interior things . . . nothing is perceived by spaces and times . . . but by states and their variations and changes . . .

4048. He was in a state of tranquillity, as of a kind of peaceful sleep. Ex.

4063². In order that man may be brought from the state of the old man into the state of the new . . . —^o.

— As the states of his life are to be so greatly changed . . .

—⁴. This may be illustrated by the changes of state (in man's successive ages).

—⁵. Thus the former things are always left behind when a new state of life is put on.

— But when man is being regenerated, his state becomes altogether different . . . nor does anyone arrive at this state except by the means of regeneration . . .

4066. The change of state with that (middle) good ('Laban'). Sig. and Ex. 4067.

4067³. His changes of state are nothing but changes of Societies.

—⁴. How the case is with the middle goods by which man is brought from the state of the old man to the state of the new man.

4110. A state of use and of end of good. Sig. and Ex.

—². The middle kind of Spirits are sent back into the state of their good, and therefore into a state of use and of end therefrom . . .

4111. A change of the state signified by 'Laban' as to truth. Sig. and Ex. 4151, Ex.

—² The states of Spirits as to good and truth are according to the Societies in which they are . . . Thus when they are removed from one Society into another, the states of their thoughts and affections are changed, and consequently their state as to truth and good.

—³. For changes of state (there) are in general nothing else than approaches to the Divine, and removals from it.

4112. A change of the state signified by 'Laban' as to good. Sig. and Ex.

4119. For the end of a state of conjunction is the beginning of a following state, which is one of separation.

4122. In a man being regenerated (the Angels) see and perceive in this way all the changes of his state; and, according to them . . . they lead him to good . . .

4128. A state of love in which the good signified by 'Jacob' was. Sig. and Ex.

4129. A state of good in somewhat of that conjunction. Sig. and Ex.

4136. The state if the separation were of its free will. Sig. and Ex.

—². Man does not know . . . how the state of every good is changed . . . With those being regenerated, there are changes of state of goods, from infancy to (death) . . . But how it is with the changes of state of the goods, the man knows nothing . . . because he has no knowledges . . .

4232. The inversion of state in the Natural. Tr. (in Gen. xxxii.). 4343². 4249.

4237. The quality of the Lord's state (then). Sig. and Ex.

— . But . . . the Divine states which the Lord had when He made the Human in Himself Divine, do not fall into any human apprehension, except . . . by the states of man's regeneration.

4264². To space and time in the Heavens correspond states and changes of states.

4283². States of conjunction through temptations. Sig. . . For the man then enters into a spiritual or celestial state.

4321². Situation there, is state.

4234. The state at that time as to goods and truths—that it would not appear to anyone. Sig. and Ex.

4379². The state which precedes is always as an egg to the one which follows.

4389. The state of the life of good from truth at that time. Sig. and Ex.

4482. Measures=qualities of state.

4625². Their perceptive faculty is varied according to the general changes of state of the Society in which they are.

4655. It is the state (there) which makes the appearance.

4658². Aristotle was then let into the state of his life he had (here) . . .

4663². For man after death carries with him all the states of his life. Examps.

4719. What state they were in. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'Where?'=state.

4797. The changes of state of the affections appear to the life in the faces of the Angels. Des.

4803. The states of good Spirits and Angels are continually changing and perfecting . . .

4814. The state of the things which follow. Sig. and Ex.

—³. There are, in general, two states, a state of good, and a state of truth. The state of good is called a state of being, and the state of truth, a state of manifestation. 3938², above. 8325².

4850. A change of state as to truths. Sig. and Ex.

— . As state, and change of state, are so often mentioned . . . they shall be explained. Time, and the succession of time, or space, and the extension of space, cannot be predicated of the interior things of man . . . because they are not in time or place . . . but are in interior things which correspond to these; and these interior things we have to call states, because there is no other word to express them. The state of the interiors is said to be changed, when the mind . . . is changed as to the affections and derivative thoughts; as from sadness to joy . . . These changes are called changes of state; and they are predicated of the affections, and of the thoughts in so far as they are ruled by the affections; but the changes of state of the thoughts are in those of the affections as singulars are in generals, and are, relatively, variations.

—². The thought of Spirits and Angels is from states of life, without any notion of times; (because) the progressions of their life are not distinguished into different ages . . . They are in the interior memory . . . and the thought from this memory has not times and spaces adjoined to it; but states and their progressions instead. Thus they correspond; and (therefore) times, in the Word, = states.

—⁴. In the Spiritual World there is a continual progression of states from one into another; and consequently in the last of every state there is a first or beginning, thus a continuation . . .

4916. A following state. Sig.

4979. A second state. Sig.

4987. A third state. Sig.

—². When one state is terminated and another succeeds, which is a noteworthy one, it is indicated by 'it was,' or 'it came to pass;' and a change of state less noteworthy, by 'and.'

4994. That that good was prior in time, not in state. Sig. and Ex.

4999. A fourth state. Sig.

5003. A fifth state. Sig.

5058. After some unfoldings of the state of his life, it became manifest that he was deceitful.

5097. All the times of the day and year=various states according to the variations of the light of Heaven.

5122². The states of the re-birth of each Sensuous, and of each thing in the Natural and Rational, have their progressions from beginning to end . . . and then they commence from a certain new beginning . . .

— . The periods of the first state are from truths to goods . . . After (regeneration) charity . . . becomes the beginning, and from it new states commence, which proceed in both directions—towards what is more interior, and also towards what is more exterior. Ex.

[A.] 5146. In the interior Heaven there is no idea of interior and exterior . . . but there is the idea of more perfect or more imperfect state; for interior things are in a more perfect state than exterior ones . . .

5159. The last of the state. Sig. and Ex. . . By the last of a state is meant when a prior state comes to an end, and a new one begins. A new state begins in a man who is being regenerated, when the order is changed . . .

—². With every man, whether being regenerated or not, there come forth changes of state, and also inversions; but in one way with those being regenerated, and in another with those not being regenerated. With (the latter) these changes or inversions are from (natural) causes. Ex. But with (the former) the changes or inversions are from spiritual causes . . . and when the man begins to be affected with what is good, he is in the end of the prior state, and in the beginning of a new one.

5221. In that new state. Sig. and Ex.

5229. (Perception) concerning the state of disjunction. Sig. and Ex.

5244². When the state is full, that is, when all things in the Natural are prepared to receive the influx from the interior . . .

5265. The states of the multiplication of truth in the interior Natural. Sig. and Ex. (And in the exterior Natural. 5266.)

5270^e. The state called "desolation." Ex.

5275. States of providence. Sig. and Ex.

5280². The last state of desolation. Tr.

—³. This is the first state, and is called the state of reformation. Ex. Most in the Church are introduced into this state . . . yet few are regenerated . . .

5339. The first states when truths are multiplied into series. Sig. and Ex.

5343². The series themselves . . . are varied according to the changes of state.

5360. The subsequent states of desolation. Sig. and Ex.

5457. A new state is here described.

5466. The end of this state. Sig. and Ex.

5531. Every such General . . . has its receptacle, within which it can . . . vary its forms, and change its states.

5605². Motions in the other life, and progressions, are nothing else . . . than changes of the state of life. Ex.

—³. In that World there are neither spaces nor times; but states of life instead. In externals, these states produce a vivid appearance of progressions and motions.

5658. Truths according to the state of each. Sig. and Ex.

5705. The change of state of each among themselves. Sig. and Ex.

—'. 'To be amazed' = an unexpected and sudden change of the state of the thoughts.

5773². When the state (in regeneration) is changed, and becomes inverted, there is mourning; for they are then let into temptation . . . Rep.

5792. That the associates . . . should return to their former state. Sig. and Ex.

5807². Love is the Harmonic resulting from changes of state and variations in the forms or substances of the mind . . . Thus love is the Divine which inflows into the forms, and disposes them, so that the changes of state, and the variations, may be in the harmony of Heaven.

5851. The Spirits are changed according to the man's states, that is, those of his affection . . .

5881^e. The commotion which then comes forth, manifests itself by anxiety arising from a change of the former state . . .

5962². How the case is with the state of life of Spirits and Angels. . . This state in Heaven is that Spirits and Angels have their morning, midday, and evening, and also twilight, and morning again. Ex.

—³. No one state is exactly like another to eternity; nor does one Spirit or Angel pass through changes of state like those of another . . .

5963. The varying states in the other life are according to the perception of good and truth, thus according to the perception of the Lord's presence . . .

6096. The state and quality of the spiritual life which had been in the Natural from the Spiritual. Sig. —. All numbers in the Word = the state and quality of the Thing treated of.

6110. This state is signified by 'famine.'

—'. See CHANGE=mutare, here.

6129. The full term of this state. Sig.

6130. Desolation after the full term of this state. Sig.

6144². By desolations and temptations, states contrary to heavenly life are perceived, and there is induced a sense of the happiness of the heavenly life . . .

6175. The entire state of the Thing represented by Jacob, and its quality. Sig. and Ex.

6176. The state just before regeneration. Sig.

6195^e. The separation (of Spirits bound to me was affected by) changes of state of the affections.

6285. The greater the extension is, and the more it is according to heavenly order, the more perfect is the state.

6315^e. I have frequently perceived these elevations (into a more interior light), and at the same time the changes of state as to the affections and as to the thoughts.

6326². These variations (of the form of the mind)

come forth according to the changes of state of the affections.

6335². The states of intelligence and wisdom (in Heaven) are varied according to the lights. Examp.

6448. What would befall everyone when in such a state. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. By the sons of Israel, or the tribes named after them, are described all the states of the Church as to goods and truths; thus as to the spiritual life of everyone within the Church.

6508. A full state. Sig. and Ex.

6537. The first state, where there is the good of truth. Sig. and Ex.

6602². The reason distance is perceived (there), is from the state of the affection of truth and good: in proportion as the state of one Society differs from the state of another, the Societies appear far apart.

6611. As to the changes of the state of man's life, it is inconstant, and is carried upwards and downwards, that is, towards Heaven and towards Hell. But they who suffer themselves to be regenerated, are continually being carried upwards, thus into more interior heavenly Societies. Ex.

6618². An Angel spoke with them by means of changes of state. 7077.

6645. 'To die'=the end of a former state and the beginning of a new one.

—¹. The state of the Church, such as it is now, is described in what follows; also the state of its external.

—². The Church with man undergoes new states by turns; for as a man is strengthened in the truth of faith and good of charity, he is introduced into other states; and the former state serves as a plane for the following state, and so on continually.

6717. This is the first state with the man who is being regenerated. Des.

—². These are the two states (of regeneration) which are meant by the origin of truth from good, and their conjunction. But the truth conjoined with good, here signified, is not such as is received by man in the first state. Ex.

6747. It is the second state which is here described. The first state was a state of immission among evils and falsities. This second one is a state of the insinuation of the good of the Church.

6750. It is the third state which is described in this verse. 6752.

6755. While these states lasted. Sig.

6772. Here begins the fifth state of the progression of the law Divine in the Lord's Human; in the relative, sense, of the progression of the law Divine with the man who is being regenerated; which is one of separation from falsities, and of adjunction with the truths of simple good.

6798. After many changes of state. Sig.

6806^e. Those Angels and Spirits who are similar as to states of life, appear to be near each other; and thus Know each other; whereas those who are unlike as to states of life, appear to be far from each other, and thus do not Know each other. In a word, in the other life, likeness of state causes them to appear present and to be Known; and unlikeness of state causes them to appear absent and not to be Known.

6843. There is no other access to the Divine, because it is above the things of place and time, and is in those things with man which are called states; namely, states of love, and states of faith; thus states of each faculty of the mind . . . By these, man can approach the Divine. Tr.

6983. In Heaven, instead of space and time, there are states . . . But in the Divine which is above the Heavens, there is . . . not even state; but instead of space there is infinity, and instead of time, eternity.

7077. Every change of state contains infinite things, and also every least part of it.

7186³. For evils and falsities cannot be removed, and goods and truths be insinuated in their place, except by many changes of state.

7218. So long as they are in this state (of infestation) they are as it were in hard service.

—². When Spirits have the state of evening and night, their thought is in a forced state . . . But when they have the state of morning and midday, their thought is in a free state . . .

7246. They so appear (on the two opposite sides of Venns) according to the states of their life; for the state of life presents all the appearance of place and space.

7284. The state and quality of the law from the Divine . . . as it was among those of the Spiritual Church at the first time of visitation. Sig. and Ex.

7285. The state and quality of doctrine. Sig.

7298^e. Hence (the spiritual sight) can admit influx from Heaven according to the states of the Things.

7308. Influx according to the state (of falsity in which the infesters were). Sig. and Ex.

—^e. For everything has its own state, in which, and according to which, it is.

7337. Hence all Divine miracles represent states of the Lord's Kingdom.

—³. It is according to order that states of affection and thought cause the idea of place and distance (there); and that they appear to be distant from each other in proportion as they are in a diverse state . . . Magicians abuse this law . . . by inducing on others changes of state, and thus translate them now on high, and now into the deep; and they also cast them into Societies in order that they may serve them as Subjects.

7346. The end of that state after truths were falsified. Sig.

[A.] 7358°. The diversity of state causes (the Spirits of the different Earths) to appear separate from each other, either to the right or to the left, at a greater or less distance.

7381°. In the ideas of the Angels there is nothing from time and space, but instead of them there are states. Ex.

—4. But the light from the spiritual Sun is Divine truth, and the heat is Divine good; and from these there come forth with the Angels ideas of states; states of intelligence and of faith, from Divine truth; and states of wisdom and love, from Divine good. The variations of these states with the Angels are the things to which correspond the states of light and shade (here), and also those of heat and cold.

7465. That there may be an end of that state as to the falsities of malevolence. Sig. and Ex.

—Every miracle done in Egypt = a peculiar state into which come those in the other life who are in falsities, and infest. There are ten states into which they come in succession, before they are completely stripped of all truth, thus before they are cast into Hell. 7795°.

7541°. Besides, in the other life man enters new states, and undergoes changes. Ex.

7715. A full state. Sig. . . By a full state is meant an entire state from beginning to end; for every state has its beginning, its increasings, and its maximum; and this full term is what is meant by a full state; and is signified by 'three days.'

7827. That this state is the principal one of all the states. Sig. and Ex.

7828. The beginning from which are all the sequent states to eternity. Sig. and Ex.

7831. A state of initiation of the interiors. Sig. and Ex.

7857. These two states (of regeneration) are accurately distinguished in the Word; for the reason that man cannot be in both states at once. He who is in the first state cannot enter into the second until he has been regenerated; and he who is in the second state must not retake himself to the previous one; (for he then) relapses into the state of faith . . . and also beyond it. Sig.

7860. The duration of this state before a state of illustration in Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

—2. These two states are entirely different, as are the state of the means to an end, and the state of the end. When the state of the end has come, the things contained in the state of the means will have been passed through.

7861. A state of means to the end through temptations. Sig. and Ex.

7898. Because there was then a state of charity and faith, through which there was separation from those in evils and falsities. Sig.

7900. In the beginning of a holy state. Sig. and Ex.

7906°. This fermentation or combat, comes forth especially when the state with man is turned . . . For the state has not been purified while the man acts from the truth of faith; but it has been purified when he acts from the good of charity; for he then acts from the will.

7966. The first state, of truth from good, in which there is nothing of what is false. Sig. and Ex.

—The second state is described in a subsequent verse . . . These are the two states in which those of the Spiritual Church, when in good, are kept by the Lord: the first, that from the good which is of the will they see and think truth; the second, that from this marriage of good and truth, they produce truths, which, by willing and doing them, again become goods; and so on continually.

7972. The first state of departure, and its quality. Sig. . . For the journeyings of the sons of Israel = states of life and their changes from the first to the last.

7984. The quality and state (of the infestations). Sig. and Ex.

—2. When they have a full state of remains, they are elevated into Heaven. Ex.

—3. What is meant by a full state. . . Everyone has a certain measure . . . which is filled in the other life . . . This state is what is meant by a full state, and is signified by 'thirty.' (See MEASURE, here.)

8053. In the beginning of a new state. Sig.

8103. The second state after they were delivered. Sig.

—For the journeyings and encampments of the sons of Israel, after they had gone forth from Egypt = the spiritual states of those who have been delivered by the Lord. The changes of states are signified by the journeys from one place to another, and their stay there.

8108. By these things was represented the state of Heaven; for there are perpetual variations and changes of state there; because the Angels are continually being perfected, which cannot be done without perpetual changes of states. Ex.

8143. A change of state into evil with those in falsities from evil. Sig. and Ex.

8325. It is the states of truth and good; and, in the opposite, of falsity and evil, which are represented (there) by heights and depths. Ex.

8328. A state of good from the Divine. Sig. and Ex.

8367. A state of illustration and affection, thus of consolation after temptation. Sig. and Ex.

8397. What is successive of life as to states of temptations. Sig. For those of the Spiritual Church . . . are led from one temptation into another.

8421. At the end of each state. Sig. and Ex.

8422°. This disposition (of goods) is effected by the Lord at the end of each state, which is signified by 'the sixth day.'

8426. That at the end of the prior state there is a revelation that they are delivered. Sig. and Ex.

— See EVENING, here.

—². In the Spiritual World there are perpetual changes of state; and all there pass through them. The reason is that they may be constantly perfected; for without changes of states . . . they would not be perfected. The changes of states which succeed each other in order like the times of the day and of the year, never return exactly the same . . . The beginning of every state corresponds to morning on earth . . . and the end of every state, to evening . . .

8427. That in the beginning of a new state there is the coming of the Lord. Sig. and Ex.

8431. That at the end of the state good will be appropriated through delight. Sig. and Ex.

— For a state of morning (there) is when spiritual good is in clearness . . . and a state of evening is when natural good is in clearness . . .

8432. That in the beginning of a new state they will have as much good as they can receive. Sig. and Ex.

8439. A state of reception and of application to use. Sig. and Ex.

8451. The end of the state. Sig.

8454. The beginning of a new state. Sig.

8494. 'Rest' = a state of peace, when there is no temptation.

8506. 'Six days' = states of combat and labour; here, a state of the reception of truth, that is, a state when good is acquired through truth; for in this state there are labour and combat. In this state, man is let into temptations . . . But after this state, there is a state of the conjunction of good and truth, thus a state of rest even for the Lord. It is this state which was represented by the rest on the seventh day. . . This state is the one meant by the second state, mentioned in 8505. 8510. 8888².

8510^e. This state is the state of Heaven . . .

8516. That up to the end of the former state, He gives, through truth, so much of good that conjunction may afterwards be effected. Sig. and Ex.

8517. A state of peace, in which the conjunction of good and truth is effected by the Lord; for all conjunction of these is effected in that state. Sig.

8518. That we are to remain in this state. Sig.

8539². The prior state (of regeneration) is signified by the six days which precede the seventh; and the latter state, by the seventh day. (Thus) the prior state was represented by the journeyings of the sons of Israel in the wilderness for forty years; and the latter state by their introduction into the Land of Canaan. 8657.

8560. The Divine Providence . . . continually leads to salvation, and this by various states; now glad, now sorrowful; which states man cannot possibly comprehend; yet all are profitable to his life to eternity.

8615. When the state of combat with the falsity from interior evil ceased. Sig. and Ex.

8643². For this is the second state (of the man of the Spiritual Church), which comes forth after he has undergone temptations. For while he acts from truth, he is tempted . . . but when the truths with him have been confirmed, they are reduced into order by the Lord, and (then) he enters the second state, which is, that he wills truths and does them . . .

8648. The separation (of good which is from the Divine) hitherto relatively to the state of those of the Spiritual Church. Sig. and Ex.

— For in their first state, good does not appear, but only truth. . . In the first state, the action is from truth, not from good; but in the second, from good. In the first state, good is as it were absent . . . But in the second state, when good is acted from, good is present. —² Ex.

8657. The conjunction (of good) in the state before regeneration while there are temptations. Sig. and Ex.

8658². When man is in the prior state, namely, when he acts from truth . . . he is in a state of undergoing temptations. Through these, he is successively brought to the second state, namely, that he acts from good, that is, from charity and its affection. When, therefore, he comes near this state, he is said to 'encamp at the mount of God,' that is, at the good from which he afterwards acts.

8665. A mutual Divine celestial state. Sig. and Ex.

8685. The disposition by truth Divine with those of the Spiritual Church in the state before [the action is] from good. Sig. and Ex.

—². In both states (of regeneration) man is led by the Lord, but in the first one through immediate influx; and in the second one, through influx both immediate and mediate. Rep. 8690², Ex.

8686. The first state (of regeneration) is described in these words.

8687. In every state, interior and exterior. Sig. and Ex.

8690². It treats here of the first state—that in which man is before regeneration—which is that he does what is good from obedience, and not yet from affection . . .

8702^e. In such a state are they who are led by the Lord through good. Des.

8722. That those of the Spiritual Church shall be led to a state of good. Sig. and Ex.

8731. In the preceding verses it treated of the prior state of those of the Spiritual Church when being regenerated, namely, when they are led by the Lord through truth. To this state succeeds another, which is that they are led by the Lord through good. This change of the one state into the other is what is described in this chapter by [the doings of] Jethro.

8750. The fulness of the state. Sig. and Ex.

— Every state has its beginning, its progression, and its end. When a state arrives at its end, it is full, and is called the fullness. In the other life, all things are measured by the progressions of state, and their successive changes from the beginning to the end . . . Hence, in Heaven, instead of times there are states. Yet as in the inmost sphere of Heaven there is a certain progression according to the Divine heavenly form . . . and as, according thereto the states of all in Heaven undergo changes, the Angels are alternately in the good of love, the truth of faith, and obscurity as to both. It is from this that there is a correspondence of the states there with the times (here). Enum.

[A. 8750]³. There are in general two states of life, namely, a state of thought . . . and a state of affection . . . The state of thought relates to the truth of faith; and it is this state which is enlightened by the light from the Sun of Heaven . . . whereas the state of affection relates to the good of charity; and the heat of the will . . . in man is from the heat of that Sun. Hence it may be evident how the case is with states and their changes in the other life; and what is meant by the fullness of the state which is signified by 'the third month.' The state here, of which fullness is predicated, means the prior state which those of the Spiritual Church had undergone. . . And now the second state is described.

8753. 'They came to the wilderness of Sinai' = a state of good in which the truths of faith are to be implanted. Ex.

8755. What is continuous of life from the prior state. Sig. and Ex.

8772^e. How the case is with the two states with the man being regenerated. Ex. and Refs.

8805³. With those of the Spiritual Church there are two states, a prior one when, through truths, they are led to good; a posterior one when they are in good. and, from it, in truths; here, when they are in good in which truths are to be implanted, which state is a middle state between the prior and the posterior one. Tr.

8812. A state when in good. Sig. and Ex.

8813. A Divine state in which there is revelation. Sig. and Ex.

8814. A Divine state relatively to those who will receive. Sig. and Ex.

8815. The heavenly state which is around. Sig. and Ex.

8898. The consequent state of life in Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

9212³. The garments of Angels and Spirits are varied according to the changes of the state of faith or truth in which they are . . .

9226. The first state with truths. Sig. and Ex.

9227. The beginning of the following state, when the life is from good. Sig. and Ex.

9229. The state of life then from good. Sig. and Ex.

9230². The good which man does in the first state (of regeneration) is called the good of faith; but the good he does in the second state . . . is called the good of charity . . .

9261². For the spaces and times (there) are states; and hence distances are diversities of states. But still, before the external sight there, states appear as spaces, and their diversities as distances. Refs.

9272. 'Six years thou shalt sow the land' = the first state when the man of the Church is being instructed in the truths and goods of faith.

9274. 'In the seventh thou shalt let it rest' = the second state, when the man of the Church is in good, and thus in the tranquillity of peace.

—³. In the Word, especially the prophetic one, the one state and the other are distinctly described.

— The second state is described (in Matt. xxiv. 16–18; Luke xvii. 31, 32); and that from it no one is to return to the first state. Refs.

—⁴. That these states are distinct, is involved (in Deut. xii. 8–12; Lev. xix. 19), for by these commands is signified that he who is in a state of truth cannot be in a state of good, that is, in the second state; nor conversely. The reason is that the one state is the inverse of the other; for in the first state the man looks from the world into Heaven; whereas in the second state he looks from Heaven into the world; for in the first state truths enter from the world through the Intellectual into the will, and there become goods, because of love; whereas in the second state the goods thus produced go forth from Heaven through the will into the Intellectual, and appear there in the form of faith.

9278. A state of labour and combat when in external delights which are to be conjoined with internal ones. Sig. and Ex.

9279. A state of good when in internal ones. Sig. and Ex.

9281. The state of life of those who are in truths and goods outside the Church. Sig. and Ex.

9288. A holy state. Sig.

9291. From the beginning of a new state. Sig.

9295². The second state of deliverance from damnation, which was a state of the implantation of truth in good. Sig. (by the second feast.)

9301. That the good of innocence of the posterior state is not to be conjoined with the truth of innocence of the prior state. Sig. and Ex.

9326. Even to a full state. Sig.

9346². Therefore they who are in a state of Hell cannot be transferred into a state of Heaven. Sig. . . 'The great gulf' = the opposition and contrariety of the states of life.

9383. The things in the Word which are of life in a spiritual and in a natural state. Sig. and Ex. . . It is said in a spiritual state and in a natural state, because with every man there are in general two states; one, which is peculiar and proper to the internal man, which is called the spiritual state; and the other, which is peculiar and proper to the external man, which is called the natural state. Ex.

9422. 'To sit' in a place = to remain in one's state.

9431. 'Six days' = while in a state of truth. . . For there are two states (of regeneration); the first is called a state of truth; and the second, a state of good. Ex. . . . When man is in the state of truth, he is outside Heaven; but when he is in good, he is in Heaven, thus is introduced to the Lord. Moreover, when man is in the first state, he is in labour and combat; for he then undergoes temptations. But when he is in the second state, he is in rest and the tranquillity of peace. The former state is that which is represented in the Word by the six days which precede the seventh; and the latter state by the seventh day. Refs. 9509^r. 9845.

9579. The spirit is not led through spaces, but through variations of the state of the interior life . . . and approaches are effected according to the agreements or likenesses of the states; for agreement or likeness of state conjoins, and disagreement or unlikeness disjoins. 9967.

9603. A similar state of the Thing for all the truths. Sig. and Ex.

9642^r. All states of the good of love and truth of faith are signified by 'the four corners of the earth;' states of the good of love, by the corners of the east and west; and states of the truth of faith, by those of the south and north.

9648. There are four states to which correspond the four quarters in the world. Enum.

9787. (Perpetual influx from the Lord) constantly in every state. Sig. and Ex.

9927. In every state of good and of truth in worship. Sig. and Ex.

—. For all things which belong to motion, as walking, etc. = a state of life. Refs.

9952. Such a state of the Divine good in the Spiritual Kingdom. Sig. and Ex.

—. 'To put on' = to induce the state of the thing which is represented by the garments.

10057. 'The second ram' = the following state, which is of Divine truth proceeding from the Lord's Divine good in the Heavens.

—⁴. (Thus) there are two states with a man who is being regenerated; the first, when the truths of faith are being implanted and conjoined with the good of charity; the second, when he speaks from the good of charity through the truths of faith, and acts according to them; thus the first state is from the world through the natural man into the spiritual, thus into Heaven; and the second is from Heaven through the spiritual man into the natural, thus into the world. . . This circle is the circle of the regeneration of man. . . 10060, Ex. 10076.

—⁵. (So) the first state of the Lord's glorification was to make His Human Divine truth, and to unite it with the Divine good which was in Him; and the second state was to act from Divine good through Divine truth . . . By the sacrifice from the bullock, and the burnt-offering from the first ram, the first state is described; and by the infillings of the hand from the second ram, the second state; and, lastly, by the sacrifice from the bullock, and the burnt-offerings, is signified its continuity. 10076.

10076^r. The first state (of glorification, or of regeneration) is described by, 'In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and God was the Word;' and the second state, by 'all things were made by Him, and without Him was not anything made that was made.'

10114. The spiritual and celestial goods which had not been conjoined to the new state. Sig. and Ex.

—². A new state is every state of the conjunction of good and truth, which is when a man who is being regenerated acts from good . . . There is a new state also when those in Heaven are in the good of love . . . 'There is a new state also when an old Church ceases, and a new one begins. All these new states are signified by 'morning.'

10132. The good of innocence in every state. Sig. and Ex.

10134. The removal of evils through the good of innocence in a state of love and the derivative light in the internal man. Sig. and Ex.

—³. For in the Heavens the states vary as to love and the derivative faith, as in the world the times vary . . . —⁴, Ex.

—⁶. The man who is being regenerated, and also the man who has been regenerated, also undergoes variations of state as to love and as to faith, through elevations towards interior things, and depressions towards exterior ones; but few are capable of reflecting upon it . . .

—⁷. These states are meant by 'morning,' 'midday,' etc. . . as are also the states of the Church . . .

—⁸. The Church in general is circumstanced as is man in particular; his first state is a state of innocence . . . his second is a state of light . . . his third state is when he begins to love the world and self . . . and his fourth and last state is when he does not care for truths, and still more when he denies them. Such states are also the states of every Church from its beginning to its end; its first state is a state of infancy, thus of innocence, and consequently of love to the Lord . . . its second state is a state of light; its third state is a state of light in obscurity . . . and its fourth state is a state of no love and thence of no light, which is its 'night.' Ill.

10135. The like in a state of light and love in the external man. Sig. and Ex.

—². With the Angels, there is a continual succession of such states; and they are continually being perfected through them. These variations come forth . . . from the state of the interiors of the Angels themselves; for, like men, they desire to be in their internals at one time, and in their externals at another. Ex. . . This is the origin of the variations of the states of the Angels. The reason they have such states, and such variations, is that the Sun of Heaven is the Divine love itself; and therefore the heat which proceeds from it is the good of love, and the light is the truth of faith. 10200.

[A.] 10184⁴. That he who is in good, which state is the state of the regenerate man, must not return into a state of truth, which was his prior state when being regenerated, for in this state man is led by means of truth to good, thus partly by himself; whereas in the posterior state . . . man is led by good, that is, by the Lord by means of good. Sig.

10200. When the state of love is in clearness. Sig. and Ex.

10225. A state of intelligence of truth and good. Sig. and Ex.

— From his first infancy to extreme old age, man undergoes many states as to his interiors, which are states of intelligence and wisdom. The first state is from birth to the fifth year: this state is a state of ignorance, and of innocence therein, and is called infancy. The second state is from the fifth to the twentieth year: this state is a state of instruction and knowledge, and is called childhood. The third state is from the twentieth to the sixtieth year, which state is a state of intelligence, and is called adolescence, young manhood, and manhood. The fourth and last state is from the sixtieth year and upwards, which state is a state of wisdom, and of innocence therein. III.

—³. While the first state lasts, the interiors are being formed. Ex.

—⁴. The second state is not as yet a state of intelligence. Ex.

—⁵. But the third state is called a state of intelligence. Ex.

—⁶. And the last state is a state of wisdom, and of innocence in wisdom; and exists when the man no longer cares to understand truths and goods, but to will and live them; for this is to be wise. Ex.

—⁷. From the succession of these states, the man who is wise can see the marvellous things of the Divine Providence, which are that a prior state is continually a plane for those which follow . . .

10413². The states of Spirits and Angels vary as to love and faith, just as the times of the days and years vary as to heat and light . . . 10605.

10536. Their garments vary according to the changes of their state as to truths. H. 181, Des.

10605. In Heaven they do not think of time, but only of changes of state as to the affections and derivative thoughts . . .

10656. A holy state then from the appropriation of Divine truth purified from evil and the falsities of evil. Sig. and Ex.

10658. A new state. Sig.

10702. The state of the external when the internal from the Lord inflowed, and it received information. Sig. and Ex.

— With men there are two states as to the things of the Church, worship, and the Word: some turn themselves to the Lord . . . some to themselves . . . (The former) receive influx and are in illustration, and thus in the perception of truth inwardly . . . But the latter can receive no influx . . . and are in thick darkness concerning all things of the Church, worship, and the Word. Sig.

10729. 'Six days shall work be done' = the first state of the regeneration of man . . . (and of) the glorification of the Lord's Human.

— For man has two states while being regenerated: a prior one when he is in truths, and through truths is led to good; and a posterior one when he is in good, and from good sees and loves truths. In the prior state, man is indeed led by the Lord, but through his own proprium; for to act from truths is to act from the things which are with man; but to act from good is to act from the Lord. Further ex.

10730. 'In the seventh day there shall be holiness to you, the sabbath of a sabbath to Jehovah' = the second state of the regeneration of man, when he has conjunction with the Lord; and, in the supreme sense, the union of the Lord's Human with the Divine Itself. Ex.

10734. I was brought to another Earth . . . by changes of the state of my mind . . . For a Spirit is brought from place to place in no other way than by changes of the state of his interiors, which changes, however, appear to him like . . . journeyings. These changes lasted with me continually for about ten hours, before I arrived from the state of my life at the state of their life . . . To successively change the state of the mind in this way so as to approach to the state of another who is so distant, can be done by the Lord alone. 10783.

H. 154. On the changes of state of the Angels in Heaven. Chapter.

156. Together with the state of their interiors . . . the states of the various Things outside them are changed also. 190.

157. Every Angel passes through such changes of state, and also every Society in general; but one differently from another . . . one being in his clearness and delight, while another is in his obscurity and undelight; and this within the same Society; and also in one Society otherwise than in another; and in the Societies of the Celestial Kingdom otherwise than in those of the Spiritual Kingdom. Ex.

159. How the Lord as a Sun appears to (the celestial) Angels in their first, second, and third states. Des.

—². This was the fourth state to those in the Celestial, and the first to those in the Spiritual Kingdom; so that the changes of state in both Kingdoms alternate by turns in this way; but not in the whole Kingdom, but in one Society after another; and these alternations are not stated, but come more slowly or quickly unknown to them.

—^e. The Sun . . . so appears according to the successive progressions of the states with them; for the Lord appears to everyone according to the quality of his state . . .

160. In their last state—which is when they are in their proprium—the Angels begin to be sad . . . but they are in the hope of returning into their pristine state, and thus as it were again into Heaven; for Heaven to them is to be withheld from proprium.

- W. 7². A spiritual idea derives . . . everything from state. State is predicated of love, life, wisdom, affections, the derivative joys; in general, of good and of truth. T.30.

70. Instead of spaces, there are such things as relate to states of love; and instead of times, such things as relate to states of wisdom.

73². Instead of days, weeks, months, etc. there are states of life; and by these a distinction is made which cannot be called a distinction into times, but into states. Hence . . . when time is mentioned, the Angels perceive state instead of it; and, when state determines time, time is only an appearance; for delight of state causes time to appear short; and undelight of state causes time to appear long; from which it is evident that time there is nothing but quality of state. It is from this that by hours, days, weeks, months, and years, in the Word, are signified states, and their progressions in series and in the complex . . .

101^e. The correspondence is plenary, provided that for the motion of the Earth you substitute the change of state of the Angels.

209^e. Affection and thought, charity and faith, will and understanding, are like love and wisdom in this: that they do not exist outside of subjects which are substances; but are states of subjects or substances. 210. 224^e. 291^e.

304. As there is such a progression from primes to ultimates of the fibres and vessels, there is a like progression of their states. Their states are sensations, thoughts, and affections; and these also pass from their primes where they are in light, to their ultimates where they are in shade . . .

202³. Every change and variation of the state of the human mind, changes and varies something in the series of the things present and consequent . . .

279^e. Affections are mere changes of the state of the purely organic substances of the mind; and thoughts are mere changes and variations of the form of those substances; and memory is the permanent state of these changes and variations. —⁹. 319.

298. Every man, when he becomes a Spirit . . . is in-tromitted by turns into the two states of his life: the external, and the internal. Des.

—². I have seen Spirits let into these alternate states two or three times within an hour . . . Yet they were not willing to remain in a rational and moral state; but turned themselves of their own accord back to their internal state, which was sensuous and insane . . .

[P.] 338¹. This belief is from ignorance of the spiritual state, which is quite different from the natural state. Ex. The spiritual state is that of man after death.

947². Therefore the Angels cannot measure the times and spaces there any otherwise than by states, as these advance, and are changed . . .

M. 10⁷. (Thus) the joys of Heaven . . . are not of place, but of the state of man's life; and a state of heavenly life is from love and wisdom; and, as use is the containant of these two, a state of heavenly life is from the conjunction of them in use. . . Moreover . . . place there is not place, but an appearance of place according to the state of love and wisdom, or of charity and faith. Ex.

78². The way was shortened and anticipated by the changes of state induced on our minds . . .

155a³. The husbands said, Our wives know all the states of our minds . . .

184. On the change of the state of life with men and women through marriage. Chapter.

185. That the state of a man's life from infancy to the end of life, and afterwards to eternity, is continually being changed. Ex.

—². The changes which take place in the internals, are changes of the state of the will as to affections, and changes of the state of the understanding as to thoughts . . .

—³. The reason the changes of state of these two lives or faculties are perpetual with man . . . is that there is no end to knowledge, intelligence, and wisdom.

186. The reason the internal form of man is continually changing as the state of his life is changed, is that nothing exists except in a form, and the state induces the form; and therefore it is the same thing whether it is said that the state of a man's life is changed, or that his form is changed. Ex.

—². The reason the state of life, and thence the form, with man, is continually changing, is . . . that there does not exist the Same, or absolute identity of two things . . . It is the same with successives, in that there exists no sequent state of life which is the same as a past state; from which it follows, that there is a perpetual change of the state of life with man, and consequently a perpetual change of form, especially of his internals.

190. That with both men and women, the states of life before marriage are different from what they are after it. Ex.

191. That the states of life with married partners after marriage are changed and succeed one another according to the conjunctions of their minds through conjugal love. Ex.

380¹¹. As spaces and times cannot be predicated of love and wisdom, but states instead of them, it follows that the expanse around (the spiritual) Sun is not an extense; but still it is in the extense of the natural sun . . . T.35¹¹.

T. 52². Order is the quality of the disposition, determination, and activity of the parts, substances, or entities which make the form, whence is the state, the perfection of which is produced by wisdom from its love, or the imperfection of which is moulded by the insanity of reason from enpidity. In this definition, substance, form, and state, are mentioned . . . and the quality of the form is its state, the perfection or imperfection of which results from the order.

77⁵. The changes of their situation were changes of the state of their mind, which sometimes favoured one side, and sometimes the other.

79⁸. As this was not their proper state, and therefore after some minutes became tedious and unpleasant, the evil Spirits turned themselves away . . .

105. For in this state God appears to be absent. But after this state comes the other, which is a state of conjunction with God. In this, too, the man acts, but from God . . .

—². That every man who from natural becomes spiritual, undergoes two states, and that through the first he enters into the second, thus from the world into Heaven, will be demonstrated (below); here only, that in the first state, which is called that of reformation, man is in full freedom of acting according to the Rational of his understanding; and that in the second, which is a state of regeneration, he is in a like freedom, but he then wills and acts, and thinks and speaks, from a new love, and a new intelligence, which are from the Lord. For in the first state the understanding acts the first part, and the will the second; but in the second state the will acts the first part, and the understanding the second; but still the understanding from the will, and not the will through the understanding. The conjunction of good and truth, of charity and faith, and of the internal and external man, is effected in no other way.

106. These two states are represented by various things in the universe, because they are according to Divine order. . . The first state is represented by . . . the state of infancy and childhood up to . . . young manhood, which is a state of humiliation before one's parents . . . and of information by teachers; but the second state, by the state of the same person when he becomes his own master . . . (Other representatives stated.)

—². These two states are represented also by various things in the animal kingdom. . . the first state, by caterpillars . . . the second, by the butterflies from them.

— These two states are represented also in (plants); the first, when the plant springs from its seed, and is adorned with branches, buds, and leaves; the second, when it bears fruit, and produces new seeds. This may be likened to the conjunction of truth and good . . . But the man who stops in the first state . . . is like a tree which bears leaves only . . . He is also like (the Hebrew) servant who was not willing to be free . . .

281. The successive states after death of those who have confirmed themselves from the Word in falsities of doctrine . . . (Fully des.)

571. In the first state, which is called reformation, man looks from his natural state to a spiritual one, and longs for it: in the second, he becomes spiritual natural. The first state is formed through truths which must be of faith, and through which he looks to charity; the second is formed through the goods of charity; and from these he enters into the truths of faith. Or, what is the same, the first state is one of thought from the understanding; and the second, of love from the will. When this latter state begins and is progressing, a change takes place in the mind; for a reversal is effected, because then the love of the will inflows into the understanding, and acts upon it, and leads it to think in concord and agreement with its love. (Further ex.)

—². A man who has commenced the first state (here), can after death be introduced into the second; but he who has not entered into the first state (here), cannot be introduced into the second after death; thus cannot be regenerated.

— These two states may be compared to . . . (A number of comparisons made.)

4164. On the recalling of the states of man.—Evil Spirits can be remitted into the state of their infancy and of childhood . . . (Thus) every state of man returns, and can be brought back; and his evil states are tempered by all his good states.

4224. On states.—A Spirit runs through all possible states, and when he comes into a state which is familiar to himself, he comes into his life . . . and at the first coming of this state, he desires to precipitate himself into the state of his life. As he runs through all possible states, when he comes into contrary states, he is at once either tortured, or fined . . .

5125. That Heaven is not a place, but a state of life.

5162. The World of Spirits is not a fixed place . . . but is the state in which they are when between Heaven and Hell. Ex.

5163. Up to adult age, man is in the World of Spirits . . . because he is successively in different states . . . He is also in a varying state in particular, according to the changes of his state; but these variations are innumerable.

— All men are in the World of Spirits immediately after (death), because they are then in a varying state. Ex.

5164. When the man Spirit is in this state, he is in freedom, and goes hither and thither . . .

5165. As man and Spirits have such states successively, many are called forth from Hell, who are with man, and with those recent Spirits.

[D.] 5167. Man is in a varying state, and thus in the World of Spirits, up to adult age : afterwards he is in either Heaven or Hell ; because his mind is then . . . rarely changed ; although this does occur with some.

5168. Recent Spirits also are in a varying state, or in the World of Spirits ; some for a short time only ; some quite long, according to their state.

5169. Those who are in Heaven or Hell also undergo changes of state continually, which correspond to the times of the day and of the year ; but these states are different from such as are in the World of Spirits.

— That state is called the World of Spirits, just as a state of good and truth is called Heaven ; and a state of evil and falsity, Hell : these, too, are states.

5627. Still, they have the notion of heat and cold, and also of light and shade ; but not from time, but from the state of their life. They also see all things there as in the world ; but still they do not perceive them according to spaces, but according to the states of their life.

5646. That walkings [there] are changes of state. Ex.

5647^c. A book was instantly taken away upon a mountain, (which is done) by placing one's self in the state of another.

148. A state of interior life unknown to all except those who are in it. Sig. and Ex.

194. Ignorance of the time (when man is to die), and of the state then, (that it will continue to eternity). Sig. and Ex. —³.

—². 'Hour'=state ; because all times in the Word =states of life. Ill.

233. There are two states of faith and of the derivative life, or of life and the derivative faith, of the men who are in the Church ; one is from doctrine, and the other is from the Word, or preaching from the Word. . . With some, these two states act as a one, and with many they do not. Ex.

—². The quality of the state of thought, faith, and life from doctrine. Ex.

—³. The state of faith and the derivative life of the men of the Church from the Word. Ex. . . All within the Church who are saved are kept by the Lord in this state of thought and faith . . .

351. Manifestation of the states of those who are of the Church where the Word is. Sig. and Ex.

352. That no one except the Lord knew these states. Refs.

489². Influx from the Heavens, and consequent changes of state, and separations. Sig. and Ex.

499. 'An earthquake'=changes of the state of the Church. Ex.

571. Continually in the state. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. Instead of the apparent revolutions of our sun, there are merely changes of state, in Angels and Spirits, according to their reception of the good of love and the truth of faith.

644⁶. That the Divine truth inflows in both states, namely, while the man of the Church is in his spiritual state, and in his natural state. Sig. . . For the man of the Church is by turns in a spiritual state and in a natural state.

674. A notable change of the state of the interiors with those who are of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

696^e. 'Fear,' 'terror,' 'consternation,' and the like, = various . . . changes of the state of the mind.

731. The state of the Church : that meanwhile it [the state] may be provided with many. Sig. and Ex.

1146^e. That all activities are changes of state, and variations of form ; and that the latter are from the former. By state in man we mean his love, and by changes of state, the affections of love.

1218². For (all things there) come forth according to the states of the Angels, and are permanent according thereto, so that the states themselves, and those things, make a one, and therefore they are also varied just as their states are varied. But this is the case especially in the World of Spirits . . . because there every man undergoes changes of state . . . But Spirits do not reflect upon these changes and variations. Ex.

1219². By states are meant states of love and wisdom, or of affections and the derivative thoughts, which are manifold and various. According to these the angelic Societies are distant from each other, and the Heavens from the Hells, and the Societies of the Hells from each other. It has been granted me to see how likeness of state conjoins, and contracts the extension of space or distance; and how unlikeness of state separates, and produces extension of space, or distance. Those there who appear to be a mile apart can instantly be present with each other when the love of the one for the other is excited; and on the other hand those who are talking together can instantly become a mile apart when hatred is excited.

—³. But the idea of state, and the derivative idea of the appearance of space and time (with the Angels) exist solely in the ultimates of creation there, and from them. (Continued under Space.)

1462². 'A pillar' (Is. xix. 19). (= truth which is the ultimate of order in the Natural. 3727³.)

1551. 'The statue' (Dan. ii.) = the successive times of the Church (that is, the golden, silver, copper, and iron ages). 3021⁸.

2162³. The 'head' of 'the statue' (Dan. ii.) = celestial things; the 'breast,' spiritual or rational things; and so on.

2313. That the affection of truth perishes, is signified by Lot's wife made a statue of salt. 2455.

2441^e. 'The statues of the house of the sun' (Jer. xliii. 13) = the worship of self.

2455. 'A statue' (Gen. xix. 26) is here expressed in the Hebrew by a word which means a standing still—statio; and not by one which means a statue erected for worship, or for a sign, or for a witness; so that by 'the statue of salt' is here signified that the truth signified by Lot's wife stood vastated.

3726. 'He set it for a pillar' (Gen. xxviii. 18) = a holy boundary; thus the ultimate of order.

—². That the pillars were erected for a sign, and for a witness, and also for worship; and that they = a holy boundary, or truth in man's Natural. III.

—⁴. 'The twelve pillars' (Ex. xxiv. 4) = the truth which is from good in worship.

—⁵. A representative of truth was established by the stones of the altar; and they were forbidden to represent it by pillars, lest thereby truth should be separated from good . . . (Deut. xvi. 22). 10643⁴.

—⁶. Nevertheless they did erect pillars, and thereby represented things contrary to order. III.

[A. 3727]. The pillars among the gentiles = falsities, and therefore it was commanded that they should be destroyed. Ill.

4090. 'Where thou anointedst a pillar' (Gen. xxxi. 13) = where the good of truth is, and its boundary. 'A pillar' = a holy boundary; thus the ultimate of order; and consequently truth.

4190. 'Jacob took a stone, and set it up for a pillar' (ver. 45) = such truth and the derivative worship. . . 'A pillar' = worship from truth.

4205. 'A pillar' (ver. 52) = truth. . . Both the heap and the pillar were for a sign or for a witness; here, for a sign of the limit. Ex.

4385. 'To set with thee' (Gen. xxxiii. 15) = to conjoin.

4580. 'Jacob set up a pillar in the place where He spake with him, a pillar of stone' (Gen. xxxv. 14) = what is holy of truth in that Divine state.

—². The pillars erected in ancient times were either for a sign, for a witness, or for worship. Those for worship were anointed, and were then holy, and worship was held there. . . This ritual derived its representation from the fact that in the most ancient times stones were set up on the boundaries between families of nations, lest they should pass over them to do one another evil. . . That they should not pass beyond them to do evil was to them a law of nations. And, as the stones were on the boundaries, the Most Ancients. . . when they saw them, thought about truths which are the ultimates of order. . . At last, their descendants. . . began to regard these stones as holy, pouring libations upon them, and anointing them with oil; and they were then called pillars, and were used for worship.

—³. In the Ancient Church, the pillars served them as means of attaining to internal worship. Ex. . . Hence it was that the Ancients had pillars for worship in their temples, groves, and forests, and upon the hills and mountains. 10643.

6071. 'To set before' (Gen. xlvii. 2) = insinuation.

9207⁷. 'A pillar of salt' = disjunction from truth.

9321. 'Thou shalt break in pieces their statues' (Ex. xxiii. 24) = that the falsities of worship are to be put aside.

9389. 'Twelve pillars for the twelve tribes of Israel' (Ex. xxiv. 4) = a representative of the Lord's Divine Human as to the Divine truth which is from Him in its whole complex. 'A pillar' = a representative of the Lord's Divine Human as to truth; because by 'an altar' is signified a representative of it as to good; and 'a pillar,' in the representative sense, = the Holy of truth which is from the Lord. Refs.

9406⁷. See STATE, here.

10030³. 'The head' of the statue (Dan. ii.) = the first state of the Church; 'the breast and arms,' the second; and so on.

—¹. The statues (or pillars) which the ancients placed upon mountains and in groves = Divine truth; for the pillars were stones. . . —³, Ill.

—³. In these passages, 'pillars' = worship from truths, because a stone = Divine truth; and a pillar anointed with oil, Divine truth from Divine good.

8070. 'Thou shalt keep this statute at a stated time from year to year' (Ex.xiii.10)=that this law of order should be in this state constantly.

8357. 'There he set for him a statute and a judgment' (Ex.xv.25)=the truth of order then revealed. 'A statute'=the external truth of the Church. . . The reason 'a statute'=the external truth of order, is that every external [truth] of the Church was called 'a statute;' and every internal truth of order, 'a judgment.'

8363. 'If thou wilt keep all His statutes' (ver.26)=a life according to the truths of faith, which are the exterior things of the Church. 'Statutes'=the external truths of the Word; thus the truths of faith which are the exterior things of the Church.

— When 'statutes' and 'precepts' are mentioned together, 'a statute'=what is external of the Church; and 'a precept,' what is internal of it.

8706. 'Thou shalt teach them statutes and laws' (Ex. xviii.20)=that from truth immediately from the Lord come the external and internal goods and truths of the Church. . . 'Statutes'=the external goods and truths of the Church.

8793. The ten precepts=internal truths; and the laws

[A.] 890⁶. As all the statutes which the Lord commanded the sons of Israel were founded on the laws of order which are in Heaven . . . those delivered concerning 'thefts' are so founded. Enum.

897². The laws commanded the sons of Israel were distinguished into precepts, judgments, and statutes. . . Statutes were those things which were of worship. —³, Ill. 9282. 9417.

—⁴. This is why the man of the Christian Church is not bound to observe those 'judgments' and 'statutes' in the external form, but in the internal. Nevertheless holiness abides in them, because they contain holy things in them . . . for when they are read by a Christian man, the Divine things in them, and which were represented, are apperceived in the Heavens, and fill the Angels with what is holy, and at the same time the man who is reading them, by influx from the Angels; and still more so if the man himself at the same time thinks about the Divine things which are in them.

A. 179⁸³. 'Thou shalt not steal' is altogether of charity; for he who has the life of charity would rather give of his own to his neighbour, than take anything away from him.

2609². That we are not to steal, is perceived by the Angels to mean that men should take nothing away from the Lord, and should not claim for themselves anything of justice and merit . . . 7089.

3175. Man is not born . . . even into any natural truth; as, that he should not steal, etc. . . (and) unless restrained by civil laws, etc. he would steal, etc. without any perception of conscience.

3670². As far as (a king or a priest claims for himself anything of the holiness which pertains to his office), or attributes it to himself, so far he fixes upon himself the character of a spiritual thief, or the mark of spiritual theft.

4002. 'That shall be accounted stolen by me' (Gen. xxx.33)=that it was not his. Ex.

—². The Lord is said to come 'as a thief' merely to signify unawares and unexpected. 9125^o.

—³. 'To steal'=to claim for one's self that which is the Lord's; namely, good and truth; and as all do this in the beginning of regeneration . . . the expression is milder than it sounds in the letter.

4111. 'Rachel stole the teraphim . . .' (Gen.xxxi.19) = a change of the state . . . For 'to steal,' here, =to take away what is dear and holy; thus to change the state. Ex. 4112. 4133. 4136. 4151.

4174. 'Stolen by day and stolen by night' (ver.39) =the evil of merit. . . Evil of merit is when man ascribes good to himself . . . This evil is what is signified by 'theft.' . . But in the beginning all being reformed think that good is from themselves. Ex.

4295². The Angels are indignant if anyone ascribes to them anything of wisdom and intelligence; for they know that it would be . . . claiming to themselves what is not theirs, and thus incurring the crime of spiritual theft.

—⁴. This evil is what is signified by 'theft,' in so far as like a thief it takes possession of the seat in which good has been before; and in so far as with many it takes away the goods and truths which had been there before, and applies them to confirm evils and falsities.

—⁵. If evil steals the goods and truths there, and applies them to confirm evils and falsities, especially if it does this from deceit, it then consumes those remains . . .

—⁵. That such things are signified by 'theft.' Ex. and Ill.

5747². For before regeneration man supposes that he procures truths for himself; and, so long as he supposes this, he is in spiritual theft. Tr.

5749. 'Theft' . . . =to claim for themselves what is the Lord's. 5758.

5886^o. 'Thieves who steal the sons of Israel' (Deut. xxiv.7)=those who acquire for themselves the truths of the Church, not with the end to live according to them, and thus to teach them from the heart; but to make gain for themselves by their means. That this is condemned, is signified by 'that thief shall die.' E.1156.

6203. (How the evil of theft grows on a man.) When a man has of set purpose committed manifest thefts two or three times, he cannot afterwards desist from them; for they continually inhere in his thought. D.4091, Ex.

—². These falsities are the 'thieves which climb up into the houses, and enter in at the windows' (Joel ii.9). . . 'The thief'=the falsity which takes away the truth. —³.

9018. 'He that stealeth a man' (Ex.xxi.16)=the application of the truth of faith to evil.

9020. Those who desire to dispense at their own will the things which are the Lord's, especially those things which are of the heavenly life with man, to the end that they may dominate over all, and may gain the world, when they take confirmations from the Lord's words, are 'thieves' in the spiritual sense; for they steal truths from the Word, and apply them to evils.

9099. 'When a man shall steal an ox, or a sheep' (Ex.xxii.1)=one who takes away from somebody his exterior or interior good. 'To steal'=to take away from anyone his spiritual goods.

9125. 'If a thief be caught while digging through' (ver.2)=if it does not appear that good or truth is being taken away. Ex.

[A.9125]. For a distinction is here made between the theft committed by digging through; and the theft committed when the sun has risen.

—⁵. A thief (Luke xii. 39)=one who through falsities destroys the goods of faith.

9126. For by 'a thief' or 'theft' is signified that which has been taken away; thus good and truth. 9131. 9132, Ex. 9133. 9151. 9169.

9150. 'Theft'=the taking away of such things as make man's spiritual life, consequently of truths and scientifics. Tr.

10794. Such priests are called by the Lord 'thieves and robbers.' Des.

H. 10. The Angels regard such as thieves . . . because they take away from the Lord what is His.

531². Although he does not steal, yet as he covets the goods of others, and esteems fraud and evil arts as not contrary to the law, in mind he continually acts the thief.

S. 67². In the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal,' man, by stealing understands stealing, defrauding, and under some pretext taking away from the neighbour his goods. A spiritual Angel by 'stealing' understands depriving others of their truths of faith and goods of charity by means of falsities and evils. But a celestial Angel by 'stealing' understands attributing to one's self the things which are the Lord's, and claiming to one's self His justice and merit. Life 80. E.1083⁴.

Life. 62. That thefts, etc. of every kind, with the concupiscence thereto, are the evils which are to be shunned as sins. Gen.art.

80. That in proportion as anyone shuns thefts of every kind as sins, he loves sincerity. Gen.art.

81. The evil of theft enters more deeply into man than any other evil, because it is conjoined with cunning and deceit; and cunning and deceit insinuate themselves even into the spiritual mind of man . . .

P. 112³. The more a thief steals the more he lusts to steal, until at last he cannot desist.

146. As soon as a man who has perceived delight in defraudings and clandestine thefts, and who sees and acknowledges interiorly that they are sins, and therefore wants to desist from them, does desist, there arises a combat of the internal man with the external. Ex. . . When the victory has been gained, the external man comes into the delight of the love of what is sincere, which is charity; and afterwards the delight of defrauding gradually becomes undelightful to him. It is the same with all other sins.

296⁴. It is known that a thief feels such delight in thefts that he cannot desist; and . . . that he loves one stolen coin more than ten which have been given him.

R. 164. It is attributed to the Lord that He will 'come as a thief' (Rev.iii. 3), but in the spiritual sense it is meant that Hell will take away and steal (the eternal good of worship).

—². As the taking away of good and truth from those in dead worship is done as by a thief in the dark, this is sometimes likened to 'a thief.' Ill.

461. 'They repented not of their thefts,' etc. (Rev. ix.21). Ex. E.591.

705. 'Behold, I come as a thief' (Rev.xvi.15)=the Lord's advent, and Heaven then for those who look to him. . . 'To come as a thief,' when predicated of the Lord,=His advent, and Heaven then for those who have lived well, and Hell for those who have lived evilly. (=the Lord's advent, and the Last Judgment then. E.1005.)

892. Instead of the commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal,' 'sorcerers and idolaters' are here mentioned; and by 'sorcerers' are signified those who search out truths, which they falsify, that they may confirm falsities and evils by them . . . for this is a species of spiritual theft. And by 'idolaters' are signified those who . . . are in worship . . . from their Own intelligence . . . which also is a species of spiritual theft.

T. 317. 'Thou shalt not steal.' In the natural sense, by this commandment is meant . . . not to steal, rob, and act the pirate in time of peace; and, in general, not to take away from anyone his goods secretly, or under any pretext. It also extends itself to all impostures, illegitimate gains, usuries, and exactions; and also to fraudulent practices in paying duties and taxes, and in discharging debts. Workmen offend against this commandment who do their work unfaithfully and dishonestly; merchants who deceive in merchandise, in weight, measure, and accounts; officers who deprive the soldiers of their just wages; judges who pass judgment for friendship, bribes, or other causes . . .

318. In the spiritual sense, by stealing is meant to deprive others of the truths of their faith, which is done by false and heretical things. Priests who minister only for the sake of gain or the attainment of honour, and teach such things as they see or may see from the Word to be not true, are spiritual thieves, since they take away from the people the means of salvation, which are the truths of faith. Ill. 320, Ex.

319. In the celestial sense, by thieves are meant those who take away Divine power from the Lord; and also those who claim for themselves His merit and righteousness. Ex.

330. v. In proportion as anyone does not will to steal, in the same proportion he practices honesty=sinceritatem.

D. 457. That a great multitude of evil Spirits desire to steal.

— . They often want to excite me to steal, even such things as are of small value, as in shops . . . They tried to move my hand. . . Those who had been merchants, and had used guile in their business . . . retain this nature. And therefore such walk about, and, wherever they come, they seem to themselves to steal, thinking about nothing else; but they are fined . . . 658. 659.

658. On the cupidity of stealing.

2811. On kinds of certain thefts which are manifested in the other life.—There are clandestine thefts, of the minds of men, in that they endeavour in a thousand ways to insinuate themselves into the minds of men, by a kind of theft, namely, by putting on completely that which is delightful and dear to another, so as to present themselves as it were in the same person. Some do this merely for their own sake, their quietude, delight, praise . . . but these are not hurtful. But others attempt the like, and do it more skilfully . . . for different ends, as for instance in order to snatch away the goods and honours of others . . . Such are the worst. Further ex. 2812-2820.

3281. That old man who was adored by them . . . told them that he was a thief . . .

5466². The men had by various arts stolen men from elsewhere, and had brought them to the women, who had then cruelly treated them . . . It is said that they had stolen them, which is done when they lead them into their proprium, and thus carry them off whithersoever they will.

5949⁰. (The Russians) are devoid of the love of self, but still are thieves . . .

6065². See TRUTH, here.

D. Min. 4632. He who has charity . . . does not steal, that is, attribute righteousness to himself . . .

E. 193. 'I will come on thee as a thief' (Rev.iii.3)=the unexpected time of death, when all Knowledges acquired from the Word which have not received spiritual life, will be taken away. Ex.

—³. The same is meant in Rev.xvi.15. It is said 'as a thief' because evils and the derivative falsities in the natural man take away and cast out the Knowledges of truth and good which are from the Word there; for the things which are not loved, are cast out.

—⁴. As evils and falsities penetrate from within, and as it were break through the wall which is between the state of man's thought from the spirit and the state of his thought from the body, and cast out the Knowledges of truth and good which dwell with man exteriorly, therefore these are what are meant by 'thieves' in the following passages. Ill.

—⁶. Falsities are 'thieves;' and evils are 'destroyers by night' (Obad.5).

—⁸. 'Thief' (Hos.vii.1)=falsity taking away and dispersing truth.

548⁷. 'To steal' (Ex.xxii.1)=to take away.

591. 'Theft,' and 'to steal'=to take away from anyone the Knowledges of good and truth. Ex.

803. ii. See SIN, here.

902⁴. See CELESTIAL ANGEL, here.

919⁰. 'Thieves' (Obad.5)=evils which lay waste the truths and goods of the Church.

949³. In proportion as one shuns thefts, thus also frauds and unlawful gains, in the same proportion sincerity and justice enter, and he loves what is sincere and just from what is sincere and just, and thence does what is sincere and just not from self but from the Lord.

967². On the fifth commandment, 'Thou shalt not steal.'—By 'thefts' are meant not only manifest thefts, but also thefts not manifest, such as unlawful usury and gains, which are effected by fraud and cunning under various pretences to make them appear lawful, or so done clandestinely as not to appear at all. Such gains are commonly made by the higher and lower administrators of the goods of others; by merchants; and also by judges who sell judgments, and thus make justice purchasable. These and many other things are thefts which must be abstained from and shunned, and at last held in aversion as sins against God, because they are contrary to the Divine laws which are in the Word, and are contrary to this law, which is one among the fundamental laws of all religions in the whole globe. 969².

972². He who abstains from thefts, understood in a broad sense, or even he who shuns them, from any other cause than religion, and for the sake of eternal life, is not purified from them; for in no other way is Heaven opened; and it is through Heaven that the Lord removes the evils in man. Examp. (Another examp. 976².)

1005. 'To come as a thief,' when predicated of the Lord,=His advent, and the Last Judgment then. Ill. That 'to come as a thief' has this signification, is because it is attributed to the Lord that He takes away the Knowledges of good and truth, and devastates the Church, as a thief takes away wealth, and despoils a house; and also because the Church is then in night and darkness . . . and a thief comes in the night. Hence the comparison of the Lord's advent, and of the Last Judgment, to 'a thief.'

1167. They who resist as from themselves the cupidity of stealing, thus also the cupidity of gaining wealth dishonestly and unjustly, saying in their hearts that this must not be done because it is contrary to a Divine law, thus contrary to God, in itself infernal, thus in itself evil—such, after some brief combats, are withdrawn from that [evil], and are led by the Lord into the good which is called honesty—sincerum, and into the good which is called justice; and they then begin to think about these goods, and to see them from themselves, honesty from honesty, and justice from justice; and afterwards, as they shun and feel aversion for the evil of the aforesaid cupidity, they love these goods, and do them from love, and not from self-compulsion. But it is different if the cupidity of making gain dishonestly and unjustly remains with the man. Ex.

D. Wis. xi. 5². The Spiritual in (the seventh commandment—'Thou shalt not steal') is not to take away anything from the Lord, and attribute it to self, and say that it is his; and also not to take away from anyone the truths of his faith by means of falsities. The Moral in it is, not to act insincerely, unjustly, and fraudulently with the neighbour, and to secretly take away his wealth. And the Civil is, not to steal.

H. 429. Through these caverns are exhaled offensive stenches and stinks-foetores, which good Spirits shun . . . but evil Spirits are eager for . . . For as in the world everyone has been delighted with his own evil, so after death he is delighted with the stink-foetore-to which his evil corresponds. In this they may be compared to . . . ravens, wolves, and swine, which, from the stench which they perceive, fly and run to cadaverous and stercoraceous things. I have heard a certain Spirit crying out aloud as from inward torture when an effluent breathing from Heaven struck him ; and tranquil and glad when an effluent breathing from Hell struck him.

341². That cadaverous and putrid things are in accord with these noxious and useless animalcules . . . may be seen from the cause, which is that there are the like stinks-putores-and stenches in the Hells, where such animalcules also appear ; and therefore these Hells are named from them ; some being called cadaverous, some stercoraceous, and so on. . . Hence it is evident that where there are such stinks-putores, there are such noxious things, because they correspond.

It is turned into such a stench ; and, wonderful to say, the Spirits around me also smell such a stench and stink-foetore, as man does in his body. (2625.) At last the stink-foetore-was so augmented that they said they should perish . . .

5921. There exhaled from him as it were the stench of garlic. (Its correspondence ex.)

E. 237⁸. Truths destroyed are falsities, even such falsities as emit a bad smell. From these a stink-graveolentia-is perceived in the other life, which is such that it cannot be endured by any good Spirit : it is like the stench of purulent matter from the lungs.

659⁵. To those who have been assassins and poisoners, and also to those who have perceived delight in rapes, there is nothing more delightful than a cadaverous stench ; and to those who have been possessed with the love of exercising command, and also to those who have taken delight in adulteries, and no delight in marriages, there is nothing more delightful than an excrementitious stench ; and to those who have confirmed themselves in falsities, and have extinguished in themselves the affection of truth, there is nothing more delightful than a swampy and also a urinous stench.

1057⁷. More than the sweetest odours do (these profaners) love the rank stenches from flatulence and latrines, which to their smell are more fragrant than thyme. . . In a word, the love of domination by means of the holy things of the Church corresponds to foulness-foetori ; and its delight to a stink-putori-inexpressible in words, and at which the Angels shudder. Such is the exhalation from their Hells when they are opened ; but they are kept closed because of the consequent oppression and occasional swooning.

A. 814. They who bear deadly hatred, and thence breathe out revenge and nothing less than death to another, knowing no rest till then, are kept in the deepest cadaverous Hell, where there is a rank-graveolentus-stink as if from corpses; and . . . such Spirits are so delighted with this stink that they prefer it to the most delightful odours. . . Such a stink actually exhales from that Hell. When that Hell is opened . . . so great a stink pours out that Spirits cannot stay in the neighbourhood. Further des. 1514².

824². Sometimes the delight (of these adulterous and cruel infernals) is turned into the stink of human ordure, which exhales excessively when that Hell is opened. I have smelled it in the World of Spirits, and almost fell into a swoon from it. This stercoraceous stink-graveolentia-fills the Hell by turns, and by turns ceases. It is their delight from adulteries which is turned into such a stink-graveolentium.

825. A stink as from burning bones and hair exhales from ('Gehenna'). D. 3206.

951^e. When (those who had thought themselves holy) are taken out of that place, it is granted them to smell the stink of themselves, which is rank-graveolentus.

1397. (On entering that Society of Heaven) he smelled the cadaverous stink of himself.

1514². The stink of mice is diffused around from those who have been sordidly avaricious: the stink of bed-bugs from those who persecute the innocent.

1515. The sphere of the stink of a certain woman was perceived who was afterwards associated with the Sirens, and that stink exhaled for some days wherever she went. The Spirits said that the stink was as it were mortal; yet she smelled nothing of that stink. The stink of Sirens is similar, because their interiors are filthy, while their exteriors are for the most part becoming and fair.

1631. They who have been rich (here) and have dwelt in magnificent palaces, placing their heaven in such things; and, being devoid of conscience and charity, have despoiled others of their goods. . . at last become excrementitious, and exhale a sphere of the stink of teeth.

1742². The life which evil Spirits have . . . is the life of the cupidities of the love of self and of the world . . . It is turned into a stinking and excrementitious life; and, wonderful to say, they perceive this stink as most delightful. Ill.

P. 340^e. (The infernals) said that their delights are smelled by others as stinks from ordures, and as putrid stinks-putores-from carcasses; and as stenches-nidores-from stagnant waters. I said, Are these delightful to you? They said that they were most delightful. I said, Then you are like unclean beasts, which pass their time in such things. They replied, If we are, we are; but such things are the deliciousnesses of our nostrils. M. 461⁷. T. 569².

D. 618. On the stink of intemperance.—One evening, when I had taken much milk and bread . . . the Spirits kept their senses in intemperance; hence came an odour of human ordure from the dry things, and an odour of foul urine from the liquids, which was in my nostrils, and stuck there. . . They say that a like stench-nidor-is not smelled by them.

1279. In this deepest Hell . . . there is such a stink from carcasses that the ears would be hurt if it were described, and yet they are so delighted with the like that they prefer these stinks to the most delightful odours. Nay, this effluvium, which they carry with them, is poisonous and pestilential; for such carry with them stinks which smite the interiors of the stomach.

4759. Some such (believers in natural theology) stink like bed-bugs.

E. 1005². Consequently in the brothels (there) foulnesses of every kind appear. . . When they are opened, a stench-nidor-is exhaled which excites vomiting.

—². As a stink is a thing which is held in aversion, it is used in the Word for aversion. Ill. . . Here 'stink'=abominable evil.

—³. The reason their odour is said 'to stink-foetere in their eyes,' is that all in evils and falsities are averse to goods; and truths stink to them.

VOL. VI.

—⁴. That those in evils and the derivative falsities have a stink, is very evident from the Hells called cadaverous, where there are assassins and those very tenacious of revenge; and from the Hells called excrementitious, where there are adulterers and those who have had filthy pleasures as their end. When these Hells are opened, intolerable stinks-foetores-exhale from them; but these stinks are not smelled except by those who have the interiors, which are of the spirit, open. But still those in these Hells apperceive these stinks as grateful, and therefore they love to live in these stinks-foetoribus. For they are like those animals which live in carcasses and excrements, and there have the delight of their life. When those Spirits come outside the sphere of those stinks-foetorum, sweet and grateful odours are noisome and in the highest degree ungrateful to them.

7319. 'The river shall stink' (Ex. vii. 18)=aversion for the memory-knowledge-scientificum-of truth. 'To stink'=aversion.

— . In the other life, nothing is more abominable, and consequently nothing stinks more disagreeably, than profaned truth. . . It is circumstanced as is the stink-graveolentia-of a carcase, which is produced when living flesh is dying; for falsity does not smell unless it is united to truth, nor evil unless it is united to good: each is smelled, not from itself, but from its opposite, in its true character; from which it may be evident how greatly profaned truth must stink; for profaned truth is falsity conjoined with truth . . .

7409. 'The land stank' (Ex. viii. 14)=what is consequently noisome and repulsive.

7766². Their damnation is smelled by the stink and fetor which exhales from them more than from those with whom such (knowledges) have not been a matter of faith . . . In general, if an evil Spirit approaches a heavenly Society, where there is charity, a stink-foetor-is plainly smelled from him. So in particular, where, in the same subject, there have been such things as are of Heaven . . . and also such things as are of Hell.

464. iii. In spiritual and Divine things, which relate to the salvation of the soul, man is like a stock, a stone, a pillar of salt . . . iv. In this respect man is worse than a stock, unless the Holy Ghost . . . operates in him . . . v. With some reason it may be said that man is not a stone or a stock. The human understanding is this latter stomach . . .

D. 1035. (This is like) the foods which are put into the stomach; for Souls relate to the things which are put into the stomach, and they are there triturated. Some must be roughly agitated in the stomach, and then in the intestines; others are at once absorbed into the veins . . . some into the lymphatics; some, on their entrance into the month, before they come into the stomach, are carried off by the veins, and exhale into the brain . . .

1273. There was afterwards a dully painful obstruction about the upper orifice of the stomach, from a like cause; for the mucus is collected there . . .

D. Min. 4574. Whenever (the Spirits who take away from others the life of thought) spoke, there resulted something of a kind of indigestion of the stomach, so that they affected the stomach—stomachum—horribly. See 4599.

4785. On those who appear in the stomach.—They who are very solicitous about future things, especially those who are so from avarice, appear as if in the stomach. . . Their sphere may be compared to that sickening stench which is exhaled from the stomach.

4826. On those who relate to the stomach.—Many anxieties appear to have their seat in the stomach; and the influx of such Spirits is felt there . . . as the anxieties of avarice . . . and also other anxieties, which are manifestly perceived in the stomach; some interiorly; some higher, or lower, according to the difference of them. I have often spoken with the Spirits who induced them, and who are of the province of the stomach. These correspond to indigestion . . . 4828.

4827. The stomach corresponds also to the longing for knowledge for the sake of use; thus to the digestion and appropriation of the things which are of use. Then is the stomach in its freedom, and swells up freely, and the lungs operate freely upon it, causing life to be delightful. In the other case it is constricted; nor can it arrive at freedom.

2039^e. 'Knives of flints=petrarum'=the truths. . . 'Stone,' or 'flint'=truths.

2466^r. 'To commit adultery with stone and wood' (Jer.iii.9)=to pervert the truths and goods of external worship. 'Stone'=such truth.

3694. '(Jacob) took of the stones of the place' (Gen. xxviii.11)=the truths of that state. 'Stones'=lower truths, such as are those of the natural man.

3720. 'Temple'=truth, because it was constructed of stones; and 'stones'=truth.

—². They who place merit in truths, in that they have believed themselves to know truths better than others, and yet have lived evilly, appear to themselves to cut stones. (This) has made it evident to me that . . . stone=truth; and also the fact that when . . . a stone house has been seen, there has occurred the idea of truth.

3724-3726. '(Jacob) took the stone which he had placed for his pillows' (ver.18)=the truth with which there was communication with the Divine; 'and placed it for a pillar'=a holy boundary.

3727. See STATUE, here. 4190. 4580. 10643.

— The Most Ancients thought from these stones about the ultimates in man, consequently about the ultimate of order, which is truth in the natural man. . . They were instructed from Heaven that 'stones'=truth. 4580².

3769. 'A great stone was upon the well's mouth' (Gen.xxix.2)=that the Word was closed up. Ex.

3771. 'They rolled the stone from the well's mouth' (ver.3)=that they unclosed it.

shall be for a witness to us; for it hath heard all the words of Jehovah . . .' (Josh.xxiv.26,27) . . . The truth through which the confirmation was made was 'the stone.' That 'a stone'=truth. Refs. In the supreme sense, 'the stone'=the Lord Himself, because all truth is from Him; and therefore He is called 'the Stone of Israel' (Gen.xlix.24); and it is here said that the stone should be for a witness because it had heard all the words of Jehovah.

4489². The stones (of the altar)=in special, lower truths. Refs.

4530². Hence the colours mentioned in the Word, such as those of the precious stones . . . represented such things as are of intelligence and wisdom.

4580^e. 'For 'a stone'=truth in the ultimate of order. Refs.

4728². 'That go down to the stones of the pit' (Is. xiv.19) . . . 'The stones'=the borders; whence they are called also 'the sides'; for round about the pits are the Hells.

5135⁵. 'It shall consume it with the . . . stones thereof' (Zech.v.4) . . . 'The house'=the natural mind . . . and 'the stones'=the truths there.

5156^e. The penalty of stoning was on account of falsity . . . because 'stone'=truth; and, in the opposite, falsity . . . And therefore it is said 'to commit adultery with stone,' by which is signified the perversion of truth, or falsity.

5131⁵. These stones (Rev.iv.3), like all the precious stones in the Word,=Divine truth. And stones, in general,=the truths of faith. Refs.

6335². The reason there were precious stones (in the breastplate) was that they=spiritual and celestial truths.

6426. 'Hence is the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel' (Gen.xlix.24)=that hence is all good and truth for the Spiritual Kingdom. . . 'A stone'=truth.

—². 'The Stone of Israel,' in the supreme sense, =the Lord as to the truth which is in His Spiritual Kingdom, because by 'stone,' in general, is signified the temple, and, in special, its foundation; and by 'the temple' is signified the Lord's Divine Human . . . That 'a stone,' in the supreme sense,=the Lord as to the Divine truth which is in His Spiritual Kingdom. Ill.

—³. Here, (Dan.ii.34) by 'stone,' in the supreme sense, is meant the Lord; and, in the relative sense, His Spiritual Kingdom. That the stone was 'cut out of a rock'=that it was from the truth of faith . . . and, as the truth of faith is signified by 'a stone' and 'a rock,' it is the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom which also is signified; for this is in the truth of faith, and derivatively in good.

—⁴. The like is signified by 'the stone' upon which Jacob slept . . .

—^e. That by 'a stone,' in the supreme sense, the ancients understood the Lord; and, in the representative sense, His Spiritual Kingdom, is evident from Josh. xxiv.26,27.

6640². That all the truths and goods of the Church might be represented, twelve precious stones were set in gold in their order, one stone for each tribe, and this was called 'the breastplate' . . . and answers were received from it by the various flashings out of light, to which there was adjoined either a living voice, or an internal perception.

[A.] 7112^e. Stones not made (as bricks are)=truths.

7328. 'Both in woods and in stones' (Ex.vii.19)=the total falsification of the good which is of charity, and of the truth which is of faith.

7456. 'Will they not stone us?' (Ex.viii.26)=that thus they would extinguish the truths of faith . . . 'To stone'=to extinguish and blot out falsities; but, in the opposite sense, when it is done by the evil, it=to extinguish and blot out the truths which are of faith.

—². The death penalty of stoning was inflicted if anyone wanted to destroy the truths of worship which had been commanded . . . for the reason that 'a stone'=truth; and, in the opposite, falsity. —³, III.

—^e. (Thus) the penalty of stoning [which existed] from ancient times, because in Egypt, had been derived from the representatives of the Ancient Church.

7519¹⁰. 'Great stones' (Jer.xliii.9)=falsities.

7973⁵. For precious stones=the truths of faith which are from the good of charity.

8279. 'They went down . . . like a stone' (Ex.xv.5)=that they fell . . . as if from weight. . . It is said 'like a stone,' because by 'a stone,' in the genuine sense, is signified truth; and therefore, in the opposite, falsity; for falsity from evil is of such a nature that it sinks down towards the lower parts as what is heavy does (here). 8320.

8540⁴. 'A stone of lead' (Zech.v.7,8)=the falsity of evil closing it up; for 'a stone'=external truth; and thence, in the opposite, falsity.

8575. 'Yet a little and they will stone me' (Ex.xvii.4)=that they are not far from offering violence to truth from the Divine. . . 'Stoning'=the punishment on account of the violation of the truth which is of worship; here, in the opposite sense, to inflict violence on truth from the Divine.

8581². 'The stone' (cut out of the rock)=faith. . . 'A stone,' in the Word,=the truth which is of faith. Refs.

8799. 'For by stoning he shall be stoned' (Ex.xix.13)=that the truths of faith which he has will perish. For 'to be stoned'=the penalty for falsity and for violated truth. The reason this penalty is suffered by those who from self-confidence ascend to the Divine in the Heaven which is above, is that then all the intelligence which they had previously, perishes.

8932⁷. 'Stone' (Hab.ii.19)=falsity.

8940. 'Stones'=truths. Refs.

—². The reason the words of the law were written upon the stones of the altar, was that 'stones'=truths . . . This was also the reason why the ten commandments—which=Divine truths in the complex—were written on tables of stone.

8941. 'Thou shalt not build them hewn' (Ex.xx.25)=not from own intelligence; for 'hewn stones'=such things as are of own intelligence. For 'stones'=truths; and to cut or fit them,=to hatch or produce from proprium truths, or such things as are like truths. (Continued under CUT-caedere.)

—⁵. As these things were signified by 'hewn stone,' the altar first erected in Canaan by the sons of Israel was built of unhewn stones; for by the passage over Jordan was represented introduction into the Lord's Kingdom, which is effected through the truths of faith.

—⁶. The temple . . . was also built of whole stones not hewn . . . for by the temple of the Lord was represented the Lord as to Divine truth . . . because Divine truth was taught there; and therefore it was built of stones; for by stones was signified Divine truth; and hence the Lord Himself was called 'the Stone of Israel.'

—⁷. (Thus) the stone of the altar, and the stone of the temple, and also whole stones, and not hewn ones, signified that religion is to be formed by truths from the Lord, thus from the Word, and not from own intelligence.

8988⁵. For by stones in general are signified truths; and by precious stones, truths which are from the Lord. Refs.

9011³. 'A stone'=the truth of faith; and, in the opposite sense (as here in Num.xxxv.17), falsity.

—⁴. For 'a stone'=the truth of faith in the natural man; and, in the opposite, falsity.

9025. 'If a man smite his companion with a stone' (Ex.xxi.18)=the weakening of one truth of the Church by some scientific. . . For 'a stone'=truth in the ultimate of order, that is, in the Natural; thus what is a matter of memory knowledge-scientificum.

9067. 'By stoning he shall be stoned' (Ex.xxi.28)=the penalty for having destroyed the truth and good of faith. 9083.

9377. A heart full of the love of self is hard, and is called in the Word 'stony.'

—e. (Such) humble themselves and adore from the love of self, thus from a hard and stony heart . . .

94067. That 'a stone out of the rock' ground to pieces the iron, brass, etc. (Dan.ii.)=that the Church, as to the reception of truth from the Word, perishes when falsity and evil are confirmed by means of the sense of the letter of the Word, which takes place when the Church is in its last state . . .

94075. For 'a stone,' in general, = truth, and a precious stone, truth which is translucent from the Divine of the Lord. III.

9416. 'I will give thee tables of stone' (Ex.xxiv.12) = the book of the law, or the Word, in the whole complex.

—The reason these tables were of stone, was that 'stone'=truth; properly, truth in ultimates. Truth Divine in ultimates is the Word in the letter.

9476. 'Stones of fillings' (Ex.xxv.7)=the goods of faith, or spiritual goods . . . because the stones of fillings were for the breastplate, by which was signified the good of faith, or spiritual good.

—That by precious stones, in the Word, are signified the truths and goods of faith, or spiritual truths and goods. Refs. And, as the truths and goods of faith are signified by precious stones, by them are also signified intelligence and wisdom; for intelligence is from the truths of faith, and wisdom is from the goods of faith. III.

97146. 'The stones of the altar scattered' (Is.xxvii. 9)=all the truths of worship.

9846. 'A worker of stone' (Ex.xxviii.11)=the good of love; thus the Voluntary of one who has been regenerated . . .

9849. 'Stones of memorial for the sons of Israel' (Ex.xxviii.12)=from mercy for ever in the Spiritual Kingdom; for the stones of memorial upon the shoulders of the ephod=the conservation of good and truth from mercy for ever. Ex.

9863. 'Thou shalt fill it with a filling of stone' (ver. 17)=the truths themselves in their order from one good . . . For the breastplate was filled with stones according to the names of the sons of Israel; and by stones, in a general sense, are signified truths in the ultimate of order; and, by precious stones, such as were in the breastplate, truths which shine forth from good. It is said from one good, because there is one good from which are all truths—the good of love to the Lord, thus the Lord Himself. Ex.

—2. That the precious stones which were in the breastplate=Divine truths from Divine good, is evident from the places in the Word where precious stones are mentioned. III.

—These truths from good in their order are marked out by the precious stones (in the foundations of the wall of the New Jerusalem).

—3. In (Ezek.xxviii.) also, by the precious stones enumerated are signified truths from good.

—4. That the stones (in the breastplate)=all truths and goods in the complex, is evident from the fact that there were twelve, and that on them were inscribed the names of the sons of Israel . . .

9864. 'Four rows (or orders) of stone, the order' (Ex.xxviii.17)=the conjunction of all the truths from good . . . For 'the rows of stone'=truths from good in their order. The reason there were four rows, and in each row three stones, was that there might be represented the conjunction of all truths from one good, and thus perfection; for 'four'=conjunction; and 'three,' perfection. For when there is one good from which all things proceed, consequently which all things regard, there is a conjunction of all things. Examp.

9865. As the twelve stones in the breastplate represented all truths from good, they represented the whole Heaven; for Heaven is Heaven from the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord's Divine good. The Angels who constitute Heaven are receptions of it. Hence it is that the three stones in the first row represent the Inmost Heaven, consequently the love which is there, which is called the celestial love of good and the celestial love of truth; the stones in the first row, the celestial love of good; and those in the second, the celestial love of truth. That these stones represent this love they derive from their colour; for precious stones represent according to their colours. 98682. 9870.

—3. (Thus) stones of so many colours were set in rows in the breastplate, in order to represent in their order all the goods and truths which are in the Heavens, consequently, the universal Heaven.

—The reason the stones of the first row—ruby, topaz, and carbuncle—represented the celestial love of good, is that they partake of red . . .

98662. (Hence) in each row there were three stones; and by each row there was signified a trine as a one. The reason there were four rows, is that there are two Kingdoms in the Heavens . . . and in each an internal and an external. (Continued under BREASTPLATE.) 9867. 9868. 9871.

9868. All goods and truths which follow, proceed in order from those which precede . . . The first in order is the celestial love of good; the second is the celestial love of truth; the third is the spiritual love of good; and the fourth is the spiritual love of truth. This order is what was represented in the rows of stones . . . and it is the very order of the goods and truths in the Heavens. In the Inmost Heaven . . . its internal is the celestial love of good; and its external, the celestial love of truth. In the Second Heaven the spiritual love of good is its internal, and the spiritual love of truth is its external. The one Heaven also inflows into the other in the same order, and they constitute as it were a one.

is the good of mutual love, meant by the celestial love of truth. The internal good of the Spiritual Kingdom is the good of charity towards the neighbour, meant by the spiritual love of good; and its external good is the good of faith, meant by the spiritual love of truth.

[A.9873]². Hence it is evident what was represented by the twelve stones . . . And that the good of love had the first place there, and the truth of faith the last, is evident from the first stone being a ruby, and the last a jasper; thus from the first being red, and the last white, and both transparent.

—³. The like to what was signified by the stones in the breastplate, was signified by the materials interwoven in the ephod. Ex.

9874². The breastplate with the twelve stones represented every good and truth in the Heavens; thus the whole Heaven . . . This Divine good which proceeds from the Lord is what was represented by the 'gold' around the stones. Ex.

9875. 'The stones shall be upon the names of the sons of Israel' (ver. 21)=the goods and truths distinctly as to every quality. Ex.

9954². The reason they thus anointed stones, was that 'stones'=truths; and truths without good have not the life of Heaven in them . . . But when the stones were anointed with oil, they represented truths from good; and, in the supreme sense, the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord's Divine good; and thus the Lord Himself, who was thence called 'the Stone of Israel.' E.375¹⁰.

10199⁶. 'Precious stone' (Ezek.xxvii.22)=these interior truths themselves.

10254¹. 'Precious stones'=Divine truths received in good. Refs.

10376. 'Stone'=Divine truth in ultimates. . . The reason the two tables were of stone, and that the words of the Law were written on stone, was that 'stone'=truth in ultimates; and Divine truth in ultimates is the sense of the letter of the Word . . .

10483². Man would fall down as dead as a stone.

10517^c. Hence the inhabitants of the (Third) Earth love trees, and to have their edifice formed from them; and they are averse to materials of stone, and houses built of them. For trees and kinds of wood=goods; and stones and houses of them=truths; and man is such that he loves the things which correspond to his interior affections. . .

307². The foundations of the wall being of precious stones=the Knowledges upon which that doctrine is founded.

489². Everything in their houses is refulgent as from precious stones.

—^e. From that stone seen in the corner . . . it was evident what is signified by . . . Matt.xxi.42,44; Luke xx.17,18. 'A stone'=the Divine truth; and 'the Stone of Israel,' the Lord as to the Divine Human; 'the builders'=those who are of the Church; 'the head of the corner'=where are the two ways; 'to fall,' and 'to be broken'=to deny and to perish.

N. 1⁵. 'Precious stones'=truths from good. Refs.

J. 54^e. That Babylon was destroyed by the Lord when He was in the world . . . which is meant . . . also by 'the stone cut out of the rock' which destroyed the image.

S. 43^e. 'The precious stones' (Rev.xxi.)=the truths and goods of the Word in their order, from which is doctrine; and, through doctrine, the Church.

44. 'The twelve precious stones' (of the breastplate) . . . represented Divine truths from Divine good in the whole complex. . . The 'precious stones' there represented truths transparent from good; 'the twelve precious stones,' all ultimate truths transparent from the good of love in their order. . . (Thus) these 'precious stones' also=truths from good in the ultimate sense of the Word; and by no other truths are answers given from Heaven, because in this sense is the proceeding Divine in its fullness.

—⁵. That 'precious stones' and 'diadems'=Divine truths in their ultimates, such as are the truths of the letter of the Word, has been made very evident to me from the precious stones and diadems in the Spiritual World with the Angels and Spirits there, which I have seen worn by them, and also in their jewel cases; and it has been granted to know that they correspond to truths in ultimates; nay, that they also exist and appear thence. III.

45. The truths of the sense of the letter of the Word, are meant by 'the precious stones' in the garden of Eden (Ezek.xxviii.12,13). . . 'The precious stones'=truths transparent from good, such as are those in the sense of the letter of the Word; and, as these truths are meant by those stones, they are called his 'covering.' The sense of the letter covers the interiors of the Word. 97⁴. (=the truths of intelligence. R.90².)

R. 191³. The destruction of the temple until there should not be a stone upon a stone=the end of that Church: that there should not be any truth then left. E. 220⁹.

231. 'A stone,' in the Word,=truth in ultimates; and 'a precious stone,' truth transparent from good.

—². Hence these two colours (white and red) are in the precious stones in Heaven also, where they are in great abundance. It is from this that 'precious stones,' in the Word,=such things as are either of the truth of wisdom, or of the good of love . . . 915².

—². The reason these stones=the appearance of the Divine wisdom and the Divine love in ultimates, is that all the precious stones in Heaven derive their origin from the ultimates of the Word, and their transparency from the spiritual sense of the ultimates there . . . The ultimates of the Word are the truths and goods of the sense of its letter. That this is the origin of the precious stones in Heaven . . . it has been given me to know from speech with the Angels, and also to see with my eyes; but the formation of them is by the Lord alone.

540. See DIADEM, here.

—². Divine truths in ultimates, which are the truths of the sense of the letter of the Word, were signified by the twelve precious stones in the breastplate . . . also by the precious stones in the garden of Eden . . . and by the twelve precious stones of which were made the foundations of the wall of the New Jerusalem. The reason the truths of the sense of the letter are signified by 'diadems,' or 'precious stones,' is that all things of the sense of the letter of the Word are, before the Angels, transparent from its spiritual sense, thus from the light of Heaven, in which are the spiritual truths of the Word. For 'a stone,' in the Word,=truth in ultimates; hence 'a precious stone'=that truth transparent.

566⁶. The Word seen surrounded with precious stones in a heavenly form. . . When the Word is opened . . . there appears from the precious stones a rainbow above and around the Word. Des.

726. 'Decked in gold and precious stone' (Rev. xvii. 4)=the Divine good and Divine truth spiritual, which are of the Word, with them. 725². 772.

897³. For 'a precious stone'=the Divine truth of the Word . . .

914. 'The foundations of the wall of the city were adorned with every precious stone' (Rev. xxi. 19)=that all things of the doctrine of the New Jerusalem taken from the sense of the letter of the Word, with those who are there, will appear in light according to the reception. . . 'Every precious stone'=the Word in the sense of the letter transparent from its spiritual sense. Refs. 915.

915. Precious stones, in general=all the truths of doctrine from the Word translucent by the spiritual sense. Here, by each stone is signified some truth in special thus translucent. The Word in the sense of the letter, as to its doctrinal things, corresponds to precious stones of every kind.

—³. Like things are signified by these twelve stones to those which are signified by the twelve precious stones in the breastplate . . .

—⁴. That the 'foundations' are of precious stones. III.

—⁵. As every truth of doctrine from the Word must be founded upon the acknowledgment of the Lord, the Lord is called 'the Stone of Israel;' and also 'the Corner Stone which the builders have rejected.' That the Corner Stone is a foundation stone, is evident from Jer. li. 26.

926². Beneath that swamp there was a great hewn stone, beneath which lay the Word, well hidden. . . An east wind came . . . dried up the swamp, and laid bare the stone. . . I then saw that foundation stone . . . set round with precious stones; from which as it were lightning flashed upon the walls of the temple. . . Then in place of the temple was seen the Lord alone, standing upon the foundation stone, which was the Word . . .

962. High above the table (on which was the Word), there appeared a wide-spread canopy, refulgent with precious stones, from the resplendence of which there shone forth as it were a rainbow . . .

M. 76³. We saw also temples of precious stone of the colour of the sapphire and lapis lazuli. The Angel said, Their houses are of stones, because stones=natural Truths; and precious stones, spiritual Truths; and all those who lived in the Silver Age had intelligence from spiritual Truths, and the derivative natural ones.

78³. In the (cities of the Iron Age) there were temples of hewn lime stone . . .

797². The crowd said, Let him that is guiltless cast the first stone.

T. 209⁵. In the Spiritual World there are . . . precious stones of every kind, the spiritual origin of which is the sense of the letter of the Word. (217.) Thence it is that . . . the foundations of the wall of the New Jerusalem are described by means of twelve precious stones, because by the foundations of its wall are signified the doctrinal things of the New Church from the sense of the letter of the Word . . .

217. That the truths of the sense of the letter of the Word are meant by the precious stones of which the foundations of the New Jerusalem consisted. Ex.

—². The spiritual origin of the precious stones in the Spiritual World, is the truths in the sense of the letter . . . Hence it is that wherever, in the Word, precious stones are mentioned, by them, in the spiritual sense, are meant truths. That by the precious stones of which the foundations of the wall . . . are said to be constructed, are signified the truths of the doctrine of the New Church, follows from the fact that 'the New Jerusalem'=the New Church as to doctrine from the Word; and therefore its 'wall,' and the 'foundations' of its wall, must=the external of the Word, which is the sense of its letter; for it is this from which the doctrine is, and, through the doctrine, the Church; and this sense is like a wall with foundations, which shuts in and protects a city.

D. Min. 4676. On striking a stone. 4678.

E. 141⁵. 'To commit adultery with stone and wood' = to pervert and profane all truth and good.

176². 'The stone cut out of the rock' = the Lord, by means of Divine truth . . . (= the Divine truth from the Lord. 411⁴.) 1029⁵.

—³. 'Brass for woods, and iron for stones' = natural good and truth in great abundance like that of wood and stones.

223². 'Stone' = truth; here (in connection with the two tables of the law) Divine truth.

240⁴. 'They shall stone with stone' (Ezek.xvi.40) = that the Church would die through falsities.

242¹³. 'Precious stones' = truths which are beautiful because from good. Refs.

—¹⁴. 'The stones of holiness are poured out at the head of every street' (Lam.iv.1) = the truths from (the goods of the Church) which are falsified.

268^e. That all precious stones = truths from the good of Heaven and the Church. Refs.

294⁹. 'The precious stones' (Ezek.xxviii.) = the Knowledge of truth and good. These are called 'a covering,' because they are in the natural man; and the natural man covers the spiritual.

304⁴². 'A stone entire and just' (Deut.xxv.15), which was a weight . . . = truth and its quality . . .

315⁸. 'To stone with stone' (Ezek.xxiii.47) = the destruction of truth through falsities; for 'stoning' = penalty and death on account of violence offered to Divine truth.

—²¹. The altar was made of whole stones, because such 'stones' = truths formed from good, or good in form; and, lest anything from Own intelligence should approach and at the same time form it, it was forbidden to fit those stones by hammer, axe, or instrument of iron. 585¹¹.

400^e. 'The Angel rolled away the stone, and sat upon it' (Matt.xxviii.2) = that the Lord removed all the falsity which had shut off access to Him, and opened Divine truth; for 'the stone' = the Divine truth which the Jews had falsified by their traditions. For it is said that the chief priests and Pharisees 'sealed the stone with a guard' . . . 687¹⁸.

401²⁵. 'I will set all thy border in stones of desire' (Is.liv.12) = that true scientifics, which are of the natural man, will be pleasant and delightful from good.

411⁴. 'The stone that became a great rock' (Dan.ii.35) = the Lord. . . That 'the stone became a great rock, and filled the whole earth' = that the Lord, through Divine truth, is to rule over Heaven and the Church. . . That Divine truth is here meant by 'a stone,' and the Lord as to Divine truth by 'a rock,' is evident from the signification of 'stone,' in the Word, when predicated of the Lord. Ill. Coro.2³.

—^e. 'A stone,' in the supreme sense, = the Lord as to Divine truth; and thence, in a lower sense, truth from good. Refs.

—⁶. For stones which are 'cut out of a rock' (Is.li.1) = truths from the Lord.

431⁸. 'Stones,' in general, = truths; 'precious stones,' truths from good; thus the twelve precious stones (of the breastplate) = all truths from good in the Church and in Heaven. Refs.

—¹⁵. The colours of the stones (in the breastplate) corresponded to the universals signified by the tribes inscribed on them.

503¹¹. For 'stones,' in the Word, = truths; and, in the opposite, falsities . . .

540⁹. 'The great stones hidden in the brick-kiln' (Jer.xliiii.9) = the truths of the Word falsified by figments from Own intelligence.

585¹¹. Hence the stones of which the altar and the temple were built = truths of doctrine, of religion, and of worship.

587. 'Stone' = natural truth. . . When a false doctrinal is confirmed by the natural things of the Word, such as are those of the sense of its letter, it becomes a brass and a stone idol.

—¹⁵. That the Church will be devastated as to all the truths of the Church, is signified by . . . 'the stones (of Samaria) shall flow down into the valley' (Micah i.6).

655⁴. 'Stoning' = a condemnation and curse on account of the destruction of truth in the Church. 768²⁵. 863¹⁷. 1164⁹.

700²⁴. The ark with the gifts was set down upon a great stone, near which the kine stood still (1 Sam.vi.18) because 'a stone' = Divine truth in the ultimate of order.

701²¹. The reason the two tables were of stone, was that by 'stone' also, is signified Divine truth in ultimates.

—³⁰. 'A covenant with the stones of the field' (Job.v.23) = conjunction with the truths of the Church.

—⁴. In the palaces of the Angels . . . there are many things which are refulgent with precious stones; and sometimes precious stones are let down from thence into the lower parts, and are presented as a gift to those who have done something of good; they are even sold there as in the world, especially by the Jews, who there trade in them. The reason it has been granted the Jews to trade in precious stones in (both) worlds, is that they regard the sense of the letter . . . as holy. (Continued under DIADEM.)

—⁵. That when the Lord comes, He will reveal to them Divine truths, and instruct them, is signified by, 'I will lay thy stones with stibium, and thy foundations in sapphires, and I will make thy suns a carbuncle, and thy gates into rubies, and thy borders into stones of desire' (Is.liv.11,12). It is evident that the precious stones here mentioned = Divine truths in the ultimate of order, such as are the truths of the sense of the letter, in which are internal truths. Ex.

—⁶. These 'twelve precious stones' (of the New Jerusalem) . . . = ultimate Divine truths, which are the truths of the sense of the letter, upon which the doctrine of that Church is founded. The reason the foundations are said to be 'of precious stones' . . . is that the sense of the letter contains the spiritual sense in it, thus the light of Heaven, from which the sense of the letter is transparent, as those stones are from light and from fire.

—⁷. The precious stones (of the breastplate) = like things. Ex. (= Divine truths in ultimates. —⁸.)

—⁹. Like things are also signified by 'the precious stones' by which is described the knowledge of the Knowledges of truth and good, and the derivative intelligence, of the King of Tyre, in Ezek.xxviii. Ex. —¹⁰, Ex.

—¹¹. Ultimate Divine truths are signified by the precious stones named in Job.xxviii.

—¹². 'The stones of Zion' which the servants of Jehovah desire (Ps.cii.14) = Divine truths.

—¹⁵. Precious stones with those who are in infernal falsities. Ex. and III.

724³⁸. As 'stones' = truths, it is said, 'God is able of these stones to raise up sons unto Abraham' (Luke iii.8).

— That by 'stones' are signified the truths upon which interior truths are founded. Refs.

781¹⁵. That falsities from Own intelligence turn away and reject the influx of truth, is signified by, 'he hath hedged about my ways with hewn stone' (Lam.iii.9).

828^e. Not a stone is found (in the Third Heaven), because 'stone' = natural truth.

850⁷. Truths restored and to be restored are signified by 'the stones which her servants desire' (Ps.cii.14).

918¹. 'Which he fenced, and gathered out the stones' (Is.v.2) = that it was protected from falsities and evils.

1142. 'Of precious stone and pearl' (Rev.xviii.12) = the Knowledges of truth and good from the Word which have been profaned. 'Precious stone' = the Knowledges of truth from the Word. . . 'Precious stones' = the truths through which are goods.

1145². 'Stone' (as distinguished from wood) here = the truth of the natural man; because it is cold, and cannot be burned.

—³. 'Stones' (Ezek.xxvi.12) = the truths of the natural man.

—⁸. 'The wall out of which the stone crieth' (Hab.ii.11) = man empty of truths, and who thus wants to be instructed from falsity.

1211¹. In Heaven there are flowers of precious stones and of crystals, (which) grow from the lands there.

J. (Post.) 254. The Jews there trade especially in precious stones, which they procure in certain ways from Heaven; for precious stones come from there. . . There are stones of every kind there. . . Such precious things are given thence to those below who study Truths; and they remain such for ever, from their origin. From these the Jews procure them, and sell them. The reason this trade belongs to the Jews . . . is that they love the Word of the Old Testament, in the letter; and the literal sense . . . corresponds to precious stones of various kinds. This sense is meant by the twelve precious stones (in the breastplate). . . It is meant by the precious stones in Tyre . . . and by the precious stones (of the New Jerusalem). 293.

255. There are some who make for themselves precious stones by art, so that they can scarcely be distinguished from the genuine ones; but when they are found out they are severely punished . . .

A. 843. 'The fountains of the abyss, and the cata-racts of heaven were stopped up' (Gen.viii.2) = that temptation ceased. 844.

3412. 'The Philistines stopped up the wells' (Gen.xxvi.15) = that they were not willing to know interior truths . . . and thus obliterated them. . . 'To stop up' = not to be willing to know, and thus to obliterate. 3420.

27. Then these (truths and goods), that is, the Knowledge of truth and good, are stored up in his memory.

233. The hidden things of nature . . . The hidden things of spiritual and celestial life . . .

268². When goods and truths no longer appear to be present, the man is external or corporeal, although they have been stored up by the Lord in the internal, of which the man is not aware; for they do not come forth except when the external as it were dies . . .

E68². See GENERAL, here.

1408. In the internal sense are arcana of Heaven, which lie stored up there.

1450². These remains . . . are stored up for the use of his subsequent life.

1548. These celestial things . . . are stored up in the little child for use in later life; and for his use when he comes into the other life . . .

1707³. In the internal man the Lord stores up the goods and truths with which he gifts man from infancy; (and) through these He inflows into the rational man; and through this into the exterior man; and in this way it is given to man to think, and to be a man. Ex.

1767. On the Word, which stores up and conceals Divine things . . .

1888. That the sense of the letter . . . is the receptacle, and thus the repository of the celestial and spiritual things of the Lord. Ill.

2354². They conceal this Profane interiorly.

3702². Things still more hidden would be perceived in the interior organs of man, if his life were according to order.

4249. The good which then inflows from within is attended with many truths which had been stored up in his interior man.

4799³. Whatever man wants to hide, contracts his face.

5133. The interior Natural . . . receives ideas of truth and good from the Rational, and stores them up for use.

5207². In the meanwhile, truths are stored up in the interior, and are there infilled with good . . .

5280³. The Angels then excite the affections of truth and good, which have been insinuated from infancy . . . and afterwards stored up interiorly, and preserved for this use. Hence a combat . . .

5291. (The generals in the Natural) which are to be preserved and afterwards stored up. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. 'A fifth part'=the goods and truths stored up by the Lord with man, and reserved for use when there shall be a famine . . . For unless such things were stored up by the Lord with man, there would be nothing to elevate him when in a state of temptation and vastation, consequently nothing through which he could be regenerated . . .

5292. Truths are not stored up in the interior man, except those which are conjoined with goods.

5340. Joseph's gathering the food together, and putting it in cities, and in the midst=that he stored up (the truth adjoined to good which had been multiplied in the first times); thus that he preserved it (in the interiors of the natural mind. See 5298. 5342.)

5342. From his first infancy to his first childhood, man is introduced by the Lord into Heaven, among the celestial Angels, by whom he is kept in a state of innocence . . . When the age of childhood commences, he by degrees puts off the state of innocence, but still is kept in a state of charity . . . which state lasts with many up to adolescence, and he is then among the spiritual Angels. Then, because he begins to think from himself, and to act accordingly, he can no longer be kept in charity : for he then calls forth hereditary evils, and suffers himself to be led by them. When this state arrives, the goods of charity and of innocence which he had previously received, are exterminated by degrees as he thinks evils and confirms them in act. Nevertheless they are not exterminated, but are withdrawn by the Lord towards the interiors, and are there stored up. But, as he has not yet known truths, the goods of innocence and of charity . . . have not yet been qualified . . . and therefore, from this age, he is imbued with truths by means of instructions, and especially by means of his Own thoughts and the consequent confirmations : and so, in proportion as he is then in the affection of good, in the same proportion the truths are conjoined by the Lord with the good with him, and are stored up for use. This state is what is signified by the seven years of abundance of provision. (Continued under REMAINS.) 7493.

5344. That the things which were previously in the interior Natural, he stored up in the interiors of the interior Natural. Sig. and Ex.

6596. 'An ark' = that in which something is stored up, or hidden—occultatur.

7560. That good and truth are stored up within, and are there reserved by the Lord, even with the evil, is in order that there may be something of what is human still left ; for, without these, man is not man ; for the things which are stored up and reserved are good and truth, through which there is a communication with Heaven ; and, in proportion as a man has communication with Heaven, in the same proportion he is a man. There is indeed a communication of the evil, even of those who are in Hell, with Heaven : but there is not any conjunction through good and truth. Ex. . . Whereas through the good and truth which are stored up and reserved in the interiors, there is conjunction ; but these truths and goods with the evil effect no more than that they can reason, and think from the sensuous, and thus speak, and so confirm what is false, and defend what is evil. More than this from the goods and truths stored up and reserved with them, cannot be let out ; for if more were let out, the truths and goods would perish, and thus nothing of what is human would remain in them.

7565. That (the truths and goods not from the Lord) were not stored up and reserved, but perished by falsities from evils. Sig. and Ex.

evils . . . But the truths and goods of the interior Natural are not vastated, but are brought more inwards, and are there reserved for use. And then the communication between the interior and the exterior Natural is so far closed that not anything of good and truth can inflow thence into the exterior Natural, except only something general, such as will enable them to reason, and to connect arguments for the confirmation of falsities and evils. These goods and truths which are reserved, are signified in the Word by 'the remains.' 7604².

7604². If (the goods and truths in the exterior Natural with the evil) were not vastated, the goods and truths which have been stored up and reserved by the Lord in the interior Natural, would inflow, and would conjoin themselves with the former, so that they would act as a one, and these also would be bent downwards, and would perish.

7689^e. That they are in falsity, is hidden with them so long as they are (here).

8868². In the other life it is plainly perceived . . . what inwardly hides itself in the words of speech.

9150. 'A house' = where anything is stored up . . . here, the memory.

A. 6661. They built cities of storehouses for Pharaoh' (Ex. i. 11)=doctrines from falsified truths in the Natural . . . 'Storehouses'=falsified truths.

—². The word in the Original by which 'storehouses' is expressed, means also armories, and also treasures, which have nearly the same signification; for storehouses are places where provisions are collected; and provision=truth; and, in the opposite, falsity.

F. 25. That the Knowledges of truth and good . . . are the storehouse, out of which the faith of charity can be formed. Gen.art. 27. 33.

E. 789⁶. The memory is only a storehouse . . .

790⁵. In order that the spiritual mind may be opened . . . it must have a storehouse from which it may draw its supplies; since unless man has such a storehouse he is empty . . . This storehouse is in the natural man and its memory, in which everything knowable can be stored up—recondi, and can be drawn forth from it. In this storehouse for the formation of the spiritual man there must be truths which are to be believed, and goods which are to be done, both from the Word, and from doctrine and preaching from it. . . Thought from this storehouse is what is called faith by (solidarians). —⁸.

H. 277^e. It is this (influx of innocence) which makes the love called storgé.

332. Each has as many infants as she desires from spiritual storgé. M.410.

M. 176^e. The lower minds of the consorts are drawn together by the love called storgé.

211^e. The Angels love their spiritual offspring from a spiritual storgé.

385. That conjugal love and the love of infants, which is called storgé, have been conjoined . . .

395^e. This is the innocence of infancy which is the cause of the love which is called storgé.

398. It is known that the love of infants, or storgé, recedes from parents according to the recession of innocence from them . . . From this it may also be evident that innocence inflowing on both sides produces the love called storgé.

403. The love called storgé is then transferred from the wife into the husband . . .

472. No storgé, and the consequent rejection of the infants (a really weighty cause of concubinage).

T. 304. Compared to the consolations of mothers after parturition, when their love, called storgé, manifests its delights.

431. The love of father and mother [is] from a love implanted in everyone, which is called storgé. . . But love towards children . . . does not produce love towards the neighbour; for the love called storgé exists with the evil equally as with the good; and sometimes it is stronger with the evil: it also exists with beasts and birds . . . with bears, tigers, and serpents, equally as with sheep and goats; and with owls equally as with doves.

—⁹. But with those not in charity there is no conjunction of charity with the love called storgé . . .

D. 1201. The beginning of true conjugal love is from the Inmost Heaven . . . Thence also comes storgé; for the celestial of the Inmost Heaven thus love infants much more than their parents, or mothers.

1683^e. Unless the Lord loved everyone, as a Father His children; and the Inmost Heaven [did so] from the Lord, as a mother her infants, storgé would never come into existence. It cannot be impressed from self. That there is a greater storgé towards the grandchildren . . . comes from the same source.

1906. On the love of infants, or storgé.—The reason the love of infants, and storgé, is so universal in every living thing, is that such a sphere from the Lord through the Inmost Heaven encompasses where there are infancies, and affects especially the infants, and also the parents, especially the mothers . . . That the infants are especially affected, may be evident from their innocence in face, speech, gestures, which therefore affect the older people, in addition to the universal sphere . . . Hence the union of parents and their infants; and therefore also it is diminished when the infants grow up . . .

2148. Just as the affection towards children, or storgé, is a common influx from the Lord.

2770. The influx into the souls of brutes is also from Heaven—but only the universal conatus, which acts according to the forms of their souls—and therefore they too are affected with conjugal love, and with storgé.

3146. When the love in parents towards children, or storgé, was excited, they loved him tenderly.

3316. (The influx of conjugal love and storgé with the degenerated descendants of the Most Ancient Church.) Ex.

E. 710². The womb is the inmost of the genital members; and from it is derived the maternal love which is called storgé.

355¹⁸. 'Chariots as a hurricane' (Jer.iv.13)=doctrinals of falsity.

357. 'The Lord Jehovah . . . shall march in the storms of the south' (Zech.ix.14)=[in the] clear understanding of truth.

386¹⁵. 'Our skins are black like an oven, because of the storms of famine' (Lam.v.10)=that on account of the defect of the Knowledges of good and truth, the natural man is in its own evil love. (=a complete lack, and also an inundation of falsity; for where there are no truths there are falsities. 'Storms,' in the Word, =the like as 'inundation.' 540⁵.)

405⁴³. 'Thou shalt scatter them, that the wind may carry them away, and the hurricane disperse them' (Is.xli.16)=that they shall be of no account. Both 'wind' and 'hurricane' are mentioned, because both evils and falsities are meant: for 'wind' is said of truths, and, in the opposite, of falsities; and 'hurricane,' of the evils of falsity.

411¹¹. 'Storms of wind'=temptations.

419¹⁵. 'The wind of storms' (Ps.cxlvi.8)=the Divine truth as to the reception; and it is therefore said 'wind of storms doing His word.'

—22. In the Spiritual World, as in the natural, there come forth strong winds and storms; but the storms in the Spiritual World come forth from the Divine influx into the parts below where are those who are in evils and falsities. Des. . . When the Divine is strongly emitted from the Lord as a Sun, and it inflows into these dense and opaque clouds, a storm arises which the Spirits there perceive just as men do the storms on the Earth. It has sometimes been granted me to perceive these storms, and also the east wind, by which the evil were dispersed and cast into the Hells when the Last Judgment was in progress. From these things it may be evident what 'storms,' 'tempests,' and 'violent winds' signify. Ill. In these passages, 'storm,' and 'tempest'=the dispersion of falsities and evils; because those who are in the falsities of evil are cast down into Hell by a stormy wind.

—23. 'He made the storm to cease, that its waves might be still' (Ps.cvii.29)=deliverance from spiritual temptations.

—24. 'There came down a storm of wind on the lake . . .' (Luke.viii.23). . . This miracle involves spiritual temptations . . . for these are irruptions of falsities. Ex.

5787. 'A wind of storms shall be the portion of their cup' (Ps.xi.6)=the destruction of all truth. (=a vehement assault upon truth. 960⁶.)

717⁵. 'To be afflicted and tossed with tempests' (Is.liv.11) is said from the falsities by which [the Church among the gentiles] is infested and carried hither and thither.

Strabismus. Strabismus.

T. 346. A squinting=lusca=faith, which is a faith in some other God than the true one, and, with Christians, than the Lord God the Saviour, may be compared to the malady of the eye which is called strabismus (or squinting).

Straight. See under RECTIFY, and RIGHT-rectus.

Straitness. *Angustia.Straiten, To. *Angustare.Narrow. Angustus.

See NARROW.

A. 847². Temptation is straitness and anxiety from things which are repugnant to the loves.

1126. A narrow chamber seen.

2851¹⁰. 'To straiten in all the gates' (Deut.xxviii.53)=to cut off all access to good and truth.

3290. Straitness. Sig. and Ex.

4249. 'Jacob feared exceedingly, and he had distress' (Gen.xxxii.7)=the state, when it is being changed; (for) fear and straitness are the first thing of temptations; and they precede, when the state is being changed.

— Hence the fear and straitness which precede spiritual temptation . . .

4256. When the order is being inverted . . . the natural man is in fear and straitness. Ex.

4548. 'Who answered me in the day of my distress'

[A.] 538⁸. He injected a painful contraction or straitness in the region of the lower belly.

5470. 'When we saw the distress of his soul' (Gen. xlii.21)=the state in which the internal is when it is estranged from the external. Ex.

6811. Merely material things bear the lower mind downwards, thus into what is narrow.

—2. That the deprivation of spiritual truth and good gives birth to such anxiety, and consequently to such straitness, cannot be believed by those who are not in faith and charity. Fully ex.

815². 'To pass through the sea of straitness' (Zech. x.11)=temptations. E.654²⁴.

831³. 'Straitness hath taken hold of us' (Jer.vi.24)=grief because truths were being infested.

H. 428⁸. There is no approach to any heavenly Society except through a narrow way . . .

L. 5. 'The day of straitness,' etc.=the advent of the Lord to Judgment.

E. 304⁴⁷. 'Upon the earth distress of nations' (Luke xxi.25)=upon those who are in the Spiritual World.

328¹³. 'Whom He hath redeemed out of the hand of the straitening-angustantis-enemy' (Ps.cvii.2)=those whom He has delivered from falsities.

386¹³. 'Behold straitness and thick darkness' (Is.viii.22)=that (goods and truths) are nowhere to be found; but mere falsities . . .

600¹¹. Temptations themselves are signified by 'the bread of straitness, and the waters of oppression' (Is. xxx.20). 'The bread of straitness'=temptations as to the good of love. . . 'Straitness,' and 'oppression'=states of temptation.

654⁴¹. 'A land of straitness and of anguish' (Is.xxx.6)=a Church where there will be no good of charity nor truth of faith.

684²⁷. 'But in straitness of times' (Dan.ix.25)=hardly and with difficulty, because with nations which have little perception of spiritual truth.

693⁵. The rejection of good because of the evil which will then prevail in the Church . . . is signified by, 'there shall be great distress upon the land' (Luke. xxi.23).

706²⁰. Because such truth, like iron, is hard, shutting out and not admitting any genuine truth, it is said, 'that it may be for a siege, and thou shalt straiten it' (Ezek.iv.3).

721¹⁷. That this was a grief of heart and mind . . . is signified by 'a day of straitness' (Is.xxxvii.3). —²⁶.

Strange. Alienus.

Stranger. Alienus.

See FOREIGNER, and under SOJOURN.

A. 1097. Those who placed worship solely in externals were represented by the gentiles, whom they called 'foreigners,' and who were their servants, and performed menial services in the Church; as in, 'strangers shall stand and feed your flocks, and the sons of the foreigner shall be your ploughmen and your vine-dressers' (Is.lxi.5). . . Those who place worship solely in externals are called 'the sons of the foreigner.' Further ill.

1843. 'Sojourner'=that he was not born in the land, thus that he is not acknowledged for a native, but is regarded as a stranger. . . As 'sojourner' is applied to what is regarded as alien, and that is alien which is not in the land or of the land, it follows that it denotes what is rare.

2967⁴. 'I will bring strangers upon thee' (Ezek. xxviii.7), that is, falsities. (=falsities which destroy truths. E.537¹⁶.)

4098. 'Are we not counted of him strangers, because he hath sold us?' (Gen.xxxi.15)=that he has alienated them, so that they are no longer his.

5422. 'And he made himself strange to them' (Gen. xlii.7)=no conjunction because without a medium.

—Where it is said that the Lord 'makes himself strange to the people' . . . it is meant that they make themselves strangers to the Lord.

6796. 'A strange land' (Ex.ii.22)=a Church not his own.

8650. 'A strange land' (Ex.xviii.3)=where there is not the Church. . . The reason 'a strange land'=where there is not the genuine Church, is that . . . 'strange'=where there is not what is genuine.

9146⁸. 'Strangers shall swallow it up' (Hos.viii.7)=the falsities which will consume it. (=falsities from evil which will consume it. 9995³.)

9926³. 'A stranger they do not follow, because they know not the voice of strangers' (John x.5). . . 'The voice of strangers'=what is false.

10109⁴. 'No stranger shall eat of the holy thing' (Lev.xxii.10)=not those who within the Church do not acknowledge the Lord; thus who are not in the truths and goods of the Church.

10112. 'A stranger shall not eat' (Ex.xxix.33)=no appropriation of good with those who do not acknowledge the Lord; for 'a stranger,' and 'a foreigner,'=those who are outside the Church; and those are said to be outside the Church who do not acknowledge the Lord. Ex.

10205. 'Ye shall not make strange incense to ascend upon it' (Ex.xxx.9)=no worship from any other love than that of the Lord. . . 'Strange'=one who is within the Church and does not acknowledge the Lord.

—⁴. That 'strangers'=those who do not acknowledge the Lord, and do not want to acknowledge Him, whether outside the Church or within it; thus who are in evils and the falsities of evil; and, in a sense abstracted from persons, evils and the falsities of evil. Ill.

—⁵. 'Your ground, strangers shall devour it before you' (Is.i.7)=that evils and the falsities of evil (will consume) the Church.

—¹⁴. 'Foreigners-alienigenae'—is expressed, in the Original, by a different word from 'strangers.'

D. 276. The phantasy in which those are who care for nothing else than things not their own, but strange, and who run about seeking them.

E. 388¹². 'Strangers'=falsities. 518²⁰. 654⁴⁰.

481³. 'Strangers'=falsities from evil. 654⁴⁰.

513¹⁸. 'Strangers' (Matt.xvii.25,26)=the natural. Ex.

746¹¹. 'A stranger'=one who is not of the Church.

768²⁰. 'A man a stranger' (Num.xvi.40)=falsity of doctrine.

811¹⁶. See FOREIGNER, here.

Strange. Barbarus, Barbaricus.

A. 2830⁷. 'From a strange people' (Ps.cxiv.1).

P. 322². There is scarcely a people so barbarous. . .

E. 455¹³. 'A people . . . strange in tongue' (Is.xxxiii.19)=(those in an abstruse religion).

1008². Adulteries are less abhorrent to Christians than to . . . some barbarous nations.

Strangle. Strangulare.

D. 3583. When the antediluvians lived in the body they wanted to strangle those who did not believe it to be as they said. They would not allow it to be said, to kill them, but to strangle them, thus to suffocate them; for their Persuasive is such that it suffocates. . .

Stratified. Stratim.

D. 5781. (The good and evil Spirits in the Lower Earth are as it were stratified.)

E. 410². Thus the expanses of the mountains succeed each other as strata.

Straw. Stramen, Stramentum.

A. 3114. 'Also straw' (Gen.xxiv.25)=memory truths—vera scientifica. . . because it is predicated of the camels . . . by which is signified the natural man as to the general scientifics therein; and therefore their food, which is straw, must have this signification . . . for if such food were to fail the natural man, namely, knowing, it could not subsist.

VOL. VI.

—². The truths of the natural man are memory truths, that is, whatever truths are in his external memory; and these are what are signified by 'straw,' when camels, horses, mules, and asses are treated of.

3146. 'He gave straw and fodder for the camels' (ver.32)=instruction in truths and goods. 'Straw'=the truths of the natural man.

4156. 'She put them in the camel's straw-stramento' (Gen.xxxi.34)=in scientifics. . . They are called 'straw-stramentum,' both because it is the food of a camel, and because they are relatively gross and inordinated. Ex. 4157.

5495. See FODDER, here.

7112. See CHAFF, here.

E. 781¹⁷. 'The lion shall eat straw like the ox' (Is.xi.7). (See Ox, here.)

—'. 'Straw'=the Word in the letter which is perverted by infernal falsity; but cannot be perverted by those who are in truths from good.

1460³. 'Streets' (ver.19)=Truths.

1884. Walking through the streets of a city . . . and being at the same time in conversation with Spirits, I did not know but that I was wide awake, and saw as at other times; and so I walked on without mistake. . .

2309. I was in a street of a great city, and saw little children fighting. . . H.344.

2335. 'We will pass the night in the street' (Gen.xix.2)=that He as it were wanted to judge from truth. . . 'A street,' in the Word, has a like signification to 'a way,' namely, truth; for a street is a way in a city. (Compare E.652²².)

2336. That 'street'=truth. Ill.

—². 'The streets' of the New Jerusalem=all things of truth which lead to good, or all things of faith which lead to love and charity; and, as truths then become of good, thus transparent from good, it is said 'the street was gold, as it were transparent glass.' (See H.307².)

—'. 'The midst of the street of it' (Rev.xxii.2)=the truth of faith through which is good, and which is afterwards from good.

—³. 'It shall be restored with street and ditch' (Dan.ix.25)=that there will then be truth and good. E.652²².

—⁴. 'Go out quickly into the streets and lanes' (Luke xiv.21)=that he should seek everywhere for some genuine truth, that is, truth which shines from good, or that through which good shines. E.652²¹, Ex.

2851⁷. 'A cry over the wine in the streets' (Is.xxiv.11)=a state of falsity. . . 'Streets'=the things which lead to truths. (=lamentation on account of the lack of truth, and the commingling of truth with falsity. E.652⁷.)

9193². 'Street'=the truth of doctrine; in the opposite, the falsity of doctrine.

9412³. 'Thou hast taught in our streets' (Luke.xiii.26)=to preach truths from the Word of the Lord; for preaching was formerly done in the streets, because 'streets'=the truths of the doctrine of the Church. E.617¹⁸.

10184². 'Mourning in the streets' (Jer.xlviii.38)=the vastation of all truths.

10227¹². 'Streets'=the truths of faith.

10422². See WAY, here.

N. 1⁶. 'The street of a city'=the truth of doctrine from good. Ref.

C. J. 51. The streets in the Dutch cities are roofed over; and in the streets there are gates. Ex.

R. 501. 'Their bodies shall lie upon the street of the great city' (Rev.xi.8)=... (in) the falsities of the doctrine of justification by faith alone. 'The street'=falsity.

—, 'Streets,' in the Word,=almost the same as 'ways,' because streets are ways in a city. But still 'streets'=the truths or the falsities of doctrine, because 'a city'=doctrine. Ill.

917. 'The street of the city was pure gold as it were transparent glass' (Rev.xxi.19)=that all the truth of the New Church and of its doctrine is in form the good of love inflowing together with light out of Heaven from the Lord. . . By 'the street of a city' is signified the truth of doctrine of the Church.

933. 'In the midst of the street of it was the tree of life' (Rev.xxii.2)=that in the inmosts of the Truths of doctrine . . . is the Lord in His Divine love. . . 'Street'=the truth of doctrine of the Church.

417¹⁰. 'Streets' = Truths.

555¹⁷. 'The streets of Jerusalem' (Jer.vii.17) = the truths (of the Church); here, the falsities. (=the truths of doctrine of the Church. 652¹⁴.)

652. 'The street of the great city' (Rev.xi.8) = the truth and good of doctrine; in the opposite, the falsity and evil of doctrine; for by 'a street' is signified truth leading; in the opposite, falsity leading.

—2. The reason 'street' = the truth of doctrine, and, in the opposite, the falsity of it, is that by 'way' is signified truth leading to good; and, in the opposite, falsity leading to evil; and streets are the ways in a city; and, as 'a city' = doctrine, 'a street' = the truth or the falsity of doctrine.

— . In the Spiritual World there are cities, and streets in them; and the quality of everyone as to the affection of truth and the derivative intelligence is Known from the place where he dwells in them, and from the streets in which he walks. Enum.

—4. As 'street' = where truth leads, it is said, 'Truth has stumbled in the street' (Is.lix.14).

—5. As 'streets' and 'quarters' = what is in accord with each one's affection and perception, it is said, 'the chariots raged in the streets, they ran to and fro in the quarters' (Nahum.ii.4).

—10. 'Streets' (Lam.iv.) = the truths of doctrine which lead to the good of life; or the truths according to which we are to live.

—13. 'Streets' = falsities of doctrine. 734²¹.

791. 'A strong Angel took up' (Rev.xviii.21)=a strong-fortis-influx of the Lord out of Heaven.

E. 33. 'Strength'=Divine good through Divine truth; for Divine good has all strength and all power through Divine truth.

288^d. 'Strength and beauty are in His sanctuary' (Ps.xvi.6)=Divine good and Divine truth in the Church.

316³. 'Strength,' in the Word, is said of the power of good.

—7. 'In horns is the hiding of His strength' (Hab.iii.4)=the omnipotence of Divine good through Divine truth; for all the power of good is through truth . . .

—10. 'Jehovah is my strength' (Ps.xviii.1). 'Strength,' when predicated of the Lord, =omnipotence.

328⁸. His Divine power from which He fought is signified by 'marching in the multitude of His strength' (Is.lxiii.1).

357²⁶. 'Strength' is said of the power and abundance of truth from good.

364⁶. 'Strong-robustos' (Zech.vi.3)=its derivative quality as to the power of resisting falsities and evils.

376³⁷. 'Men of strength' (Is.v.22)=those who are clever, and seem to themselves to be intelligent.

386^d. 'Until his strength faileth' (Is.xliv.12)=until there is nothing of good left.

405³⁷. 'Pride of strength,' 'strength,' and 'power' (Ezek.xxxiii.28) are said of truths from good, because these have all strength and all power.

467. 'And power and strength' (Rev.vii.12)=omnipotence from Divine good through Divine truth. . . 'Power' is said of Divine truth, and 'strength,' of Divine good.

504²⁶. 'The strong one shall be as tow' (Is.i.31). . . 'The strong one and his work'=what is hatched from Own intelligence. 'Strong,' in the Word, is said of him who trusts in himself and in his own intelligence; for he believes himself and his work to be strong.

593. For all the strength and all the power of Divine truth . . . consists in its ultimate . . .

618³. 'Men of strength to mingle strong drink' (Is.v.22)=those who falsify the truth of the Word.

652¹⁶. As all power is of truth from good, they are called 'pillars of strength' (Ezek.xxvi.11).

659⁷. 'I am become as a man that hath no strength' (Ps.lxxxviii.4)=that He then seemed to Himself to be devoid of power; for temptations immerse man in falsities and evils, in which there is no power.

684³¹. 'Strength' (1 Sam.ii.10)=the power of good over evil; and 'horn,' the power of truth over falsity.

721⁶. 'To be girded with strength' (ver.4)=that such have truths from good and the derivative power.

724²⁵. From the power of the Word against falsities and evils . . . it is called 'the magnificence of the strength' of Jehovah (Ezek.xxiv.21).

727⁴. 'The staff of strength is broken, the staff of beauty' (Jer.xlviii.17)=that they have no Divine truth in its power. 'The staff of strength'=Divine truth in the natural sense . . .

783³. (Hence) those in falsities are called 'the strong,' etc.

806³. The strength itself of the Divine power consists in ultimates . . .

811⁵. 'The strength' which He gave into captivity (Ps.lxxviii.61)=spiritual truth from celestial good shut out from being understood.

—16. 'Strength' (Obad.11)=truth, because all spiritual strength consists in truths.

—26. 'Put on thy strength, O Zion' (Is.lii.1)=(the truth of the Church which is in the good of love to the Lord, which is the truth from that good). 850¹⁴.

850¹³. 'The sceptre of strength out of Zion' (Ps.ex.2)=Divine truth which has omnipotence.

—16. Zion is here called 'the king's strength' (Ps.xcix.4) from Divine truth which has power itself.

863². 'He hath prostrated all my strong ones in the midst of me' (Lam.i.15)=that all the power of truth against falsities has perished. (=the destruction of the love of good; those in the love of good being called in the Word 'the strong,' because good, from its love, is mighty against the Hells, and is therefore strong. 922².)

922⁵. As, in the Word in the letter, there is all strength, it is said, 'marching in the multitude of His strength.'

——¹¹. 'The Strong in heart' (Ps.lxxvi.5)=those in truths from good.

——¹⁷. 'Strong ones' (Jer.l.36)=falsities and reasonings from them.

——²⁶. 'He that is strong in heart' (Amos ii.16)=he that trusts in his falsities. 357²².

357². 'The strong one of Jacob'=the Lord. (So called from the Divine in ultimates, in which Divine power is in its fulness. 684²⁶.)

——⁸. 'The bow of the strong ones' (Is.xxi.17)=the doctrine of truth from the Knowledges which prevail against falsities.

374³. 'The hand of him that is stronger than he' (Jer.xxxi.11)=the evil and falsity which previously had possession.

433³³. 'To remove the strong one and the man of war' (Is.iii.2)=to remove all resistance to evils and falsities. 727¹², Ex.

593. 'A strong Angel' (Rev.x.1)=the Lord as to the Word.

——³. All strength—robur—and power are in the ultimates of Divine truth, thus in the natural sense of the Word, which is the sense of the letter . . . This is why the Angel . . . is called 'strong.'

617²⁴. 'The strong ones,' that is, the oxen (Ezek. xxxix.18)=the affections of good. (=the affections of the natural man. 650⁴⁷.)

——²⁵. 'The strong one and the man of war' (id.)=good and truth (or the truth of good) fighting with evil and falsity and destroying them. 650⁴⁸.

627¹³. As these scientifics, being from the fallacies of the senses, persuade strongly, they are called 'the congregation of the strong ones' (Ps.lxviii.30.) 654⁵⁴.

654³⁵. 'The strong one of the nations' (Ezek.xxxi.11)=the falsity of evil.

700¹⁰. 'The ark of Thy strength' (Ps.cxxxii.8)=the Divine truth proceeding from Him; for through this the Lord has Divine power.

734¹⁵. 'Jehovah shall be for strength to those who repel war from the gate' (Is.xxviii.6)=that the Lord gives power to those who defend the Word and doctrine from the Word, and who prevent violence from being inflicted on them.

C. 164. In battle, if not born different, he is brave.

E. 2357. 'Strong drink,' by which they 'err' (Is. xxviii.7)=truths mixed with falsities.

[E.] 376⁹⁰. That they will be averse to all things which agree with truths, is signified by 'strong drink shall be bitter to them that drink it' (Is.xxiv.9). 'Strong drink'=the things which are from truths and which agree with them. (=the truth of good made un-delightful by its falsification and adulteration. 618⁴.

—³¹. 'These err through wine, and through strong drink they are gone astray' (Is.xxviii.7)=through falsities and through such things as are from falsities...

—³². 'Wine,' in special, =the truth of the spiritual and thence of the rational man; and 'strong drink' (Is.xxix.9)=the derivative truth of the natural man.

—³³. As such love falsities and things falsified, it is added, 'Come, I will take wine, and we will be drunken with strong drink' (Is.lvi.12).

—³⁷. 'To follow strong drink' (Is.v.11)=to hatch doctrinals from themselves.

—'. 'To mingle strong drink' (ver.22)=to confirm falsities.

618³. 'Heroes to drink wine'=those who adulterate the truth of the Word; 'men of strength to mingle strong drink' (id.)=those who falsify it.

926. In Heaven there appear . . . strong drinks, etc.

A. 3927. 'With the struggles of God I have struggled with my sister, and I have prevailed' (Gen.xxx.8)=in the supreme sense, the Divine power; in the internal, temptation in which he overcomes; in the external, resistance by the natural man. For 'the struggles of God,' and 'to struggle'=temptations; for temptations are nothing else than the struggles of the internal man with the external. Ex.

3928. Naphtali was named from 'struggles' (which = temptations. 6412).

4232. The wrestlings of temptations. Tr.

4248. Finally, Jacob wrestled with an Angel, by which wrestling is signified temptation. 4273. (See STUBBORN, at E.710²⁰.)

4274. 'There wrestled a man with him' (Gen.xxxii. 24)=temptation as to truth; for 'to wrestle'=tempta-tion. Temptation itself is nothing else than a wrestling —lucta, or combat. Ex.

4283. 'Let me go,' that is, from wrestling with me, =that the temptation ceased.

—². That the wrestling was begun before the dawn arose, and ceased after it arose . . . =states of conjunction through temptations. Ex.

4286^e. Temptations and victories in them are what make man spiritual; for which reason Jacob was first named 'Israel' after he had wrestled.

4307. That not good, but evil Spirits, are signified by him who wrestled with Jacob, may be evident from the fact that by 'wrestling' is signified temptation. Ex.

—^e. Hence it is that he who wrestled with Jacob was not willing to reveal his name.

—'. That in the internal spiritual sense by him who wrestled with Jacob is meant the angelic Heaven, is because the Lord . . . admitted even the Angels to tempt Him . . .

5126⁴. Unless he performs serious repentance, and for a long time afterwards struggles with falsities and evils.

—, That which is done from man, and from his busying himself, is done from his proprium, and is not holy; because a busying from the proprium of man is nothing but what is false from what is evil . . .

H. 322². The learned at this day are not delighted with such a study (of the Word).

323°. (With the ancients) this was the study of their wisdom.

344°. (Thus) by their own exertion they exclude their children from Heaven.

461². He who is delighted with studies, reads and writes (there) as before.

488°. They who have studied sciences merely to be accounted learned . . .

S. 61°. They who have studied the Word from the affection of knowing truth . . .

W. 332. Uses for perfecting the Rational, are all things which . . . are called knowledges and branches of study . . .

R. 77. 'Thy labour and endurance'=their study and patience. (Compare E.98.)

81. Their study and exertion to procure . . . the things of religion and its doctrine. Sig. and Ex.

129. 'Thy faith and endurance'=the Truth and the study to procure and teach it. . . 'Endurance'=the study and labour of procuring and teaching it.

677. They who study the doctrine of justification by faith alone, who are called the clergy. Sig. and Ex.

M. 16³. The love of use, and the consequent busying of one's self in use, holds the mind together . . .

76⁴. The study of our Age was the study of Truths . . . This study was the study of our souls and minds; but the representations of Truths in forms were the study of the senses of our bodies . . .

207². In the World of Spirits and in Heaven there are . . . studies of all branches of learning.

—e. Everyone has conjugal love with its virtue . . . according to his application to the genuine use in which he is.

249. No determination to any study or business (a cause of cold). Ex.

— . By study and business is meant all application—applicatio—to uses. When a man is in any study and business, that is, in use, his mind is limited and circumscribed as in a circle, within which it is successively co-ordinated into a form truly human, from which as from a house he sees various concipiscences outside of himself, and from the soundness of reason within he banishes them . . .

267³. It is granted to (evil Spirits) to apply their minds to some study or work, whereby they are kept in externals, and thus in a state of intelligence.

T. 120. Even those who have been devoted to piety are perverted by them.

434. The Social Gatherings . . . were recreations of their souls from studies and labours.

563². Every artificer who is assiduous at his work performs it easily and willingly . . . In like manner everyone who is in any function, or in any study.

638^e. A Church which separates . . . the remission of sins from repentance and the pursuit of a new life.

808². Politics . . . sometimes withdraw the spirits (of the English) from studies of a more lofty judgment, by which a higher intelligence is acquired. They do indeed imbibe these things in their youth . . .

D. 302. On the life after death of those who are continually intent on studies.

1226. On those who (here) have been zealous solely for natural things.

1643². From such a pursuit or labour they can expect no reward in Heaven, because it was for the sake of self . . .

1744. (When a man is ruled by those who constitute the cuticle) he is withheld from all application . . .

2391. On those who study solely the sense of the letter.

2502. When one who inclines to uses . . . comes among such Spirits . . . all his application is torpified.

— . They hate those who are laborious and studious for truth and good.

—e. Like beggars who . . . are thus kept back from all application to anything, so as to be members of civil society.

2505. Such are those who are zealous for themselves only. Des. 2772, Ex.

3556. The good Spirits . . . performed it with the greatest zeal.

3606. Not from any endeavour on their part.

P. 289². They said that this is stupendous.

M. 380⁹. Such a marvellous and stupendous order.

D. 3400. On the amazing deeds of a certain kind of Spirits.

E. 624¹⁸. 'A wonderful and horrible thing' (Jer.v.30).

H. 462². See STUPID—stupidus, here.

C. J. 83. Spirits so stupid—obesae naris—that . . .

Stupidity. Stupiditas.

A. 1040². With one who is stupid there is what is stupid in everything of his will and thought.

2480. (The learned) are sometimes more stupid than others. 4156². H.464². —⁴.

3033³. In the other life such are more stupid than others.

4054². Such induce stupidities on the brain.

—^e. They live in such stupidity that they have scarcely anything left of what is human as to apprehension.

4077^e. Spirits ascribe this to the stupidity of man.

4136². Because he had led an evil life, he was in such stupid ignorance . . .

4220^e. Such are deprived of all intelligence, and become most stupid.

4221². Such become so gross and stupid as to their thoughts and affections, that no one in the world can be more stupid.

— One in whom there was so little of the life of intelligence . . . that you would say he was stupidity in effigy.

4330³. They wondered at the stupidity (of the Spirits from this Earth).

4532. They are sometimes let into a state of darkness . . . and speak with fatuity; for they are in stupidity.

4627³. They relate to the mucus of the nostrils, and are dull and stupid.

4949. (Such as have despised others) are in a kind of stupidity; for such arrogance extinguishes the light of Heaven, and consequently intelligence.

5562. After vastation (such) are slow, dull, stupid . . .

5828³. Thus the internal is closed, (which) occasions stupidity in spiritual things.

7249. The inhabitants of this side of Venus are stupid. Des.

8629. (This Spirit) was exceedingly stupid. Des.

9827². When Spirits are deprived of wisdom and intelligence, which is the case when the angelic Societies are removed from them . . . they become stupid, and have no perception of what is true and good . . .

10812^e. He was cunning in seducing, although stupid as to the things of Heaven.

H. 10. The Angels regard them as stupid, and as thieves; as stupid, because they constantly look to themselves . . .

354. They who at heart have denied the Divine . . . have become so stupid that they can comprehend scarcely any civil truth . . .

462². Men are obese and stupid as to spiritual truths in proportion as they indulge the taste, etc.

481². Those who are corporeal loves are stupid, and as it were fools.

508. Such, in this second state, are more stupid than all others. For in proportion as anyone loves himself, he is removed from Heaven . . .

563². They thought of nothing except from self, thus were stupid, like corporeal sensuous Spirits.

C. J. 76². The Africans call clever wickedness stupidity, because there is . . . death in it.

S. 118. They who ascribe all things to their Own intelligence . . . become first like drunkards, then like fools, and finally stupid.

W. 244. A man who is not quite stupid . . . can understand these things.

P. 98. Every man, unless born a fool, or in the highest degree stupid, can come to reason itself . . .

R. 456². The stupidity which characterizes those who have once embraced faith alone.

461. That the heresy of faith alone induces stupidity, etc. on hearts. Sig. and Ex.

M. 152a^e. Not that they have become so stupid from the want of instruction; but that they have made themselves so stupid through the fallacies of the senses.

263². For the stupid commonalty.

498^e. (Adulterers) at last become stupid; not that the faculty of being wise is taken away from them; but that they do not want to be wise.

T. 183^e. This induces a stupid faith. Des.

[T.] 616. Can there be a blinder stupidity respecting regeneration . . .

D. 758. Those clever in externals are stupid there. Ex.

767°. One who has indulged (in philosophy) is stupid there.

2021. All could be such (as I) if the Lord pleased, even the most stupid; and I was reminded of a certain stupid man . . . who, at certain times held forth, and things which at other times he could never know or remember, were then called to his mind.

2145. Without speech in a Society . . . a Spirit knows nothing, and is so stupid . . .

2949. Man thinks and speaks analytically . . . But when he thinks, etc. according to the knowledge (of it) . . . he becomes insane and stupid . . .

4552. Whenever these Sirens came, they brought stupid spirits, who, in the world, had been learned . . . The stupid learned ones appeared on the right in the plane of the head . . . I could then scarcely write anything . . . as I often told the stupid ones; but they did not apprehend, because the Sirens inspired into them that they were learned.

4751². (After vastation, Charles xii. was stupid.)

4922. They who are at last taken out of these Hells . . . are stupid . . .

5072. They who have had no thought except of self and the world, after vastation, . . . are stupid.

5514°. Thus (these preachers) live (in Hell) in a certain stupidity. Des.

5560. They who relate to the nails . . . finally become the most stupid of all. Such is Cartouche.

5634. These become most stupid. They appear like corpses; and do not know that they are men.

5654. The most wicked ones are near the northern quarter, remotely there, for the reason that these, when vastated, become the most stupid of all. Ex.

5692°. The lot (of the cunning and deceitful) is that they become more stupid than all others . . . and therefore they dwell near the north, where are the most stupid ones.

5730°. The celestial, unless they hear truths, and thus see them, are stupid; for they do not think.

5785. Leeuwenhoek is stupid. Ex.

5865°. In the Hells there, all become most stupid, and the more stupid in proportion as they are more remotely in the west at the northern line.

5867°. They who without fear of the Divine attempt evils in secret, and enjoy understanding in such things pre-eminently, become more stupid than others.

5870°. Finally (Lang) became stupid.

5941a°. They are then not in intelligence, but in a certain stupidity.

5957°. (Thus) Spirits who had been without Divine truths for so many ages . . . become more stupid.

6033. James Benzelius wanted all things of his doctrine of faith alone to be taken away, and genuine truths to be given in their stead. This was done; but he was as stupid as one who had known nothing.

D. Min. 4548. He against whom G. Benzelstierna poured out his sarcasms became as it were stupid, and . . . could not retort.

4579. Such are now accounted wise, when yet they are more stupid than the most simple person.

4655². The affection then immerses itself in the affection of self . . . and thus becomes more stupid . . .

4748. These at last become . . . so stupid, that no stupidity of anyone in the world is like it.

E. 233°. When the thought which 'the lukewarm' have had from the Word is taken away, they become the most stupid of all.

376³². Wonder at such gross stupidity. Sig.

544°. They are as stupid in such things as are essential to faith and life, as they are clever in scheming evils and persuading falsities.

923⁴. When the Corporeal Sensuous is separated from the Rational, it is stupid.

1057°. Profaners of this kind are stupid and foolish in spiritual things; but are astute and clever in worldly ones. Ex.

Stupefy. Stupefacere.

T. 72². Some (who stood there) were as it were stupefied (at what they heard).

Stupor. Stupor.

See also AMAZEMENT-stupor.

A. 17. Hence a thick darkness, or stupor and ignorance of all things of faith . . .

311. Their phantasies and persuasions induce so great a stupor on other Spirits that they do not know whether they are alive or dead.

1622². They said, in their amazement . . .

1756³. Being penetrated with the amazement of wonder . . .

1769⁵. He said that he could not, for amazement, describe the glory of the Word . . .

3412°. When such approach Heaven . . . their mind is turned into stupor.

H. 452. On hearing that they are being buried, they are smitten with a kind of stupor.

R. 428. 'Torment'=stupor, which their Persuasive induces on the understanding, as a scorpion does on the body . . . In the Spiritual World there exists a Persuasive which takes away the understanding of truth, and induces a stupor, and thus a pain, on the lower mind.

M. 380. I was once in amazement at the vast multitude who ascribe creation to nature. —².

E. 175¹⁰. 'The prince who shall be clothed with stupor' (Ezek.vii.27)=inservient truth.

386⁸. 'Ye shall be an astonishment' (Jer.xlii.18).

714²¹. 'Babylon shall become . . . an astonishment' (Jer.li.36).

Style. Stylus.

A. 66. The four styles in the Word. Enum. 1139. D. 2721.

— . This (most ancient) style is meant in 1 Sam. ii.3.

742. Such is the most ancient style of the Word. Sol.

768. Such is the style and mode of speaking in the Word.

Sol. The quality of the prophetic style. Examp.

1140. (Here) the most ancient style is continued ; but it is intermediate between the style of made up history, and the style of true history.

1410. Such was the style in the Ancient Church . . .

1756⁶. This (most ancient) style was afterwards venerated for its antiquity. Des. (The Book of Job, etc. were written in it.)

2588⁶. The style (of the writings of the Ancient Church) was thence venerated . . .

2899². The Word could therefore be written in no other style ; for by this style only, human Things and words correspond to heavenly Things and ideas. 4442⁶.

3942². The Song of Songs was written in the ancient style. Ex.

6333³. For the historicals (of the Word) have been written in a different style.

8971. Say that the writings of men are in a more elegant style (than the Word).

9086⁶. Despise the Word on account of its apparently more humble style . . . 9280³.

9416⁶. 'Written with a style of iron' (Jer.xvii.1). (=deeply rooted falsity. E 391²⁴.)

9942⁵. The style of the 'Wars of Jehovah' . . . The historicals of these books approached a kind of prophetic style. Ex . . . Among those outside the Church, such a style, was, then, most commonly used, and was almost the only one. Examp.

H. 310. The Word is despised by some on account of its simple style . . . The Angels said, that the style of the Word, although it appears simple in the sense of the letter, is yet such that nothing can be compared to it for excellence. Ex.

N. 261. Those greatly err who despise the Word on account of its apparently simple and rude style ; and who think that they would receive it if it had been written in a different style. Ref.

S. 3. But the style of the Word is the Divine style itself, with which no other style, however sublime and excellent it may appear, can be compared, for it is as thick darkness to light. The style of the Word is such that it is holy in every sense, word, and letter. 8.

71. The Word in Heaven is written in a spiritual style, which is quite different from a natural style. The spiritual style consists of mere letters, each of which involves a meaning ; and there are punctuations over the letters which exalt the meaning. 72.

R. 673. This is according to the style of the Word in its sense of the letter.

T. 189. The Word in the letter appears like a common writing, in a strange style, neither sublime nor bright. E.1065³.

D. 1863. Such kill men with poniards, or the like deadly instrument. 1864².

1989. If a style were filled with mere poetical names . . .

2962. That the style of my writing is varied according to the Spirits associated with me.

2993. On the efficacy of different styles. . . Certain who study only brilliancy of style, and continually keep their mind fixed on brilliancy of style . . . and not on the subject treated of, solely in order that the writer may be celebrated, because he treats of sublime things . . . such a style is of no effect with those who are interior. Such writers despise . . . a style in which the subject matter is fully set forth to the apprehension ; the style being such that the words follow from the goodness of the heart . . . In this case the subject matter forms the style of each person according to his gift. Whereas with those in whom the style forms the subject matter, so that reference is made from the style to the subject, [the writing] has no efficacy . . .

4757. They despised the Word on account of its simple and absurd style, as they call it ; but they were told that the style is such because it contains in itself most arcane things which open in the three Heavens in order . . .

4869. The writings (of Spirits) appear in the common style . . .

5618. They did not understand the characters ; they were in the celestial style.

5995^e. (The style of Dippel.)

D. Min. 4830. Writings in ancient styles, seen. . . There is such a style in the other life, formed according to their ideas . . . The style was in Roman letters.

E. 1072². The man who leads himself . . . judges about the Word from its style . . .

De Verbo 6. On the excellence of the style in the Word. Gen.art.

Styx. Styx.

Stygian. Stygus.

T. 20^e. With such, everything of the Church is like the Styx or thick darkness in Tartarus.

119³. The Heavens are then . . . suffocated by the evils which rise up, as by Stygian waters.

137². He has cast our faith into the Styx.

E. 982^e. Such reasonings . . . are Stygian.

Coro. 38°. They called their Hells Tartarus . . . and the deeps there the Styx.

Subaltern. Subalternus.

M. 10. This lower or subcelestial earth.

Subduement. Domatio.

See SUBJUGATE.

A. 857. So long as these externals are not subdued . . .

868°. The Lord thus subdues man's evils and falsities . . . but they are not dead, but only subdued . . .

8626°. The least of Divine power instantly subdues every diabolical crew . . . yet allows them to act . . .

H. 424°. Man can understand truths, and through them master the affections of evil . . .

509°. The fear of the penalty is the only means of mastering the evils. 581.

535. They had believed that this was . . . to subdue the concupiscences of the flesh.

595°. So far as possible, the outrages in the Hells are subdued.

L. 33°. The Lord completely mastered and subjugated the Hells by His Own power; and, by at the same time glorifying His Human, He keeps them mastered and subjugated to eternity.

T. 123°. Compared to a combat with the wild beasts, and their slaughter and subduement.

395°. He instructs, reproves, and subdues (the Genii).

574. The natural man . . . must be mastered, subjugated, and inverted.

596. The flesh with its concupiscences must be mastered before the spirit can act.

D. 2310°. Unless (these spheres) were mastered by the Lord . . .

6033. The nature of man cannot be taken away after death, but it can be broken and subdued. Ex.

Subject. Subditus.

A. 10814. It never comes into his mind to subject them to himself as subjects.

T. 422. A king who sets his subjects a (good) example.

533°. These two evil loves may reign . . . with subjects more than with kings.

681. Like a subject who renders allegiance to a king, and yet repudiates his laws . . .

Subject. Subjicere.

A. 1267. The greatest delight (of the antediluvians) consists in one holding another subject to himself.

4691. Were they to be subject as to the things of the understanding and will. Sig. and Ex.

5648. That the truths of the Natural were adjoined and subjected to the Internal. Sig. and Ex. 5649. 5809.

6143. The renunciation and subjection of all things which are of service to the Church. Sig. and Ex.

6145. That all things were subject to the Natural which is under the auspices of the Internal. Sig. and Ex. 6162.

6394. To be subject, and to serve (as 'Issachar' does). Sig.

7332°. They would subject the things of Heaven in themselves to those of Hell.

M. 291. The apparent love and friendship between consorts, one of whom is subjugated, and thence subject to the other. Ex.

T. 713°. Still (these opposites) are held in connection by a wonderful subjection of all Hell under Heaven, of evil under good, and of falsity under truth; of which subjection we have treated in the work on Heaven and Hell.

2742. They had previously loved nothing more than to excogitate methods by which they could subject others to themselves. (Such there become sorcerers.)

Subject. Subjectum.

See under THING.

A. 103. Such as is the subject, such is the predicate. 386. 721. 4502.

445. Thought abstractedly from its subject is not extended; but the subject and the object of the thought are.

620°. From the subject it is known what is predicated.

801°. A Thing separated from its subject or substance, is nothing.

1712°. If he hangs down his hands . . . he is not a subject into which the Lord can operate.

1849. For when goods are spoken of abstractedly, they are in a subject, which is a man, Spirit, or Angel.

2706°. The Spiritual does not exist without a subject.

3605°. Opposite things in one subject are never possible.

4223. No function can be conceived of except from forms, that is, from substances; for substances are the subjects a quibus.

4380°. These things cannot be predicated without a subject, which is man.

5222. The spirit is now thought of (as being) without any other subject than the body in which it is . . . and is supposed to be mere thought without an adequate subject . . .

5471. The internal sense treats of all these (persons) in one subject.

—°. These Things themselves regard one subject.

6685°. Wherever there is a subject (the Divine truth) inflows; but it is varied in the subjects according to their forms: in subjects which accord with good . . . But in subjects which are discordant . . .

8603°. For the forms or substances recipient of life, are subjects . . .

8761^e. The case is the same with all things which are abstracted from their subjects: when they are spoken of, the subjects in which they are, are perceived. Examp.

9470^e. That the Celestial and the Spiritual are not together in one subject. Ref.

9596³. For the Intellectual is the subject, or containant, (of truth).

9930. For the Intellectual is the recipient subject; and without a subject there is no reception.

10618². For evil is in man as in its subject.

10623. For evils and falsities have no existence except in subjects, which are men.

H. 270³. They who reason see scarcely anything beyond the object of the Thing about which they are reasoning, or go beyond the subject . . .

413. According to the capacity of him who is the subject. (This is object in A.545.)

434. Man cannot think and will unless there is a subject which is a substance from which and in which [to do it]. That which is supposed to exist without a substantial subject, is nothing. (Thus) man cannot see without an organ which is the subject of his sight (and so on). And so with thought . . . and apperception . . . unless these were in substances and from them, which are organic forms, which are subjects, they would have no existence . . .

N. 29. For these two faculties (the will and understanding) are the receptacles and subjects (of goods and truths); the will is the receptacle and subject of all things of good; and the understanding is the receptacle and subject of all things of truth.

W. 40. They perceive love and wisdom outside the subject as flowing forth from it; and that which they perceive outside the subject as flowing forth from it—although it is volatile and fluent—they call substance and form; not knowing that love and wisdom are the subject itself: and that that which is perceived outside of it as volatile and fluent is only an appearance of the state of the subject in itself. —^e.

41. The subject of touch is the skin . . . The sense of touch is not in the things which are applied; but is in the skin's substance and form, which are the subject. . . . So with taste . . . the tongue is the subject. (And so on.)

—^e. (Thus) the affection of the substance and form which causes sense, is not anything separated from the subject; but only causes a change in it, the subject remaining the subject then, as before, and afterwards. (Thus) seeing, hearing, etc., are not anything volatile which flows forth from their organs; but are the organs themselves regarded in their substance and form . . .

42. All the affections, perceptions, and thoughts (in the brain) are not exhalations from these substances; but are actually and really the subjects, which emit nothing from themselves; but only undergo changes according to the things which flow to and affect them.

54. The Divine is not in one subject differently from what it is in another; but one created subject is different from another . . .

170. The conjunction of the Creator with the created universe . . . is not possible unless there are subjects in which His Divine can be as in itself; thus in which it can dwell and abide. In order that these subjects may be His dwelling-places, they must be recipients of His love and wisdom as of themselves . . . These subjects are men . . .

200. All perfections increase according to degrees . . . because all predicates follow their subjects; and perfection and imperfection are general predicates . . .

209. Affection and thought, clarity and faith, will and understanding (are like) love and wisdom, in that they are not possible outside of subjects which are substances, but are states of subjects, that is, of substances. 224^e.

210. From its being possible to think of (these) abstractedly from the substances which are their subjects . . . a right idea about them, as being states of substances or forms, has perished. Ex.

218. The conatuses, forces, and motions in dead and living subjects. Ex.

219. Living conatus in man, who is a living subject . . .

273. Such a form supposes a substantial form as a subject; for without a substantial form as a subject, changes of state are impossible . . .

346. The subjects of the animal kingdom . . . The subjects of the vegetable kingdom . . . —².

P. 279⁶. Affections and thoughts do not exist except in substances and their forms, which are subjects; and, as they exist in the brains, which is full of substances and forms, they are called forms purely organic. Ex.

310². Like things exist in the organic forms of the mind, which are the subjects of the affection and thoughts. Ex.

324². Subjects which should receive the Divine more nearly . . .

327. Good can be turned into evil by the recipient subject . . . Such a subject is man as to his proprium . . .

331². There exists no operation except into a subject, and through means into it . . .

M. 66. There exists neither good nor truth which is not in a substance as in its subject . . . (See SUBSTANCE, here.)

84. That good and truth . . . are in created subjects according to the form of each. Ex.

90. In the subjects of the animal kingdom . . .

186. All man's affections and thoughts are in forms, and thence from forms; for forms are their subjects. If affections and thoughts were not in subjects, which have been formed, they would be possible in skulls empty of brains . . .

380¹¹. The expanse around the Sun of Heaven . . . is in the extense of the natural sun, and is with living subjects there according to the receptions; and the receptions are according to the forms.

T. 43². That the evil are evil, and evil things evil, lies in the subjects and objects themselves . . .

145². So with every subject of a lower sort in the animal kingdom . . .

D. 1603. When I say subject and predicate, it means that the predicates, that is, the things which are predicated, must be applied to that which the subject signifies, as in the Prophets. Ex.

2366. They have no idea of any substance which is a subject of thought. . . Thought cannot be without a subject. . . They who suppose a Spirit to be mere thought without a substance which is a subject, are mistaken. . .

2367. A Spirit is . . . a subtle organic substance, which is the subject of thought. . .

5592a. In the middle, and thus in the light, is the Thing which is the subject-subjecta.

E. 790¹². For the will is the subject and receptacle of charity, as it is the subject and receptacle of good; and the understanding is the subject and receptacle of faith, because it is the subject and receptacle of truth.

1139². For the Lord's life is in man as the light and heat of the sun are in a subject; which are not of the subject, but are of the sun in it. . . Still, when they are in the subject, they apparently wholly belong to it. . . Man is the recipient subject. . .

1170². As the understanding sees from the light of Heaven, it is evident that it is a subject and a receptacle of that light; thus also is a subject and a receptacle of truth. . . And, as the will loves from the heat of Heaven, it is evident that it is a subject and a receptacle of that heat, thus also is a subject and a receptacle of good, thus of love.

D. Love ix². (Thus) the objects or ends of affections are uses, and therefore their subjects are uses.

xvii. As there is no affection without its subject, so there is no affection of man's life without use.

D. Wis. v². The will is not any abstract spiritual thing; but is a subject substantiated and formed for the reception of love. (The same with the understanding.)

vii.5. In all things of his thought and speech, and of his will and action, the natural man has as his subject, matter, space, time, and quantity. . . The spiritual man does not have these as subjects; but only as objects. Ex.

—². The subjects (of the Angels) are those things from which (spiritual objects) appear, which are such things as are of wisdom and love. Examps.

Can. God. vii.5a. The Divine love. . . wills that it be in a subject. . .

viii.11. Evils are outside of the subjects. . .

Subject. Subjectum. (As applied to a Spirit.)

See EMISSARY.

A. 4403. The Spirits who have been seen near me have been for the most part Subjects of entire Societies; for Societies send out Spirits to others, and through them perceive the thoughts and affections, and thus communicate. But concerning the Subjects, so called, or emissary Spirits, below. 4419. D.Min.4728.

5856. Communications of Societies with other Societies are effected through Spirits whom they send forth, and through whom they speak. These Spirits are called Subjects. I could not know when any Society was present with me until they had sent forth a Spirit. . . (Thus) the Spirits and Angels who are with man are for the sake of communication with Societies in Hell and Heaven.

5985. A Subject is one in whom are concentrated the thoughts and speech of a number; and in this way a number are presented as one. And, as the Subject thinks and speaks nothing whatever from himself, but from others, and the thoughts and speech of others are there presented to the life, therefore they who are inflowing suppose that the Subject is as it were nothing, and scarcely animate, being merely a receptive of their thought and speech. And, on the other hand, the Subject supposes that he thinks and speaks, not from others, but from himself only. I have often told (this) to a Subject, and, on hearing it, he who was a Subject has been highly indignant. To convince him, he has been permitted to speak with the Spirits who were inflowing, who confessed that the Subject thinks and speaks nothing from himself, and therefore he appears to them scarcely as an animate thing. It once happened that he who said that a Subject is nothing, was made a Subject, and then the rest said concerning him that he was nothing, at which he was very angry. . . D.3072.

5986. When I have heard them saying that a Subject thinks and speaks nothing from himself. . . I have often spoken to those who were inflowing into the Subject; and, when they affirmed that they were thinking and speaking from themselves, but not the Subject. . . I have told them that. . . they, equally with the Subject, were thinking and speaking from others; (and so on backwards, in a continuous series). Ex.

5987. The more there are who direct their mental look into one Subject, the stronger is the Subject's power of thinking and speaking; his force is augmented in proportion to the plurality of concordant mental looks . . . (See D.3909, below.)

— Evil Spirits do not always send forth Subjects of their own; but observe what Spirits are with others, and also in what places are those who are simple and obedient; and these they make their Subjects. This is done by directing their thoughts into him, and by pouring into him their own affections and persuasions, in consequence of which he is no longer his own master, but serves them as a Subject; of which he is sometimes unaware.

7111². See EMISSARY, here. H.255⁶.

7337⁸. Magicians (there) induce changes of state on others . . . and cast them into Societies, in order that they may serve them as Subjects.

9166. When the Angels have converse about two discrepant truths, there are presented below two Spirits who debate, and who are the Subjects of a number of Societies. Ex.

H. 601. An entire Society can have communication with another Society, and also with another individual, wherever he is, through a Spirit sent forth by it. This Spirit is called a Subject of many. (Continued under SOCIETY.)

603. Collection^e. (Refs. to passages on the subject of Subjects.)

R. 816². When the Angels are permitted to speak to a man, they send one from their Society, who is near the man, and through him they speak to the man. He who is sent is the Subject of many; and, here, is the one who now spoke to John.

D. 404. Many dissentient Spirits wanted to have him for a Subject; (and therefore) that Subject was miserably discredited . . .

VOL. VI.

405. That the Spirits and Souls who speak with me are Subjects in which many are concentrated.

1254. Each Spirit is a Subject of the representations of other like Spirits . . .

2316. He who has spoken to me is a certain Subject looking hither, to whom very many others relate who know scarcely anything about me.

2376. Societies of Spirits have sent to me, or have picked out, Spirits for themselves, who should be near me, and whom I have previously called Subjects; for through them they know what is being thought and spoken . . . To do this is as it were innate in Spirits . . .

2936. That the deceitful send Subjects through whom they act their deceits, in order that they may be hidden, and the Subjects substituted.

2953^e. For the pirate with me was their Subject.

3055. The Spirits of Jupiter have their Subjects with me, as previously, for the sake of communication. Des.

3134. There are Subjects who speak; and he who speaks, speaks from the thoughts of others. Examp.

3226. It is the lowest Society which has clothing as a Subject; and then another succeeds in his place, who appears to them as if within the garment; for a Subject appears as in the centre.

3410. There are many such [as those] whose Subject he was, who are nocturnal igneous lights.

3429. The same, who was a Subject of such, and who spoke into my ear, inverted (and) invisible. Des.

3462. Being a preacher of much dignity, he had served as a Subject of such; and then, as a Subject, he could not think differently [from them], so that the explorers also were deceived . . .

3525. With every man there are two angelic Spirits . . . and, besides, there are Spirits who suppose themselves to be the man, one, two, three, who are Subjects of the World of Spirits. (Continued under SPIRIT.)

3630. Many Societies of Spirits have sent Subjects to me (to make inquiries about this flaming appearance; showing the curiosity of Spirits).

3631. That the speech of interior Spirits could not be communicated to me without Subjects. Ex.

— When they spoke to me without Subjects, there was a species of undulation flowing to my ears, as of many speaking, but not a whit was understood . . . But, with intermediate Subjects, I at once perceived and heard what they were speaking and thinking.

3633. He who is a Subject, since he supposes that he speaks from himself, supposes that those who are speaking through him are nothing . . . and they who speak through him, being interior ones, suppose him through whom they speak to be nothing. Examp. 3645.

[D.] 3641. All men are kept, through Subjects, in some Society of Spirits. Ex.

3682. David, being . . . a Subject of the wicked . . . He was a Subject of the deceitful over head . . . 3688, Ex.

3684. He was treated by others like a dog, because he was their Subject. 3688.

3688. Without such a Subject they act in secret, and not unless an opportunity is afforded, that is, timidly . . . But when they seize upon such a Subject, upon whom they can throw the blame, they are the most wicked of all.

3701. As she was the Subject of so many Societies, she easily found any one (of them).

3702. She was, besides, a Subject of evil Genii . . . and being thus a Subject of both evil Genii and of the upright, she could be in a persuasive life. Ex. . . I told those in the good Societies that it was nefarious for them to have one Subject together with evil Genii. Ex.

3712. A Subject of some persons who were loved simulated such things, so that she could deceive those in the lower World of Spirits . . .

3742. This was manifested through a certain Subject of theirs, who said that he should act against the Lord.

3755. That there are contrary Subjects, through whom, however, good is insinuated by the Lord.—There was a certain Subject within me, almost the whole night, through whom I perceived a certain most delightful and happy [sensation], and that constantly through the night. . . The Spirit within me afterwards went away towards the lower parts, and said that he had injected that delight; and I felt that that external delight then receded. Nevertheless he said that he was contrary, so that he had impeded the delights; from which it was evident that the Lord employs opposite Subjects, and also evil ones, through whom to insinuate delight; for the reason . . . that he has no perception of the delight: for if he had he would appropriate it to himself, and so take it away . . .

2797². So that there is no other Subject, but only a phantasy formed in his image . . .

3798. Wherever it lights upon any Subject, they endeavour to affect him with the sphere of adultery.

3812. These retain so little of what is their own . . . and are as it were inanimate Subjects as to what is their Own; and are of service in Societies as connectives . . . Whether they can serve as the Subjects through whom others speak, and they not then know that it is they, but that it is others, as some Subjects are wont to do, I do not know for certain; but so it appears; for they know almost nothing about themselves.

3815. Everyone of them wants to be called the Holy Spirit, provided there are Subjects who acknowledge them: . . .

3835². As they act against evil Spirits they cannot but have them as it were for companions; for the evil are Subjects whom they annoy in this way . . .

3838. There was a subtle Spirit with me, a Subject of the deceitful over head, who had found in him such a Subject as had (in this life) believed himself to be actuated by the Holy Spirit . . . For these especially can be the Subjects of those who want to be worshipped as the Holy Spirit. (This Subject des. 3839. 3840.) 3841.

3844. These (interior evil Spirits) inflow into lower Subjects, who are with man; and the Subjects know no otherwise than that it is they who are the man . . .

3846. The Angels who are at the head . . . have no communication with those who are over head; but only rule their Subjects.

3857². The Spirits who are nearer, as Subjects, also have reflection, like man; as the reflection of place, persons, etc. . .

3869. There were with me those who had no Subjects, but still [endeavoured] to inflow. Des.

3909. I have observed a certain woman who was a Subject of evil Spirits, and who inspired nefarious things . . . Other Spirits . . . observed attentively how such a Subject [would act] . . . and thus the mental looks and ideas of many were [directed] into her who was a Subject, which caused her forces of thinking to be augmented; for in proportion as the mental looks of a number [are directed] into one, the more strongly she acts.

3912. Those Spirits who thus inhered in the bones of the skull were the Subjects of such as are lascivious in this way; and they can only serve as Subjects, having little life . . . They were antediluvians, who, having been devastated, can serve as Subjects, retaining . . . only so much life as is possessed by the bones . . .

3952². The woman (who appeared to Aristotle) was a representation by the male Spirits who were about him, and had a Subject; so that the woman was not a Spirit, but was the representation of a woman.

3964. On Subjects.—There have been Subjects with me, over head, as it were incumbent, who have spoken as if in sleep; but still they spoke well and truly, like those not in a state of sleep. Evil Spirits inflowed through them . . . but their influx was at once dissipated . . . the Subjects merely received the things [they inflowed with]. Thus good and interior Spirits were acting through the same Subjects, who may be called common Subjects. But whether such are with men I do not yet know. (See A. 5988, above.)

3965. But the evil Spirits said that they were not their Subjects, [but] conformed themselves to those whom they are wont to take, who are in accord with themselves, and are from their own company, and whom they send forth as Subjects . . . But they had been compelled to act through those Subjects, because in that way they could inflict no evil. These Subjects were, moreover, the Subjects of a number of companies of evil Spirits . . . In a word, they are common Subjects, but still are good Spirits; for good Spirits inflow into them, and through them reject the attempts of the evil Spirits.

4038°. (After vastation) such become excrements, and sit like dead stocks, and afterwards serve for such Subjects as have little life in them.

4041°. It was thus evident how (the deceitful over head) actuate the Subjects to speak—by means of thought only, which the Subject follows and utters. 4042, Ex.

4101. The most deceitful over head . . . as soon as anything innocent appears, seize upon it to ensnare by . . . as when I have counted my footsteps in the street, they seized on a nefarious Subject to ensnare by.

4119. There are Spirits with man who are in a like persuasion and cupidity, who may be called the Subjects of many. Ex.

4140. Representations may be formed . . . A candelabrum thus formed is for a subject, is for a vessel; hence innumerable varieties in a subject of many subjects together. Ex.

4265. The Sirens wanted to have him as their Subject. Des.

4269. On Subjects.—Spirits send of their own into other Societies, in order that they may have communication with them. Sometimes the evil [do so] into many Societies, like spiders . . . They are those who by permission enter into Societies, and excite them, and thus they are explored . . . and are dissociated . . .

4271. There are good Spirits with men who are in charity, which Spirits are the Subjects of many Societies . . .

4333. I have often observed that the organs of thought have been merely disposed with me, and that the Spirits have spoken according to this disposition. The Spirits said that they do in like manner with Subjects—that they merely think, and the Subject speaks according to the thought, yet with some leading to speak, which is not open.

4351°. As their Subject, I could not know but that he was alone.

4361. Through a Subject with me . . . he inflicted pain . . .

4369. To have the hypocrite for a Subject.

4404°. (Thus) whatever comes first is held as a Subject; and all other things follow . . . from the Subject.

4448. Sirens were with me for a year who had a most filthy and a profane Subject. Des. 4458. 4459. 4460. 4465. 4468. 4473. 4496. 4500. 4502. 4503 (her end). 4514. 4520.

4470. The Jesuits . . . had a Subject under the buttocks in Hell, who infested me . . .

4509. On Subjects.

4541. Magicians . . . had their filthy Subjects disposed according to their arts, and also Subjects which they multiplied by phantasies, so that they could not be found, although they appeared there.

4830. (Valerius) projected Subjects to me . . .

5361. See LAST JUDGMENT, here.

5509. All (the evil Spirits) then appear in him (who is being vastated) as in a Subject, and then they are everywhere cast out of the Societies . . .

5529. With those who come from the world, this (state) lasts (from a week to fifty years) . . . For they are of service to man, and to the rest, as Subjects. They who are such, are said to be in the World of Spirits; and even if these are cast into Hell, they return; but those who have been vastated never return.

D. Min. 4671. They had a Subject who adhered to the left side of the head . . .

4694°. Although evil Spirits know that they speak through others, who are called Subjects, and although they say . . . that these Subjects think nothing from themselves, they still do not want to know that they themselves think from others . . . The Subjects themselves believe no otherwise than that they think and speak all things from themselves.

4704. (These infernal explorers) have a Subject over head; but when they act into the Subject, as into another, the Subject is erected, and stands incurvated, resisting. Thus do they harass each other in Hell.

4718°. (Until he is reformed) he must serve the evil as their organ, or Subject.

4442. On a sublime idea concerning the Lord.

4826. The magnificence and sublimity (in the Inmost Heaven).

Sublime. Sublimare.

A. 5871^e. A kind of sublimation from these scientifics . . .

H. 356². By the fire of celestial love it as it were sublimes . . .

W. 17^e. An Angel . . . by sublimation and approximation can rise above the degree of man.

P. 336^e. How the brain sublimes the blood.

M. 66². Every idea of man, however sublimated, is substantial . . .

145². This spiritual purification may be compared to that of natural spirits, which . . . is called sublimation, etc.

A. 1999³. The distance which appears in the sublunary world.

Submerge. Submergere.

Submersion. Submersio.

A. 6589. The Egyptians represented . . . the destruction (of the vastated Ancient Church) by their submersion in the sea Suph.

8277. 'To be submerged in the sea Suph' (Ex. xv. 4) = that they closed themselves in with falsities from evil.

T. 68^e. He must (then) be immersed and submerged in Hell.

D. 3220. He was driven to . . . Gehenna, that he might be submerged there.

3586. They began to tremble heavily, and to be gradually submerged.

E. 504²⁴. 'When thou passest through . . . the rivers, they shall not overwhelm thee' (Is.xliii.2) = that reasonings from falsities against truths shall not corrupt. 518³³.

518³⁵. 'Then the waters had overwhelmed us' (Ps. cxiv.4) = falsities, and the consequent destruction of spiritual life which man has through truths and a life according to them.

537⁹. 'Deliver me out of the mire lest I sink' (Ps. lxi.14) = out of the evil of falsity lest I perish.

569²¹. Occurs.

Submit. Submittere.

Submission. Submissio.

2794. The submission (of Abraham). Sig.

3091. 'She let down her pitcher' = the submission of the recipients from power; (which is) that doctrinals, Knowledges, and scientifics apply themselves. There is a chain of subordination, thus of application, and consequently of submission, from the First of life . . . The things of a lower place . . . must be in submission; and without their submission there is no conjunction possible. The power here spoken of is from truth: this causes the things below to submit.

4267. The submission (of Jacob to Esau). Sig. and Ex. 4268. 4341², Ex.

4347. 'He bowed himself to the earth seven times' = the submission of all things.

—². (Why submission is required of man. See HUMBLE, here.) —³.

—³. Submission is predicated of truths. Ex.

4360. Sensuous scientifics and their truths, and their submission. Sig. and Ex.

4361. The affection of the truth of faith as to the exteriors, and their truths, and their submissive introduction. Sig. and Ex.

4362. The affections of the truth of faith as to the interiors, and their submissive introduction. Sig. and Ex.

4386. What this formula of submission involves.

5624. That through truth given gratis in the exterior Natural they should submit themselves as much as possible. Sig. and Ex. 5659.

5729. The temptation of the external man until they submitted themselves of their own accord to the Celestial Internal. Tr.

—⁹. The conjunction of the external man with the internal is not effected without temptation and spontaneous submission.

5757. That it is submitted from what is religious. Sig. and Ex.

5842. The submission of the natural or external man under the Internal. Sig. For when the good there submits itself, the truths there submit themselves; for truths are of good.

6138. A total submission. Sig. and Ex.

—². In order that He may render anyone blessed and happy, the Lord wills his total submission; that is, that he should not be partly his own and partly the Lord's; for there are then 'two masters.' . . . Total submission is also meant by . . . 'Whosoever loveth father and mother more than Me is not worthy of Me . . . ' Ex. . . . Total submission is also signified by . . . 'Lord suffer me first to go and bury my father' . . . That the submission must be total, is very evident from (the first great commandment). Ex.

6366. That truths will of themselves submit themselves. Sig. and Ex.

—^c. Such is the influx, that the Spiritual Kingdom may be kept in order through the Celestial one, and thus be submitted to the Lord.

6567. The submission of the things in the Natural under the Internal. Sig. and Ex.

— . Concerning this submission, it is to be known that the Spiritual Church cannot possibly be instituted with anyone unless the things in the external man have been submitted to the internal man. So long as truth alone . . . predominates . . . the external man has not been submitted to the internal; but, as soon as good dominates, the external man submits itself, and then that man becomes a Spiritual Church. Des.

8873. 'To serve' = submission. It (also) = Divine worship, because humiliation and submission are the essentials of worship. . . . For life from the Lord inflows solely into a humble and submissive heart . . .

9180. Submission and service. Sig. and Ex.

N. 74. It matters not how they appear in the external form, whether haughty or submissive.

E. 629⁹. 'The hills of an age submitted themselves' (Hab.iii.6) = that the Spiritual Church ('Noah') has perished.

Subordinate. Subordinare.

Subordination. Subordinatio.

A. 1752⁹. Good Spirits are subordinated to angelic ones, and these to Angels, so as to constitute one angelic Society. 1802, Ex.

1802. But this subordination is not of command; but is like the influx of internal things into more exterior ones; for the Lord's life inflows through the Third Heaven into the Second, and through this into the First . . . The interior or subordinated Angels do not know that this is the case, unless reflection is given them. Thus there is no subordination of command.

2781⁸. 'To ride on an ass' = that the Natural had been subordinated; 'on a foal . . . ' = that the Rational had been subordinated.

—⁹. The natural man ought to serve the Rational; this the Spiritual; this the Celestial; and this the Lord: such is the order of the subordination.

3189. Affections are mutually subordinated . . . The Societies of Heaven are in such a form . . .

3264. The Divine truth, to which the affection of knowledges is subordinate. Sig.

3913². As man accedes to the one, the other is subordinated.

—⁴. The natural and the spiritual man are conjoined . . . when the things of the external man have been subordinated to serve the ends of the internal. Ex. and Tr. 4266.

4249. When good is subordinating truths to itself . . .

5127. From the law of subordination . . .

5164. All things are called 'servants' which . . . are subordinate and subject to higher things . . .

5165. That the sensuous things of the intellectual part had been subordinated. Sig. and Ex.

5168². It treats in (Ex.xl.) of the subordination of the exterior Natural; which is to be subordinated for the reason that it may serve the interior Natural as a plane: for, unless it is subordinated, interior truths and goods have no place where they can be represented . . . and therefore, when there is no subordination, the man can have no interior thought; nor even any faith; for there is no comprehension . . . That which subordinates the Natural . . . is solely the good in which is innocence, which good is called 'charity.'

5247. Those with whom the Natural had been rightly subordinated appear with hair becomingly dressed.

5311. That the natural mind shall be subordinate and submissive. Sig. and Ex. 5338.

5786. For this reason the external man must be quite subordinate and subject to the internal; and, when it has been subjected . . . 7424.

6580². With the man who is a Spiritual Church . . . scientifics have been subordinated, and reduced into such an order that . . .

7293. The Sensuous and Corporeal . . . not subordinated to the Rational, is full of fallacies. Sig.

8727. Primary truths which are subordinate in successive order to the truth which proceeds immediately from the Divine. Sig. and Ex. 8728, Ex.

8728. But in the sense determined to persons, it denotes the Angels and the angelic Societies in such subordination and dependence . . .

8778². For there is no correspondence unless lower things, are, by subordination, subject to higher ones; but when they have been subjected, the higher things act into the lower ones exactly as a cause does into its effect.

9001². Then the Natural is subordinate to spiritual truth; and, when it has been subordinated, it is no longer at its own disposal, but is at the disposal of the spiritual truth under which it has been subordinated; and in this way what is natural becomes as what is spiritual . . .

9730^e. The internal man has then been subordinated to the external. Ex.

9828. All these ends are mutually conjoined and subordinated in such a manner that they regard one end . . .

—². For they are then under the . . . Providence of One who bends all to Himself according to the laws of subordination and consociation . . .

10792. (The destruction of order) is guarded against when there are higher and lower governors, among whom there is subordination.

H. 321. The Gentiles who . . . have lived in obedience and subordination . . . are accepted there.

389. All things in the Heavens . . . have been subordinated, exactly as, in Divine order, uses are subordinated.

390. The nature of the subordinations in the Heavens. Fully ex.

392^e. All (uses) have been co-ordinated and subordinated . . .

W. 251^e. This subordination (of the natural man to the spiritual) is from the conjunction of the Spiritual World and the natural . . .

263. Then is the natural mind disposed at the service of the spiritual, and is subordinated.

T. 186. Those in whom spiritual, moral, political, and scientific things have been thus subordinated . . .

395. While these three loves are rightly subordinated, they perfect the man; but, when not rightly subordinated, they pervert him. Ex. 403, Gen.art.

412². There are in the world higher and lower offices in subordination according to their more or less universal government . . .

680. Hence the subordinations (in empires and kingdoms,) by which all are co-ordinated as into a one.

Ad. 656². From this order it now appears what was the nature of the subordination instituted by Jehovah God at the first creation; namely, that it was alike in the universe and in man. There was such a subordination in the universe, in order that things which were lower might serve those which are higher; and that thus all things, by a succession of order, might serve Jehovah God Himself . . .

D. 2515. Honour is paid them for the sake of subordination . . . This is done for the sake of subordination and government in the Societies.

2518. What a phantasy it is to want to come into Heaven, that is, from pride to form a Society . . . where others have been subordinated to him! . . . For there exists no such subordination (there). Ex.

3167. To those who have been born (kings), and who are good, there is shown, by well-behaved Spirits, a certain kind of subordination . . .

5001. Some (there) have a life of exercising command . . . and from this sphere [there results] subordination.

5963. The Russians are not so wicked as the rest in Christendom: they are in great subordination . . . They can be kept in good affection from the fact that they are in obedience and subordination. . . But they are but little intellectual.

D. Love xvi. Affections are loves, but subordinate to the general love as to their lord or head.

5219. The truths with Angels, Spirits, and men are subsidiary lights; but they have their light from the Divine truth . . .

5391. The subsidiary kidneys.

H. 567. The heat of the body is excited by the heat of its spirit, and bears subsidiary aid to it.

W. 93°. The natural sun [acts] through the influx of spiritual heat, to which it renders subsidiary aid. 106. 153°.

399°. As the subsidiary life of the body depends on the heart alone.

M. 104°. (They said) that conjugal love is heat, which becomes potency if the subsidiary heat of the sun is added to it.

375°. The malignant character of the atmosphere appears to be . . . a subsidiary cause.

E. 1211⁴. In Heaven. . . things come into existence through the forces of light and heat from the Sun . . . without subsidiary and auxiliary forces through light and heat from the sun . . .

D. Wis. xii. 3°. To which the light and heat of the sun bears subsidiary aid.

Subsist. Subsistere.

Subsistence. Subsistentia.

See under EXIST.

A. 775. As it comes forth—existit—from the Lord in this way, so it also subsists; for subsistence is a perpetual coming forth—existentia.

1807⁴. Those in Divine ideas never stop in the objects of external sight.

1950². No evil can subsist (or stay) in a sphere where good is.

2173². Without this marriage, nothing in nature would subsist.

2323. Without a Church somewhere in the world, the human race could not subsist. Ex.

2998. Without this connection (with the Spiritual World), neither man, nor any part of him, could subsist for a moment; for all his subsistence is thence.

2999. From this is the coming forth—existentia—and subsistence of all things.

3627. Nothing can come forth and subsist from itself . . .

3648². Man believes not in any influx from the Spiritual World . . . although he might know that nothing can subsist except through [the fact] that it has existed, (or come forth); that is, that subsistence is a perpetual coming forth; or, what is the same, production is continual creation.

4044°. There is not anything which can subsist from itself, but from something else; and this again from something else; and, finally, from the First; and this through a connection of correspondences.

4322°. All the smallest particulars in man come forth (from the correspondence between Heaven and man), and therefore they also subsist from it; for subsistence is a perpetual coming forth. 4525; (See CORRESPOND, here.)

[A.] 4523³. (Thus) whatever is in the world . . . does not come forth—existat—from itself, but from what is prior to itself; and this . . . from what is prior to itself; and so on even to the First, from whom the sequents come forth in order. And, as they come forth thence, they also subsist thence; for subsistence is a perpetual coming forth. Hence it follows that each and all things, down to the ultimate things of nature, have not only come forth from the First, but also subsist from the First; for, unless they perpetually came forth, and unless there were a continuous connection from the First, and thus with the First, they would perish in a moment. (Continued under EXIST, at A.4524.)

4529^e. They could scarcely subsist for blessedness (there).

5116³. (Such) do not consider that subsistence is a perpetual coming forth; or, what is similar, that propagation is a perpetual creation.

5377. Without correspondence with . . . the Spiritual World, nothing ever comes forth and subsists, for the reason that it has not any connection with what is prior to itself; nor, consequently, with the First . . . That which is unconnected, and thus independent, cannot subsist for a single moment; for the reason it subsists is its connection and dependence upon that from which is all existence (or coming forth); for subsistence is a perpetual coming forth.

6040. For to subsist is perpetually to come forth—existere. (Continued from EXIST, here.)

6056. For it is a universal canon that nothing can subsist from itself . . . So with man: he as to his external cannot subsist except from the internal, and through it; nor can the internal man subsist except from Heaven and through it; and neither can Heaven subsist from itself, but from the Lord, who alone subsists from Himself. Influx is according to existence (or coming forth) and subsistence; for all things subsist through influx. But that each and all things subsist from the Lord through influx, not only mediately through the Spiritual World, but also immediately, in both mediates and ultimates, will be demonstrated in what follows.

6465. Hence it is that every formation comes forth—existat—separated from every other; but still so that the posterior depends upon the prior, inasmuch that it cannot subsist without the prior . . .

6482. He does not consider that nothing can subsist unless it perpetually exists (or comes forth); for, as is known in the learned world, subsistence is a perpetual coming forth; thus conservation is a perpetual creation.

7270^e. Unless this were so, a formed thing could not possibly subsist and act.

9237^e. An Earth could not subsist without a human race. Ex.

9327². All things subsist through the Divine truth. (See EXIST, here.)

9336⁴. All things in Heaven come forth according to this order, and subsist according to the same; for to subsist is to perpetually exist (or come forth). In order, therefore, that Heaven may come forth in man, it is necessary that he receive the Divine truth . . .

9430². In the ultimate, interior things subsist and quiesce.

9481³. Everything unconnected with the Divine perishes . . . Nothing can ever come forth—existere—without what is prior to itself, thus without the Divine . . . consequently it cannot subsist; for to subsist is to perpetually come forth—existere.

9500. Thus the consistence and subsistence of Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

9502. Existence and subsistence in perpetuity and without change. Sig. . . For through the Divine sphere . . . Heaven has come into existence and was created; and through the same it subsists and is conserved; for subsistence is a perpetual coming forth; and conservation is a perpetual creation.

10252³. As celestial good thus comes forth—existit—through truths in their order, so it afterwards subsists in the like order through the same truths; for subsistence is a perpetual coming forth. And, when it subsists just as it had come forth—existit—it is complete; for then the higher things subsist, rest, and repose themselves in order upon the lower things as upon their planes; and upon the extremes or ultimates, which are sensuous scientific truths, as upon their foundation.

10614². Hence the connection of all things, and the influx according to the connection, and the consequent subsistence of one thing from another.

H. 9. For to subsist is perpetually to come forth.

94^e. From this correspondence, man subsists; for man subsists from no other source than Heaven.

100^e. Thus it is the Corporeal of man . . . upon which, as upon its basis, Heaven subsists.

270⁴. They stop at the first step.

294. Every Spirit . . . subsists by influx from (the Society to which he belongs).

297. Mediate influx subsists through immediate influx.

301. The conjunction of Heaven with the human race, and of this with Heaven, is such, that the one subsists from the other. J.9^e.

303. They know, when they think, that nothing can subsist from itself, but from what is prior to itself, thus all things from a First; and that the connection with what is prior to itself is like that of an effect with its effecting cause. (Continued under EXIST.)

315. Divine order never halts in the middle . . .

340². Infants (there) do not advance beyond early youth, but remain in it to all eternity. M.411². 444². Ex.

536. An equilibrium in which all things subsist.

J. 9. Creation . . . proceeded to its ultimates, and then first subsisted.

—³. When man (becomes a Spirit) he does not subsist upon his Own basis; but upon the general basis, which is the human race.

— . No Angel or Spirit can subsist without man; and no man without Spirit and Angel. (Thus) the human race and the angelic Heaven make a one, and they subsist mutually from each other . . .

W. 152. The sun (must be) the first of creation; for all things in its world subsist from it; and, because they subsist from it, they have existed (or come forth) from it. The one involves and bears witness to the other. For all things are under the sun's view, because it determined—posuit—that they should be; and to keep under its view is to determine continually; and therefore, also, it is said, that subsistence is a perpetual coming forth. Ex.

160. There are such things (as spaces), because creation ceased there, and subsists in its state of rest.

P. 3². For sustentation is perpetual creation; as subsistence is a perpetual coming forth.

R. 343. The Angels (then) cannot remain in their state of love and wisdom.

533³. The reason the Church in the Heavens does not subsist unless it has been conjoined with a Church on earth. Ex. . . The internal with man does not subsist in its state, unless the external is conjoined with it. Ex.

M. 86. For thus subsistence or conservation is perpetual coming forth, or creation.

387^e. Ends progress . . . down to the terminus, in which they subsist or cease.

444³. As (evil) does not prevail against good, it stops in the endeavour.

447. Every man becomes . . . successively rational; and, if he does not halt there, he becomes spiritual.

I. 4. That the world has come forth—existit—from the sun, and not the converse, is evident from the effect of the cause, in that the world in each and all things of it subsists by means of the sun; and subsistence demonstrates coming forth—existentiam; and therefore it is said that subsistence is a perpetual coming forth . . . 9.

9. That . . . through the (natural) sun the world of nature has come forth—existit—and subsists. Gen.art.

T. 106². The man who halts in the first state . . . is like . . .

118. Without that Redemption . . . the Angels would not have been able to stay in a state of integrity. Gen.art. 579.

154³. If this were done, both (the heart and lungs) would stop.

497. Would not his thought (then) come to a stand?

590. In elevation as to the understanding, while the love of the will stays below . . .

Ad. 635. Interiors are distinct from exteriors thus: that the former can come forth—existere—and subsist, without the latter; but not the converse; for exteriors come forth from their interiors. For . . . all things come forth from an inmost or first, as from their simple; and, because they come forth from it, they also subsist from it; for subsistence is a perpetual coming forth.

1457². Perpetual coming forth; that is, subsistence . . .

D. 3270. They halt at the ninth use.

E. 665². For without a Church . . . the world cannot subsist. Ex.

1085². For the Heavens subsist upon the human race as a house on its foundation; and hence the wisdom of the Angels in like manner subsist upon the knowledge, intelligence, and wisdom of men from the sense of the letter . . .

1207⁴. Lastly, the terraqueous globe was created, in order that there might be ultimate matters there, into which everything spiritual might cease, and in which creation might subsist . . .

1215^e. Yet it is an eternal truth . . . that sustentation is perpetual creation, as subsistence is perpetual existence (or coming forth).

De Verbo 3⁹. All the Celestial inflows into the Spiritual; and the Spiritual into the Natural; and, into the ultimate of this, which is the Corporeal and Material, it ceases, and there subsists. Without such an ultimate, into which the intermediates may inflow, subsistence is impossible . . .

A. 179. As soon as the interiors of the body grow cold, the vital substances are separated from the man, wherever they are, even if enclosed in a thousand labyrinthine interlacings. D.1104.

272^e. That man (when like a wild animal) can reason . . . he has from the spiritual substance through which the Lord's life can inflow.

444. Must the internal sight, or thought, not have an organic substance from which [to operate]?

731. 'To destroy every substance which I have made' (Gen.vii.4)=the proprium of man, which is as if destroyed when it is vivified.

801^e. See SUBJECT, here. 4223. H.434.

808. 'He destroyed every substance' (Gen.vii.23)=the cupidities which are of the love of self. 'Substance' is predicated of voluntary things, because all things with man arise, that is, come forth and subsist, from the will. The will is the very substance of man . . .

[A.] 1533^e. Unless Angels were organic substances, they could neither speak, see, nor think.

1808^e. The reason all things on the Earth come forth not ideally, but actually, is that all things both celestial and spiritual, which are from the Lord, are living and essential, or, as they are called, substantial; and therefore they come forth actually in ultimate nature.

2162^e. 'As it were the substance of heaven as to purity' (Ex. xxiv. 10). (=the translucence of the angelic Heaven. 9408.) E.69.

2475^e. The spirit (of man is) his purer substance annexed to the things of his body.

2487. The exterior memory . . . is an organic something formed from the objects of the senses . . . in the substances which are the beginnings of the fibres . . .

2576^e. For (the garments of the Angels) are real substances; thus essences in form.

3318^e. These vessels . . . are those called truths, and in themselves are perceptions . . . of the changes of state according to which come forth the variations which take place in the most subtle substances.

3484. To this life (from the Lord) correspond the forms which are substances, and which are so vivified by the continuous Divine influx that they appear to themselves to live from themselves.

3726^e. Knowledges and truths are Things no more abstracted from the purest substances, which belong to the spirit of man, than sight is abstracted from its organ . . . There are purer substances, which are real, from which (the Knowledges and truths) come forth, whose variations of form, when animated and modified by the influx of life from the Lord, present them . . . As these forms or substances are not visible to the bodily eye, man (now) apprehends no otherwise than that Knowledges, and thoughts, are abstracted Things. Hence the folly of our age: that men do not believe they have a spirit within them which will live after the death of the body, when yet this spirit is a substance much more real than the material substance of its body . . .

4411^e. When this (Divine light which is) truth inflows into the First Heaven . . . it is received substantially, and appears as a paradise, etc.

4653^e. There are Spirits who relate to parts still more interior, even to those substantiated ones which are nearer to the spirit, and which at last are in the spirit . . .

4659. The spirit of man is in his body . . . and is its purer substance, in both its motor and sensory organs, and everywhere else . . .

5084ⁱ. It is a consequent fallacy . . . that there are simple substances, which are monads and atoms . . .

5145. For in the head are all substances and forms in their beginnings.

6465. The like is the case with the modes and forces which proceed from them as substances. Ex.

6467^e. So man, while he lives (here), induces on the purest substances, which are of his interiors, a quality according to which the Lord's life is received.

6608. The intellectual light . . . enlightened the substances of the interior sight . . .

7004². For the Divine truth itself is the one only substantial thing . . . 8861^e. 9410⁵.

7270². The truth which proceeds immediately . . . cannot be received by any finite living substance; thus not by any Angel.

—^e. This may be evident from the maxim . . . that substance which is substance is one only; and that all other things are formations thence; and that in the formations this one only substance reigns, not only as form, but also as non-form, as in its origin.

7408. The two substances of the brain—cortical, and medullary.

8455^e. Whereas peace affects the inmost things of all—the first substances, and the beginnings of these substances with man; and thence derives and pours itself forth into the substantiates and derivatives, and affects them . . .

9327². Of thought (such) perceive nothing essential, still less, substantial; although they know that thought rules the whole body . . .

H. 418. (The correspondence of Heaven with man, is a correspondence) also with the organic substances which interiorly receive the influx of Heaven, whence man has interior activities of service to the operations of his mind; for whatever comes forth—existit—interiorly in man, comes forth in forms which are substances; for that which does not come forth in substances as its subjects is nothing.

L. 35^e. The Lord has put on a Human from the Father, which in itself is like His Divine, and thus substantial.

—¹⁰. As His Body was now not material; but Divine substantial, He came to the disciples when the doors were shut; and, after He had been seen, He became invisible . . .

W. 5². The Sun . . . cannot create anyone immediately from itself . . . but it can create from substances and matters so formed that they can receive heat itself and light itself . . .

40. That the Divine love and the Divine wisdom is substance, and that it is form. Gen.art. (See SUBJECT, here, and at 41. 42; and FORM, at W.42.)

—^e. Love and wisdom are the real and actual substance and form, which make the subject itself.

44. That the Divine love and the Divine wisdom are substance and form in itself . . . Gen.art.

174. The spiritual atmospheres are discrete substances, or least forms, which originate from the Sun; and, as they receive the Sun singly and severally, the fire of the Sun, thus divided into so many substances or forms . . . becomes heat . . . (So) the natural atmospheres are discrete substances and least forms which originate from the sun . . . which also receive the sun singly and severally, and store up its fire in themselves . . .

196. When it is said that degrees are such . . . it is meant that substances are such in their degrees.

197. This can be applied . . . to the organic substances which are the subjects of the thoughts and affections . . . In all these, the first is the solely Regnant in the sequents: nay, is the one only thing in them. Ex. . . The substance which is substance in itself is the sole substance.

198. (Thus) the Divine, which is substance in itself; or the one and only substance, is the substance from which are each and all things which have been created . . .

204. The reason (simple things are more perfect than composite ones) is that the former are . . . less covered over with substances and matters devoid of life . . .

207^e. (Degrees) are successive compositions . . . from the simples which are their first substances or matters.

209. All the Civil, Moral, and Spiritual is not anything abstracted from substance; but they are substances; for as love and wisdom . . . are substance, so in like manner are all Things which are called civil, moral, and spiritual. These can indeed be thought of abstractedly from substances; but still, in themselves, they are not abstracted. (Continued under SUBJECT; and at 210.)

—^e. By substance is also meant form; for substance is not possible without form.

229. It is asserted by some that there exists—detur—a substance so simple that it is not a form from lesser forms; and that out of that substance, by accumulations into masses, substantiated or composite things come forth—existent; and, finally, the substances which are called material. But still such most simple substances are not possible. For what is substance without form? It is that of which not anything can be predicated; and out of an entity of which nothing can be predicated, not anything can be made up by accumulations into masses. That there are things innumerable in the first created substances of all things—which are the least and most simple ones—will be seen in what follows, where forms are treated of.

254. So do the substances or forms of the spiritual degree in man (contract themselves) from evils and the derivative falsities; for these are heterogeneous.

257^s. Man's natural mind consists of spiritual substances, and at the same time of natural substances. Thought is effected from its spiritual substances; but not from its natural substances. The latter substances recede when the man dies; but not the spiritual substances. And therefore this same mind, after death . . . remains in a like form . . . The natural substances of this mind, which recede by death, constitute the cutaneous covering of the spiritual body . . . Through this covering, which has been taken from the natural world, their spiritual bodies subsist; for the Natural is the ultimum continens.

270. The natural mind derives its form, in part, from the substances of the natural world; but the spiritual mind solely from substances of the Spiritual World.

273. The quality of the natural mind in its substantial form . . . from the substances of both worlds in the brains . . . (Continued under SUBJECT.)

283. Everyone who thinks from clear reason sees that all things have been created out of a substance which is substance in itself; for this is the Esse itself from which all things which are can come forth—existere; and, as God alone is substance in itself, and thence Esse itself, it is evident that the coming forth—existentia of Things is from no other source. Many have seen this . . . but have not dared to confirm it . . . lest they might think of the created universe as God . . .

300. There is one only substance from which all things are; and the Sun of the Spiritual World is that substance; and, as the Divine is not in space, and as it is the same in the greatest things and in the least, so in like manner with that Sun, which is the first proceeding of God Man. And, further, this one only substance, which is the Sun, proceeding according to continuous degrees . . . and at the same time according to discrete degrees . . . presents the varieties of all things in the created universe.

302. Finally, in ultimates (the atmospheres) become so compressed and inert, that they are no longer atmospheres, but substances at rest; and, in the natural world, fixed, such as are in lands (or earths), and are called matters. From this origin of substances and matters, it follows, first, that these substances and matters are also of three degrees; secondly, that they are held together in connection among themselves by the encompassing atmospheres; thirdly, that they have been accommodated to produce all uses in their forms.

303. That such substances or matters as are in lands have been produced from the sun through its atmospheres. Ex.

—². It follows that when the activity and expansion (of the atmospheres) cease in ultimates, they become substances and matters such as are in lands; and which, from the atmospheres from which they have originated, retain in themselves the effort and conatus of producing uses.

304^e. That there are degrees of both kinds in the leasts of all things, is because the spiritual Sun is the one only substance from which are all things.

305. That in the substances and matters from which are lands there is nothing of the Divine in itself; but that still they are from the Divine in itself. Ex.

—, Nevertheless by continuation from the substance of the spiritual Sun (the atmospheres) have brought with them that which was there from the Divine, which was the sphere encompassing the Lord. From this sphere, by continuation from the Sun by means of the atmospheres, have originated the substances and matters from which are lands.

[W.] 307. That all uses . . . are in forms; and that they receive the forms from the substances and matters such as are in lands. Gen.art.

310. For the substances and matters from which are lands are the ends and terminations of the atmospheres which proceed from the spiritual Sun as uses. And, as the substances and matters from which are lands are from this origin, and their congregates are held together by the circumpressure of the atmospheres, it follows that they have thence a perpetual conatus of producing forms of uses. Ex.

— (Thus) seeds of every kind . . . are impregnated by the most subtle substances, which can have no other than a spiritual origin . . . and then, through conjunction with matters from a natural origin, they can produce forms of uses . . .

311. In ultimates, the atmospheres become such forces, by which the substances and matters such as are in lands, are actuated into forms . . .

313. The first forms are the substances and matters from which are lands, in their leasts; the second forms are congregates of these; the third are from (animal and vegetable remains). (Continued under FORM.)

373. (The will and understanding are organized of the purest substances. See FORM, here.)

388^e. The material form (of man) is added to the spiritual form . . . in order that he may draw to himself, from the purer substances of the world, a fixed containant of spiritual things; and may thus continue and perpetuate his life (after death).

432. The initiaiment of man in the womb . . . is from spiritual substance . . .

P. 5. The spiritual Sun is not only the first substance, but is also the only one from which are all things. And, as it is the one only substance, it follows that that substance is in every created thing; but with infinite variety, according to uses.

—². As that Sun is the first and one only substance from which are all things, it follows that in that substance there are infinitely more things than can appear in the substances which originate from it, which are called substantiate, and, finally, material. Ex.

157. There is one only essence, one only substance, and one only form, from which are all essences, substances, and forms which have been created. This one only essence, substance, and form is the Divine love and the Divine wisdom, from which are all things which relate to the love and wisdom with man. It is also good itself, and truth itself, to which all things relate. And those [three things] are the life, from which is the life of all, and all things of life. Also this One Only and Itself is omnipresent, omniscient, and omnipotent. And it is the Lord from eternity. (These six propositions demonstrated seriatim.)

174. (No one knows) the things which are done by the Lord in the interior substances and forms of the mind . . .

279^e. (Such) do not know that affections . . . are mere changes of the state of the purely organic substances of the mind; and that thoughts . . . are mere changes and variations of the form of these substances; and that memory is the permanent state of these changes and variations. Ex.

— As affections and thoughts exist—dantur—in the brains, which is full of substances and forms, they are called forms purely organic. . . Thought is no more possible separate from substantial form, than sight is from . . . the eye . . . Examine the brain, and you will see innumerable substances, and in like manner fibres, and that there is nothing there which is not organized.

—⁷. (Thus) the operations of the purely organic substances of the mind are like (those of the viscera); with the difference that the operations of the organic substances of the body are natural, whereas those of the mind are spiritual; and the two make a one by correspondences.

—⁸. The nature of the changes and variations of state and form in the organic substances of the mind, which are affections and thoughts . . . may be seen as in a mirror from the changes and variations in the state of the lungs in speaking and singing. Ex. —⁹. Ex.

—⁹. All changes and variations of state in organic substances, are such that having once been made habitual they become permanent. Ex.

319². (These mental substances and forms with the good and with the evil. See FORM, here.)

M. 31². (They are then spiritual or substantial men; and a spiritual or substantial man sees a spiritual or substantial man as a natural or material man sees a natural or material man; but not conversely, on account of the difference between the substantial and the material, which is like the difference between the prior and the posterior . . .

66. There exists neither good nor truth which is not in a substance . . .

—². Every idea of man, however sublimated, is substantial; that is, affixed to substances. Moreover no substance is possible except in a form: a substance not formed is not anything, because nothing can be predicated of it; and a subject without predicates is (inconceivable).

113³. In the Lord the Creator is Divine good and Divine truth in its substance itself; the esse of His substance is Divine good, and the existere (or manifestation) of His substance is Divine truth . . .

183⁴. In man's seed is his soul in a perfect human form covered over with substances from the purest things of nature, from which substances there is formed a body in the womb.

316⁴. (Thus) in each substance, even the least, there is the Conjugal; and this is evident from the compound substances which are made up of simple substances; as, two eyes, two ears, etc.

328. These differences come forth from the fact that you, being now in the Spiritual World, are now in substantial things, and not in material ones; and substantial things are the beginnings of material ones. You are in beginnings, and thus in singulars, whereas we (men) are in derivatives and composites. You are in particulars, but we are in generals; and generals cannot enter into particulars . . .

I. 8⁵. The soul, being a higher spiritual substance, receives influx immediately from God; but the mind, being a lower spiritual substance, receives influx from God mediately through the Spiritual World; and the body, being from the substances of nature, which are called matters, receives influx from God mediately through the natural world.

16⁴. The atmospheres of the Spiritual World derive from their origin that they are substantial; and those of the natural world . . . that they are material.

17². Such must terminate the ideas of their thought in the atoms of Epicurus, the monads of Leibnitz, or the simple substances of Wolff; and thus close up their understanding . . .

T. 20. That this one God is substance itself and form itself; and that Angels and men are substances and forms from Him . . . Gen.art.

— . As God is Esse, He is also substance; for unless esse is substance, it is a mere abstract entity—ens rationis; for substance is a substantial—substans—entity; and that which is a substance, is also a form; for unless a substance is a form it is a mere abstract entity. And therefore both can be predicated of God; but in this way: that He is the one only, the very, and the first substance and form. 37, Ex.

29². Yet Angels and Spirits are substantial men . . .

— . This would be possible if there were no substantial extense there . . .

33. The spiritual Sun is from the substance which has gone forth from Him, the essence of which is love. . . . In the progress of creation . . . one thing was formed from another. (Continued under DEGREE.)

—². God first finited His infinity by means of substances emitted from Himself, from which came forth—exstitit—His proximate compass, which constitutes the Sun . . . Then, through the Sun, He perfected all the other compasses, down to the ultimate one, which consists of things at rest . . .

38³. Thus the human mind has been organized—interiorly of spiritual substances; exteriorly, of natural substances; and, finally, of material things. A mind whose delights are good, is organized interiorly of spiritual substances such as are in Heaven; but a mind whose delights are evil, of spiritual substances such as are in Hell . . .

52². ORDER is the quality of the disposition, determination, and activity of the parts, substances, or entities which make the form . . . In this definition, mention is made of substance, form, and state; and by substance we at the same time mean form, because all substance is form; and the quality of form is its state, the perfection or imperfection of which results from order.

53. That God is Order is because He is substance itself and form itself: substance, because all things which subsist have existed and do exist from Him; form, because all the quality of substances has originated and does originate from Him. Ex.

75³. The (heat and light) which proceed from the Spiritual Sun, and thence all things which, through them, come forth there, are substantial, and are called spiritual; and (the heat and light) which proceed from the natural sun, and thence all things which come forth through them, are material, and are called natural.

76³. Spiritual atmospheres, which in themselves are substantial, were created one from another . . .

—⁴. Keep in mind that the love and wisdom which make a one in God, are not love and wisdom in an abstract sense, but are in Him as a substance; for God is the very, the one only, and the first substance and essence, which is and subsists in itself.

79⁷. (There) they are in a substantial body; and a substantial man sees himself and his companions . . . just as a material man sees himself and his companions; for the Substantial is the primitive of the Material . . . The nature of that World differs . . . as much as does the Substantial from the Material . . . or the Prior from the Posterior.

[T.] 90°. Like the Wolffian simple substance, in which . . . are all things of the Son's merit, (and which) cannot be divided . . .

470°. The finite things of which is (the spirit of man), are spiritual substances, which are in the Spiritual World, and are also brought—collatae—into our earth—terram, and stored up therein; and which, unless they were in it together with material things, not any seed could be impregnated from its inmosts, nor grow . . . nor could any worms be procreated from the effluviae from the earth—terra, and from the expiration of the exhalations from plants . . .

472°. The (natural) sun consists of created substances, the activity of which produces fire.

568°. You are now Spirits, in a substantial body . . .

771. He (then) lives a man in a substantial body . . .

798. The Angels instructed (Calvin) that he was now in a substantial body; and that previously he had been not only in the same, but also in a material one, which he had put on around the substantial one; and that the material body had been rejected, while the substantial one, from which man is man, still remained.

Ad. 643. (The soul) is the first and inmost substance out of which man is formed in the womb, and also after birth.

—4. There are four faculties . . . the soul, the intellectual mind, the lower mind, and the sensations . . . All these are real substances. 653, Ex.

654. From these (four) principal substances (of man) originate and are derived all things which are afterwards adjoined . . .

925. These things (regarding memory, etc.) do not fall into the understanding distinctly, unless it is known that there are higher and lower substances; for without substances no change of state is possible. The most simple substance of man is his soul itself, which is also the first and the highest one. From this is born the second substance, which is that in which these changes—the thoughts—are carried on. From this again is a third substance, in which come forth the changes of state which are called imagination. Here is the memory itself. To this next succeed the sensations; and the nature of the composite substances . . . called organs . . . in which the sensations come forth, may be evident to everyone, from anatomy . . . Such is their formation as to the substances themselves; for, unless there were real substances, which come forth actually, no thought would be possible; for thought is only a modification . . . 927, Ex.

2/1374. The substance itself, the essence of which is intermediate between natural and spiritual substance, is first of all (at death) loosed from its connections with terrestrial things, which are properly called the body, and is carried with him, because it includes that higher substance the essence of which is spiritual, and is called the intellectual mind . . . And this at the same time includes in itself the principal and purer substance of man, the essence of which is supercelestial, and is called, properly, the soul. 1378.

1377. Such is the appropriation of substances in each man, that they never agree with the substances of another. Ex.

D. 2329. Whence are the objects of thought (seeing that) Angels, Spirits, and men are only organic substances. Ex.

2366. See SUBJECT, here. 2367. D. Wis. v².

2392°. Therefore it is not to be doubted that (Spirits) are organic substances . . . (Such) do not know that spirits in the body, or Spirits separated from the body, are real substances, and, in man, such substances as have been conjoined with the material things of his body . . .

4293. Everything which is in the other life . . . is the Substantial itself, because it is the origin of all the substantial things in nature. There is a living Substantial there, or a purest Ethereal; and this is formed by the Lord into things so wonderful that they can scarcely be described.

4609. Ideas are not anything else than changes and variations in the interior substances of which is the internal man . . . When the Lord's life inflows into these substances, the ideas which are called thoughts are presented. . . The interiors of man are real substances, more real than his exteriors. 4610, Ex.

E. 775°. In the head are substances infinite in number, which appear like little spheres, and are called the cortical and the cineritious substance. From these proceed fibrils . . . from which is produced the medullary substance of the whole cerebrum, cerebellum, and medulla oblongata. From this medullary substance discernible fibres are protended . . .

837. As all men after death are the substances and forms of their love . . .

1084°. From the food, when it has been made chyle . . . the substances which are the origins of the fibres draw their spirit . . .

Ath. 74. It is said that there is one substance, or essence (in the Trinity), when yet there is a specific difference (in the old Church idea of the three Persons). Ex. 108. 168°. 169. 183.

J. (Post.) 263. Leibnitz speaks about the simple substance of Wolff.

D. Love xviii. Love is impossible except in a recipient form which is substantial.

xxi°. In order that these several faculties may come forth in effect and in use, they have been made and wonderfully organized from created substances and matters.

D. Wis. ii⁴. In the Spiritual World, however, there is the Substantial instead of the Natural.

vii. 2⁴. The spirit of man is not a substance separate from the viscera, organs, and members of the man . . . And therefore, when the connection between the body and spirit is loosed . . . there is only a separation of spiritual substance from material.

4. For the Substantial of the spirit has been adjoined to the Material of the body so fitly and unitedly, that there is not a fibril . . . where there is not the human of the spirit together with the human body.

viii.3. The substances in the Spiritual World appear as if they were material; but . . . as they are not, they are not constant. They are correspondences of the affections of the Angels; and they remain as long as the affections, or the Angels, remain, and disappear with them. It would have been the same with the Angels if they had been created there.

Can. God iv.8. Spiritual things are substantial, and natural things are material; and the latter have come forth, and subsist, from the former, as the posterior from the prior, or as the exterior from the interior.

Redeemer ix.3. The body of Christ, in so far as it was of the substance of the mother, was not life in itself . . .

Coro. 11. Man after death is not a material man, as before; but a substantial man. . . It is the mind, which is a substantial man, and is called the spirit, which undergoes Judgment.

Substantive. Substantious.

R. 10. Numbers are like certain adjectives to substantives . . .

Substitute. Substituere.

A. 947°. They can pervert the thoughts . . . and substitute other things.

1316. Thus he detracts from the Lord what is His, and substitutes himself. 1813°.

9186. 'To weigh' = to substitute in place of the former.

D. 2936. The deceitful send Subjects, (who) are substituted. Ex.

3057. So substitute others in their place (for punishment). 3416. 4277.

3449. When he was inculpated, he substituted the innocent. 3465. Ex.

J. (Post.) 82. The reason Mohammeds are continually substituted in place of the other . . .

3707. Whatever true or good was said by me . . . she substituted in place of it what is false or evil. (Thus) in place of Gehenna she substituted a bright white light, so that they might not know what I was saying.

3964. They want to substitute other persons.

D. 3449. He wants to substitute the innocent. (Continued under SUBSTITUTE, above.)

Subterranean. Sub terra.

J. 58°. They dwelt under the earth for fear of robbers. —5. Most (of the Papists of the dark ages) dwelt under the lands there, one stock under another. The whole anterior tract . . . was as it were excavated, and filled with monasteries . . .

R. 260. 'Neither under the earth' (Rev.v.3) = in the lower Heavens. . . The ultimate Heavens appear as it were under the lands . . . Each expanse is like a land under the feet of those who are there. . . And, as the lowest expanse is under the former, there are there those who are under the earth (or land). . . He who does not know (these facts), cannot know what is meant in the Word by 'under the earth,' and by 'the lower parts of the earth.' Ill.

Subtilization. Subtilizatio. Subtilized. Subtilisatus.

1644. Evil Spirits who are more subtle than Spirits. Ex.

4214°. Most people suppose that those are enlightened who . . . can speak more subtly and acutely about these things.

4227°. For Spirits act more subtly than men. Ex. . . These were so subtle that . . .

4630. As these Spirits were invisible, I supposed that they were as subtle, and yet evil . . . For those who are . . . subtle in their matters of business are such. Des.

6312. There are Hells which are in a more subtle sphere. Ex.

6484. He was one of the subtle evil Spirits, because he had indulged in thought more than in discourse. Des.

6929. Whereas the men of our Earth see these things which have been written as subtle and elevated.

W. 205°. As in a solid consisting of these three degrees, in the centre of which are the most subtle parts, around this the parts less subtle, and in the extremes . . . parts compounded of the former, and thus grosser.

310°. Seeds . . . are impregnated by the most subtle substances, which can have no other than a spiritual origin.

D. 1738. (The skin and its coats) imbibe the most subtle things of the world, and transmit them to the brain.

2075. On the more subtle Spirits. Gen.art.

2745. They pride themselves on being able to be subtle . . .

2828. A subtle proposition [put forth] by certain ones.

2896. On the more subtle thought. Ex.

— His ideas, which he supposed to be so very subtle that more subtle ones would be impossible—if he were to see one of them with a microscope, he would see it . . . larger than the whole Earth . . .

2942. That the interior Spirits have a subtle perception. Ex.

3088. On the more subtle evil Spirits in the line of the zenith, at various heights.

3110°. They are carried away by the cupidity of punishing anyone whatever in a subtle manner.

3123. On a subtle veil. Ex.

— They supposed that they were free because they were subtle, as if in what is purer. . . They were told that their Subtlest appears to them as if it were the Subtlest of all things, just as is the case with others. . . . They disappeared with a kind of subtle veil into what was more subtle . . . 3123a.

[D.] 3135. A vision concerning the more subtle magical things. Des.

3214. There exhaled thence so much subtle poison that it excited the more deceitful Sirens.

3311. The more subtle evil Spirits above the head inflowed into my thoughts . . .

3313. The most subtle . . . were those who had been sons of the Most Ancient Church . . . 3354.

3466. As these were more subtle, they were in front, above . . . They who inflow subtly, and insensibly, were those who suppose such adulteries . . . to be holy.

—e. They were greatly tortured; for they were thus let into more subtle ideas.

3485. (Dippel) acted very subtly. Des.

3512. Some (of the Dutch), when taken up into the sphere of the interior angelic Spirits, . . . the speech of their ideas was so subtle that I marvelled; nay, they were so subtilized that I scarcely perceived it . . . for through the subtlety they almost vanished from my perception . . .

3741^e. For the knee [denotes] that which is more subtle.

3842. The deceitful over head . . . sometimes inflowed so subtly that I did not know it was from them . . . To-day I observed how they inflow into the subtle thought of man . . .

3927². They who supposed themselves to be most subtle . . . were reduced into such grossness that they could only speak very grossly . . . The punishment succeeded from the highest grossness to a less one, and thus to a more subtle one . . . so that they can be punished in their fallacious subtlety also.

4189. That the evil who suppose themselves to be subtle, are grosser than all others. Ex.

—e. Thus the subtle things of which they are composed are evil. Whereas they who are not subtle may be evil without, but not so evil within.

4784. They were subtle Spirits placed in concealment. Des.

5856. On the destruction of the subtle Spirits from the Mohammedans, Babylonians, and Reformed.

D. Min. 4565. (Anthony of Padua) is a subtle Spirit. Des.

4571. Ignatius . . . was subtle; but (seemed) to have been good.

4749. On Genii and subtle Spirits. Gen.art.

Ath. 222. Who, from this subtlety . . . thinks that God is one?

De Verbo vi⁴. For the Natural is gross . . . and the Spiritual is subtle . . .

De Conj. 81. They inflowed into my affections with such subtlety . . .

Suburb. Suburbium.

Suburban. Suburbanus.

H. 197². (The suburbs of the New Temple and Land, in Ezek.)

D. 3500. (The Dutch) have suburban houses.

5270^e. Beneath that under-city-suburbio, there was no other city.

5273. The visitation then entered that great under-city-suburbium.

E. 629⁶. 'The suburbs' (Zech.ii.4)=the Church from those who will receive exteriorly the Divine proceeding from the Lord. . . The spiritual natural are meant by those who are 'in the suburbs.'

A. 63^e. Good Spirits (then) succeed (in place of evil ones).

1622². And this with succeeding varieties.

2162². Thus do things succeed one another in the Lord's Kingdom. Sig.

2500^e. The Lord introduced Himself successively . . . 2514². 2625⁴.

2625⁵. (In regeneration) celestial . . . and spiritual things are not implanted all together, but successively.

2632². It was these . . . which the Lord successively expelled from His rational . . . As this was not done at once—una vice, but successively . . . That He made His Rational Divine successively. Sig.

2649. The Human was made Divine successively. Tr. L. 32, III.

—². The Lord successively and continually . . . put off what was merely human . . .

3035^e. From successives is formed that which is simultaneous. (See SIMULTANEOUS at 5608².)

4379. Delay, and what is successive; and that otherwise they would not live. Sig. and Ex.

—e. The successive state and method of the insinuation of good into truths. Tr.

4381. A successive state of preparation. Sig.

5131. Thus there is what is successive of correspondences from the Divine down to the ultimate Natural.

5144. The successives of the voluntary things. Sig. and Ex. 5152.

6451². In man there are an inmost, interiors, and exteriors. All these . . . succeed in order . . . and according to the order in which they succeed, they also inflow. Ex. . . This order is called successive. (Continued under SIMULTANEOUS.)

6465. All things (both in man and in nature) come forth—existant—through successive formations. Ex.

6481. They have seen the evil . . . succeed in these things . . .

6824. These degrees (of the neighbour) are degrees in successive order . . .

7270². He who does not know how the case is with order in successives, cannot know how it is with influx. Ex. . . The Lord had (therefore) created successives, through which, as media, the Divine truth which proceeds immediately could be communicated. But the first [compass] from this successive was too full of the Divine . . . and therefore He created a further successive . . . and this successive is the truth Divine which is in Heaven. The first two are above the Heavens; and are as it were radiant belts which encompass the Sun . . . Such is the successive order down to the Heaven nearest the Lord . . . and thence [the compasses] are continued successively down to the Ultimate Heaven; and from that down to the Sensuous and Corporeal of man, which receives the influx last.

—³. (Thus) there are continual successions from the First down to the ultimates . . . And hence it is evident that through these successions there is a continuous connection of all things with the First Esse. Influx is according to these successions. For the Divine truth . . . inflows successively; and on the way, that is, near each new successive, it becomes more general, thus more gross and obscure . . .

—⁴. But it is to be well known that the truth Divine which inflows into the Third Heaven, also at the same time, without successive formation, inflows down into the ultimates of order . . . Hence the successives are held together in their order and connection.

7296². They who . . . from their success attribute all things to their Own prudence (there) learn magical things . . .

8397. 'They journeyed'=what is successive and continuous . . . (here) what is successive of life as to states of temptations. Ex. . . Thus 'journeyings' = changes and successions of states.

8455². It is believed that an evil person is in peace when he is glad and tranquil from the fact that all things succeed with him; but this is . . . the delight and tranquillity of cupidities . . . which is (there) turned into what is undelightful . . .

— In the other life, the exteriors are successively unrolled.

—³. The tranquillity, content, and gladness of mind from successes, are relatively nothing; for they affect only the externals . . . H.290.

8456². The exteriors with a regenerating man receive life . . . successively. . . The insinuation of life from the Lord with them is effected in successive order. Ex.

8603. 'Moses, Aaron, and Hur'=Divine truths in successive order. Ex.

—². As to truths in successive order. Each and all things in universal nature come forth from the interiors in order; they are derivations and successions; but the interiors do not cohere with the exteriors by continuity; but are distinct, and are conjoined by exertions as of fibres through which are the communications. The nature of the derivations and consequent successions, in general, may be presented to the idea by fruits. Ex. . . All these things (the skins, pulp, seeds, etc.), are in successive order; and are distinct from each other, and are also conjoined. Ex.

—⁴. In the animal kingdom (the derivatives in successive order) are much more perfect. The exteriors, interiors, and inmosts in it are also in successive order; and are distinct from each other, and are also conjoined; but they differ in this: that the forms in (this) kingdom have been created to receive life, and hence, as they are forms recipient of life in successive order, so also are the lives which thence result. Ex. . . Hence it may be evident what are Divine truths in successive order; for all things which are of life have relation to truth . . . The transits from one thing to another in successive order are called degrees.

8641. In Ex.xviii. it treats of truths in successive order, from the First to the ultimate. 8727. 8728, Ex.

9256². To destroy the falsities with such is to destroy the life itself; (therefore) the falsities must be extirpated successively . . .

9335². For goods and truths must remove (evils and falsities) by a successive implantation . . . If this is not done successively, and according to order, falsities which favour these evil loves will inflow. Sig.

9836². See SIMULTANEOUS, here. 9866.

9992. There are three things with man which follow in successive order: the Celestial, the Spiritual, and the Natural. Ex.

9994². The coming forth of Things in successive order, is circumstanced as end, cause, and effect. Ex.

10017. The work of Salvation in successive order. Sig. and Ex.

10099. (The Divine Spiritual) in the Natural successively. Sig. and Ex.

— For there are three things which succeed [one another] in Heaven: the Celestial, the Spiritual, and the Natural . . . They have been connected together by the influx, successively, of the one into the other.

—². It (therefore) treats here of the successive putting on of the garments of Aaron by his sons after him, by which is meant the Successive of the Thing in the Heavens.

— What what is successive is. Most of the learned have no other idea about successives than as of what is continuous . . . and because they have this idea about the succession of Things, they cannot conceive the nature of the difference between the exteriors and the interiors of man . . .

—³. But successives are not circumstanced continuously, but discretely; that is, distinctly according to degrees. Ex.

—⁴. For those who have an idea of successives as of what is continuous, cannot apprehend the Spiritual except as a purer Natural . . . Ex.

[A. 10099]⁵. Whereas they who have a just and distinct idea about successives, can in some measure comprehend that with the man who is being regenerated the interiors are successively opened; and that, as they are opened, they are also elevated into a more interior light and life . . .

10777. Unless his arts succeeded . . . the man could not be disposed to receive eternal life. Ex.

H. 163. All things with the Angels successively advance.

415. In process of time. P. 328.

486. Succeed one after another.

S. 38. In Heaven and the world there are successive order and simultaneous order. In successive order, one thing succeeds and follows after another, from the highest things down to the lowest . . . Successive order is like a column with steps from the top to the bottom . . . How successive order becomes, in the ultimate, simultaneous order. (Ex. under SIMULTANEOUS.) 65. W. 205.

W. 205. That in successive order the first degree constitutes what is highest, and the third what is lowest. (Fully quoted under ORDER.)

207^e. They are successive compositions. Ex.

255. The three degrees of the mind can be opened successively.

—². Hence beasts cannot think in successive order; but in simultaneous order, which is not thinking . . .

P. 12. The Simultaneous then makes what is successive. Ex.

175. When many such things succeed with those who do not believe in the Divine Providence . . . 250, Ex.

183³. If he saw the Divine Providence oppose itself to his successes . . .

237. When he sees that machinations succeed . . . 249⁴, Ex.

296². To convert a dragon into a lamb . . . can only be done successively. Ex.

R. 678². The interiors of the human mind with everyone are in successive order and in simultaneous order. They are in successive order from the higher or prior things to the lower or posterior things of it. They are in simultaneous order in the ultimate or last things; but in the latter they are from interiors to exteriors, as from the centre to the circumferences.

802³. The (Apostolic) succession is a thing invented by that love.

M. 313. That the states of the minds of both proceeding in successive order inflow into the state of marriage . . . Ex.

— . That the last state is such as is the successive order from which it is formed and comes forth, is a canon . . .

T. 214². There are also degrees of purity according to which both (successive and simultaneous) order exist.

586. That man cannot be regenerated except successively. Ex.

Ad. 130. Successive and simultaneous order. 633.

D. 2563. Then all things succeed with him . . .

3541. They had thus become persuaded that whatever they did would succeed . . .

3747. From the success of their affairs, they had contracted the persuasion that they should attribute [all things] to their own prudence.

E. 641⁴. The successive states of the Churches have been like the successive states of a man who is being reformed and regenerated. Ex.

668^e. Lest the successive progression of Things according to order should be disturbed . . .

Ath. 112. There are successives from the Lord through the Heavens to man, thus to ultimates. Successive order is not continuous, but discrete; namely, one thing from another, as in every Thing in the world. The more exterior things in successive order contain in themselves the successives in an order of their own, which order is called simultaneous. In this order, all the successives are together . . . the first things in which have been created more interiorly; and so on, down to the ultimate circumference. And, as, in the simultaneous things, the successive ones are together, therefore there is all strength in them.

—². When the Lord acted from primes through ultimates, He acted through all things, thus through the successives which were in order in the ultimates as in their primes.

Succedaneous. Succedaneus.

M. 190. The changes of both these states (before marriage), and the consequent formations of minds, proceed in succedaneous order according to their continual increments.

Succoth. Succoth.

A. 4389. 'Jacob journeyed to Succoth' (Gen. xxxiii. 17)=the state of the life of good from truth then. . . 'Succoth'=the quality of this state.

4391. Booths or tents=the Holy of truth, whereas tabernacles or tents=the Holy of good. The former are called 'Succoth.' That this is the signification of 'Succoth.' III.

4392. 'Therefore he called the name of the place Succoth' (id.)=the quality of this state . . . namely, the quality of the state of the Holy in truth from good then. For 'Succoth' means 'tents,' and 'tents'=the Holy of truth. III.

7972. 'The sons of Israel journeyed from Rameses to Succoth' (Ex. xii. 37)=the first state of the departure and its quality.

8103. 'They journeyed from Succoth' (Ex. xii. 20)=the second state after they had been delivered.

Succumb. See YIELD.

Such. Talis.

A. 4227. They who have been such (here), are such in the other life.

899¹². Such he remains. N.62^e.

1015³². Everyone is such as is his good.

H. 350². Man is such as is his will and understanding. 358.

480. After 2000 years, they were found to be altogether such as they had been described.

501. Man is altogether such as he is as to his interiors.

Suction. Suctio.

A. 2015³. 'To suck the milk of the gentiles, and the breasts of kings' (Is.lx.16)=to be endowed with goods and instructed in truths. (=the insinuation of celestial good and celestial truth. 6745³.) E.175³.

5180. A species of suction or drawing induced on the head by Spirits. Des. D.112S. 1129.

5608⁷. 'The infants, and those that suck the breasts' (Joel ii.16)=the innocent.

5620^e. 'To suck honey out of the rock' (Deut.xxxii.13)=the delight from memory-scientificis-truths. E.314⁷. 374¹⁰. 411⁷.

6745³. 'To suck the affluence of the sea' (Deut.xxxiii.19)=that they will then imbibe memory truth in abundance, or that it will be insinuated. 'To suck,' here, is the same word as 'to be suckled' in the following places. Ill. 6762. E.445⁵.

9780⁸. 'To suck oil out of the flint of rock' (Deut.xxxii.13)=to be imbued with good through the truths of faith.

M. 133. An infant knows only how to suck, (which) it has imbibed from the continual suction in the womb. T. 335⁷.

T. 335³. Eesugam, occurs.

D. 1781. Said they would suck out the marrows.

2743. They suck out such things from (those) with whom they are.

2974. He wanted to suck out my blood.

E. 365³⁹. 'To suck' (Is.lxvi.11)=influx from the Lord.

410⁹. 'The suckling-sugens,' or 'suckling-lactens-infant' (Is.xi.8)=the good of innocence. 581⁵.

Suck in. Insorbere.

T. 448². The good were sucking in the delights of the evil.

470². Man sucks in by the lungs and by the pores . . .

Suckling. Lactens.

Suckles, One who. Lactatrix.

A. 1736³. 'To lead the sucklings,' is predicated of His love or mercy.

3183. 'Those that suck-lactentes,' and 'those that give suck-lactantes,' are sometimes mentioned in the Word, and by the former is signified the first state of infants, which is a state of innocence . . .

—². 'She that gives suck' also=innocence; for of the giver and the receiver . . . a like state is perceived.

It is here said that they sent 'the nurse' or her who gave suck, to the intent that the affection of truth might be described: that it was from innocence.

—³. That 'a suckling,' in the Word, =innocence. Ill.

4378. 'The flocks and the herds are suckling with me' (Gen.xxxiii.13)=goods both interior and natural which as yet have not acquired Divine life. . . 'Sucklings'=recent goods; here, spiritual ones nascent in the Natural. Ex.

5236². 'A suckling, an infant, and a child'=the three degrees of innocence . . . and also the three degrees of love and charity. . . But the innocence of sucklings, etc. is only external; and man has no internal innocence until he has as it were been anew made a suckling, etc. 9390. 10132². E.314³.

—⁴. 'Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings Thou hast perfected praise' (Matt.xxi.16; Ps.viii.2)=that only by the way of innocence can praise come to the Lord. Ex. 5608⁸.

6745. 'Suckle him for me' (Ex.ii.9)=that she should insinuate into him good suitable to the religiosity. 'To suckle'=to insinuate good. . . For a nurse, or one who suckles, =the insinuation of good. Ill.

10132⁷. Love is spiritual conjunction, and therefore it is added, 'He shall gently lead the sucklings' (Is.xl.11); for 'sucklings,' and 'infants'=those in the good of innocence. E.314².

T. 335⁷. That they can be sucklings, is from the continual suction in the womb.

E. 175⁴. 'Princesses shall be thy sucklers' (Is.xlix.23)=(the goods through which man is regenerated and nourished).

3761⁵. 'The infant and suckling faint in the streets of the city' (Lam.ii.11). . . 'The infant and suckling' =those in the good of innocence; abstractedly, the good of innocence itself. 652²⁵.

—⁸. 'Blessed are the breasts which have not given suck' (Luke xxiii.29)=those who have not received genuine truths from the good of charity.

—⁹. 'Blessed are the breasts which Thou hast sucked' (Luke xi.27). Since 'to suck the breasts'=the regeneration of man, the Lord answered, 'Blessed are they that hear the Word of God, and keep it.' Ex.

863⁷. 'The suckling, with the old man' (Deut.xxxii.25)=innocence and wisdom.

Suddenly. Subito.

A. 9334². (Thus) the evils and falsities with an evil man cannot be removed suddenly . . .

9336². (Thus) the life of Hell with a man cannot be destroyed suddenly; for, if it were destroyed suddenly, he would completely expire; and neither can the life of Heaven be implanted suddenly; for, if it were implanted suddenly, he would in like manner expire. Sig.

Suffer. Under PAY.

Suffer. Pati.

A. 952. He said that . . . he wanted to suffer . . .

1106^o. Some suffer things quite hard there; some, things not hard. These are what are called vastations.

1937². (Such) suffer themselves to be led equally by the evil and the good; and they suffer much from the evil.

2679^o. Suffers himself to be led by the Lord. 3573³.

2973⁴. When man suffers the Lord to dispose . . . But, when man does not suffer the Lord to dispose . . .

3603^e. If he is such that he does not suffer himself to be regenerated . . .

3646^e. He who suffers spiritual light to inflow . . .

4122. In proportion as man suffers himself to be led (by Him).

4586. 'Rachel . . . suffered hard things' (Gen. xxxv. 16) = the temptations of interior truth.

5126^e. With those who suffer themselves to be regenerated . . . 5280³. 6550, Sig. 6611.

5132². But this is grief on account of what they themselves suffer, (and is not the mercy of charity).

5555. They had (here) suffered themselves to be much seduced by the deceitful. . . The like happens to them there. These constitute the exterior skin.

6208^e. (Such) suffer themselves to be led away into all kinds of evils . . .

7032². They who are such because they do not suffer themselves to be led by the Lord . . .

7250^e. When they have suffered the extreme things (of vastation) . . . they are finally saved. 7251.

10729². (Thus) in proportion as man suffers himself to be led through good to truths, he is led by the Lord . . .

R. 98. 'Fear nothing of the things which thou shalt suffer' (Rev. ii. 10) = despair ye not when ye are infested by evils, and assaulted by falsities; because with those who are in goods as to life, and in falsities as to doctrine it cannot be otherwise. E. 121.

D. 5759a. They who had perceived delight in the fact that others were suffering, were cast out.

Suffer. Sinere.

A. 10430. 'Suffer Me' (Ex. xxxii. 10) = that it ought not to be so obstinately insisted upon. Ex.

Suffering. Supplicium.

D. 2583. Man is condemned to eternal suffering; for he has merited it; but, of the Lord's mercy, condemnation is at last taken away, but through vastations and sufferings, according to their actual sins . . .

3747. It is suffering sufficiently severe to dwell with dragons.

D. Min. 4793^e. He still persists, and therefore grievous suffering for him is imminent.

Sufficiency. Sufficientia.

A. 5663^e. It could no longer suffice that the Divine Itself should inflow through Heaven . . . H. 101².

L. 41. These few [quotations] may suffice. E. 326^e.

M. 250^e. According to (their capacity of being wise) a sufficiency of wealth is given them.

293⁴. On the sufficiency, etc. of this current of love, conjugal love depends.

433². This spiritual sufficiency, even in the Natural, will not be wanting at this day to those who approach the Lord, and abominate adulteries as infernal.

De Verbo 6. They insisted that natural theology suffices.

Suffocation. Suffocatio.

Suffocative. Suffocativus.

A. 560. When (the antediluvians) became such, they were, as of themselves, as it were suffocated; for man cannot live without remains. 563, Ex.

562. (Their persuasion) is deadly and suffocative.

662. No Flood is meant here . . . but the expiring or suffocation of those who were there, when they were separated from remains . . . and consequently from the Heavens.

1035. That such a deadly and suffocative persuasion should no longer exist. Sig. and Ex.

1120. When at last there was no internal respiration of the breast, they were suffocated of themselves.

1270². They tried to kill me by their suffocative afflatus. 1879.

1271. I perceived that their Persuasive was suffocative.

1940³. This Rational either suffocates, rejects, or perverts them.

2041². They either reject, or suffocate it.

2057³. The love of self extinguishes, and suffocates the delights of others.

2284². These are what either extinguish, or suffocate, or pervert the influent truths and goods. 3743^e.

3891². It was foretold me, before I went to sleep, that there were many who were conspiring against me, with an intention to kill me by suffocation; but I paid no attention to their threats, because I was safe in the Lord. Ex.

3894. Hence the evil . . . when they come near the good (there), seem to themselves unable to breathe, but as it were to be suffocated. Ex. 4330³. D. 3326.

3895. The Persuasive of evil and falsity, and also the Persuasive of truth, when the man is in a life of evil, is such (there) that it as it were suffocates others . . .

4104³. With such a one, Truths and their affections . . . are either suffocated, rejected, or perverted.

4214³. What was the light of Heaven with them, is either suffocated, as when the light of the sun falls upon something opaque . . .

4317^e. Is either reflected, perverted, or suffocated, 4612⁴. 5032³. 7491. 10232^e.

4320. Objects which suffocate the light, and pervert it . . .

5623°. They either reject, suffocate, or pervert truths, as soon as they come to their ear, or into their thought.

6564. This influx, with the evil . . . is resisted and rejected, or is perverted, or suffocated . . . H. 297°.

8939°. For worldly and earthly things suffocate it . . .

9144. The loves of self and of the world . . . at last suffocate and extinguish all truth, and, with truth, good.

9281°. When these approach an angelic Society, where there is respiration from the interior, they begin to be suffocated . . .

H. 360°. Unless the affection . . . flows out into acts, which is done in the society of a number, it is suffocated . . .

398. These (external things) so extinguish and suffocate interior delights . . .

W. 262. After the confirmations, he either perverts, or suffocates, or reflects the goods and truths of Heaven and the Church . . .

407°. It is the like with a man who is being suffocated, whether by water, or by anything which stops up the larynx . . . the man appears to be dead . . . and yet is still alive at the heart. D. Wis. vii. 4°.

P. 254°. He cannot bear a higher joy, for he would be suffocated in it.

278a°. 'The thorns sprang up, and choked them. . . These are they who hear the Word, but the cares of this age, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the Word.'

T. 72°. Some (of the simple) stood as it were suffocated (by what they heard).

D. 458. A conspiracy made to suffocate me. What it seemed to signify. Ex. 3364.

3583. They did not want to admit of its being said that they want to kill, but to strangle, and thus to suffocate; for their Persuasive is such that it suffocates. Hence some want some such thing as this to have been meant by the Flood; namely, that they were suffocated one after another . . .

3585. Suddenly, I seemed to myself to be as it were suffocated . . . (Thus) their Persuasive could strangle or suffocate others . . .

4455. (The Nephilim of this time) entered into everything, not of my thought, but of my intentions, and extinguished, suffocated, and perverted it . . .

4744. A sphere as of a smoke of dust breathed forth from him . . . involving something of suffocation.

4751°. A pool which no one can pass over without being suffocated.

4790. The sensation about the spiritual life had been suffocated by the world.

5912. (Luther) suffocated the understanding of those who were at the same time in externals.

E. 549. 'A scorpion' = a Persuasive infatuating and suffocating. . . This Persuasive is said to be suffocating because it deprives the understanding of the faculty of thinking freely, and of extending its sight in every direction . . . and, when this is the case, the respiration labours. Ex.

D. Wis. vii. 3. For the Persuasive possessed by some evil Spirits . . . at the same time suffocates; and therefore it is called suffocative in reference to the body . . .

Suffuse. Suffundere.

A. 8544. They were suffused with shame. T. 16°. 79°.

Sugar. Saccharum.

T. 455°. Their friendship is like a spider in sugar.

D. 3898. Glass cups full of wine with sugar, seen.

Suggest. Suggerere.

A. 1937°. Infused and suggested by evil Spirits.

2045. Hence the Rational suggests falsities which confirm.

T. 381°. Therefore he does not love to see anything but what his senses suggest.

Suicide. Sui nex.

See A. 8950. D. 253. 1043. 1336.

D. 1783. [Such were those Spirits] who formerly killed whole armies . . . by suddenly rushing into the chambers of the brain, and inspiring such terror that they slew one another. . . It is very rare at the present day that the bonds are loosened to any of them: only when anyone is such that it is better that he should be permitted to perish as to the body than as to the soul; and who, unless he perished as to the body in such a manner by insanities and suicide, could not but perish to eternity. (See A. 5717.)

Suitable. Habilis.

Aptitude. Habilitas.

See under ADAPT—aptare, and MEET—convenire.

M. 204. A greater aptitude and facility of conjoining good with truth and truth with good . . . is inherited by those born from such a marriage.

T. 410. A king . . . from three or four persons would select one suitable for a function . . .

D. 2252. Quicker to understand and perceive.

4347. Aptitude to this or that.

—, Whether he is apt . . .

4350. As he is so quick at receiving heavenly loves . . .

Coro. 35. From these are derived inclinations, aptitudes, and even pronenesses to evils.

Suitable. Idoneus.

A. 10329. 'To call by name' = to select such as are suitable. —°, Ex.

R. 153¹⁰. He knows for what work each person is suitable.

Suitor. Procus.

M. 296. Yet women have the right of choosing one of their suitors. —°

[M.] 298. The parents acquire Knowledges about the suitor.

299. If a daughter were to consent of herself to her urgent suitor . . .

— She is unqualified to ferret out such things as belong to the habits and peculiarities of her suitor.

T. 7^e. Like a virgin who accepts rings from a number of suitors . . .

E. 1009^e. Virgins who do not regard scortations as wicked, but abstain from them because the resulting bad name would turn away suitors.

Sulphur. Sulphur.

Sulphureous. Sulphureus.

Sulphurated. Sulphuratus.

A. 643. Gopher wood is a wood abounding in sulphur like the fir, and many others of its kind. It is from its sulphur that it is predicated of it that it signifies concupiscences, because it easily catches fire.

—³. 'Fire,' 'sulphur,' and 'woods' (Is.xxx.33)=filthy cupidities.

1297. 'Sulphur,' 'bitumen,' etc. in the Word, are predicated of cupidities, especially of those which are of the love of self.

1299. Bitumen, being sulphureous and fiery . . .

—^e. 'Pitch' [and 'sulphur' (Is.xxxiv.9)]=the falsities and evils of cupidities. 6724.

1666⁴. 'The whole land sulphur and salt, a burning' (Deut.xxix.23)=goods and truths vastated; 'sulphur'=the vastation of good. 2455².

1688. 'Bitumen'=cupidities, from the foul sulphureous stench in such water.

2444. ('Sulphur rained on Sodom') (Gen.xix.24)=the Hell of those who are in the evils of the love of self. . . 'Sulphur'=the Hell of the evils of the love of self. 2446,III.

4416. There succeeded a yellow lumen as from sulphur. Des. 4418.

6724. Because bitumen and pitch are sulphureous and black, they=evil and falsity.

7324¹. 'Fire and sulphur' (Rev.xix.20; xx.10; xxi.8)=the love of self and the derivative cupidities . . .

9141³. 'A river of sulphur' (Is.xxx.33)=falsities from the evils of the love of self and of the world.

9348⁹. 'Fire and sulphur' (Ps.xi.6)=the evils of the love of self and of the world.

H. 553^e. In some cases the lumen (of the infernals) is like that from burning sulphur.

R. 450. 'Having breastplates fiery, hyacinthine, and sulphureous' (Rev.ix.17)=their argumentations imaginary and visionary from infernal love and Own intelligence, and from the derivative concupiscences. . . By 'sulphur' is signified the concupiscence from that love through Own intelligence. 452²,III. E. 576.

452. 'Out of their mouth issued fire, and smoke, and sulphur' (id.)=that in their thoughts and discourse, regarded interiorly, there is nothing else, and from them proceeds nothing else, than the love of self and of the world, which is the proprium of the will; the conceit of Own intelligence, which is the proprium of the understanding; and the concupiscences of evil and falsity, which is the general proprium flowing forth from the two former. See E.578.

636. 'And shall be tormented with fire and sulphur . . .' (Rev.xiv.10)=the love of self and of the world, and the derivative cupidities . . . and the torment in Hell from them. See E.888.

835. 'The lake of fire burning with sulphur' (Rev.xix.20)=the Hell where are the loves of falsity, and at the same time the cupidities of evil. . . 'Sulphur'=the cupidity of evil and of the derivative falsity. 864. 893.

—². The Hell where such as appears at a distance like a fiery lake with a green flame as of sulphur. But they who are in it do not see this.

839². Like bottles filled with iron filings mixed with powdered sulphur, into which if water be poured there arises a heat . . . T.113. 116^e.

M. 80. (Hells in the west which appeared like lakes of fire and sulphur). . . There appears as it were sulphur, from the love of what is false.

231². A fireplace into which the servants threw sulphurated and bituminous torches . . .

T. 110. The ground was a mixture of sulphur, iron-filings, and clay. —⁸.

—^e. The statues, being composed of a mixture of sulphur, iron-filings, and clay, began to bubble, as is the case with a mixture of these ingredients when water is poured upon it.

339². Like the light over sulphurated glebes in the night.

385³. Like what takes place in swampy and sulphureous places in midwinter, after sunset: such a light, fatuous and cold, is often seen by travellers.

514. Like sulphureous stones thrown into the depths of the sea.

D. 3410^e. These are nocturnal lights, nay, waxen lights, rather, because there is in them more of sulphur . . .

4452. They are then encompassed with sulphur and the derivative fire . . .

4453. There was as it were the smoke of a furnace mixed with sulphureous fire.

4682. Hells where there appears fire, as it were from what is sulphureous. 5006.

5204. Lakes of sulphur. Ex. 5207.

5467. The women were cast into a place burning with sulphur and fire . . . De Conj.93.

5469. Then all these women . . . were cast into the sulphureous lake . . .

D. Min. 4800. There appears in the other life a rain of fire and sulphur, attended with a sense of combustion; and then the land where they are yawns asunder and becomes like a lake . . .

E. 576. 'Of sulphur,' or 'sulphureous' = the concupiscence of destroying the goods and truths of the Church through the falsities of evil; here, = falsity barning from the loves of self and of the world. 578, Ill. 579.

578². As the falsities of evil from the love of self had destroyed them, it rained sulphur and fire (on Sodom); sulphur, from the concupiscence of destroying the Church through the falsities of evil . . . Such a rain appears in the Spiritual World also when the evil who are in falsities from that love are being cast down into Hell. 653¹¹.

—⁸. By 'sulphur' is meant such falsity of evil as destroys everything of the Church with man, which is the falsity from the evil of the love of self . . .

644²⁶. The evils of falsity and the falsities of evil are signified by 'fire and sulphur' (Ezek. xxxviii. 22).

653¹¹. By 'sulphur' (Deut. xix. 22) is signified the vastation of all good through the concupiscences from evils. —¹³.

SSS. 'Sulphur' = the love of falsity from evil, properly, the concupiscence of destroying the truths of good of the Church by means of the falsities of evil.

960⁶. 'Snares, fire, and sulphur' (Ps. xi. 6) = falsities and evils seducing.

Sum. Summa.

A. 2114. In this verse is a summary of all things . . .

S. 97^e. This summary has been collated with the Word in Heaven . . .

Life 54. As these laws (of the decalogue) were, in a brief summary, the complex of all things of religion . . .

W. 66^e. From this summary it may be seen . . .

R. 707³. Shall be told in a brief summary . . .

T. 1. The Faith (of the New Church) is here prefixed that it may be as . . . a summary, in which all the things which follow are contained . . .

343. It is necessary first to set forth the summaries (of faith) . . . 345.

D. 6044. The summary of all things of faith at this day is . . .

E. 944^e. This is a summary.

Summer. Aestas.

Summer, Of. Aestivus.

A. 935. 'And summer and winter' (Gen. viii. 22) = the state of the regenerate man as to his new voluntary things, the alternations of which are circumstanced as are summer and winter. Ex.

—². As there is nothing but evil in the regenerate man, he cannot but undergo alternations, and now be as it were in summer—that is, in charity—and now in winter—that is, in no charity. There are such alternations in order that the man may be perfected more and more . . . (It is the same) in the other life; for without alternations as of summer and winter as to voluntary things, and as of day and night as to intellectual ones, he cannot be perfected, and rendered more happy; but these alternations in the other life are as those of summer and winter in the temperate zones . . . Ill.

4180³. This comes to pass in the time of spring and summer. Des. . . If man is like spring, or summer . . .

9213. These are the states to which correspond the seasons of spring and summer upon earth.

10834. (In the Sixth Earth) they have perpetual spring and summer . . . because the year is so short . . .

H. 166². Summer and noon are turned (with the Angels) into the idea of love and wisdom such as they are in their second state.

W. 73^e. (By summer is meant the fulness of the Church.)

102. When the heat and light do not make a one in the Heavens, there is either as it were summer—aestivum, or winter . . . such as that in the tropics.

E. 1146³. By 'house of winter, and house of summer' (Amos iii. 15) are signified those things of the natural man which are called sensuous.

Summit. Culmen.

See HEIGHT—fastigium, and PEAK.

M. 77². The summit (of the mountain where dwelt those of the Copper Age) was not a summit, but a plain . . .

Summon. Arcessere.

A. 5851. Man summons to himself Spirits from Hell according to his life.

9325⁸. The gentiles who are summoned to the Church. Sig.

H. 295. Good Spirits are adjoined to man by the Lord; but evil ones are summoned by the man himself.

D. 4753. When the evil do this . . . they summon infernal Societies; and, the more of them they summon the more they infest those who are protected by the Lord.

4797². Certain Spirits were summoned above the head . . .

5093^e. Other Spirits were summoned in their place.

Summum Bonum.

A. 5365⁴. Therefore it is disputed among the learned what is the summum bonum.

8378^e. Hence the insanity of supposing that . . . what is called the summum bonum consists in luxury and pleasure.

Sumptuous. Under MAGNIFICENCE.

Sun. *Sol.Solar. Solaris.

See under RISE.

A. 32. 'The sun' (Matt.xxiv.29)=love, which would be 'darkened.' 1808^e. (=that the Celestial which is of love and charity would be darkened. 1839².) (=no charity. 1846^e.) 1984³. ('The sun,' here, =love to the Lord and charity towards the neighbour. 2120.) 2495. 4060. ('The sun and moon,' here=love and charity, or good and truth . . . which will then perish. 4697⁴.) (By 'the sun which will be darkened' the Angels do not apperceive the sun, but love to the Lord; and by 'the moon' they do not apperceive the moon, but faith in the Lord. 10604⁴.) T.198. ('The sun'=the Lord as to love; and 'the moon' the Lord as to faith. H.1².) S.14². 112². ('The sun shall be darkened'=love and charity no longer; 'the moon shall not give her light'=intelligence and faith no longer. R.27.) (By 'the sun,' in this and many other passages here quoted, is meant love; by 'the moon,' faith; by 'the stars,' the Knowledges of good and truth; and by 'the powers of the heavens,' these three as the stabiliments and supports of the Heavens and of the Church; and therefore by these things collected together into one sense is meant that no love, nor faith, nor Knowledges of good and truth will survive in the Christian Church in the last time, when its end is at hand. B.78.)

—². That it is the Lord from whom is all love, was also represented by the great luminary, or sun, when He was transfigured; for 'His face did shine as the sun.' . . Thus His Divine, or Love, is signified by 'the sun.'

253. 'The sun' (Rev.xii.1)=love. (=celestial love. 3272².) (=the good of love. 4918³.) (=love and wisdom from the Lord. R.53³.)

255^e. 'The sun' (Ps.lxxxix.36)=love.

337². The sun' (Ps.lxxii.5)=love.

655. 'The suns,' or windows (Is.liv.12)=intellectual things from charity.

1042². From the Lord, as from the Sun of wisdom and intelligence.

1043⁴. His Voluntary is then like a little sun, from which the rays extend into his Intellectual.

1053^e. In the Heaven of the celestial Angels the Lord Himself is the Sun . . .

1066². 'The sun and moon blackened' (Joel ii.10), that is, love and faith. (=the good of love and its truth. 3355³.)

1326³. The internal of such worship is described by . . . 'the sun,' which is holy love, being 'darkened' (Is.xiii.10). 1808³. 2242⁴. (=that love to the Lord cannot come forth with man. 8902³.)

1521². The light in Heaven is from the Lord, who is the Sun to them.

1529. The Lord appears in the Third Heaven . . . as a Sun . . .

1530^e. As the Lord's Celestial and Spiritual appear before the external sight of the Angels as a Sun and Moon, 'the sun,' in the Word, =what is celestial; and 'the moon,' what is spiritual.

1531. But it has not been given me to see the Sun.

1625. There was perceived the semblance of a Sun which was itself unseen.

1807. When (such a one) sees the sun, he does not think of the sun, but of the Lord, as being the Sun of Heaven.

1837. 'The sun was setting' (Gen.xv.12)=the time and state before consummation; for 'the sun'=the Lord, and thence the celestial things which are of love and charity, consequently love and charity itself; (thus) 'the setting of the sun'=the last time of the Church . . . 1859.

— The first period of the Church is compared to the rising of the sun . . .

1838. In the other life the Lord is always the Sun . . . but before the evil He appears as darkness . . .

1861³. 'The sun shall be turned into darkness' (Joel ii.31). ('The sun'=charity.)

—¹⁵. The Lord appears to the celestial Angels as a Sun . . . 1997^e. 2034^e. 2069^e. 2669². 2708. 2776³. 3235². 3693³. 3969¹⁶. 4493³, Ex. 6240, Ex.

2231⁴. The Lord's Celestial manifests itself before the Angels by a flaming beam as of the sun . . .

2441. 'The sun was gone forth upon the earth' (Gen. xix.23)=the last time which is called the Last Judgment . . . (for) the rising of the sun, or its going forth upon the earth, =the Lord's presence itself, because both 'the sun' and 'the east'=the Lord. . . For, in the other life, the Lord is a Sun to the universal Heaven; for it is the Divine Celestial of His love which so appears before their eyes . . .

—³. Hence it is that the rising of the sun, by which is signified the presence of the Lord, involves both the Salvation of the good, and the damnation of the evil.

—⁴. Therefore it is said in the Word that the sun has been blackened to them, by which is signified that they have rejected everything of love and charity, and have received everything which is contrary. III.

—⁷. The Ancient Church understood nothing else by 'the sun' than the Lord, and the Divine Celestial of His love, and therefore they had the rite of praying toward the rising of the sun, not even thinking of the sun at the time. But, after their posterity had lost this . . . they began to worship the sun itself, and the moon; which worship spread to many nations, inasmuch that they dedicated temples to them, and set up pillars; and, as the sun and moon then took on an opposite meaning, they =the love of self and of the world, which are exactly contrary to celestial and spiritual love. III.

2495⁴. 'The sun shall be ashamed' (Is.xxiv.23)=that charity shall be ashamed.

2706². Like the sun, which is present with its heat and light in vegetation according to the reception.

2762⁴. When (the Greeks) described the sun, by which was signified love, they placed in it the god of their wisdom and intelligence, and attributed to him a chariot and four horses of fire. (For they knew that the sun =celestial love. 4966².)

2973². In the Lord's Kingdom in the Heavens the Lord as a Sun is in the midst . . .

3195³. 'The sun no more thy light by day' (Is.lx.19) =not the things which are of natural light, but the things which are of spiritual light.

—⁹. 'His face as the sun'=the Divine good.

—^e. 'The sun'=Divine love; so that it is the Lord's Divine love which appears as a Sun in the Heaven of Angels. Refs.

3425⁴. The Lord appears as a Sun to the Angels . . . but to the infernals as something quite opaque . . .

3540². 'The sun'=the good of love, or of the life which is thence.

3636. It is a most universal principle that the Lord is the Sun of Heaven, and that all the light in the other life is thence derived . . . From the Sun of Heaven, that is, from the Lord, there is not only light, but also heat . . . 3638.

3641. They who are in Heaven have their heads towards the Lord, who is the Sun there, and thus the common Centre, from whom is all position and situation . . . whereas the infernals have their heads downwards . . .

3693. 'For the sun was set' (Gen.xxviii.11) = in obscurity.

—². 'The setting of the sun,' in the Word, =the falsity and evil in which they are who have no charity and faith; thus it=the last time of the Church; and it also=an obscurity as to those things which are of good and truth . . . Ill.

—⁴. 'The Sun going down upon the prophets' (Micah iii.6)=that they no longer have any truth and understanding of truth.

—⁵. 'To cause the sun to go down at noon' (Amos viii.9)=obscurity as to truth with those who are in the Knowledges of good and truth. (=that the good of celestial love would recede. 6693⁵.)

—³. 'Thy sun shall no more go down' (Is.lx.20)=that they should be in the life of good and in wisdom, because in the celestial love and light of the Lord.

—⁴. 'The sun knoweth his going down' (Ps.civ.19). 'The sun'=wisdom from the Lord.

4060². 'The sun'=the Celestial of love . . . that is, 'the sun'=love to the Lord . . . The reason of this signification of 'the sun,' is that in the other life the Lord appears as a Sun to those in Heaven who are in love to Him, who are called the celestial . . .

—⁴. The Sun in the Heavens, that is, the Lord, is never darkened, but shines perpetually; and thus neither is love to the Lord darkened with the celestial . . . And so the sun of this world shines continuously . . .

4300. 'The sun rose upon him' (Gen.xxxii.31)=conjunction of goods. Ex.

4321². The Lord as a Sun appears constantly to the right, at a middle altitude there, a little above the plane of the right eye; and all things there have relation to the Lord as a Sun and Centre . . .

4527. They were taken up into the first of Heaven . . . and said that they had never seen such a light; and yet this occurred long after the sun had set.

4552². In the regenerate man . . . good . . . is like a little sun (in the inmost of his Natural).

4677³. When the Lord was transfigured . . . the Divine good appeared as 'the sun.'

4696. 'Behold the sun and the moon' (Gen.xxxvii.9) =natural good and natural truth. (For) 'the sun'=celestial good . . . 'The sun,' in the supreme sense, =the Lord, because He appears as a Sun to those in Heaven who are in celestial love . . . Therefore the light from the Sun there is the Celestial of love, or good . . . Here, therefore, 'the sun'=natural good . . . because it is predicated of Jacob. Ex.

4697. 'Who giveth the sun for a light by day' (Jer.xxxi.35) =the good of love and of charity. Ill.

4779⁷. 'The sun became black as sackcloth of hair' (Rev.vi.12). . . 'The sun'=the good of love.

4901². For the Sun there, which is the Lord, is always rising and never setting; and hence it is that no notion of time enters their thoughts . . .

5079^e. For each and all things there, come forth and subsist from the Sun which is the Lord, whence they have in them what is alive; whereas each and all things which are in the natural world come forth and subsist from a sun which is elementary fire; and hence have in them what is not alive.

5084². It is a fallacy of sense . . . that the sun revolves once each day around this Earth . . . and although it is said that it is . . . impossible that so great an ocean of fire as the sun is . . . should revolve around the Earth . . . still with very many the fallacy of sense prevails.

5092. The obscurity of night (here) comes forth from the absence of the sun of the world . . . but the obscurity of night (there) from the absence of the Sun of Heaven, which is the Lord . . . This privation does not arise from the Sun of Heaven setting . . . but from the man or Spirit being in falsity from evil, and removing himself.

5097². 'Morning'=the Lord Himself, because the Lord is the Sun from which is all the light in Heaven, and He is always in His rising, thus in the morning. He is also always rising with everyone who receives the truth which is of faith, and the good which is of love; but He sets with everyone who does not receive. Not that the Sun there sets ; for He is always in the rising ; but that he who does not receive, causes Him as it were to set with himself. This may be compared in some degree to the changes of the sun of the world in respect to the inhabitants of the Earth ; for neither does this sun set, since it always remains in its place, and is always shining thence, but it appears as if it set . . . and so the setting is not in the sun . . . This comparison . . . instructs us that the privation of the light of Heaven, that is, of intelligence and wisdom, is not because the Lord, who is the Sun of intelligence and wisdom, sets with anyone ; but because the inhabitant of His Kingdom removes himself, that is, suffers himself to be led by Hell by which he is removed. 6110⁴.

5482². Like the influx of the sun into the subjects of the Earth . . . in the time of spring and summer.

5585². 'The sun'=the Divine love. Refs.

5704². That the Lord is nothing but Divine good, and that the Divine truth is not in Him, but proceeds from Him, may be illustrated by the sun of the world, which is nothing but fire, and the light is not in it, but proceeds from it . . . As universal nature is a representative theatre . . . the sun represents the Lord ; its fire, His Divine love ; the heat thence, the good which flows thence ; and the light, the truths which are of faith ; and (therefore) in the Word, by 'the sun' is meant the Lord . . . 8241². 8328². 10196³. H.139.

6015⁸. That the good of love can no longer inflow, is signified by, 'I will cover the sun with a cloud' (Ezek. xxxii.7).

6135³. It is the Lord's Divine Human which thus appears (as a Sun) . . .

6417². To the Celestial Kingdom the Lord appears as a Sun. 9684².

—³. It is the fire or flame of that Sun which gives the esse of life to every man . . .

7058². The (celestial) Angels are in refulgent, and as it were flaming, light, for they see the Lord as a Sun . . .

7078². The sun of the world is presented to Spirits behind them, when they think about it ; for not a whit of it appears. The reason it is presented behind them, is that the sun of the world is thick darkness to those who are in the other life. But the Sun of Heaven, or the Lord, appears in front, before the right eye, because they have all their light from it ; and the right eye corresponds to the intellectual sight, not only in so far as it is illuminated by truth, but also in so far as it is illuminated by good. Thus the Lord looks at every man from good, and illuminates him through good. 7171. 7247.

7171. The sun of the world remains in the perception of Spirits solely from their having seen it here, and is presented to them in idea as a something of thick darkness, behind, and at a considerable distance, at an altitude a little above the plane of the head.

7173. The Sun of Heaven (then) appeared to the Spirits of Mercury. The Sun of Heaven, which is the Lord, appears only to those who are in the Third Heaven : all others see its light, and also the Moon. On seeing the Sun they said that that was not the Lord God, because they did not see a face . . . But suddenly the Sun appeared again, and in the midst of it the Lord encompassed with the solar circle, on seeing which they humbled themselves profoundly . . . Then, also, the Lord out of the Sun was seen by Spirits of this Earth, who, when they had been men, had seen Him in the world, (and they) confessed that it was the Lord Himself . . . Then, too, the Lord out of the Sun was seen by the Spirits of the planet Jupiter. 8543².

7177. The Spirits of Mercury said that from their Earth the sun of the world appears large, larger than from other Earths, (which) they knew from the idea of other Spirits about the sun.

—². For heat does not arise from nearness to the sun. Ex.

7270². The first two successives . . . are as it were radiant belts . . . which encompass the Sun, which is the Lord.

7381⁴. But the Sun of Heaven . . . does not make circumpigrations and circumvolutions, and thus induce ideas of time and space. The light from that Sun is truth Divine, and the heat from it is good Divine ; and from these come forth ideas of states . . .

7988². By 'the sun' (as one of the army of the heavens) is signified the good of love.

8328². The fire of the sun does not itself pass to the Earth, for it would burn up and consume all things ; but the light in which is the heat from the fire of the sun . . . 8644.

8487. 'The sun grew hot, and it melted' (Ex.xvi.21) =that it vanishes according to the degree of the increasing concupiscence. Ex.

— . In a good sense, 'the sun'=celestial love, because the Lord is a Sun in the other life ; and the heat which comes from it is the good of love, and the light is the truth of faith. . . Hence, in the opposite sense, 'the sun'=the love of self and of the world, and the heat from it=concupiscence.

8615. 'Until the setting of the sun' (Ex.xvii.12)=when that state ceased. Ex.

8644². In the Sun there, which is the Lord, there is Divine fire, which is the Divine good of the Divine love; and from that Sun there is Divine light, which is the Divine truth from the Divine good. In this Divine truth there is also Divine good, but not such as there is in the Sun. Ex.

—^e. That the Lord is the Sun in Heaven, and that the Sun there is the Divine good of His Divine love; and that the light thence is the Divine truth, from which is intelligence. Refs.

8736. These saints (of Jupiter) call the sun the face of the Supreme Lord, and believe that He has His abode there; on which account they also worship the sun.

8750². The Sun in the other life, which is the Lord, remains constantly in its own place . . .

8812. For the Sun which gives light to the Angels in the universal Heaven is the Lord; and the fire there is His Divine love, which gives the heat of life to every living thing; and the light there is the Divine truth which illuminates all who receive it; quite differently from the sun of the world, the fire of which is fire and not love . . .

—². Therefore the effects which come forth from the Sun of Heaven, because they have life in them, are called spiritual; and those which are from the sun of the world are called natural, and have no life in them. The life which is apperceived in living things in heat and from heat, is not from the heat of the sun of the world, but from the heat of the Sun of Heaven. Ex.

—⁴. Moreover, the Sun of Heaven, like the sun of the world, is immovable, and does not cause these states by any circumscription. Ex.

8897^e. The Lord as to Divine good is the Sun in the other life; and as to Divine truth is the Light.

8902³. That 'the sun'=love to the Lord; and 'the moon,' faith in Him. Refs. 8906³.

9031. So the Sun of Heaven, which is the Lord, is also said to 'rise,' but in the heart when the man is being regenerated, and also when he is in the good of love and of faith; and it is said to 'set' when he is in evil and thence in falsity; when yet the Lord is constantly in His rising . . . and never in His setting . . .

9128. 'If the sun have risen upon him' (Ex.xxii.3)=if he should see it clearly from what is interior. Ex.

9212⁴. 'The sun'=the Divine love; (thus) that 'the Lord's face shone like the sun'=that His interiors were the good of the Divine love.

9228. 'The sun'=love from the Lord, thus love to the Lord. . . 'The light of the sun sevenfold, as the light of seven days' (Is.xxx.26)=a full state of intelligence and wisdom from love and faith in the Lord.

9263⁵. That 'the righteous shall shine as the sun in heaven' (Matt.xiii.43)=those who are in the good of love from the Lord; for the Lord is the Sun in the other life; and from the Lord as the Sun there is the good of love. Refs. Hence the Lord is called 'the Sun of righteousness' (Mal.iv.2).

9441. Every star is like a sun in its own place . . . and has planets revolving around it. Ex.

9489. The infernals do not look toward the Sun, but backwards from the Sun . . . and they therefore appear . . . in an inverted position . . .

9498. See DIVINE TRUTH, here.

9571. For it is the Divine Human of the Lord from which is the light in Heaven; for it is the Sun of Heaven . . . and the light thence is the Divine truth. Refs. 9594^e.

9668³. In Heaven the east is where the Lord appears as a Sun, which is in front, over against the right eye . . . 9684⁴.

9684². The Lord appears to those who are of the Celestial Kingdom as a Sun . . . The Lord as a Sun appears at a middle altitude over against the right eye . . . From the Lord as a Sun is the light for those who are in His Celestial Kingdom . . .

—⁴. Hence by 'the sun,' in the Word, is signified the Lord as to Celestial good. Refs.

9694. (The Spirits of the First Earth) said that the Greatest God is in the Sun of the angelic Heaven . . .

9695. As they do not worship the Lord, they do not have light from the Sun of the angelic Heaven; but from an angelic Society. Ex.

9697. They said that the sun of their world appears to them flaming; and when I represented to them the size of the sun of our Earth, they said that their sun is smaller . . . and I have heard from the Angels that it is among the lesser stars.

9755. The Sun of Heaven, which is the Lord, appears towards the right eye, at a middle altitude; and from it the Angels of the Heavens have all their light, and, with the light, all intelligence and wisdom. But the sun of the world does not appear when it is thought about; but in its place there appears a dark something, opposite and behind.

—⁹. 'The sun for a light by day' (Jer.xxxi.35)=the good of love from which is the light in truths.

10130⁴. They who love the Lord turn their eyes to the Lord as a Sun . . .

10135. When the Angels are in a state of love, it is morning with them, and then the Lord appears to them as a rising Sun . . .

—². The reason the Angels have such states, and such variations, is that the Sun of Heaven, which is the Lord there, is the Divine love itself; and therefore the heat which thence proceeds is the good of love, and the light is the truth of faith; for all things which proceed from that Sun are alive; and are not like the things which proceed from the sun of the world, which are dead. 10188³.

10162. (The Spirits of the Second Earth) said that their sun, which is a star as seen from our Earth, is of the colour of fire, in appearance no larger than the head of a man. The Angels told me that the star which is a sun to them is among the lesser ones, and is not far distant from the equator of the heavens.

[A.] 10579^e. All infernal Spirits turn their backs to the Lord as a Sun; whereas the Angels always turn their faces to Him.

10584³. By the sun and its 'rising' (Ezek. viii. 16) is here meant the sun of the world and its rising, and by it is signified the love of self . . . Hence it is that the sun of the world is presented in the idea of the Angels as a something utterly obscure behind them . . . 10652^e. H. 561.

10771. The sun (in the Fifth Earth), which to us is a star, appears there of a flaming colour, in size almost a fourth part of our sun.

10834. Concerning the sun of that (Sixth) Earth, which to us is a star, they said that it appears to the inhabitants of the size of the human head, of a flaming colour. D. 5513³⁰.

H. 1(e). 'The sun' = the Lord as to love, and thence love to the Lord. Refs. 119, III.

89. All that extense is called the natural world which is under the sun . . .

116. On the Sun in Heaven. Chapter.

— The sun of the world does not appear in Heaven, nor anything which is from that sun, because 'it is all natural; for nature commences from that sun, and whatever is produced by means of it is called natural. W. 88.

117. Nevertheless there is a Sun in Heaven . . . The Sun of Heaven is the Lord; the light there is the Divine truth, and the heat there is the Divine good, which proceed from the Lord as a Sun. From this origin are all things which come forth and appear in the Heavens . . . The reason the Lord appears in Heaven as a Sun, is that it is the Divine love from which all spiritual things come forth, and, by means of the sun of the world, all natural things. This Love is what shines as a Sun. W. 5^e.

118. That the Lord actually appears in Heaven as a Sun . . . I have sometimes also been permitted to see . . . The Lord appears as a Sun, not in Heaven, but high above the Heavens; not above the head, or in the zenith, but before the faces of the Angels, at a middle altitude. He appears in two places; in one before the right eye, in the other before the left, at a considerable distance. Before the right eye He appears altogether as a Sun, similar as to fire and size to the sun of the world. But before the left eye He does not appear as a Sun, but as a Moon. (Continued under Moon.)

—². The Lord appears to everyone according to the quality of the reception of Him . . . to those who receive Him in the good of love, He appears as a Sun, fiery and flaming according to the reception. These are in His Celestial Kingdom.

120. The Divine love . . . is much more ardent (than the sun of the world); and therefore the Lord as a Sun does not inflow immediately into the Heavens; but the ardour of His love is tempered on the way by degrees. These temperings appear as radiant belts around the Sun. Moreover the Angels are veiled over with a thin accordant cloud, lest they should be injured by the influx. Therefore the Heavens are distant according to the reception . . .

121. When, however, the Lord appears in Heaven, which often happens, He does not appear girt with the Sun, but in an angelic form . . . for He is not there in person, because the Lord in person is constantly encompassed with the Sun; but He is in presence by aspect. Ex.

—^e. I have also seen the Lord outside the Sun in an angelic form, a little below the Sun, on high; and also near, in a like form, with a shining face; and once, in the midst of the Angels as a flaming beam.

122. The sun of the world appears to the Angels as a certain thick Jarkness opposite to the Sun of Heaven . . . and this constantly. The reason is that the fieriness of the world corresponds to the love of self . . . and the love of self is exactly opposite to the Divine love . . . and that which is opposite to the Divine love . . . is thick darkness to the Angels. Hence it is that 'to adore the sun and the moon, and to bow down one's self to them,' in the Word, = to love one's self and the falsities which are from the love of self. III.

123. As the Lord appears in Heaven as a Sun from the Divine love which is in Him and from Him, all in the Heavens turn themselves constantly to Him; those in the Celestial Kingdom, to Him as a Sun, and those in the Spiritual Kingdom to Him as a Moon; but those who are in Hell, turn themselves to the thick darkness and the darkness which are opposite, thus with their backs to the Lord; for the reason that all in the Hells are in the love of self and of the world, and thus are opposite to the Lord. Those who turn themselves to the thick darkness which is in place of the sun of the world, are in the Hells at the back, and are called Genii; and those who turn themselves to the darkness which is in place of the moon are in the Hells in front, and are called Spirits. Ex.

124. As the Lord is the Sun of Heaven . . . He is the common Centre . . .

146. The distance between the Sun and the Moon in Heaven is 30 degrees . . .

159. How the Lord as a Sun appears to the Angels in the Celestial Kingdom in their first, second, and third states. I saw the Lord as a Sun, first, ruddy and sparkling in such resplendence as cannot be described . . . Afterwards, I saw a great obscure belt around the Sun, by which that first ruddiness and sparkling began to be dulled . . . Then, I saw the belt becoming more obscure, and the Sun consequently less ruddy, and this by degrees, until at last it became as if bright white. (Continued under MOON.)

172. The things which come forth from the Sun of Heaven are called spiritual things; and those which come forth from the sun of the world are called natural things.

569. Infernal fire or love (also) comes forth from the Sun of Heaven, or the Lord, but it is made infernal by those who receive it. Ex.

C. J. 38. All things which are in the Spiritual World . . . are from the Sun there which is pure love; and all things which are in the natural world . . . are from the sun there which is pure fire.

U. 133. (The Spirits of the First Earth) also said . . . that a star larger than the rest appears to them towards the west; and it was said from Heaven that that star is our sun.

S. 13². 'The sun and the air darkened' (Rev. ix. 2) = the light of truth made thick darkness.

95. (From the appearance) it is said in the Word that the sun rises and sets, etc. when yet the sun stands immovable; for it is a fiery ocean . . . That the sun moves is an apparent truth; that it does not move is a genuine truth . . .

W. 5. The Lord, because He is Love in its very essence, that is, Divine love, appears before the Angels in Heaven as a Sun, and from that Sun proceed heat and light . . .

—². This Sun itself, or the Divine love, cannot through its heat and through its light create anyone immediately from itself; for one so created would be love in its essence . . . but it can create from substances and matters so formed as to be capable of receiving the very heat and the very light; comparatively as the sun of the world cannot by heat and light produce germinations on the Earth immediately; but only from the matters of the soil in which it can be by its heat and light, and cause vegetation.

10. Spaces, and consequently distances, appear in the Spiritual World equally as in the natural; but they are according to spiritual affinities . . . This is why the Lord, although everywhere in the Heavens with the Angels, nevertheless appears high above them as a Sun.

73. Time, there, is not distinguished into times and seasons as (here), because their Sun is constantly in its rising (or east) . . . for it is the Lord's Divine love which appears to them as a Sun. 104. Ex.

83. That the Divine love and the Divine wisdom appear in the Spiritual World as a Sun. Gen. art.

84. As these two worlds are so distinct, it can be seen very clearly that the Spiritual World is under a different Sun from the natural world. Ex. . . And further, that the Sun of the Spiritual World in its essence is such that spiritual heat and light can come forth—existere—from it . . .

85². (The spiritual Sun) has been seen by me, and it appeared of a like size to the sun of the natural world; it also appeared fiery like it, but sparkling more. . . The universal Heaven is under that Sun, and the Angels of the Third Heaven see it constantly, those of the Second Heaven quite frequently, and those of the First Heaven sometimes.

86. That Sun is not the Lord Himself; but is from Him. It is the proceeding Divine love and Divine wisdom which appear as a Sun in that world. And, as the Love and the Wisdom in the Lord are as one, it is said that that Sun is the Divine love . . .

87. The reason that Sun appears before the eyes of the Angels as if it were fiery, is that love and fire correspond to each other . . . 93.

89. That from the Sun which comes forth—existit—from the Divine love and the Divine wisdom proceed heat and light. Gen. art.

—². For the heat and light of the Spiritual World proceed from a Sun which is pure love; and the heat and light of the natural world, from a sun which is pure fire; and love is alive, and the Divine love is life itself; while fire is dead, and the solar fire is death itself. So it may be called because it has nothing whatever of life in it. 90^e. M. 532.

93. That that Sun is not God, but is the proceeding from the Divine love and Divine wisdom of God Man; in like manner the heat and light from that Sun. Gen. art.

—^e. Therefore the spiritual Sun by its heat vivifies spiritual beings, and renews spiritual objects. The natural sun does indeed in like manner for natural beings and objects, but not from itself, but through the influx of spiritual heat, to which it renders subsidiary aid. 106. 153.

97. Let everyone beware of thinking that the Sun of the Spiritual World is God Himself. God Himself is a Man. The first proceeding from His Love and Wisdom is that spiritual fieriness which appears before the Angels as a Sun. And therefore when the Lord manifests Himself to the Angels in Person, He manifests Himself as a Man; and this sometimes in the Sun, and sometimes outside of the Sun.

98. It is from this correspondence that in the Word the Lord is called not only the 'Sun,' but also 'fire,' and 'light;' and by 'the Sun' is meant Himself as to the Divine love and the Divine wisdom together . . .

103. That the Sun of the Spiritual World appears at a middle altitude, distant from the Angels, as the sun of the natural world does from men. Gen. art. 104. Ex.

105. That Sun . . . appears at a middle altitude chiefly for the following reasons. First, the heat and light which proceed from that Sun are thus at their medium intensity. Ex. . . Secondly, because there is thus a perpetual spring in all the angelic Heavens, whereby the Angels are in a state of peace . . . Thirdly, the Angels are thus enabled to turn their faces constantly to the Lord, and to see Him with their eyes. Ex.

[W.] 106. If that Sun did not appear distant from the Angels . . . the whole angelic Heaven, and Hell under it, and our terraqueous globe under these, would not be under the view, auspices, omnipresence, omniscience, omnipotence, and providence of the Lord; comparatively as with the sun of our world . . . 110, Ex.

107. It is most necessary that it be known that there are two suns, one spiritual, and the other natural . . . Unless this is known, nothing can be rightly understood about creation, and about man . . .

108. That the distance between the Sun and the Angels . . . is an appearance according to the reception by them of the Divine love and the Divine wisdom. Gen.art. 110.

109. The Truth is that there is no distance (of the Sun of the Spiritual World, which Sun is the first proceeding of the Lord's Divine love and Divine wisdom) . . .

112. The difference between Angels and men is that Angels are under the spiritual Sun only, whereas men are not only under that Sun, but are also under the sun of the world; for unless the bodies of men were under both suns, they could not come forth and subsist . . .

125. The Lord is in an Angel, and an Angel is in the Lord . . . but, as the Lord appears as a Sun outside him, it also appears that the Lord sees him from the Sun, and that he sees the Lord in the Sun. Ex.

129. That the Angels constantly turn their faces to the Lord as a Sun, and thus have the south on their right hand, etc. Gen.art. 131, Ex.

135. That the interiors of both mind and body with the Angels are turned to the Lord as a Sun. Gen.art. 137, Ex.

151. That the Lord created the universe and all things of it by means of the Sun which is the first proceeding of the Divine love and the Divine wisdom. Gen.art.

152. No one who can see effects from causes . . . can deny that the sun is the first of creation. Ex.

153. There are two suns through which all things have been created by the Lord: the Sun of the Spiritual World, and the sun of the natural world. All things have been created by the Lord through the Sun of the Spiritual World, and not through the sun of the natural world; for the latter sun is far below the former Sun: it is in middle distance; above it is the Spiritual World, and below it is the natural world. The sun of the world has been created in order to render subsidiary aid.

154. That the universe . . . was created by means of the Sun of the Spiritual World, is because that Sun is the first proceeding of the Divine love and the Divine wisdom; (from which) all things are. In every created thing . . . there are end, cause, and effect. . . In the universe these three come forth in the following order: in the Sun . . . is the end of all things; in the Spiritual World are the causes of all things; and in the natural world are the effects of all things. . . It follows that the universe . . . was created through the Sun . . .

155. (Thus will you perceive) that the diversity in created things comes forth from this: that there are infinite things in God Man, and thence indefinite things in the Sun which is the first proceeding from Him . . .

157. That the sun of the natural world is pure fire, and is thence dead; and that nature, because it derives its origin from this sun, is dead. Gen.art.

— Creation itself cannot be one whit ascribed to the sun of the natural world; but wholly to the Sun of the Spiritual World; because the sun . . . is altogether dead, whereas the Sun . . . is alive, because it is the first proceeding of the Divine love and the Divine wisdom . . . The sun is pure fire from which everything of life has been withdrawn; whereas the Sun is fire in which is Divine life. The angelic idea concerning the fire of the sun, and that of the Sun, is this: that the Divine life is within in the fire of the Sun, but without in the fire of the sun. From this it can be seen that the actuality of the natural sun is not from itself, but is from the living force which proceeds from the Sun; and therefore if the living force of this Sun were withdrawn, the natural sun would collapse. For this reason the worship of the sun is the lowest of all the worships of God, for it is wholly dead, as the sun itself is; and therefore in the Word it is called 'an abomination.'

158. As the sun . . . is pure fire, and therefore dead, the heat and light which proceed from it are also dead; and so also are the atmospheres . . .

163. That without two suns, one living and the other dead, creation is not possible. Gen.art.

164. As these two worlds are so distinct, it is necessary that there be two suns, one from which all spiritual things are, the other from which all natural things are. And, as all spiritual things in their origin are alive, and all natural things from their origin are dead, and as these origins are suns, it follows that the one Sun is alive and that the other sun is dead; and also that the dead sun itself has been created by the Lord through the living Sun.

165. A dead sun has been created for the reason that all things may be fixed, stated, and constant in ultimates, and that there may thence come forth things which are perennial and durable. In this and in no other way is creation founded.

166. That all things have been created . . . through the living Sun, and nothing through the dead sun. Ex.

174. The spiritual atmospheres are discrete substances, that is, least forms, which originate from the Sun . . . (So with the natural atmospheres.) 176^e.

233. (Hence) the Sun . . . after the assumption of the Human, shone out with a greater effulgence and splendour. Ill.

290. That the Lord from eternity or Jehovah produced from Himself the Sun of the Spiritual World, and from that created the universe and all things of it. Gen.art.

291. That Sun is called a proceeding, because it has been produced from the Divine love and the Divine wisdom, which in themselves are substance and form, and through this the Divine proceeds. (The Angels explain this by) the sphere of affections and thoughts which encompasses every Angel, (and which) is not the Angel himself . . . and that this sphere around the Lord is in like manner from Him; and that this sphere is their Sun. Ex.

294. As the things which constitute the Sun . . . are from the Lord, but are not the Lord, it follows that they are not life in itself, but are deprived of life in itself . . .

296. That there are three things in the Lord which are the Lord: the Divine of love, the Divine of wisdom, and the Divine of use; and that these three are presented in appearance outside the Sun of the Spiritual World (by heat, light, and atmosphere, respectively), Gen.art.

300. There is one only substance from which all things are, and the Sun of the Spiritual World is that substance; and as the Divine is not in space, and is the same in the greatest things and in the least, so in like manner with that Sun which is the first proceeding of God Man. And further, this one only substance, which is the Sun, proceeding by means of the atmospheres according to continuous degrees, and at the same time according to discrete degrees, presents the varieties of all things in the created universe.

301. (Thus) nothing is except through the Sun from Him.

303. That substances or matters such as are on earth have been produced by the Sun through its atmospheres, will be affirmed by anyone who reflects that there are perpetual mediations from the First to ultimates; and that nothing can come forth except from what is prior to itself; and, finally, from the First. This First is the Sun of the Spiritual World; and the First of this Sun is God Man or the Lord.

304°. That there are degrees of both kinds in the least of all things, is because the spiritual Sun is the one only substance from which all things are, according to the spiritual ideas of the Angels.

305. By continuation from the substance of the Spiritual Sun (substances and matters) have brought with them that which is there from the Divine, which is the sphere which encompasses the Lord. From this sphere, by continuation from the Sun, by means of the atmospheres, have originated the substances and matters from which are lands.

314°. The progression of creation was from its First, which is the Lord encompassed with the Sun, to ultimates, which are lands . . .

315. It is only the heat, light, and atmospheres of the spiritual Sun (which contribute to this image of creation in plants). (Even natural heat and light do not act on plants) by any forces from their own sun, which, regarded in themselves, are null; but by forces from the spiritual Sun, by which they are perpetually actuated to perform these things.

340. It is the Spiritual, which derives its origin from the Sun where the Lord is, and which proceeds to the ultimates of nature, which produces the forms of plants and animals . . .

346. Both the animal and the vegetable kingdoms derive their origin, as to the productions in their forms, from the spiritual influx and operation from the Sun of Heaven where the Lord is; and not from the influx and operation of nature from its sun: [from this they derive nothing] except their fixation.

348. That all uses, both good and evil, are from a spiritual origin, and thus from the Sun where the Lord is. Ex. . . Thus even evil uses are from the spiritual Sun; (for) good uses are turned in Hell into evil ones.

349. They who confirm themselves in the idea that the sun produces the things which appear upon the Earth by means of its heat and light, and by ascribing all things to nature . . .

351. Can any reasonable person think that the sun, which is pure fire, has this knowledge . . .

353°. He would say, Such knowledges cannot inflow into (birds) from the sun through its rays of light; for the sun from which nature derives its origin and essence, is pure fire, and consequently its rays of light are entirely dead.

381. There is a general cardiac and pulmonic motion in the whole Heaven (which) is from the Lord alone . . . For in the Sun where the Lord is and which is from the Lord, there are these two motions, and thence [they are] in the angelic Heaven and in the universe. 392.

P. 3°. This is not from the seed, nor from the sun of the world, which is pure fire.

5. God the Creator has produced from Himself the Sun of the Spiritual World, and, through that Sun, all things of the universe; consequently, that Sun, which is from the Lord and is where the Lord is, is not only the first substance, but is also the only one from which all things are; and, as it is the one only substance, it follows that it is in every created thing, but with infinite variety according to uses. Now, as in the Lord there is the Divine love and the Divine wisdom, and in the Sun from Him are Divine fire and Divine splendour, and from the Sun spiritual heat and spiritual light, and these two make a one, it follows that this one is, in a certain image, in every created thing.

31°. As to aspect, the Lord is above the Angels, in the Sun there . . .

135°. The Lord alone has taught me, who has been revealed to me; and afterwards, as the Sun, in which He is, has continually appeared and does appear before my eyes, as He appears to the Angels, and has given enlightenment.

157°. The Sun of the angelic Heaven is this one only substance and form.

162. The reason there is an appearance (that man is led and taught) through the angelic Heaven, is that the Lord appears above that Heaven as a Sun. The reason it is the Truth that [it is done] from that Heaven, is that the Lord is in that Heaven as the soul is in a man . . . As no one can be conjoined with the Lord as He is in Himself, He appears to the Angels at a distance as a Sun; but still He is in the universal angelic Heaven as the soul is in a man . . .

—2. As it is according to the appearance that the Lord rules the universal Heaven, and, through this, the world, from the Sun which is from Him, and where He is . . . and as it is allowable for every man to speak from the appearance . . . it is allowable for everyone who is not in wisdom itself, to think that the Lord rules each and all things from His Sun . . . The Angels of the higher Heavens do indeed speak from this appearance ; but they think from the Truth, which is that the Lord rules the universe from the angelic Heaven, which is, from Himself.

[P. 162]⁹. Spaces and distances appear (there) just as they do (here), but still they are appearances according to dissimilitude of affections and of the derivative thoughts. It is the like with the appearance of the Lord in His Sun.

173. 'He makes His sun to rise upon the evil and upon the good' (Matt.v.45). By 'the sun' here and elsewhere in the Word is meant the Divine good of the Divine love. 292^o.

R. 53. 'His face as the sun shining in his power' (Rev.i.16)=the Divine love and the Divine wisdom, which are Himself, and which proceed from Him . . . The Lord is seen as a Sun in Heaven before the Angels, and His Divine love together with His Divine wisdom so appear. Refs. E.74. R.467. E.596.

—². That 'the sun,' when predicated of the Lord, =His Divine love and at the same time His Divine wisdom. Ill.

—⁶. What is said in Joshua, that 'the sun stood still . . . and the moon . . .' (x.12,13) appears as historical, but it is prophetic; for it is from the Book of Jashar . . . The like is said in Hab.iii.10,11. For to make the sun and moon stand still would be to destroy the universe. E.401¹⁸, Ex.

—⁷. That the sun of the world is not meant by 'the sun' in these passages, is evident from the fact that it was profane and abominable to adore the sun and moon of the world. Ill. For by the sun of the world is meant the love of self and the conceit of Own intelligence. Ex. . . Also, to adore the sun of the world is to acknowledge nature as the creator, and Own prudence as the effecter, of all things, which involves the denial of God and the denial of the Divine Providence.

54. 'When I saw Him, I fell at His feet as dead' = the failing of his own life from such presence of the Lord. . . For His Divine love is exactly like the sun's heat, which, as it is in itself, no one can endure . . . This is meant by no one's being 'able to see God, and live.' Since it is so, the Lord appears to the Angels in Heaven as a Sun, distant from them as the sun of the world is from men. The reason is that the Lord in Himself is in that Sun.

332. 'The sun became black as sackcloth of hair' (Rev.vi.12)=that with them all the good of love is adulterated. . . That by 'the sun' is signified the Lord as to the Divine love, and thence the good of love from Him ; and, in the opposite sense, the Divine of the Lord denied, and thence the good of love adulterated, see above. E.401.

382. 'Neither shall the sun fall upon them' (Rev.vii.16)=that hereafter they shall not have concupiscences to evil. . . That 'the sun'=the Divine love and the derivative affections of good ; and, in the opposite sense, diabolical love, and the derivative concupiscences to evil, see above. E.481.

413. 'A third part of the sun was smitten, and a third part of the moon, and a third part of the stars, and the third part of them was darkened' (Rev.viii.12)=that on account of evils from falsities and falsities from evils they do not know what love is, what faith is, nor any truth. —², Ill. (=that all the good of love, all the good and truth of faith, and all the Knowledge of good and truth had perished. E.525.)

414. By the light of the sun is signified Divine truth spiritual from the Word . . . Divine truth in the spiritual sense of the Word is like the light of the sun in the daytime.

423. 'The sun and the air were darkened from the smoke of the pit' (Rev.ix.2)=that thence the light of truth became thick darkness. By 'the sun and the air' is here signified the light of truth ; for by 'the sun' is signified love, and by the light thence the Divine truth ; and therefore when it is said that 'the sun was darkened' and at the same time 'the air,' there is signified that the Divine truth became thick darkness. E.541.

447². Where the sun, moon, and stars are called 'the army,' by 'the sun' is signified the good of love . . .

465². His presence itself . . . no Angel can sustain ; on which account He appears above the Heavens as a Sun, which is distant from the Angels as the sun of the world is from men. There He is in His Divine from eternity and at the same time in His Divine Human, which are one, as soul and body.

468. The origin of correspondences is from the two suns ; the one in the Heavens, which is pure love ; and the other in the world, which is pure fire . . .

533. 'A woman encompassed with the sun, and the moon under her feet' (Rev.xii.1)=the Lord's New Church in the Heavens, which is the New Heaven ; and the Lord's New Church about to be on earth, which is the New Jerusalem. . . The woman was seen encompassed with the sun, because the New Church is in love to the Lord ; for it acknowledges Him, and does His commandments, and this is to love Him. . . There is a Church in the Heavens equally as on earth . . . and the Church there is here meant by the woman encompassed with the sun, and upon whose head was a crown of twelve stars.

690. 'The fourth Angel poured out his vial into the sun' (Rev.xvi.8)=an influx into their love. . . For by 'the sun' is signified the Lord's Divine love ; and, in the opposite sense, the love of self. E.981.

831. 'I saw an Angel standing in the sun' (Rev.xix.17)=the Lord from Divine love.

915². 'Red'=the good of love, because it derives its origin from the fire of the sun ; and the fire of the Sun of the Spiritual World is in its essence the Lord's Divine love, thus the good of love. And 'bright white'=the truth of wisdom, because it derives its origin from the light which proceeds from the fire of that Sun, (which) in its essence is Divine wisdom, thus the truth of wisdom.

919. 'The city has no need of the sun and the moon to shine in it' (Rev.xxi.19)=that the men of that Church will not be in the love of self and in Own intelligence, and thence in merely natural lumen. . . By 'the sun'

here is signified natural love separated from spiritual love, which is the love of self. . . 940. E. 401³⁰.

938. For no one can see His face, as He is in His Divine love and wisdom, and live; for He is the Sun of Heaven and of the whole Spiritual World: (it would be) as if one should enter into the sun, by whose fire he would be consumed in a moment. But the Lord sometimes presents Himself to be seen outside of His Sun; but He then veils Himself over, and presents Himself to their sight, which is done by means of an Angel; as He did also before Abraham . . .

940. 'They have no need of a lamp and of the light of the sun' (Rev. xii. 5) = that in the New Jerusalem men will not be in Knowledges concerning God from natural lumen, which is from Own intelligence, and from glory originating from conceit.

961⁶. As the Lord cannot be received by anyone as He is in Himself, He appears as He is in Himself as a Sun above the angelic Heavens, the proceeding from which as Light is Himself as to Wisdom, and as Heat, is Himself as to Love. He Himself is not a Sun; but the Divine love and the Divine wisdom proximately going forth from Him, and round about Him, appear before the Angels as a Sun. He Himself in the Sun is a Man . . .

M. 34⁹. Love is the . . . vital heat of man; the heat of the blood, and its redness, are from no other source; the fire of the angelic Sun, which is pure love, effects this.

222⁴. The reason (this conjugal sphere) operates (in the absence of the heat of the sun) is that it is from the Sun of the angelic Heaven, and from that there is a constant equation of heat and light, that is, a constant conjunction of good and truth; for it is in continuous Spring. The changes of good and truth—that is, of its heat and light—are not its variations . . . but originate from the subjects which receive them.

235. Spiritual heat is from no other source than the Sun of the Spiritual World; for there is there a Sun proceeding from the Lord, who is in the midst of it; and, because it is from the Lord, that Sun is in its manifestation—existentia—pure love. Before the Angels this Sun appears fiery, exactly as does the sun of our world before men. The reason it appears fiery, is that love is spiritual fire. From that Sun proceed both heat and light; but, as that Sun is pure Love, the heat from it is in its essence love, and the light is in its essence wisdom.

—². Spiritual cold is from the sun of the natural world, and from its heat and light. The sun of the natural world has been created in order that its heat and light may receive into themselves spiritual heat and light, and, by means of the atmospheres, carry them down to the ultimate things in the Earth, in order to effect the effects of the ends which are of the Lord in His Sun; and also in order that they may clothe spiritual things with adapted garments, that is, with matters, to operate the ultimate ends in nature. These things are effected when spiritual heat is joined into natural heat; but the contrary is effected when natural heat is separated from spiritual heat, as is effected with those who love natural things and reject spiritual ones. With these, spiritual heat becomes cold.

261. For the Lord is the East, because He is in the Sun there, which, from Him, is pure love. Hence the heat from that Sun in its essence is love, and the light, wisdom.

380. They ascribe to nature all things which are beneath the sun, and which are above the sun.

—⁷. I know, said he, that something existed before the sun, and this everywhere in the universe; and that these things flowed together of themselves into order, thus into centres.

—⁸. We said, What is more insane than to say that the Centre is from the Expanse? By your centre we understand the sun, and by your expanse, the universe, and thus that the universe came into existence without the sun. But does not the sun make nature and all its properties, which depend solely on the heat and light which proceed from the sun through the atmospheres? . . . Are not the atmospheres, and all things which are upon the Earth, as surfaces, and the sun their centre? What are they all without the sun? Could they subsist for a single moment without it? . . . As, therefore, the subsistence of all things is from the sun, it follows that the existence of all things is also from it. Ex.

—¹¹. We instructed him that above the angelic Heaven there is a Sun which is pure love, in appearance fiery, like the sun of the world; and that from the heat which proceeds from that Sun Angels and men have will and love, and from the light, understanding and wisdom; and that the things which are of life are called spiritual things: and that the things which proceed from the sun of the world are containants of life, and are called natural things: also that the expanse of the centre of life is called the Spiritual World, which subsists from its own Sun; and that the expanse of nature is called the natural world, which subsists from its own sun. Now, as spaces and times cannot be predicated of love and wisdom . . . the expanse around the Sun of the angelic Heaven is not an extense, but still it is in the extense of the natural sun . . . —¹³.

—¹². He then asked, Whence is the fire of the sun of the world, or of nature? We replied that it is from the Sun of the angelic Heaven, which is not fire, but is the Divine love which proceeds proximately from God, who is Love itself. Ex.

— . Therefore, from the fact that spiritual heat, which is love, produces natural heat with men . . . it may be evident that the fire of the natural sun has come forth from no other source than the fire of the spiritual Sun, which is the Divine Love. T. 35.

415³. Did you know that the Sun (of the Spiritual World) is pure love, and the sun of the natural world pure fire; and that the sun of the world, which is pure fire, is that from which nature has come into existence and subsists; and that the Sun of Heaven, which is pure love, is that from which life itself, which is love together with wisdom, has come into existence and subsists; and thus that nature, which you make God, is utterly dead? T. 77³.

532⁵. It has been at this day revealed by the Lord that in your World there is a different Sun than in ours; and that the Sun of your World is pure love, and that the sun of our world is pure fire; and therefore that everything which proceeds from your Sun . . . partakes of life; and that everything which proceeds from ours . . . partakes nothing of life; and that hence is the difference between the Spiritual and the Natural.

I. 4. That the Spiritual World has come into existence and subsists from its own Sun, and the natural world from its. Ex.

— The reason there is one Sun of the Spiritual World, and another of the natural world, is that these worlds are altogether distinct from each other. For a World in which all things are spiritual cannot originate from a sun from which all things are natural, because there would then be physical influx . . . That the world has come into existence from the sun, and not the sun from the world, is evident from the fact that the world . . . subsists through the sun . . . whence it is evident that if the sun were removed, its world would fall into chaos, and this into nothing.

—². That in the Spiritual World there is a Sun different from that in the natural world, I am able to testify, because I have seen it. It appears fiery, like our sun, nearly the same in size. It is at a distance from the Angels, as our sun is from men. But it does not rise, or set; but stands immovable at a middle altitude between the zenith and the horizon; whence the Angels have perpetual light, and perpetual spring. M.137⁵.

5. That the Sun of the Spiritual World is pure love, from Jehovah God, who is in the midst of it. Ex. T.24.

— This Sun itself is not God, but is from God. It is the proximate sphere around Him, from Him. Through this Sun the universe has been created by Jehovah God. By the universe is here meant all the worlds in the complex, which are as many in number as are the stars in the expanse of our heavens. The reason creation was effected by means of this Sun, which is pure Love, and thus by Jehovah God, is that Love is the Esse itself of life, and wisdom is the derivative Existere of life; and from Love by means of Wisdom have all things been created. III.

—⁴. Just as God is one, so also is the spiritual Sun one; for the extension of space is not predicable of spiritual things, which are the derivations of the spiritual Sun; and Essence and Manifestation—existentia—without space are everywhere in spaces without space; thus the Divine Love [is so] from the beginning of the universe to all its boundaries.

6. That from that Sun proceed heat and light, (which in their essence are love and wisdom). Ex.

9. That the sun of the natural world is pure fire, and that by means of this sun the world of nature has come into existence and subsists. Ex.

— (Thus) the natural world has been created by Jehovah God, in a secondary manner—secundario, by means of this sun.

—³. That the sun of nature and of its worlds is pure fire, all its effects demonstrate; as the concentration of its rays into a focus by the art of optics . . . the nature of its heat, which is similar to the heat from elementary fire; the graduation of that heat according to the angle of incidence . . . from which reason . . . may confirm that the sun of the natural world is mere fire; and also that it is fire in its very purity.

10. That therefore everything which proceeds from this sun, regarded in itself, is dead. Ex.

T. 24. 5. Jehovah God, from His Sun, produced not only the Spiritual World, and all its spiritual things, which are innumerable and substantial, but also the natural world, and all its natural things, which are also innumerable but material.

29². But the times there are not distinguished into days, weeks, etc. because the Sun there does not appear to rise and set, nor to be carried round; but remains fixed in the east at a middle degree between the zenith and the horizon.

—³. God finited all things by means of His Sun, in the midst of which He is; and which consists of the Divine Essence which goes forth as a sphere from Him. There and thence is the first of finition; but the progressive [development] of it goes down to the ultimates in the nature of this world.

32⁵. The infinity of God the Creator may also be seen from the infinite number of the stars, which are so many suns; and, derivatively, so many worlds.

33. The reason every created thing is finite, is that all things [were produced] by Jehovah God by means of the Sun of the Spiritual World, which proximately encompasses Him; and that Sun is of the substance which has gone forth from Him, the essence of which is Love. From that Sun, through its heat and light, was created the universe, from its primes to its ultimates.

—². Through these degrees it has been effected that all posterior things are receptacles of prior ones, and . . . so, in order, of the primitives of which the Sun of the angelic Heaven consists . . .

— (Thus) God first finited His infinity by means of substances emitted from Himself, from which there came into existence His proximate compass, which makes the Sun of the Spiritual World; and afterwards, by means of that Sun, He perfected all the other compasses down to the ultimate one, which consists of things at rest; and thus, by means of degrees, He finited the world more and more.

34⁴. The Divine life, which by influx from the Sun of the angelic Heaven actuates man, may be compared to the light from the sun of the world . . .

39. The Divine wisdom, properly, is Life; and Life, properly, is the Light which proceeds from the Sun of the Spiritual World, in the midst of which is Jehovah God. The Divine Love forms Life, just as fire forms light. Ex.

41. This may be seen by human reason, if it knows that the origin of love and wisdom is the Sun of the Spiritual World, in the midst of which is Jehovah God; or, what is the same, that it is Jehovah God, through the Sun, which is round about Him; for the heat which proceeds from that Sun in its essence is love, and the light is wisdom . . . This may be illustrated by the sun of the natural world, which is pure fire, in that from its fieriness proceeds heat, and, from the resplendence of its fieriness, light . . .

44². The same Divine sphere (of the Divine love) operates also into inanimate things . . . but through the sun of the world . . .

63. God is omnipresent from the primes to the ultimates of His order, through the heat and light from the Sun of the Spiritual World, in the midst of which He is. Order was made by means of that Sun; and from it He sends forth heat and light which pervade the universe from its primes to its ultimates, and produce the life possessed by man and every animal, and also the vegetative soul in every growth upon the Earth . . .

66. All things which proceed from the Sun of the Spiritual World, in the midst of which is Jehovah God, relate to a man. Ex.

70³. God, by means of His Sun, is present [everywhere] with spiritual heat and spiritual light; and does not make any alternations, as the sun of the world apparently does.

—^c. Such is the correspondence between the effects and uses from the Sun of the Spiritual World, and the effects from the sun of the natural world.

75. (Creation cannot be understood unless it is known that) . . . in each world there is a sun, and that the Sun of the Spiritual World is pure Love from Jehovah God, who is in the midst of it; and that from that Sun proceed heat and light; and that the heat thence proceeding in its essence is love, and the light, wisdom; and that these two affect the will and the understanding of man . . . and that the sun of the natural world is pure fire, and that therefore the heat from it is dead, and in like manner the light; and that these serve as clothing and aid to spiritual heat and light, so that they may pass to man.

76². I then saw also that there are two suns; one, from which all spiritual things flow forth, and another from which all natural things flow forth; and that the Sun from which all spiritual things flow forth is pure Love from Jehovah God, who is in the midst of it; and that the sun from which all natural things flow forth is pure fire. Knowing these things, it was once given me to perceive, when I was in illustration, that the universe has been created by Jehovah God by means of the Sun in the midst of which He is . . .

—³. I have (also) perceived that by means of the light and heat from the Sun of your World, spiritual atmospheres, which in themselves are substantial, have been created, one from another . . .

— But as this spiritual universe cannot come into existence without a natural universe into which it may act its effects and uses, there was then simultaneously created the sun from which all natural things proceed; and, through this, in like manner, by means of its heat and light, three atmospheres encompassing the former ones . . .

79². (One of the philosophers said,) From the lightest of these parts the sun was formed.

—³. Another said, Through the fissures (of the chaos) burst out fire . . . whence originated the sun. . . The sun was at first as it were an ocean of fire, which, lest it should burn the Earth, separated from itself little shining flames (the stars) . . .

112. I saw the rising Sun in its effulgence; and round about it a halo . . .

135. One morning . . . the Sun of the Spiritual World appeared to me in its effulgence; and under it I saw the Heavens, distant from it as the Earth is from its sun; and then there were heard from the Heavens unutterable words, which, being collected together, were articulated into this utterance, There is one God, who is a Man, whose habitation is in that Sun.

—^c. To those (who had the thought of one God, in whom is a Divine Trinity, and that this is in the Lord God the Saviour) appeared the Sun of Heaven, in which is Jehovah in His Human.

178. From (the faith that nature is the creator of the universe) it would follow . . . that the sun is the court of all the gods . . .

308. In order that the Lord might operate into these (natural things), even as into spiritual ones, He created the sun, which should be in the natural world as a father, and the earth as a mother. For the sun is as a common father . . .

360. There are two worlds . . . and in each world a sun, and . . . the heat and light from the Sun of the Spiritual World have life in them . . . whereas the heat and light from the sun of the natural world have nothing of life in them, but they serve the two former as receptacles . . . for the conveyance of them to men. . . Now as faith is of light, and charity is of heat, it is evident that in proportion as a man is in the light and heat which proceed from the Sun of the Spiritual World, in the same proportion he is in spiritual faith and charity; whereas in proportion as he is in the light and heat which proceed from the sun of the natural world, in the same proportion he is in natural faith and charity.

365². The heat and light which proceed from the Lord as a Sun contain in their bosom all the infinities which are in the Lord . . . This is because that Sun is itself present everywhere in its heat and in its light; and that Sun is the circle most closely encompassing the Lord, emanating from His Divine love and at the same time from His Divine wisdom; for . . . the Lord is in the midst of that Sun.

472². If the actives were creatable, as the passives are, there would have been no need of the sun, and of the heat and light from it . . .

— The sun of this world consists of created substances, the activity of which produces fire.

618^e. The Lord is the Sun in the Spiritual World . . .

641². In the Spiritual World there is a Sun, in the midst of which is the Lord. From that Sun He inflows by light and heat into the whole Spiritual World, and into all who are there. All the light and all the heat there are from this source. From that Sun, and with the same light and the same heat, the Lord inflows also into the souls and minds of men . . . The Divine itself which immediately encompasses the Lord makes that Sun. That Sun is distant from the Angels as the sun of the natural world is from men . . . for otherwise they would be consumed. 691.

—⁴. The Sun of the Spiritual World, such as it is since Jehovah God assumed the Human . . . is described in Is. xxx. 26.

[T.] 767. Every Angel, in whatever direction he turns his body and face, looks to the Lord before Him; for the Lord is the Sun of the angelic Heaven: this is what appears before their eyes when they are in spiritual meditation.

—³. (Thus) plants shoot up above the surrounding herbage, that they may look at the sun; and some of them turn to the sun from its rising to the end of day. Nor do I doubt that there is a similar endeavour in all the twigs and branches of every tree . . . Moreover . . . all whirlpools and ocean sandbanks spontaneously follow in their motion the general course of the sun.

837. The Africans said . . . that God sees, and provides everything . . . because He is the Sun of the angelic Heaven . . . And as it is His Divine love which appears as the Sun . . . He provides the things which are of love by the heat from that Sun, and the things which are of wisdom by the light thence. If, therefore, you form for yourselves an idea of God as being the Sun of the universe, you will from that idea see . . . His omnipresence, omniscience, and omnipotence.

D. 4293. The Lord appears to them as a Sun . . .

4387. These two lives are as the sun and moon . . .

4394^e. The Lord as to the Human Essence also is a Sun . . .

4639. On Heaven and the Sun there.—The Sun which is the Lord, as it appears in the Inmost Heaven, seen in vision: its magnificent appearance des. Its appearance in the evening des. It adds itself to the Moon, and it is then morning in the Spiritual Heaven.

4894. I was permitted to see the Sun on the right.

4964. The height of that mountain was the same as that of the Sun, which is the Lord.

4969. So that the mountains almost obscured the Sun, (that is,) took away love.

5004. The Babylonians then produced, from phantasy, as it were the Sun, where the Lord is; but it did not shine. 5207.

5743. The Lord was seen to descend from the Sun . . .

D. Min. 4710. It is a most universal thing that the Lord is the Sun of Heaven . . .

E. 175¹². 'The sun'=love to the Lord.

186¹². That the Lord is the source of everything of life, is because He is the Sun of the angelic Heaven . . .

220. The Lord is above the Heavens, and appears to those in Heaven as a Sun . . .

270³. 'The moon' and 'sun' (Is.xxiv.23)=their idolatrous worship, and also the falsity of faith and the evil of love.

275¹⁶. 'The sun from which is the light of day' (Jer. xxxi.35)=the good of celestial love, from which is the perception of truth.

278⁸. 'The sun arising' (Ps.civ.22)=the Lord as to love and the derivative wisdom.

279⁵. 'The Sun of righteousness which shall arise to them that fear the name of Jehovah' (Mal.iv.2)=the good of love. 'The healing in his wings'=the truth of faith. 283⁹.

295². The Lord appears before the Angels as a Sun, fiery and flaming, and this for the reason that in the Spiritual World love appears as fire. 340¹¹.

298⁸. 'The sun' (Ps.cxxi.6)=the love of self and all the derivative evil.

304⁵. 'The sun' (Is.xiii.10)=love. —⁴⁷. (=the good of love to the Lord. 401¹².)

324¹¹. 'From the rising of the sun to its going down' (Mal.i.11)=everywhere where there is good.

329²². 'The sun,' in the Word,=the Divine Celestial which is the Divine good.

372². 'I will cover the sun with a cloud' (Ezek.xxxii.7)=no good of love. 401¹³.

386²⁷. 'The heat and the sun' (Is.xlix.10)=the heat from the principles of falsity and from the love of evil.

400⁸. 'The sun and moon blackened' (Joel ii.10)=no good of love or truth of faith.

401². 'The sun'=the Lord as to the Divine love, and thus with man the good of love to the Lord from the Lord. . . His appearing as a Sun is from His Divine love; for the Divine love appears as fire from which the Angels have their heat. —³. Ill.

—⁸. When the Lord presents Himself present with the Angels He appears out of the Sun.

—⁷. Of those who love Him it is said, 'as the rising of the sun in his power' (Judg.v.31). Of such it is also said that 'they shall shine as the sun' (Matt.xiii.43). . . In respect to their faces, they shine with an effulgence like that of the sun, because the Lord's Divine love is communicated to them and is received by them, whereby the Lord is in their interiors, which manifest themselves in the face.

—⁸. 'His throne as the sun before Me' (Ps.lxxxix.36)=His Heaven and Church which are in celestial good, which is the good of love. 594⁹. (It is said, 'as the sun and moon,' because from 'the sun' is predicated eternity as to the Divine good; and from 'the moon, Divine truth. E.684²⁴.)

—⁹. As the Lord appears to those in the Celestial Kingdom as a Sun, and to those in the Spiritual Kingdom as a Moon, it is said, 'They shall fear Thee with the sun, and before the moon a generation of generations' (Ps.lxxii.5) . . . The light which proceeds from the Lord as a Sun differs from the light which proceeds from Him as a Moon, as the light of the sun in the world by day differs from that of the moon by night . . . Thus those who are in the light of the Sun there are in pure Divine truth . . .

—¹⁰. That the truth in the Celestial Kingdom shall then become the good of love, is meant by, 'the light of the sun shall be sevenfold, as the light of seven days . . .' (Is.xxx.26). Ex.

—¹¹. That there shall not perish the good of love to the Lord . . . with those who are in that Church, is meant by, 'Thy sun shall no more go down' (Is.lx.20). For the Lord appears to those who are in the good of love to Him as a Sun . . . and therefore by 'thy sun' is signified the good of love to the Lord.

—¹⁴. In all these passages 'the sun and moon darkened'=that there was no longer any good or any truth.

—¹⁵. Since such things are signified by 'the sun darkened,' the sun was darkened when the Lord was upon the cross, because He had been completely rejected . . .

—¹⁶. 'To cause the sun to set' (Amos viii.9)=evil of life. . . For 'the rising of the sun'=the good of love, which is the good of life; and 'the setting of the sun'=evil of love, which is evil of life.

—¹⁸. That the sun is said to have 'stood still in Gibeon' (Josh.x.)=that the Church had been completely devastated as to all good. Ex.

—¹⁹. 'Her sun shall go down while it is yet day' (Jer.xv.9)=that the good of the Church is about to perish, although the Church has the Word . . . 721⁷.

—²⁰. 'Then the moon shall blush, and the sun be ashamed' (Is.xxiv.23)=that there will no longer be any reception of Divine truth and Divine good; for 'moon' and 'sun'=the truth of faith and the good of love; and these are said 'to blush and be ashamed' when they are no longer received, but falsity and evil are received in their place.

—²¹. 'The sun' is said to have been made 'to rule by day' (Ps.cxxxvi.8) because 'day'=the light of the spiritual man, and he has enlightenment and perception from the good of love; and 'the moon and stars' are said to have been made 'to rule by night,' because 'night'=the light of the natural man; and its light, as compared with the light of the spiritual man, is like the light of night from the moon and stars as compared with the light of day from the sun. —²².

—²³. 'Praise Him, sun and moon' (Ps.cxlviii.3)=the good of love and the truth from that good.

—²⁴. 'The sun' (Deut.xxxiii.13)=the good of love to the Lord from the Lord, which is the good possessed by those in the Celestial Kingdom.

—²⁵. 'I will make thy suns like rubies' (Is.liv.12)=that goods will be brilliant from the fire of love; 'suns,' here, =the goods of love.

— That 'the sun'=the good of love, is evident also from the fact that 'suns' are mentioned in the plural.

—²⁷. 'He makes his sun to rise on the evil and on the good' (Matt.v.45)=that the Lord inflows from Heaven with the Divine good of love . . . equally with those outside the Jewish Church and with those within it. 644²³.

—²⁸. As 'the sun'=the Lord as to Divine love, He is called 'the Sun of righteousness;' and 'a Sun and Shield.'

— As 'the sun'=the good of love to the Lord with man, 'from the rising of the sun to its going down'=all who are in the good of love to the Lord, from primes to ultimates. Ill.

— By 'the setting of the sun' is also signified the state of the Church when it is in ignorance, which is its first state; and by 'the rising of the sun' is signified its state when it is in light. —²⁹. Ill.

— By 'the setting of the sun' is also signified the state of the Church when it is in evils and the derivative falsities; and by 'the rising of the sun,' its state when in goods and the derivative truths. —³⁰. Ill.

—³¹. In the opposite sense, 'the sun'=the love of self. Ill.

— With the Ancients . . . 'the sun'=the Lord as to the Divine good . . . and therefore in worship they turned their faces to the rising of the sun; and those among them who were in the love of self, and were therefore merely natural and sensuous, began to worship as their chief gods the sun and the moon which they saw with their eyes . . . and therefore by 'the sun' is signified the love of self, and by 'the moon,' the derivative falsity. (Moreover) in the other life such avert their faces from the Lord, and turn them to something there which is dark, and which is in the place of the sun and moon of the world, and opposite to the Sun and Moon of the angelic Heaven. By persons such as these the worship of the sun and moon was instituted in ancient times, when all Divine worship was representative. But at this day, when representatives have ceased, the worship of the sun and moon does not exist in the Christian world, but in its place the worship of self, which exists with those in whom the love of exercising command predominates.

—³². That in ancient times the sun and moon were worshipped, is evident from the fact that the Gentiles dedicated fanes to them. . . That the Egyptians, Jews, and Israelites also did so, is evident from the Word. Ill.

—³⁴. As the love of self lets man into his proprium, and keeps him in it . . . and as the proprium of man is nothing but evil, and from evil comes all falsity, by 'the heat of the sun' is signified adulterated truth, which in its essence is the falsity of evil. Ill.

—³⁵. 'The rising of the sun' (in the parable of the sower)=the love of self.

—³⁶. 'The sun which beat upon the head of Jonah' =the love of self which prevailed in that nation. Ex.

—³⁹. 'The sun shall be no more thy light by day' (Is.lx.19)=merely natural love.

412². The Lord's 'face,' in the proper sense, is the Sun of the angelic Heaven; for the Lord appears to the Angels of the interior Heavens as a Sun, and this from His Divine love . . .

—⁴. For all in the Spiritual World, without exception, are illuminated by the light which is from the Lord as a Sun; but still those only become intelligent and wise who are at the same time in love . . . These alone see the Sun in Heaven; the rest see merely the light.

—¹⁶. Not even any Angel can see the Lord's face, because it is the Divine love; and no one can endure the Divine love such as it is in itself; it would be like letting the eye into the very fire of the sun . . . and therefore to those in the interior Heavens the Lord appears as a Sun, and that Sun is encompassed with many radiant circles, which form coverings one after another, in order that the Divine love may proceed to the Angels in Heaven tempered and moderated. . . The Lord therefore appears as a Sun to the Angels of the higher Heavens only; while to the Angels of the lower Heavens He appears merely as light, and to the rest as a moon. Further ex.

422¹². As the Lord is the Sun of the angelic Heaven, and as all the Divine truth which enlightens Angels and men . . . proceeds from Him as a Sun . . . it is said, 'As light in the morning when the sun ariseth, a morning without clouds . . . ' (2 Sam.xxiii.4).

[E.] 525. For the Lord appears there as a Sun before those who are in the good of love from Him to Him ; and as a Moon before those who are in the good and truth of faith : Hence it is that by 'the sun' is signified the good of love . . . That that sun, that moon, and those stars appeared to John, may be evident from the fact that he was in the spirit when he saw them. 526.

—⁸ The sun, in the opposite, = all evil springing from the love of self.

594². 'The sun' = the Divine love.

655⁷. 'To be hung up before the sun' (Num.xxv.4) = condemnation and curse on account of the destruction of the good of the Church.

659². 'To spread them out to the sun, the moon, and all the army of the heavens' (Jer.viii.2) = to deliver them over to diabolical loves, and to the derivative evils and falsities which are from Hell ; for 'the sun' = love in both senses ; 'the moon,' faith in both senses as derived from that love . . .

678³. For the light of Heaven, from which are all the wisdom, beauty, and magnificence in the Heavens, proceeds from the Lord as a Sun ; and it is the Lord's Divine love which appears to the Angels as a Sun. Thus the light of Heaven . . . is the Divine love proceeding . . .

706¹⁶. By 'the Sun' which should 'go back' (on the sun-dial of Ahaz, Is.xxxviii.8) is signified the advent of the Lord. Ex.

707. 'A woman encompassed with the sun' (Rev.xii.1) = the Church with those who are in love to the Lord, and thence in love towards the neighbour. . . For 'the sun' = the Lord as to the Divine love, thus also love to the Lord from the Lord ; and 'to be encompassed' = to live from that love. Ex.

719. (The apparent rising and setting of the sun fully ex.)

726³. For the Lord appears in the Spiritual World as a Sun, from the Divine love. Everything which proceeds from that Sun is called Divine truth ; and that which proceeds, the same produces. That which proceeds is also Himself, because it is from Himself ; and therefore the Lord in the Heavens is the Divine truth.

—⁴. From the Lord as a Sun there, have in like manner emanated auras and atmospheres . . . Therefore there are three Heavens . . .

799¹⁷. 'In (the heavens) hath He set a tabernacle for the sun' (Ps.xix.4) = the Lord as to the Divine love dwelling in the Heavens in the good of His own love.

944². (Natural) heat and light are from the sun ; for they are from that which is in the sun. In the sun there is pure fire ; this fire outside the sun is heat (decreasing according to the distance . . . (So with) the heat and light which proceed from the Lord as a Sun in Heaven. The Lord there as a Sun is the Divine love ; and the heat thence proceeding is the Divine good, (which is) the Divine love in its extension . . . 1076². 1093¹. 1124². 1228².

1111⁴. The Divine called 'the Father,' and the Divine Human called 'the Son,' appear there before the Angels as a Sun ; and the Divine which proceeds thence, as light united to heat . . .

1196². There are two suns, the Sun of the Spiritual World, and the sun of the natural world ; (the former) is the Lord's Divine love ; (the latter) is pure fire. From the Sun which is Divine love every work of creation has commenced ; and by means of the sun which is fire it has been carried to completion. Everything which proceeds from the Sun which is Divine love is called spiritual ; and everything which proceeds from the sun which is fire is called natural. What is spiritual, from its origin, has life in it ; but what is natural, from its origin, has nothing of life in it. And as from these two fountains of the universe there have come into existence and there subsist all things which are in both worlds, it follows that in every created thing in this world there is what is spiritual and what is natural . . . 1218².

1207². Nature commences from the sun of the world ; and life commences from the Sun of Heaven. The sun of the world is pure fire ; and the Sun of Heaven is pure love. That which proceeds from a sun which is pure fire is called nature ; and that which proceeds from a Sun which is pure love is called life . . .

—⁴. For this end the sun of the world was created ; and, by means of the sun, nature ; and, lastly, the terraqueous globe, in order that there might be ultimate matters into which everything spiritual might cease, and in which creation might subsist ; to the end also that the work of creation might therein continually persist and endure . . .

1209². In every spiritual thing there are three forces

... The force of acting, being spiritual, proceeds from the first fountain of all forces, which is the Sun of Heaven, and which is the Lord's Divine love; and love is the active agent itself. . .

—^e. In plants . . . the heat and light of the sun of the world do (nothing) more than to so open and dispose the things proper to nature that they may receive the influx from the Spiritual World. D.Love^{xxi}.

1228². Love and Wisdom in the Lord are not two, but one; and this One is the Divine Love which appears before the Angels as a Sun. But when love and wisdom proceed from the Lord as a Sun, they appear as two distinct things: love appears as heat, and wisdom as light. . . D.Wis.i.

D. Love iii. The Lord is indeed in the Sun which appears to the Angels in the Heavens . . . but still, outside of that Sun, love with wisdom is also the Lord. The distance is only an appearance. Ex.

xiv². There are two origins of all loves and affections; one, the Sun of Heaven which is pure Love; and the other, the sun of the world which is pure fire. They whose love is from the Sun of Heaven are spiritual and alive . . . whereas they whose love is from the sun of the world are natural and dead . . . These are they who are meant in the Word by the worshippers of the sun, moon, etc.

D. Wis. iii¹. By the Lord, here and elsewhere, is meant the Divine which proceeds from Him as the Sun of Heaven . . .

4². As everything which proceeds from the Lord as a Sun is Man in least things and in greatest . . . therefore extension into any other form than the human is not possible . . .

xii. 1. That the Lord is the Sun in the angelic Heaven. Gen.art.

2. That that Sun is the origin of all things. Ex.

3. That from that Sun there is the presence of the Lord everywhere. Ex.

— The Sun of Heaven is that from which is the sun of the world.

—². But the presence of the Sun of Heaven is universal, not only in the Spiritual World . . . but also in the natural . . . Without that Sun no animal could live, nor could any plant come forth . . . The presence of this Sun also comes forth by means of heat and light . . . to which the light and heat of the sun of the world give subsidiary aid . . . But the presence of the Sun of Heaven by means of spiritual heat and light . . . is universal and dominant in both the Spiritual World and the natural, whereas the presence of the sun of the world is a special one for the natural world only . . . Moreover, the presence of the Sun of Heaven is not in the extense of space and time; whereas the presence of the sun of the world is in these . . . Hence it is that the presence of the Sun of Heaven is omnipresence.

—³. The presence of the Sun of Heaven, regarded in itself, is constant; for the Sun of Heaven is always in its rising and in its power; but . . . it is varied according to the reception. In this respect the sun of the world corresponds to the Sun of Heaven. Ex.

5². The proceeding Divine is that which, around the Lord, appears to the Angels as a Sun; and from this His Divine proceeds through spiritual atmospheres. . .

—². The Sun of Heaven in which is the Lord is the common centre of the universe. . .

Ang. Idea. The proximate proceeding Divine is that which appears before the Angels as a Sun. The reason this appears before their eyes fiery and flaming, is that the proceeding Divine is the Divine love and the Divine wisdom . . . The Angels have said that from that Sun, as from a great centre, circles proceed, one after another, and one from another, down to the ultimate . . . These circles . . . are the spiritual atmospheres, which are in-filled with the light and heat from their Sun . . . and in the ultimate, by means of these atmospheres, and afterwards by means of natural atmospheres from the sun of the world, there was effected the creation of the earth.

Ath. 153. The Ancients pictured God as a Man, with His head surrounded with a radiant circle as of the rays of the sun; and the moderns do the same, and this from the common idea which all have from Heaven that God is like a Sun, or that there is a Sun around God.

190. This Love, or Sun, is His Divine love proximately proceeding from Him . . .

5 M. 16. On the Sun of the Spiritual World. Gen.art.

— As they walked along they first turned their faces to the east, where they saw the Sun shining in its strength; and, when they were under its direct rays, the novitiates asked the Angels about that Sun, as to whether it was the sun which they had seen in the former world. Ex.

— The essence of that Sun is pure Love; and the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the God of Heaven and earth, and one with God the Father, is in the midst of it.

17. The Divine love proximately proceeding from Him, and encompassing Him, appears as a Sun; and therefore, through the light and heat which proceed thence, He has omnipresence, omniscience, and omnipotence from end to end of both worlds. But the sun from which nature has come into existence is pure fire, in whose light and heat there is nothing of love and wisdom, thus nothing of life, but still it serves as a covering and clothing of life, that is, of wisdom and love, in order that the forms of these lives may endure—consistent, and may have as it were times and spaces . . . On hearing these things the novitiates . . . said, We feel our hearts exulting with joy, in a way they never did before. The Angels replied, This happens to you from the celestial and spiritual love and its delight which proceed from our Sun.

Can. God. iv. 7. Jehovah God, by means of the Sun in the midst of which He is, created the Spiritual World; and, by means of this, mediately, the natural world.

Such can be humble before the Lord, and feel good in their hearts. It is a species of pride distinct from that which is commonly known. Such have been with me (Solomon); and, when he was present, all the Spirits were compelled to depart to a distance, lest they should be covered over with such a misty sphere . . .

7996. See PASSOVER, here. 7997. 8001.

8352³. Hence meat and drink nourish the body better . . . when a man at his supper or dinner is at the same time in the delight of conversing with others about such things as he loves. Ex.

S. 9^e. That the spiritual sense of the Word will be opened at the end of the Church, is signified . . . also by 'the Great Supper' (Rev. xix.) 25. T. 207.

R. 219. 'I will sup with him, and he with Me' (Rev. iii. 20)=that the Lord conjoins Himself with them, and them with Himself. (=a communication to them of the happinesses of Heaven. E. 252.)

— It is said 'to sup,' and 'the Lord's Supper,' because supper takes place in the evening, and by the evening is signified the last time of the Church; and therefore when the Lord went away out of the world, it being then the last time of the Church, He supped with His disciples, and instituted the Sacrament of the Supper. 816^e.

816. 'Blessed are they who are called to the marriage supper of the Lamb' (Rev. xix. 9)= . . . that there is eternal life for those who receive the things which are of the Lord's New Church. (=that those will come into Heaven who are conjoined with the Lord through truths from the Word, and that they become of the Church. E. 1225.)

—⁴. The reason it is called 'the marriage supper of the Lamb,' is that this happens in the last state of the Church, which is called 'evening,' and suppers take place in the evening. In the evening, man is called to the Church, and, when those who have been called are present, it is morning.

831. 'Come, and gather yourselves together to the supper of the Great God' (Rev. xix. 17)=the Lord . . . convoking . . . to the New Church, and to conjunction with Himself, and thus to eternal life.

M. 19. They supped with that privy-counsellor; and, after supper, they . . . separated, each to his own bedroom.

T. 433. That the diversions of charity are suppers, etc.

— In the Primitive Church . . . suppers signified consociations and conjunctions in the first state of the establishment of the Church; for evening, when they took place, signified this state. (Continued under DINNER.)

D. 6088. When it is time for dinner, and also for supper, a table appears with food; and it disappears when they have dined or supped. J. (Post.) 323.

E. 252. Mention is made of 'supping,' because weddings took place when there were suppers . . .

— As 'suppers'=consociations by love, and the communication of delights then, the Lord compared the Church and Heaven to a supper, and also to weddings. III.

548⁵. Heaven and the Church as to spiritual nourishment, that is, instruction, are signified by 'the great supper' to which they were invited (Luke xiv.). (Compare 695^e.)

1225. 'A supper'=consociation by love, and communication.

Supplant. Supplantare.

A. 3597³. 'Is not he rightly named Jacob? for he hath supplanted me these two times' (Gen. xxvii. 36)=his quality in that he has inverted order.

Life. 31. (This is) to supplant everything of religion.

E. 710²⁰. As Jacob and his descendants were such, and as they had rejected all such good, and this from the very first, it is said of Jacob that 'he supplanted his brother in the womb' (Hos. xii. 3).

Supplicate. Supplicare.

Supplication. Supplicatio.

6563. Supplication and repentance. Sig. and Ex.

7391. 'Supplicate to Jehovah' (Ex. viii. 8)=humiliation, from weariness. . . For he who supplicates is in humiliation. . . The reason that 'to supplicate'=humiliation, is that the Angels do not attend to the supplication, but to the humiliation in which the man is when he is supplicating; for supplication without humiliation is only a voice sounding, which does not come to the hearing or perception of the Angels.

7396. 'To supplicate,' here (ver. 9) because it is for another, =intercession. 7462. 7591. 7596. 7698.

8353. Supplication to the Lord from a feeling of grief. Sig.

8391. He who leads a life of faith performs repentance daily; for he reflects upon the evils in him, acknowledges them, is on his guard against them, and supplicates the Lord for aid . . .

[A.] 8588³. That nation . . . was unwilling to supplicate Him for aid; but expostulated. Sig.

9202. Intense supplication is expressed in the Word by 'a cry,' for the reason that a supplication, even a silent one, of those who supplicate from the heart, is heard in Heaven as a cry. D.4821.

—⁶. But affections of evil and falsity are not at all heard in Heaven, even if the man who supplicates from them, cries aloud . . . These are heard in Hell . . .

9217. 'To cry unto Jehovah'=supplication to the Lord.

T. 73². I said, I will supplicate to the Lord . . .

528. That actual repentance is . . . to supplicate to the Lord . . . Ex.

538. That confession ought to be made . . . and then supplication for aid and power to resist evils. Ex.

539. Two duties are incumbent on man after self-examination: supplication, and confession. The supplication must be that the Lord will have mercy, that He will give the power to resist the evils of which the man has repented, and will supply the inclination and affection to do good, since man 'without Him can do nothing.'

—². Supplication for the remission of sins ought not to be made before the Lord, for the following reasons. Ex.

D. 1850. How those are represented who suppose that they will merit Heaven by humiliations and supplications.

2678^e. When I have supplicated the Lord's Prayer . . .

4623. In the other life it is sacrilege to supplicate anyone not to do what is evil, because this is addressed to the devil.

E. 803³. In order to desist from these evils, and to shun and be averse to them, the man must supplicate the Lord for aid.

805⁴. The customary supplication in the Churches, and by the men of the Church . . . is, May God the Father have mercy upon us for the sake of the Son, and for the sake of the passion of His cross. This supplication flows from the received faith . . . Hence this supplication is at this day accepted by the general congregation as the only voice which can enter Heaven . . . Yet that such a supplication has in it nothing of life from truth and good, may be evident from what has been said . . .

936². Provided he . . . supplicates the Lord for aid.

938². In order that man may be able (to desist from evils), there has been given him the freedom . . . also of supplicating the Lord for aid.

3954. In the supreme sense, it = the Divine love.

3966. In the supreme sense, it = Foresight.

4071. The supreme sense, which treats of the Lord, is such that it appears divided in the sense of the letter, but it is one in the supreme internal sense.

4212. In the supreme sense, it = conjunction through good and truth in the Lord's Natural.

4279². The supreme sense of the Word, in which the Lord is treated of, is for the Third Heaven . . . Man is such that the interior, and also the internal, and the supreme sense, can be communicated to him; for man communicates with the three Heavens . . .

4302. In the supreme sense, in which the Lord is treated of . . .

4402. As the things in the supreme sense are concerning the Lord, and surpass the ideas of man's thought, for they are Divine, (we may illustrate this by the regeneration of man). 6716⁴. 6827.

[A.] 4570^e. For that which is represented, in the supreme sense, relates to Him.

5576⁴. In the supreme sense, it=the Divine good of the Divine love for saving the human race.

5688^e. The Word contains heavenly things, and, in the supreme sense, Divine ones.

6343². In the inmost and supreme sense, there is the Divine marriage which is in the Lord, thus the Lord Himself.

6827. In the whole Word, in its inmost or supreme sense, it treats of the Lord alone, and of the glorification of His Human; but, as the inmost or supreme sense transcends the human understanding, we may explain the Word as to its internal sense . . .

7193^e. Therefore the things which are understood of the Lord in the supreme sense, are understood of the faithful in the relative internal sense.

7823. In the supreme sense, by 'the passover' is represented the damnation of the unfaithful, and the deliverance of the faithful by the Lord, when He had been glorified . . .

8443. In the supreme sense it treats of the Lord Himself; in which sense also there is the veriest Divine truth.

8665. In the supreme sense, where Divine good and truth Divine are treated of, there is consociation as to a Divine celestial state.

8688. In the supreme sense, where it treats of the Lord, there are Foresight and Providence.

9407¹¹. Therefore in the supreme sense of the Word, it treats of the Lord alone, of His love, Providence, His Kingdom in the Heavens and on earth, and especially of the glorification of His Human. 9503².

10076. 'A ram'=the good of innocence and charity in the internal man; and, in the supreme sense, the same in the internal of the Lord's Human.

10178^e. For all things which in the internal sense=such things as are of the Church and Heaven, in the supreme sense=Divine things.

A. 1770^e. They wanted to confirm this by an oath, but it was not permitted. 3474^e. D.2061^e.

2720^e. 'Swear unto me here by God' (Gen.xxi.23)=affirmation.

—7. 'They sware both of them' (ver.31)=from conjunction.

2723. 'An oath'=conjunction.

2842. 'By Myself have I sworn, saith Jehovah' (Gen. xxii.16)=irrevocable confirmation from the Divine. . . His confirming it as it were by an oath, as here and elsewhere in the Word, is not that it may be more true, but because it is said to such as do not receive truth Divine unless it is so confirmed. . . Everyone may know that the Lord never confirms anything by an oath; but when the Divine truth, and its confirmation, passes down to a man of such a nature, it is turned into the semblance of an oath.

—2. That 'to swear,' where it is predicated of Jehovah, =to confirm with a man who is of such a nature. III.

—The like is the case with a covenant as with an oath. III.

—3. 'To make a covenant' regards the Divine good; 'to swear,' the Divine truth. 3375.

—9. From this it is evident that they were permitted to swear by the name of Jehovah, or by Jehovah; but it is also evident that it was nothing but a representative of the confirmation of the internal man.

—But internal men, that is, those who have conscience, have no need to confirm anything by an oath. . . To them, oaths are a cause of shame. They can indeed say with some asseveration that a thing is so, and can also confirm the Truth by reasons; but to swear that it is so, they cannot. They have an internal bond, by which they are bound, namely, that of conscience. To superadd to this an external bond, which is an oath, is like imputing to them that they are not upright in heart. The internal man is such that he loves to speak and act from freedom, and not from compulsion. . . On this account they who have conscience do not swear; still less do they who have a perception of good and truth, that is, celestial men. These do not even confirm. . . by reasons; but only say that a thing is so, or is not so; and therefore they are still further removed from [taking] an oath.

—10. For these reasons, and because oaths were among the representatives which were to be abrogated, the Lord taught that we are to 'swear not at all' (Matt. v.33-37). By these words is meant that one should not swear at all by Jehovah, nor by anything which belongs to Jehovah or the Lord. 9166^e, Ex.

3037. 'Who spake to me, and who sware to me, saying' (Gen. xxiv. 7) = from which was His Divine willing and understanding. . . 'To swear' = confirmation from the Divine; (which) is predicated of truths, which are of the understanding. When it is said of Jehovah that He 'speaks,' it is meant that He wills. . . and when it is said that He 'swears,' it is meant that He understands it to be true. Thus by 'to swear' is signified to understand, when it is predicated of Jehovah.

3329. 'Swear to me as this day, and he sware to him' (Gen.xxv.33)=confirmation. . . as to time.

3375. 'I will establish the oath which I sware to Abraham thy father' (Gen.xxvi.3)=confirmation.

—e. By the confirmation, here, which is signified by 'the oath,' is meant the conjunction of the Lord with those who are in His Kingdom; for an oath is the confirmation of a covenant; and by a covenant is signified conjunction.

3459. 'They sware a man to his brother' (Ex.xxvi. 31)=confirmation with those who are in the good of truth; for 'to swear,' or 'an oath,' =confirmation.

—2. As this is so, it is not said that they made a covenant with Isaac; but that 'they sware a man to his brother'; for 'a covenant' is predicated of good, which is of love and charity; but 'an oath,' of truth, which is of faith.

4208. 'Jacob sware by the Dread of his father Isaac' (Gen.xxxi.53)=confirmation from the Divine Human. . . That oaths were made by the Divine Human of the Lord. Ref.

6186. 'He said, swear to me' (Gen.xlvii.31)=that it may be irrevocable; for 'to swear'=irrevocable confirmation. 6187.

6589^e. Therefore to 'swear to give the Land to them' (Gen.l.2) = to confirm that they should come to the state of the Church in which the Ancients had been. Ex.

—3. 'To swear' = to confirm from the Divine. Refs.

8055. 'Which He sware to thy fathers to give thee' (Ex.xiii.5)=which had been promised by the Divine to those who are in good and truth. 'To swear,' when by Jehovah, =irrevocable confirmation by the Divine. Hence 'to swear to give' = a promise.

—2. The reason why, among the Israelitish and Jewish nation, it was allowable to swear by Jehovah, was that they were not internal but external men. . . When the confirmation of truth falls into the external man separated from the internal, it is effected by means of an oath: it is otherwise when it falls into the external man through the internal; for in the internal man truth appears in its own light; whereas in the external without the internal truth appears in darkness.

[A. 9166]. The passage 'Swear not at all . . . neither by heaven . . . nor by the earth . . . neither by Jerusalem . . . neither shalt thou swear by thy head,' involves that truths Divine are to be confirmed by the Lord, and not by man; which is done when men are internal and not external; for external men confirm these things by oaths, but internal men by reasons; and those who are still more interior men do not confirm them, but merely say that it is so or is not so. 9942¹¹.

—⁴. 'To swear by heaven'=by the Divine truth, thus by the Lord there . . .

—⁵. 'To swear by the earth'=by the Church, thus by the Divine truth there . . .

—⁶. 'To swear by Jerusalem'=by the truth of doctrine from the Word . . .

—⁷. 'To swear by one's head'=by the truth which the man himself believes to be true, and which he makes to be of his faith . . .

9188⁶. 'Those who swear to what is false' (Mal.iii.5)=those who confirm falsities.

9809⁴. 'Jehovah hath sworn and will not repent' (Ps.ex.4)=what is firm and certain.

10443. 'To whom Thou hast sworn in Thyself' (Ex. xxxii.13)=confirmation from the Divine; for 'to swear,' when predicated of the Lord,=irrevocable confirmation from the Divine.

10527. 'Which I have sworn to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, to thy seed will I give it' (Ex.xxxiii.1)=promised to those who, from the Lord, are in the good of love and the truths of faith: for 'to swear,' when by Jehovah,=confirmation from the Divine in the internal man, thus also a promise from the Divine; for that which has been promised by the Divine has also been confirmed.

R. 474. 'The Angel . . . lifted up his hand unto heaven, and swore by Him that liveth for ever and ever' (Rev.x.5)=attestation and testification of the Lord by Himself. . . 'To swear'=testification.

—². That Jehovah swears, that is, testifies, by Himself. III.

— . That Jehovah, that is, the Lord, 'has sworn by Himself'=that the Divine truth bears witness . . . (which) testifies from itself, and by itself.

— . The reason it is said that 'Jehovah swore,' is that the Church instituted with the sons of Israel was a representative one, and hence the conjunction of the Lord with the Church was represented by a covenant, such as is made between two who swear to their compact . . . and, as an oath was a part of a covenant, it is said that 'Jehovah swore'; by which, however, is not meant that He swore; but that the Divine truth attests it.

—³. That an oath was a part of a covenant. III.

— . As a covenant was representative of the conjunction of the Lord with the Church, and, reciprocally, of the Church with the Lord; and as an oath was a part of a covenant, and was to be sworn from the truth in itself, and thus also by it, it was permitted the sons of Israel to swear by Jehovah, and thus by the Divine truth. III.

—⁶. But after the representatives of the Church had been abrogated, the use of oaths in covenants was also abrogated by the Lord. III.

T. 297. 'To take the name of Jehovah God in vain'=the abuse of it . . . also in oaths without cause . . . But to swear by God and His holiness, the Word, and the Gospel, in coronations, in augurations into the priesthood, and in initiations into fidelity, is not to take the name of God in vain, unless the swearer afterwards casts aside his promises as vain.

340²⁴. 'He that sweareth in the earth shall swear by the God of truth' (Is.lxv.16). 'To swear'=to instruct one's self in Divine goods, and to apply them to life. The reason this is signified by 'to swear,' is that 'an oath,' in the internal sense,=confirmation in one's self and conviction that it is so, and this is effected from good by means of truths . . . —²⁵.

455¹⁴. 'Every tongue shall swear' (Is.xlv.23)=that all will confess the Lord who are in good from religion; 'to swear'=to confess, and 'tongue,' religion according to which one lives.

—³. That 'to swear,' when by Jehovah,=confirmation from Himself, or from His Divine. III.

—⁴. The Lord never swears . . . but when the Divine Truth wills to have anything confirmed before men, that confirmation, in its descent into the natural sphere, falls into an oath or into the form of an oath such as is used in the world. III.

—⁷. As the Ancients were allowed to swear by Jehovah God, it follows that it was an enormous evil to swear falsely. III.

—⁸. (Thus) the Ancients, who were in the representatives and significatives of the Church, were allowed to swear by Jehovah God, in order to bear witness to the Truth, and thus by that oath it was signified that they thought what is true and willed what is good. Especially was this allowed to the sons of Jacob . . . for merely natural men want to have the Truth confirmed and witnessed to by oaths; whereas internal or spiritual men do not want this; nay, they are averse to oaths, and shudder at them, especially those in which God and the holy things of Heaven and the Church are appealed to : and are content to say, and to have it said, that a thing is true.

—⁹. As to swear is not of the internal or spiritual man, and as the Lord, when He came into the world, taught men to be internal or spiritual . . . He forbade swearing by God and by the holy things of Heaven and the Church. Sig. and Ex. —¹⁰, Ex.

684²⁰. 'I have made a covenant with My chosen, I have sworn to David My servant' (Ps.lxxxix.3)=the union of His Divine with His Human. 'To make a covenant'=to be united ; and 'to swear'=to confirm the union. 701⁷.

—²⁴. 'Once have I sworn by My holiness, I will not lie unto David' (ver.25)=eternal confirmation, because from the Divine, concerning the Lord, and concerning the union of the Divine of His Human with the Divine Itself.

—²⁶. 'Who sware unto Jehovah, and vowed unto the Mighty One of Jacob' (Ps.cxxxii.2)=irrevocable asseveration before the Lord . . .

696⁶. 'To swear in His name' (Deut.x.20)involves the good of worship . . . for by this it is confirmed that it shall be done. (=to confirm by life. —¹⁰.)

750²⁰. Jehovah is said 'to swear by His soul' (Jer.li. 14 ; Amos vi.8) when He confirms by His Divine truth ; for 'to swear'=to confirm ; and 'the soul of Jehovah,' the Divine truth.

reputation, honour, and gain, and they do not look to what is honourable, sincere, just, Christian good, and the derivative good intentions . . . Against those who do not favour them . . . they nurse deadly hatred. (Their character in the other life described.) 5044.

[D.] 5046. In that nation, more than in others, there is the love of exercising dominion; for the sake of honour, some for that of gain; for they are not wealthy, like other nations, and therefore nearly all seek public employments; and, as they have interior thoughts, in the other life they devise arts which are pre-eminently wicked . . . in order to be eminent above others, and to injure them. — There appeared certain . . . who had been in the equestrian order in Sweden; and I heard the Angels saying about them that they who are such have changed from the nature which they had formerly, in that they think solely about themselves, their own dignity, and their pre-eminence over others; thus that they determine all their thoughts upon themselves . . . while previously that nation was not of such a character. They did not think about themselves from externals, but from internals. So that they have now, by such means, become external men. They said that they deserve, more than others, to be over others, and therefore offices had been given them. But when they were in a certain senate, and began to deliberate about solid matters, it was then perceived by the Angels that they were not able to speak from interior things, and see Things within themselves, and to discriminate from judgment what is good and evil; but merely to speak from the memory, and thus not to judge Things except from their good pleasure; and this because they were now in such a Babel. (Their lot there.)

Gen.iii.1. (page 15). (Swedenborg here speaks of himself as having been introduced into Heaven, and as conversing with Spirits, having become as it were a Spirit himself.)

Ad. 317. These things were written [by me] in the presence of the saints, who were confessing their iniquity. 475.

459. These things were told me, as far as the meaning of the words is concerned, and were almost expressed by words, even by little children, who were then with me, and also spoke through my mouth. They also directed my very hand.

475. I sacredly attest that I have been intromitted into the Kingdom of God by the Messiah Himself, Jesus of Nazareth, and have there spoken with heavenly Genii, with Spirits, with the dead who have risen again, yea with those who called themselves Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Esau, Rebecca, Moses, Aaron, and the Apostles, especially Paul, and James; and this now through a period of eight months, almost continually, except during the journey from London to Sweden; and continually while these things were written by me which are now made public. Yea, they themselves, or their angels, and many others, most accurately introduced the ipsissima verba. . . It is granted me to add this only: that in a certain manner I have been intromitted into Heaven itself, not merely as to the mind, but also as it were with the whole body, or with the sense in the body, and that too when I was quite awake.

— What has been written about myself I am not yet able so to confirm that I can call God to witness concerning it, for I cannot know whether every single word of the description is such and so accurate as to be quite identical. Wherefore, at some other time, God deeming it worthy, it may be amended, and indeed so that then I may quite seem to myself to speak things true.

541. The Kingdom of God was first shown me in the repose of sleep, but afterwards sometimes in the middle of the day, or in a time of wakefulness, so that I perceived it most clearly with the very sense itself. That is to say, how Angels from Jehovah the Only Begotten Son of God descended and ascended as by a ladder and by means of voices oft repeated, conveyed a voice from on high even to my ear. Also how innumerable heavenly Spirits, and also among them the saints who are dead, were so consociated together as to form one body, and thus as it were one man; and how they flowed in unanimously, so that not the least discordance could be felt, and this to the very sense, as clearly as objects are wont to do to the outward sense, and indeed with a clear voice and dictate, as from one [person], to this effect: that this is an effigy of the Kingdom of God itself. The sweetness and bliss flowing thence was so great that it cannot be expressed in words. For it deeply penetrated in an unspeakable way the fibres and inmost marrow, and affected them. Of His infinite mercy and grace to me His servant the most unworthy of all, the Messiah has given to feel manifestly the above named effigy at various times, and so frequently within the space of two years, the heavenly sweetnesses and happinesses, that I pass over enumerating the occasions. Wherefore I am not able to refrain from bearing witness to it.

943. I am able to asseverate by God that I have experienced so sensibly the government of the mind through Spirits, that I suppose it would scarcely be possible to feel it more sensibly, and this now for the space of almost eight months, within which, by the Divine grace of the Messiah, my mind has been governed through Spirits of His Heaven, with whom I have daily spoken almost continually during that period. They flowed at the time into my mind to the life with spiritual light, and also with the ideas themselves, with every single particle of thought, and with the living words themselves, but which no one present was able to hear. So that I was not able to think anything, not even one atom, that did not thus sensibly inflow, and therefore could not produce one single idea by my own effort, unless it had been left to me that it should appear so. Meanwhile I lived among my friends in my own country for five months, and with all others in society just as before, no one observing the fact that there was such heavenly intercourse going on.

— In the same way as they inflowed into the understanding, did they also inflow into the will, and into the very actions, so that I was led altogether as a mere passive power wheresoever it was pleasing: through ways, streets, to an inn, and round about. They thus sensibly ruled the very movements of the feet, arms, head, eyes, and joints of the body, during the conversations, according to the bidding of the Messiah Himself. So that the Spirits of His Heaven, who according to their own confession, are themselves ruled as passive powers by the Messiah, wondered that I strayed scarcely one step out of the way. It was just as when a person is impelled by a manifest and sensible effort. By all which, through the Divine grace of the Messiah, I have had the clearest experimental proof, that all human thought, will, and action are directed determinately by the Messiah alone. 1147.

— See whether it is allowable to insert these things when the time comes for printing. 317. 1511. 1526. 3/614.

986. These things were told me by those who are in the Heaven of the Messiah Himself.

1003. I am able to attest that, of the pure mercy and grace of the Messiah, I have now lived among those who are in Heaven for a space of eight months just as among my familiars here on earth, and this almost continually, . . . namely, from the middle of April 1745, to the 29th of January, or the 9th of February, 1746, except one month during which I was on my journey into Sweden, where I arrived on the 19th day of August, old style.

1149. Heavenly Spirits have so ruled the actions of the whole body that I went wherever they willed. So sensibly [did they do it] that, without resistance and will, I did not go in a contrary direction. They ruled the steps, every one of them, every portion of a step, all the other movements of the body, of the hands, fingers, arms, eyes, head, just at pleasure as though it were they themselves who were actuating my body. It was indeed left to me to withstand them and to turn myself from their leading into another direction, but this was because assistance was given by the Messiah. . . I have sometimes experienced this throughout a whole day, during conversations about this very thing.

1150. Nay, I have also written whole pages, and the Spirits themselves did not dictate the words, but altogether led my hand, and thus wrote themselves.

1215. (Swedenborg encounters various Spirits whom he calls) Peter, 2/1433; Jacob, 1511. 1526; Abraham and Isaac, 1527. 1528; Solomon, 2/1434. 3/5225. 3/5226; Moses, 2/1676. 2/1865. 3/7612; Abraham, 3/3765.

1409. Thus are the very words inspired by the Messiah, so that they are compelled to say what they ought, and not what they will. This has also sometimes happened to me, through the Divine mercy of the Messiah: that I ought to say words which contained truths which were afterwards explained and thus understood.

1511. This was written merely by my hand as an instrument, they who are like Jacob being present; nor do I doubt that Jacob himself also heard these things.

I saw his face represented to me, not in a dream, but in a state of wakefulness; yet while the eyes were closed. Des. 1526. 1527. 1528. 1645. 1663^o.

[Ad.] 1530. The rest of the things which have been written by me are of such a character that I cannot yet assert that they have been dictated by God Messiah through Abraham or Isaac, for they are such things as will yet need emendation.

1712. If now these things are to be taken in so sinister a sense, I am not able to answer for them; for thus have they been infused into me . . . I abhor writing these things, wherefore they must be told by those who have been permitted to draw such an inference.

2/88. (Swedenborg refers to a spiritual experience of nine months.) (Of ten months, 2/135.)

2/135. The Spirits confessed that they knew no otherwise than that they themselves were the man; although it is otherwise with me, who can answer them, and so can know that they are not men; for I was surrounded by a crowd of many kinds of Spirits by turns.

2/144. That there have been thousands (of Spirits) around me, may be evident from many things, especially from their influx itself, which, by the infinite mercy of God Messiah, has been shown me to the life; and in what way the variety of these influxes produces every effect in the rational mind itself, and in its will.

2/181. Seeing that such viva voce colloquies with the Angels of God Messiah have taken place for so great a space of time with me, and that continually in various ways, as those of a man with a man, no one ought to call into the smallest doubt the colloquies of Jehovah through Angels with Adam, Abel, Noah, Abraham, etc. Or, further, that there are many modes of revelation . . . nay, what is more, [that] all these things which have been written, have heretofore been written in the council of many who had formerly died, of many Spirits, and of the Angels of God Messiah; and in fact so that they have spoken with me about these Things before and after; but still it is allowable to add here only these things: that I have been allowed to say here nothing which has been orally dictated to me by any of them. Whenever this has been done—as sometimes it has been done—it has been obliterated. [I have been allowed to say] only those things which inflowed from God Messiah alone, mediately through them, and immediately. (See T.797.)

2/183. That these things are so, I can attest . . . seeing that by the Divine mercy of God Messiah, these things have happened to me so frequently that they have become quite familiar to me, and also by dreams; first this [that] within a period of a number of years, within which I have learned the significations themselves, as to a part; also the rest of the revelations, and many other things, as letters themselves written before my eyes, and read to me, etc. etc. But to say more about these things is not as yet allowed me.

2/839. What the acts of my life had involved I have been taught afterwards as to some of them, nay, as to many of them, from which I could at last clearly see that the tenor of the Divine Providence has ruled the acts of my life from adolescence itself, and thus has governed, so that at last I arrived at this end: that I could thus understand through the Knowledges of natural Things, and could thus, of the Divine mercy of God Messiah, serve as an instrument for opening the things which lie inmosty concealed in the Word of God Messiah . . . D.3177.

2/1063 et seq. If, as now appears, I am destitute of these (heavenly) things, the Knowledges heretofore given me of the Divine mercy of God Jesus Christ are of no use. Thus in vain have I laboured hitherto. These (interior Knowledges) also have been taken away, so that nothing do I dare, nothing do I know, as to whither I am going. 'The land' is the understanding itself of the mind, which is at the same time taken away, so that I understand almost nothing; for thus do evil Spirits darken me; and the things which I am able to write are given me piecemeal. This is my state at this day, exactly as was foresignified to the Egyptian man; and what they want further I know not. I wait for thy salvation, O God Messiah.

2/1091. I lament the changes of the times. At the time in which Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob lived, [these representatives] were so easy that everyone understood it; and therefore such a speech as this was customary . . .

2/1285. Therefore lest mortals should err, and should perpetually fall backwards . . . of the Divine mercy of God Messiah, Heaven has been so opened, that it has been conceded to me to hold converse with the inhabitants of Heaven for almost an entire year; and thereby to imbine experience in spiritual things, in addition to Knowledges, so that natural things can be conjoined with spiritual ones.

2/1485. These things have been more expressly borne in from Heaven, although they were not dictated, as I could clearly perceive.

2/1558. It has sometimes been permitted Spirits of evil disposition to exercise their anger and vengeance with fury upon me . . . but, of God Messiah, I have remained safe in the midst of them . . . so that they receded amazed . . .

2/1603. But these things (concerning the Jews) are so horrible that I wished to reject them from memory itself . . .

2/1654. As to the voices which are heard so clearly, from whatever place, from afar, wherever it pleases God Messiah . . . and that answers are given in the same way, we have very often treated above . . . But it is God Messiah alone who speaks through Spirits and Angels; for no one lives besides Him. All, whether Angels, Spirits, or men . . . are instrumental causes, as also I have found for the period of a year . . . So that not a word which I set forth and write is mine, as I can sacredly testify. And therefore if anyone should attribute to me one iota of the things written, which are Truths, whether they be on earth, or in Heaven, he inflicts so great an injury on God Messiah Himself, that it can be forgiven by no one except God Messiah Himself. (Note.—Nevertheless . . . as there is no one who is not so weak as to attribute to himself or to man, and lest consciences should thus be hurt, see then how these words may, by the Divine mercy of God, be set forth and altered.)

2/1788°. When I wrote the foregoing, I was in obscurity. 3/810.

3/Pref.°. For I have been long encompassed with a crowd (of Jewish Spirits).

3/23. But all my discourse (which) was as it were (rhythmical), flowed of itself, so that I perceived from this also that I spoke nothing whatever from myself, as neither did I think anything from myself. The thought itself thus went away into such speech; but there was not such speech always.

3/136. Here begin the things which [took place] in the garden; 2nd May, 1746.

3/138. That these things are so, it has happened to me, of the mercy of God Messiah, to know; for I have been sent into the wilderness, namely, that I wrote without affection, and therefore I too was compelled to murmur against those who were taking away affections from me, whom may God Messiah forgive . . . The murmuring lasted some days.

3/337. [The Spirits] have often acted after this type [namely that contained in Ex.xviii.] in this way: they went away and consulted one who held the position of chief, and received answers, which they narrated to me . . . so that the things which I have written may also bear witness to me. Again, it has also happened that they bear sayings, or statements. Nay, they even consult together, as concerning the things which were being written by me, knowing no otherwise than that the consultation comes from themselves . . . and they have been permitted to put into my mind the result of their consultations, which I clearly perceived. But still I could also clearly perceive that [the ideas] did not proceed from them: not a whit was allowed to be put into [my mind] which I had perceived to come from them. Nay, their very thoughts were also amended; and they were thus unaware that all counsels come from God Messiah, and this according to the disposition and understanding of each person. But I have not been allowed to insert anything whatever which was dictated by them circa voce.

3/356. (Refers to the fact that he hears voices of Angels and others speaking from various heights.)

3/614. See whether these things are to be inserted; whether, that is to say, they perform any use in the elucidation of this precept. If not, it must be obliterated.

3/678. For heavenly minds are in the very essences of things; they thence bring forth the meaning into words; and the words follow from the Things themselves. When Angels are speaking, they do not even know what words follow, or of what language they are, and yet they well know whatever lies hidden in each word. I have very often observed this, and have sometimes spoken to them about it; and when I have spoken different languages in which I am skilled, they did not know what language it was, unless I thought (about it) . . .

3/681. In what way the understanding of Things inflows into the words, as when . . . the Lord's Prayer is said from memory. Ex. . . This I can sacredly testify: as for instance this day, 16th May, 1746.

3/707°. This fear (of God) is here described from experience in myself.

3/748. This is evident from many things which it has been granted me to perceive; in that I did not obtain anything which I wanted.

3/865, 6. I was in this state of servitude [treated of in the law respecting the Hebrew servant, Ex.xxi.] when these things were written; for in no way could I be as yet liberated from Spirits, who wanted to compel me to write these things; and therefore they induced obscurity when I wanted to apprehend these things in thought, and thus that the love of the end should be excited, which is that of serving the public; which state came to me gradually, when I could write nothing else with clearness than those things which have been as it were tacitly dictated to me; and yet I know not, with persuasion, whether it is true and good, or not, and still less from affection. I have learned this: that truths have been mixed with things not true; which was the reason of the supplication . . .

[Ad.] 3/1128, 9. How we should guard against the thought of profane and condemned things; for such things then infest the thought of the mind. I have often found that the mere mention of oaths and of profane things has so hurt the mind that I did not know where to turn myself, in order that they might be shaken off. Ex. . . This I can sacredly attest has happened to me during the period of a year; and therefore I could scarcely be in company where such things were repeated.

3/1221. What [was written] on the table, consider if it is allowable then [to reveal it]. As yet I have not been permitted to read it.

3/1250. On the 8th of June, 1746. Profane things (in connection with Moses and the Israelitish people) were said to me, about the evening; and also during the night, in sleep; wicked things, which I want to ignore.

3/2039, 40. The things which it is allowable to deliver here are arcana of Heaven. It has been said above that angelic choirs present to themselves the Kingdom of God Messiah by various kinds of representations . . . one continuous representation lasting an hour, two hours, which I know well from experience . . .

3/2053. As to what regards the inmost sight, it is not so well known to me; still, it has been granted to enjoy this sight once and again, but very obscurely . . .

3/2056. In this way I was able to distinguish the influx of the heavenly Angels (from that of the evil Angels). . . As this day, 23rd June, 1746, o.s. when by persuasions I was allured by one to believe concerning a certain matter that the Thing was such; but still I as it were inmost perceived that it had been a deceitful one, whom I had felt an aversion for. It was about my servant.

3/2390. These things must be observed, because memorable things have happened to me about them; and I have been able to perceive what has been transacted in relation to the privileges . . . between the Churches, the old and the new. 28 June 1746, o.s. Gifts have been sent me; as a bundle of letters—literarum; a basket of apples and oranges, which was not admitted; deliciousnesses.

3/2632. A wonderful thing happened to me this day, in order that it might be confirmed to those who were around me, from the Jews who had died long ago . . . I dreamed, and in fact so that it appeared as if it were in wakefulness, as is usual; and these (Jewish Spirits) were then persuaded that I was awake, so that they answered me as if I were awake. Then suddenly I awoke, and they noticed that I had been dreaming . . . and they were greatly ashamed; one was indignant; another was amazed; a third liked it, because I then said that from that it might be evident how that they live asleep . . .

3/3102. These things have been written in the presence of a number of the Jews, around me; nor do I doubt but that Abraham also is present . . . Yet they turn all things into phantasies, when yet not a whit is phantasy; but there is a continual speaking, like that of a man with a man . . . for fifteen months . . .

3/3149. These things have been written on the 8th day of July, 1746, o.s.; on which day I spoke with Abraham, who gave commands to me that I should write that nothing is done in Heaven except through God Messiah, whom they adore.

3/3340. The things which have happened to me, now and before, when I wrote about the Law delivered on Mount Sinai, are amazing; and are such things as I dare not as yet reveal.

3/3764. The things which have been written here now have appeared to be divinely inspired; for the very words, although not dictated, have still been sensibly inspired. All the other things which have happened in connection herewith are more and are more holy than that they can be revealed here. Still I sacredly confess this: that not a syllable, or the smallest bit of a word of these things, is from me.

3/3765. (For memory.) That I have had much discourse with Abraham, yesterday and to-day . . . Whether these things also are to be inserted, I as yet do not know. I wait [to see] whether leave is given by God Messiah.

3/3783, 4. July 18th, 1746, o.s. (Gives an account of the internal hearing and sight.)

3/3895. For it has very often happened to me that when I was writing my hand was directed into the very words by a higher force, even to the sense, and that sometimes quite a manifest one; and therefore I have often said that these things have not been written by me, but by some one outside of me. Sometimes, also, it has been granted me to know, by what Angel of God Messiah these things have been thus written.

3/3906. (What occurred 20 July, 1746, o.s.)

3/4105. My hand in writing is manifestly directed, inasmuch that the words themselves scarcely appear to have been written by my hand. . . So also (have been ruled) sensibly and for long, my hands, fingers, eyes, feet, and the whole body. This has frequently been done . . . so that I was led when I did not know the way, through streets unknown to me . . .

3/4418. This has been (most) clearly demonstrated to me in a dream this night, between July 26th, 27th, and 28th, 1746, o.s. . .

3/4512. I could never express the horrible temptations which have happened to me . . .

3/4682. It has been granted me to learn these things for 16 months . . .

3/4785. I was spoken to this night in the heavenly manner, namely, by speech which comprehended universal things, which I seemed to understand while I was lying down. But presently, when the senses were fully awake, I could know nothing of what the speech had been; for they were universals . . . August 3rd 1746, o.s.

3/5021. Two or three times, Spirits have personated those who had been known to me during their life. They have stood before me, and I have spoken long with them . . . But still I have just as often doubted whether they were the same, as I have also said to the Spirits . . . But see how this is to be set forth, so that it may be stated prudently; for I do not know whether they were good Spirits . . . and also whether it will not cause men to doubt concerning those visions of which I have spoken above.

3/5191, 2. For, by the Divine mercy of God Messiah, it has also been granted me to learn this by experience: that all things which were objects in the exterior and thus in the interior sight, (the Spirits) quickly translated into spiritual and celestial things, so that a completely different sense was made . . . Nay, sometimes in those things into which their light was insinuated by a more interior choir—as in those which were read in the Word of God Messiah—I saw nothing besides spiritual and celestial things; the literal sense thus perishing.

3/5394. These things which have been written above have been inspired in me by an Angel, who was with me; as I could perceive from the light, and other indications. The words came spontaneously upon the paper, but without dictation.

3/6016. Unless I mistake . . .

3/6317. These things are still very obscure to me, and I cannot at all understand them; and therefore I pass them by; for I have never been so disturbed, and so perplexedly disturbed. July 22nd 1746.

3/6372, 3. For a son of the true Israel is lifted upwards, namely, all his thought is elevated, and is drawn from man towards Heaven and to God Messiah; and is thus completely separated from the body; which has happened to me so often that I cannot number the times.

3/6962. Besides, it is very difficult to express the things which are heavenly . . . for while the mind is in the representations of heavenly things, what they are is indeed comprehended; but presently, when it is admitted to enter nature, the understanding of them is dissipated; nor can I recollect them . . .

3/6965. The Angel who inspires the words into a prophet . . . as here into Moses, is only in spiritual things, and so acts into the mind of him who is being inspired; and thus excites the thought, by which [the ideas] fall into words in the usual way. The words are such as are in the prophet, thus are according to his apprehension . . . But this I can sacrilegiously asseverate, I who am inspired, that there is not the least of a word, there is not an iota, which is not inspired; it is merely varied a little, according to the gift of him who sets the things forth; but still so that there is not even then an iota which is not inspired.

thought is illustrated manifestly with a certain light; and the writing is led, so that not a syllable can be written otherwise; but sometimes more insensibly, and sometimes sensibly, insomuch that the finger is carried into the writing . . . so that if one wants to write something else, it cannot possibly be done; and this not only with an attendant perception of the subject, but even—as has happened once and again with variety—without a perception, so that I did not know the series of Things until after it was written. But this [has happened] very rarely, and only for the sake of the information that revelations are effected in this way also. But these papers have been destroyed, because God Messiah was unwilling that it should be effected in this way. Nor has it been permitted that anything should be dictated viva voce; although they have spoken with me almost continually for so long a time; but while it was being written they were silent . . .

3/7572. (Various kinds of vision described.) I can testify from much experience concerning them all. . . To say nothing of the speech, which has now lasted nearly a year and a half.

When knowledges and the Things of the memory wanted to intrude themselves into spiritual things, and as it were to build them up, I have at once fallen into doubtings; and unless these had been taken away by God Messiah, I should have fallen down flat into the densest darkness, and into doubtings and denials . . .

D. 159.* This morning it has been clearly shown me how Spirits operate into man . . . In wakefulness itself, while I was in the thought which was previously familiar with me, insomuch that I as it were spoke to myself . . . I was in almost the same state as that in which I was before, when Spirits did not speak with me: as also now there is a like state while I am writing these things, and for the most part while I am speaking in company with my associates, as at table, and while I am writing letters . . . After I had been in this state for some time, thus as it were devoid of Spirits around me, all at once that state was changed, and the Spirits began to speak to me, and, leave having been given by God Messiah, they began to narrate to me the state in which they had been while I was as it were with myself in that thought. 216. This I can sacredly attest: that the understanding of Things, especially of interior things, has been frequently and so manifestly taken away from me and turned into something else . . . that I cannot say how often. Ex. Oct. 22nd 1747, o.s.

217. Early in the morning there was a certain spiritual conflict of the Spirits, who greatly wanted to infest me . . . but I was as it were removed . . . and I then observed that there was a general interior sphere, into which I had been taken up . . . and I then also observed that not the least thing exists, which does not come from the direction of God Messiah, and from His mercy towards me; and also that no Spirit could do even the most minute thing except by permission.

219. For a number of years it has been granted me manifestly to feel heavenly delights in various ways. Des. Oct. 24th 1747, o.s.

255. The Ultimate Heaven, in which I was before, was below me . . . Nov. 20th 1747, o.s.

258. That I have been lifted up into a more interior sphere, but with variation, whenever I prayed the Prayer of our Lord.

280. I was conducted in the morning into one of the abodes of the interior Heaven . . .

284. After midnight I awoke twice, and was in living vision . . . Dec. 1st 1747.

* It is to be borne in mind that the Diary (with the exception of the first 148 numbers) was written concurrently with the Arcana Coelestia, but the Diary is here placed first because it is constructively precedent, inasmuch as Swedenborg has made many quotations from it in the Arcana; but he has made no quotations from the Arcana in the Diary.

301. Of the mercy of God Messiah I have been carried up into the more interior Heaven . . . and I spoke with the Angels there . . . which was miraculously effected by such a disposition of the Angels around me . . . and I could thus perceive, although very obscurely, of what nature is (heavenly happiness) . . . Dec. 5th 1747.

329. When I was walking in the street . . . I heard from the Angels that they thence perceived a continual variety of delights; thus from objects of which they perceived nothing. Dec. 10th 1747, o.s.

331. It was told me from Heaven viva voce that . . . Dec. 11th 1747.

339^e. I showed Mohammed the city of Amsterdam . . . Dec. 14th 1747.

379. This day, on first awaking, I was surrounded by numerous Spirits of diverse nature . . . Thus the diabolical crew, from the phantasy of cruelty . . . so insuflated it . . . that I had thence a certain delight which occupied my whole body . . . so that I supposed I was in heavenly joy . . . for I was wholly dissolved in delicious allurements, as of soft warm baths. Ex. . . I spoke about that sweetness, by answers to those who wanted to seduce me . . . Dec. 22nd 1747. 399. Further des. Dec. 25th 1747.

405. From experience I have at last been taught that the Spirits who speak with me are the Subjects . . . of many Spirits. Dec. 26th 1747.

408. During some days there have been some in the Heaven of Spirits who . . . persuaded others that God Messiah is not the Mediator . . . Then God Messiah as it were disappeared from me . . . and thus I was left to the phantasy of those Spirits, in that they acknowledged solely Jehovah the Father of God Messiah . . . Dec. 28th 1747.

418^e. These things have been thought and written in the presence of Spirits. Dec. 29th 1747.

438^e. But these things are not to be thus written for the world, lest they should seek heavenly things in phantasies.

446. While writing this day, an Angel directed the things which I wrote, and indeed so that I thought from it that there was not the least thing which did not take place from the auspices and direction of God Messiah, because [it was directed] to the best end. Jan. 5th 1748.

457. I have observed that Spirits frequently want to excite me to steal. (Continued under STEAL.)

— I know from themselves, as well as from a living voice that . . . Jan. 11th 1748.

458. That a conspiracy to suffocate me was formed in the Heaven of Spirits. Gen.art. Jan. 8th 1748.

461. This so-called Abraham . . . has persecuted me for nearly three years. Des. Jan. 11th 1748. o.s.

485. This day I have spoken with evil and good Spirits about general and particular influx . . . Jan. 17th 1748.

486^e. These things have been stated with the consent of the Angels. Jan. 17th 1748.

519. (First mention of 'the Lord,' by Swedenborg. The Spirits of Jupiter speak to him of 'The Only Lord.') 523. Jan. 24th 1748. 527. 531. (In 541, Swedenborg uses the expression 'The Lord' as his own. Also in 542. 546. 550. 561. 564, and so on for ever afterwards.)

600. Concerning a general Glorification (of the Lord) in the Heavens.—I was long kept in a state of general vision, which almost abstracted me from particular ideas, that is, from corporeal ones; and there appeared as it were a living sparkling of light . . . While in that light, I beheld corporeal things as though beneath me . . . The Spirits and Genii said, sometimes, that I was absent from them; and they did not know where I was, and what I was thinking; and they complained that so I was removed from them . . . See also 607, 608.

604. Moreover, while I was in bed, before I fell asleep, I heard a general singing of Heaven around me, which was that of many Angels of the interior Heaven . . .

605. There is also a general respiration; (for) when I was in that sphere, I was in some measure in it . . . and I observed that the general respiration of Heaven answered to my respiration as three to one; and in like manner the pulsation of the heart. Jan. 30th 1748.

618. When I had taken, one evening, much milk and bread . . . the Spirits kept their senses in [the idea of] intemperance, of which they accused me. Des. Jan. 30th and Feb. 1st 1748.

621. This I can attest: that [I have seen] many of my friends and acquaintances in the other life; thus have had intercourse and have spoken [with them]. They have been with me almost continually, with turns of intermission; and a certain friend was present with me continually, for the space of a month . . . Who they were it is not allowed to say, although they themselves have wanted me to tell this to their friends . . . Feb. 1st 1748

[D.] 624^c. (The Angels of Jupiter) are not willing to admit the word spiritual, as I now observe; because they lead my thoughts, and thus my hand . . .

660. A certain Spirit who . . . died three or four years ago (and had been a philosopher) was with me for nearly a quarter of an hour . . . which I could manifestly perceive by the fact that I began to doubt, or feel coldly, respecting the Lord's government in particulars . . . He is present, and directs the sense of the words. Feb. 6th 1748.

693^e. These things have been spoken in the presence of Spirits and Souls. Feb. 9th 1748. 1076^e.

696^e. These things in the presence of those who constitute one Society. Feb. 9th 1748.

720. See SPIRIT, here.

741^e. All these things have been written in the presence of many Spirits and Angels, who reflected upon the things which were written, and affirmed them. Feb. 11th 1748. 1122a.

755. When I have felt deliciousnesses or pleasantnesses, I did not know whence they were, because it is very difficult for a Soul or Spirit to distinguish between counterfeit deliciousnesses, and those which are . . . heavenly, because the sensation is as yet so gross with them that they do not know the difference. Ex.

760^e. This has been written in the presence of (this Spirit). Feb. 13th 1748. 1125.

817. (Spirits have incited me to buy such garments, and to eat such food, as they desired.) 818. 1333. 1563. 2169. 2954.

821. That Spirits are informed by the Lord by the means of man . . . has been so manifested to me, that the continual experience of nearly two years and three-quarters bears witness to it.

842^e. (Spirits can be led by other Spirits). This has sometimes been done by me; and I wondered that the Spirit did not perceive it, because it was manifest to me. Feb. 18th 1748.

900. When I said (to the Spirits) that (the things I do) have not been done by me, but through me, so that I seem to myself to do them, when yet I have not done the least thing from myself, but the Lord, they wondered still more . . . But still it is the Truth, which cannot be contradicted, nor is it contradicted by any Angel, but confirmed . . . 901. Feb. 21st 1748.

927². He perverted my thoughts without knowing it . . . and this so adroitly that I scarcely knew otherwise than that I was such. This was attended with indignation in me: that I should be kept in such a depraved affection. So in very many other things, which I have forgotten.

948. These things (concerning revenge) relate to myself, such as I was.

1013a. I was thus instructed that I was then in the province of the gall bladder.

1042. I do not yet know (this).

1043. (The attempts of evil Spirits to throw me under carriages, into the water, etc.) 253. 3821.

1145a. For (the Angels) lead my thought to write these things.

1159. The same Spirit acts into both my eyes, and calls forth as it were a certain pungent or urinous liquid in them; so that unless he had left off I could not see or write on account of the pain.

1166. Whereas I have now been nearly three years—that is, thirty-three months—in the state in which, my mind being withdrawn from corporeal things, I could be in the society of the spirituals and celestials; and still I have been like another in the society of men, without any difference . . . yet when, in thought, I have inhaled intensely in worldly things—as when I have had cares about necessary money; and to-day I have written a letter, so that I have kept my attention somewhat on these things—I have then fallen into a state as it were corporeal, so that the Spirits could not speak with me, as they have said; that they were as it were absent. March 4th 1748.

1177. I was obsessed within the head, near the region of the interior palate, as it were by a certain Spirit, who had such command in me that I could scarcely think otherwise than he in me . . . This continued, I suppose, for two hours or more.

1192. There was a certain female, who did not appear to me, flying to my right cheek . . . She signified these inmost things (of the Word), which do not come to my apprehension, but still to something of perception: for the inmost things are such. 3952, Ex. (See also A. 4658⁵, below.)

1200. I seemed to myself to have had this answer in thought . . .

1221b. I have wondered that I could not think and speak with Angels except through Spirits; except that it was granted only to know in some measure that it was angelic; and, according to my inmost perception, I could sometimes have thought that I was thinking angelically; but still it was not so. Ex.

for if I were not to speak, or if I spoke hard things . . . sufferings would be added to them, which would be contrary to mercy and charity; for it is a Christian [duty] to wish well even to them. Besides, some of them had been known to me, in life; and it had not been believed that they would become infernal. A.7479.

1270°. (A Spirit who) could detain my interior thoughts as though fixed, and bend them.

1272. His operation into me (caused) that I was rather miserably tortured in the stomach . . . and this, for some time, until I had cast up, at different times, a nauseous acidity from the stomach. 127S. A.814.

1313a. The Angels of the interior Heaven, then those of the more interior Heaven, and also those of the inmost Heaven, affirmed that this is the Truth. A voice from the Heavens, that they affirmed, came to me successively, through Spirits. March 12th 1748.

133S. I have spoken with about thirty who had been known to me here; and also with thirty who are known in the World. March 14th 1748. (I can now increase the number to sixty. Sep. 24th 1748. 1499.)

134S. I have had an exactly similar sense of touch as in wakefulness; and yet I was a Spirit, and the body was separated: nay, I had a more exquisite sense. (Let these things be repeated, with additional proofs and demonstrations.) See 1754.

134S. I saw, yesterday, two (such palaces) . . .

1389. (There was a Spirit who constantly despised me, but still would not depart; he desired to mix himself up with what I wrote, for then he could believe it [See 1377].) This signifies that there are those who will read these Writings, but will still remain in their own opinions, interpreting them according to their own fancies.

1407. A most manifest perception has been granted me for . . . months, in that I have been led by Spirits through ways, streets, in gyres, according to their will, without their saying anything as to where I should go, or without their introducing anything into my thought . . .

1423°. (The Spirits of Mercury) insert these things.

1465. For a month and more my tongue has been in danger, which originates from those who are averse to interior things . . . 1361.

1469°. It is not allowable as yet to determine anything concerning these varieties, because I am in the company of the celestials, and not in that of the spirituals.

1475°. As I write these things, I am led by the Angels . . . March 17th 1748.

1482. The state of Spirits and Angels is such that none of them can think anything which all the rest do not understand and perceive. For some years, I, too, have not been able to think anything which all present did not perceive; at which I at first felt indignant, and I supposed that I could never be in their company, because I could think nothing by myself without the Knowledge of all. But afterwards, when I perceived that the Lord was leading the thoughts of all, it was no trouble to me. March 17th 1748.

1533. When I had been writing some things, a Spirit who was near on the left . . . thanked me for having helped him to write. I knew that he supposed himself to be me, as usual . . . March 19th 1748. 1852.

1552. I was in vision, and spoke with Spirits, some of whom said that they wanted to have me in their company. After some delay, I was in the company of Genii or of celestial Spirits; and I then disappeared from those with whom I had been before, who were spiritual; and the latter did not know where I had slipped away to. They sought me, saying that they did not know where I was—for I was in the company of Genii, and so seemed to disappear—although I was near, and heard them speaking, and seeking me. 1593.

155S. In the presence of many Spirits, and, as I suppose, of Mohammed, I was thinking with myself, that is, I was speaking silently—for my thought is speech—how wonderful it is that . . . March 19th 1748.

1602. Certain Spirits . . . in order to show me how much they abominated philosophy, represented a wild boar, with his back sprinkled with blood, and would have it that I was such, because I had interspersed philosophical terms, or had formed ideas philosophically. But they were instructed that my philosophical things are nothing else than certain ideas delivered in more simple terms. Examp. March 20th 1748.

1609. I was in the interior Heaven, and certain Spirits were then with me in their own World; and although I was in Heaven, I was not in any ecstatic idea; but was in the body. Ex. . . I was then just as I am while I write these things, but [was] interior in what is exterior, which was the reason why there were Spirits also with whom I was in their World; for our reasoning, and our cupidities, are in the World of Spirits; and the sensuous things in the body answer to them.

1611. The particulars of what the Spirits were doing, I could feel and hear; but not what Heaven was doing, except what they operated in general.

1612. [The Angels] then spoke with me through the Spirits . . .

1623°. It was granted me to experience a hardness at the left side of the brain . . . and I was told that it was perceived thence . . . that there are still things which are not of true faith. March 21st 1748.

1645. When there has been discourse with the celestials, I have scarcely been able to find words which were suited to them. Ex.

[D.] 1647. That the things which I have learned in representations, visions, and speech with Spirits and Angels are solely from the Lord.—Whenever there has been any representation, vision, or speech, I have been held interiorly and inmost in reflection upon it, as to what was useful or good from it, thus as to what I might learn; which reflection was not so [much] attended to by those who presented the representations, etc.; nay, sometimes they were indignant when they perceived that I was reflecting. Thus have I been instructed, consequently by no Spirit, nor Angel, but by the Lord alone from whom is everything true and good. Nay, when they wanted to instruct me about various things, there was scarcely anything but what was false: and therefore I was forbidden to believe anything they said; nor was I allowed to introduce anything which belonged to them. And further when they have wanted to persuade me, I perceived an interior or more interior persuasion that it is not as they wanted, at which they have wondered. The perception was a manifest one, but cannot be easily described to the apprehension of men. March 22nd 1748.

1677°. These things, from the mark, are their words, written from their mouth, or thought.

1681. More things (respecting that Earth) were not conceded, lest they should inhere in my memory.

1706. (In that indeterminate state) I could scarcely know whether I was in the body, or out of the body; for I apperceived nothing of the body, because it was not granted to reflect upon it . . .

1708. The Spirits have often as it were upbraided me, in that I have no life, because, as the case is, I have said that men, Spirits, and Angels do not live from themselves, but from the Lord, and that they are only organs of life . . .

1864. One came to me who appeared to be a noble. (They have appeared to me as in clear daylight, and even more clearly, but before my internal sight). . . He asked me whether I was a Christian, to which I replied that I was. . . He approached me stealthily behind . . . and I felt as it were a stab through the heart, and then in the brain . . . But as I was protected by the Lord, I feared nothing. . . Supposing me to be dead, he told others that he had just come from a man whom he had killed . . . A.816.

1877°. These things [have been written] in the presence of the Angels.

1878°. These (truths) were given me in the Lord's Prayer, while I prayed it this day. April 8th 1748.

1879. In sleep it was represented to me, as it were to the life, that I was elsewhere, namely in Sweden, when yet I knew that I was in Amsterdam . . . April 9th 1748.

1905a. By means of reflections which were given, Spirits have seen through me, as they have often confessed. Whenever it has been granted me that they should reflect upon the objects, they confessed that they saw them . . .

1934. 'To lie down securely, with none to make afraid' (Lev. xxvi. 5, 6, etc.). This has been confirmed experimentally one night this month, when evil Spirits maliciously wanted to terrify me, in bed. They possessed the joints of my whole body with a trembling . . . as if the Souls of the dead had taken complete possession of me, accompanied with terror, and the suggestion that they had been killed or had died in that place . . . But still in that injected terror, I was secure, so as to fear nothing . . .

1935°. These things have been said in the presence of the Angels, and have been confirmed. May 11th 1748.

1936°. This also has been said in the presence of Spirits. May 11th 1748.

1974°. This has been made known to me by a daily experience of three years. May 16th 1748.

1988°. They are exactly like Spirits . . . as the Spirits have often confessed concerning me, not knowing that I was in the body. May 18th 1748.

1996. It has twice happened that I have heard in the streets music from stringed instruments . . . (the effect produced upon the Spirits. Des.)

1997. I therefore joked with them, saying . . .

1998. It is wonderful that the Angels were gladdened by the same thing; but only when I paid less attention to it, so that I did not mingle with it the gladness of the Spirits as communicated to me, but when I as it were heard nothing. So in all other things: the Angels paid more attention when I paid less. Ex. May 19th 1748.

1999. I spoke with good Spirits, who supposed that I was thinking something of evil . . . But it was granted to reply that the case was like that of an image in a mirror . . . for cupidity and evil are excited by evil Spirits . . .

2000. I have sometimes observed that nothing ever comes forth without a stated law, not even the least thing, as that something met the eye, that I moved my hand; but I have also then perceived that I was persuaded in relation to it by means of an influx from Heaven . . . as may be sufficiently evident from this one experience: that no image can appear represented to me, nor any voice be heard, except entirely according to a law from which there could not be the least deviation. May 19th 1748.

2021. Certain Spirits supposed that I alone can view interior things with a spiritual idea, and can be as a Spirit . . . But it was said to them that all could be such if the Lord so willed . . . It was then shown me by experience that when the spiritual idea was taken away, I was in thought exactly like anyone else . . .

2043. (Such Spirits) have often said to me that I was nothing . . . making game of me, because they did not understand what it is to be nothing. But it was granted me to reply that that was what I wanted, namely, to be nothing, nay, utterly nothing; for then I should first begin to be something.

2057. From the interior Heaven they not only saw my thoughts, but also the things which I was about to think and do . . . so that there is not even a winking of the eye, nor a step of the foot, which is not foreseen and provided by the Lord.

2072. There was a certain tract of garden for which the Spirits made me feel a kind of horror . . . The idea remained, and, two years afterwards, when, in a spiritual idea, I represented that garden tract, the Spirits who were then around me began to feel horror . . . May 25th 1748.

2099. From the manifold and daily experience of three years it has been granted me to know that a man or a Spirit is compelled to think and speak that which the Lord permits, or concedes; for, whether I have willed it, or not, I have been bound to think and speak. May 27th 1748.

2106. That Spirits could recognize themselves in my face when seen in a mirror. Ex.

2185. (The Spirits) have said . . . that the things which I have written are (very) rude and gross . . . I perceived by a spiritual idea that it was so: that they were very rude; and therefore it was granted me to reply that they are only vessels in which purer, better, and more interior things can be infused, like a literal sense . . . June 4th 1748.

2219. These things in the presence of the Angels, and approved as to the greatest part by those who know . . .

but also into the several words and ideas of words; yea, it seemed to them as if certain held my hand, and wrote, and supposed that it was they who were writing, which it was granted me to perceive by a spiritual idea; yea, as it were to feel before [it flowed] into the smallest particulars of each little letter. . . From which it is as in clear light that the Word of the Lord is inspired as to every letter. June 10th 1748.

2273. How it was with the prophets . . . has been shown me by living experience; for, during a whole night, in which I awaked by turns . . . I was obsessed by Spirits, who so took possession of my body . . . that I scarcely knew . . . that it was my body. Nevertheless . . . I could think . . . as it were shut out from the body . . .

2280. During the time when I was [obsessed], I could hear the Spirits speaking, but still they were as if separated, for they said that I was absent . . . June 11th 1748.

2393^e. These things in the presence of Spirits and Angels. June 23rd 1748.

2397. If a man merely runs over with his eyes a volume which he has written, and does not read it, except slightly, (the Angels) at once know what it contains . . . consequently if he should read only a single line, although the things had been written many years before, they know innumerable things . . . June 23rd 1748.

2401. I have read in the Hebrew language before

Spirits who had never understood a syllable of it . . . and they knew it as well as I. (Fully quoted under A.5858.)

[D.] 2416. It was granted me to know from spiritual perception that . . .

2462⁹. These things are from the Angels. June 30th 1748.

2474. (Margin.) These things in general have been this day confirmed from Heaven, the Lord being as it were seen. Oct. 19th or 20th 1748.

2479⁶. These things have been written before Spirits and Angels, and they do not say anything. July 1st 1748. 2503.

2560. The like has happened to me: when I was set free from bonds I at once rushed into evil, showing that there is nothing but evil in the nature of man, and that good belongs to the Lord alone . . .

2591. The scruple had occurred, how the first man could have come forth before the formation (of the Grand Man). I received the answer in a spiritual idea . . . that the first man . . . was led by the Lord alone . . .

2659⁶. It is wonderful that I have been obsessed, and yet nothing has ever injured me; and besides, I could enjoy my rational mind, as if they were not present. July 20th 1748.

2696. It was shown me what an idea of the interior Spirits, and also of the interior Angels, is . . . but in order that they might come to my perception [it was done] in sleep, and in the morning waking, being continued into this from a dream; for the mind is then more separate from the body. (See also at 2758.)

2711. It is not so allowable to say these things in public, lest they should come into thought with man.

2739. As concerns myself, I have now for three years sensibly perceived that I was detained in such a bond, so that I seemed to myself to think, will, and act from myself; and also . . . that I have been detained in the sphere of faith during three years. Aug. 5th 1748.

2759. I have learned these things (concerning the meaning of the words 'Lead us not into temptation') while supplicating the Lord's Prayer. Aug. 6th 1748.

2765. (By their sphere of persuasions they tried) to persuade those who were around me that I was insane.

2797⁶. I spoke with them in silence . . .

2806. I have heard the speech of the Angels, although I have not perceived [the meaning of it] . . .

2821. My father appeared to me in a dream . . . Aug. 14th 1748.

2828. When I awoke, I was as usual in speech with Spirits . . .

— e. But I was kept in the persuasion that this is the Truth: that life is of the Lord alone. 2829.

2874⁶. These things were better understood by means of spiritual ideas, which were then also inspired into me, and confirmed in a heavenly manner. Aug. 21st 1748.

2916. It was observed yesterday that I had been remitted almost into my original state, for the space of an hour, to wit, because the general sphere of mental view did not affect evil Spirits.

2924. I cannot recount how often they have tried to rule me, and to make me their slave . . . Aug. 24th 1748.

2936. Certain who were known to hold me in low esteem were sent to me by the deceitful . . . in order that they might disparage, and thus obscure, all the good and true things which I have written. The effect was that things which are of much worth seemed to me so trivial as to be quite valueless . . . Aug. 26th 1748.

2937. In the other life the thoughts speak, consequently the interior man; as my thought has spoken during the whole time now for more than three years . . . Aug. 26th 1748.

2938. For example: When I was persuaded that the Holy Spirit is the Third Person . . . I scarcely dared to think about the Holy Spirit, for there were very many who supposed themselves to be the Holy Spirit. But after I had become persuaded that the Lord alone is holy . . . I am no longer infested . . . Aug. 26th 1748.

2946. These things in the presence of those who have been of the doctrine of this faith; but not in interior persuasion . . . Aug. 27th 1748.

sensibly inflowed. It was as manifest to the sense as are the corporeal senses. Many times there were infestations in various ways by evil Spirits in temptations. Then, afterwards, while those things were being written to which evil Spirits were averse, I was [infested] so as almost to be obsessed with horror. Fiery lights were seen. Speech in the early morning. Besides many other things, until at last a Spirit addressed me in a few words. I was very much surprised that he perceived my thoughts; and afterwards wondered exceedingly when it was opened that I should converse with Spirits . . . Aug. 27th 1748. I once perceived, after some months during which I had spoken with Spirits, that if I had been remitted into my original state, I could have fallen into the opinion that they had been phantasies.

2955. How my writings seem to be received by men. . . . There are five kinds of reception. 1. Those who wholly reject them . . . 2. Those who receive them as scientifics . . . 3. Those who receive them intellectually . . . 4. Those who receive them persuasively, in that it penetrates to the amendment of their life: they occur to them in certain states, and make use of them. 5. Those who receive them with joy, and are confirmed. Aug. 27th 1748.

2957. That Spirits spoke through me, exactly as if they were I . . . Moreover, they have laughed through me.

2962. That the style of my writing is varied according to the Spirits who are associated with me. Aug. 28th 1748.

2990. It has several times happened to me that I judged no otherwise than that the Lord Himself was present and spoke . . . But the case is this: it is the Lord who then appears through others, who . . . then suppose that they are the Lord . . . Aug. 30th 1748.

2996. It is, I suppose, Mohammed and the Mohammedans who introduce these things into my thought . . . and, unknown to me, lead my hand to write so.

3052. I perceive the reason why I could not be in angelic speech, namely, that my spirit is in the body, and Spirits put on all those things which belong to my corporeal memory . . . Sep. 5th 1748.

3058. For nearly three years and a half (I have experienced these things, and) now write the same things before them, which no man could do unless he were together with Spirits . . . At last they confessed for once that . . . I speak with Spirits. Sep. 5th 1748.

3094. A certain one asked why I speak with the evil; and it was given to reply, because they have the faculty of understanding, and I speak with that . . . and consequently with the Lord. . . In this way I was instructed that the faculty of understanding, in men and Spirits, is the Lord's. Sep. 7th 1748.

3157. On a Spirit who supposed that he was wholly I. Des.

3177. That all things in my preceding life have been governed by the Lord.

3179. When long in such thought, I was assailed with combat and discerption, etc. Sep. 16th 1748.

3216. There remains but little of life, with torment, such as I was once in.

[D.]3217. It was granted to speak about certain things written and published by me, about the devil, in that he was created before the creation of the world . . . which were confirmed by the fact that it could have been written no otherwise, because the whole Christian world believes no otherwise . . .

3263^e. Thus did I follow the thoughts (of the Spirits of Mercury) when I wrote these things.

3296. I dreamed about my lost writings, and the fire-places in which they were burnt.

3317. For my respiration has been so formed by the Lord that I could respire inwardly, for a considerable time, without the aid of the external air . . . The respiration is so directed, unknown to me, in order that I can be with Spirits, and speak with them. ☉

3320. The respiration corresponds to the thought; for when, in early childhood, I wanted to hold my breath, while they were at prayers morning and evening; and also when I wanted the times of the respiration to agree with those of the heart, the understanding began almost as it were to vanish. Afterwards, also, when I was writing in imagination, I had observed that I held my respiration, as it were tacit. (See 3464, below.)

3332. When I fixed my look on a fly . . .

3338. A few days ago, when I was extracting the things I had written about spheres, because I was not in perception from a sphere, I did not then know what a sphere is, nor did the Spirits around me . . . I was then almost led to feel that such spheres have no existence; and was thus instructed how men perceive it . . .

3385^e. I am only in corporeal and natural things . . .

3417. When I was extracting the things observed in nos. 1719, 1720 . . . Sep. 30th 1748.

3423. These things on the way [from Amsterdam to London, to publish Vol. i. of the Arcana].

3434^e. Good Spirits want me to write 'much cold' . . .

3437. This Spirit wishes to retract the words which I have written in this paragraph.

3462^e. While I write these things, they acknowledge that they are such, and, being a little ashamed, recede.

when Heaven had been opened so that I spoke with Spirits, I breathed in this way inwardly quite imperceptibly for the space of an hour, with only so much air drawn in as to enable me to think. Thus have I been introduced by the Lord into interior respirations.

—³. Casually also in sleep I have observed that once and again when I was falling asleep, respiration was almost taken away from me, so that I woke up and caught my breath. While I am not observing anything of the kind, and am writing, and thinking, [I am not aware] that my respiration has come to a stand, unless I reflect upon it. This I may say has happened innumerable times. . . The design of this is that every state, and also every sphere, and thus every Society, even the most interior ones, might have in me a suitable respiration, to which I am applied without reflection . . .

3473. I spoke with Spirits to the effect that I ought to write so that men may understand and perceive; for if I were to write according to the understanding and perception of Spirits and Angels, it would be so obscure to man that he would see scarcely anything . . . Oct. 4th 1748.

3476^e. This has been written in the presence of the Angels, thus with—apud—the Angels.

3489. They said that I was unclean . . .

3520. When I entered St. Paul's Cathedral, it was suddenly said to me . . .

—². The Dutch [Spirits] around me injected a sphere of incredulity . . .

3530^e. These things in the presence of Spirits. 3781. 3887. 4015.

3573. There was something forgotten . . . and when I was on the point of recalling it, evil Spirits snatched it away . . .

3578^e. [I have been instructed] concerning these things which have been written, both by means of ideas of interior thought, and by speech communicated to me. Oct. 15th 1748.

3584. For there is a continual endeavour and thought of evil Spirits and Genii as to how they can murder me . . .

3605. I also observed that when I have been for some time in one room, it has become familiar, so that I could have my ideas better with me there than when in another room, or place. Thus yesterday, when I removed into the room next the one in which I have been accustomed to write, a quiet prevailed among the Spirits, as if they did not know where I was. (This shows that) they want to have the idea of place adjoined . . . Oct. 17th 1748. 3608.

3615^e. These things in the presence of angelic Spirits. Oct. 19th 1748.

3616. When I was writing about Spirits who are unaware that there is an internal man, by means of Knowledge communicated to me, and presently when I spoke with Spirits, (I said that . . .)

3627. Spirits have sometimes followed my image about in another city, knowing no otherwise than that I was there. Ex.

3630. How curious Spirits are, may appear from this: that many Societies of Spirits have sent Subjects to me, and have very solicitously inquired what that flaming appearance meant. . . So that I perceived myself to be in the company of a multitude, who had perceived (it). Oct. 21st 1748.

3631. It was shown in various ways that the speech and thought of the interior Spirits could not reach me without Subjects. . .

3653. I was in the street and saw knives, and by an induced phantasy, the evil Spirits cut my throat. . . Oct. 22nd 1748.

3753. There were two small white cups . . . and some Spirits wanted me to use the one, and some the other. (Continued under SPIRIT.)

3788. These are things which I have learned by the living experiences of several years. . .

3812°. I do not yet know this for certain. 3886. 4024. 4025. 4396. 4500°.

3849. Those above the head resisted my writing this. . .

what they were perpetrating. . . Nov. 4th 1748. 3966.

3871. I have been infested during the whole night . . . so that the Spirits began to despair as to whether I could be delivered; they said that I had been protected by the Lord through the whole night.

3881. I was instructed by the Angels, through Spirits, that they were the inhabitants of Mars. . .

—². I now perceive that. . .

3883. I have perceived that I can speak by such things, so that others cannot understand.

3884°. (This) is understood by the Angels, and thus is insinuated into my thought.

3893. So that there are continual influxes of evils from the Spirits around me; and therefore if I were not protected by the Lord, I should perish at any instant; and so would all the men of this Earth. Nov. 6th 1748.

3894. I have observed that when the dung of horses was seen, certain Spirits could not endure the sphere thence arising. . . So when I ate butter on bread, certain Spirits. . . were so indignant that they tried to do evil to my tongue. . . In like manner one teacup pleased better than another. . . And so in many other things which I have eaten and drunk, as milk. Ex.

3904. Into this state (of obscurity and ignorance) I was myself reduced, before it was granted me to speak with Spirits and Angels. It was thus granted to comfort him. . .

3909. Other Spirits. . . partly to abstract themselves from thinking about the things which I have written. . .

3919. The angelic Spirits, being indignant, said that I should be cast out of Heaven if I were in such an opinion. I was then instructed that truth can never come forth with man so as to be his Own. . .

3963. The Spirits with me have been as if they were in the world, and not as they are with other men. (Fully quoted under SPIRIT.) For the state with me has been so ordered by the Lord, that I could be possessed by Spirits, and still they could not injure me at all. Others who have been obsessed were not then in their right mind, while I am exactly like myself. At the very first I was in company as previously, without the least observable difference; and so for several years. Nov. 13th 1748.

3972°. This was perceived.

3975. In a state between wakefulness and sleep I manifestly perceived that. . .

3990. (If there were any Angels who do not acknowledge the Lord) the evil Spirits could have shown them within so long a time, which is three years and a half. Nov. 18th 1748.

[D.] 3992. I have been infested all night by evil and cruel Spirits . . .

3994. I do not know whether . . . But I now perceive . . .

3997. (Anxiety of Sirens when I wrote about them.) 3999.

4000. As the Spirits objected, keeping me in obscurity . . .

4002. I have been infested by Spirits as to how the influx of the Lord's life can be possible in each and all things of man . . . and was held in these things by the Spirits until I was wearied out, nor could I be set free . . . 4019.

4024, 6. On a bath. . . Through the whole night I was in a dream about material and corporeal things . . . and on awaking from time to time, I heard angelic choirs descending one after another . . . and I perceived that there were some who were infesting me, and that the angelic choirs were sent by the Lord to ward off the endeavours of the evil . . .

4088. After these things were written, I perceived that the Societies around me reasoned about it . . . (causing a dull pain in my brain). . . I had perceived many years before, that when I was in an obscure idea, such a dull pain affected my head. Nov. 27th 1748.

4093. When I folded my hands, I had a perception as if it were not I who had folded them, but another. It was a certain one who said that he had altogether felt himself folding the hands, instead of me . . . Nov. 28th 1748.

4095. While writing about the influx of the Lord's life and of His Providence in the smallest particulars, I perceived more clearly than at any other time . . . that the case is entirely so . . .

4102. The Spirits around me kept up unceasing talk all night, and reasoning, so that I was repeatedly awakened. .

4109^e. An experience that evil was not with me. Dec. 1st 1748.

4114^{a2}. With men to whom it has not been opened that they can speak with Spirits, such Spirits are applied as are of a nearly like persuasion . . . It is different with me, in order that I may know the qualities of Spirits.

4123. There are Spirits who do not want anything to be said about the things which have been revealed [through me]; but it was said to them that they are in the place of miracles; and that without them men would not know the nature of the book: they would not buy it, read it, understand it, be affected with it, or believe it . . . nor would they want to hear anything about the interior things of the Word . . . Dec. 9th 1748.

4133. That the things written by me would appear to be hypothetical, with blemishes, because confirmed by parallel passages. (Rep.) But still it ought so to be done, on account of the present state of the world.

4134. Jan. 9th 1749.

4142. (Dream about my garden in Stockholm.)

4146. It was sometimes shown in sleep that the Spiritual Angels spoke together about this: that truths had not been written by me, or similar other things, and then I have seemed to myself in my sleep to scortate . . .

4149. When angelic Spirits have spoken about this: that it was not a true internal sense which I had written in those days, or in that day; it was granted them to inspect whether it was true. They then made an examination deeply . . . in a certain place on the left side of my head. EX.

4159. In that state I saw and touched a Spirit exactly as in a state of wakefulness . . . not to mention that I have seen them more than a thousand times . . . their faces, bodies, represented as in the light of day; and also in their abodes. March 5th 1749.

4165. I have often experienced that I have been withheld, and as it were carried up, that is, towards interior things, thus into the company of the good; and have been in this way withheld from evil Spirits: and I have perceived and felt that if I were let go a little, evil Spirits would have inundated me with their persuasions and principles of falsity and evil. . . . Thur. Mar. 9th 1749.

4179. Through the whole night there were many of my acquaintances around me, and I slept, and was with them in my sleep under the appearance of different persons. When I awoke they were detected as being those with whom I had spoken. I dreamed twice that I came to a temple which had been rent asunder. Des. The dream signified the character at this day of that magnificent Temple of the Lord, His Word. . . . Sun. Mar. 26th 1749.

4181. My maternal ancestors told me that they have elegant abodes where they are, and which they were not able to show me, lest other Spirits should get an idea of them. . . .

4182. They said that my father, in the life of the body, was often absent, they knew not where, and that he always returned in delight. From this I perceived that he was sent by the Lord to various uses among men. . . . because his delight consisted in an active life.

4191. I dreamed that my father, in life, fell into the water. . . . and that I bore him up. . . . When I awoke, the Spirits said that they had been speaking together about the things I had written from the Word. The Word with me had previously been represented by my father, in life. Sat. April 1st 1749.

4222. It was given me to perceive that. . . . 4223. 4252. 4256.

4225. For several days I have been with those who desire to possess men. . . . Some of them wanted to possess me with all force; but I was preserved by the Lord. . . . April 16th 1749.

4227. From the fact that I had said that charity saves, (the solifidian Spirits) have infested me the whole night; for they are tenacious of revenge.

4228. In the morning I spoke with them, and they said that I am nothing, because I am carried into thinking and speaking all things. . . . which many have plainly perceived, for I have been so for four years, so that I have thought and spoken nothing from myself. . . . April 21st 1749.

4232. Whenever I have plainly observed that I had been translated into other Societies, and that I had receded from those in which I had been before. . . . it has appeared like a transmigration or removal downwards, to the left, to the right, or upwards. I have then spoken with the Spirits with whom I had previously been, as being more remote, at which they have complained; and then with those to whom I had approached; thus through Societies in order even to that one to which it has pleased the Lord [that I should come]. April 23rd 1749.

4234. I have been with these Spirits this night, and have slept there. . . .

4243. When (the Societies of friendship) came above me, as soon as I was reading something in those things which have been written in Genesis, all delight and the derivative life were taken away from me. . . . 4248.

4250. In sleep by night. . . . I have been brought into a state of interior wakefulness, which was such that I knew no otherwise than that I was awake. . . . They said that. . . . Abraham was reduced to this state when he saw the Angels. . . .

—e. When awakened in a manner different from usual, I have also seen Spirits, which has very often happened.

4266e. I have spoken with the Angels about the same things, by whom it was shown and confirmed. May 8th 1749.

4285. Led by the Angels, I have thought in myself about a certain evil which has happened to me, and which the Spirits, almost unanimously, derived into me. . . . I knew that I am not one whit led by myself, but am led to evil by evil Spirits, and to good by the Lord through the Angels. . . . Many Societies. . . . have said to me that it was they who had so thought, willed, did, and inflowed. . . . May 28th 1749.

4292. The Angels have their habitations. . . . I have been there. . . .

4297e. This was said by the Angels. June 4th 1749.

4333. I have many times observed that with me the organs of thought have been disposed, and the Spirits have spoken according to that disposition. . . . July 25th 1749.

4348e. These (hypocrites) were present when I was reading those things which have been written concerning the Word, and printed. They took away all delight, and induced contempt. . . .

4369. I was surrounded by diabolical Genii. . . . Tu. Aug. 22nd 1749.

4379. On awaking I saw around me innumerable serpents and vipers. . . . who were evil Spirits inspected by Angels. At another time a great many evil Spirits have been seen around me as wandering stars. . . . But still I was protected by the Lord. . . . Tu. Aug. 29th 1749.

4390. Before it was open to me that I should speak with Spirits, I was in the opinion that no Spirit or Angel could possibly understand and perceive my thoughts. . . . It happened that once a Spirit knew what I was thinking, for he said a few words to me, at which I was amazed. . . .

4392e. This has been illustrated by many examples, and confirmed by the Angels.

[D.] 4394. I spoke with the Angels about the Lord's Passion . . .

4398. I have been in a so-called waking sleep . . .

4412. I have spoken with Paul more than with others . . .

4422. In what way many will receive that which is written through me. Ex.

4433. I spoke with the Angels cogitatively . . .

4437. The quality of the state of Souls after death . . . has been shown me by a dream . . .

— For with me the spirit acts more separately from the body than with others.

4448. Sirens have been with me for an entire year . . . 4473. 4477. 4496. 4518. 4552.

4470. A Subject of the Jesuits infested me (two) days . . .

4489. I perceived repugnances against the truths of faith, not knowing that they were from him . . .

4506. I was let into a state such that I viewed the magicians and profane ones outside of me . . .

4530. There was a certain woman who . . . supposed that I wanted to marry her . . . and was afterwards seized with such hatred that she thought of murdering me (Sara Hesselia). She died shortly afterwards—before it had been opened to me that I spoke with Spirits—and it happened that I desired to kill myself with a knife, and this cupidity so increased that I hid the knife in my desk . . . It has now been disclosed that it was that woman—her Spirit—who was excited whenever I saw the knife . . .

D. Min. 4598. Twice have I been in speech almost like that of angelic Spirits, when in as it were a half wakeful state . . .

4658. (Pains caused in me by Spirits.) 4659.

4670. I have been several times in (the light of persuasion). Ex.

4677. All desire to write, etc., was taken away from me by these Spirits.

4681. I was in a celestial idea . . .

4685. In the morning I was in company with many who . . .

4686. There have been Spirits with me . . . neither very good nor very evil. They were able to inflow into the affections of writing about those things which concern the internal sense of the Word . . . When they separated themselves . . . they so dulled my thoughts that I could scarcely think . . . An evil Spirit observed this, and by such things harassed me exceedingly . . .

4693°. (A shouting sound) occurred to me several times while I was asleep. Ex.

4695. When they saw that all things inflowed with me . . .

4698. Through a whole night, while I was asleep, I was tormented in Hell, in order that I might know the nature of the state there. Des.

4716. When I wrote such things as (the Societies of friendship) were not delighted with, they removed themselves, and thus all delight fled away . . . and then evil Spirits and Genii succeeded . . . Hence also I experienced sadness, so that I was sometimes as it were in Hell.

4772. When Jacob Benzeliuſ perceived that I was in Heaven, in a certain Society there, he wanted to infest me as before . . .

4773. Polheim died on Monday. [Aug. 31st 1751.] He spoke with me on Thursday, and when I was invited to the funeral he saw the coffin, and those who were there . . .

4810. In a dream I saw a virgin . . . When I awoke I spoke to her.

4831. In a dream I saw the Lord, with the face and form which He had in the world. Des. . . When I awoke I saw Him obscurely; and it was said that such had been His appearance. In a word, He was filled with Heaven and the Divine. In the night between Nov. 18th and 19th 1751.

D. 4547. It is not granted to know (this).

4548. There are those who live not for any use, but for themselves . . . They correspond to obstructions of the brain . . . I was obstructed for a whole night by them . . . and was as if I should die, unless I had been delivered by the Lord.

4550. A certain one appeared . . . and I had a perception as if it were Wolff . . . Jan. 11th 1752.

4554. I was conducted in a dream . . . into a certain small city . . .

4564. Silfverström . . . saw, through my eyes, his bier and coffin, the funeral, and those there . . .

4566. Several times, in sleep, I have been conducted through various places of Hell . . .

4569. I was once brought into [a state of] compulsion . . .

4573°. This appeared to me Aug. 5th and 6th 1752.

4574°. During two days I have seen many thousands thus swallowed into their new Hell.

4575. When I was in bed and asleep, I was let by the Lord into a state of vision such as I had not been in before. I was in a waking vision. Des. 4663, Des.

4576. I afterwards . . . roamed the streets of the city, not in dream, but in spirit among the Spirits . . . and spoke with two, and so I returned into the world.

4578. Afterwards, when I was in the body, I spoke with them . . .

4618°. I know (this) from an eight to nine years almost continual consort with Spirits and Angels.

4627¹². It was once granted me in the twilight by means of sensuous lumen to see Spirits who were in that lumen . . .

4629°. I have been let into that sensuous lumen, and as often as I came thither, there inflowed what is evil and false . . .

4633. There were two who grievously attacked me in my sleep . . . 4634.

4647. I was conducted through a Hell . . . where were those who had been in faith separated . . . and, while being conducted through it, I was withheld from all thought, and was thus protected . . . This is the Hell which is represented by 'the Sea Suph.'

4670. I spoke with those who are in the Third Heaven, and whom it was granted me partly to understand, because an Angel was then with me . . . 4671.

4704. See CHARLES XII. here. 4763.

4711. I was in the state in which Spirits are, and was wholly like them, with a human body, and human senses, in a chamber . . . Books also appeared, and I looked into one which was written with letters like the ancient Hebrew . . . I said that I am in the world, and yet at the same time in the other life. I touched one of them, and he felt it, and I said that in man there is a man who lives after death. As he believed this, he appeared wholly present; but the rest vanished . . . and I heard afterwards that it was because they did not believe what I said.

4715. Whenever I touched the fire-tongs I perceived an impulse from these Spirits as if they would smite the Lord with them . . .

4726. Two or three times I have been let into the state in which Spirits are, so that I was a Spirit with Spirits, and thus devoid of an earthly body; and I was then together with Spirits, and spoke with them, saw them, and examined how far their life differs from that of man. They had a like face, a like body, and like clothing. I have spoken with them about this matter, and have told them that I am a man in the world, and at the same time a Spirit among Spirits . . . I have seen their habitations, cities, and streets . . .

4740. Frederick Gyllenborg attacked me in my sleep. Des.

4765. See MEMORY, here.

4773. On a new Church.—I was conducted, in waking vision, through several regions . . . (Fully quoted under NEW CHURCH.)

4784. I was conducted, in waking vision, and passed through the Hell of those who . . .

4813. (Visions in my sleep.) 4834. 4841. 4853.

4819. It was granted me to chat in a certain manner with the celestials. Ex. . . They said that they perceive whether anyone will come to me that day . . .

4820. When I was writing, and was in a certain intermediate celestial perception . . .

—e. Hence it is that in the writing the hand has been circumstanced according to the affection or obscurity of the lower mind with me.

4846. These things have been written by influx from Heaven, from the wisdom of the Angels there.

4852. I was kept in such thought as that in which are those who are in what is sensuous . . .

4869. Spirits can commit their speech to paper. . . I have often seen such writings, and could read them, but not understand them. (See below, at 5102³.)

4872. I have been carried down, but in sleep, to the lower parts, where are the worst of the devils . . .

4894. My sight was opened, and I was borne away to see the Heavens, which was done by an elevation out of the state in which I was. When I had been elevated, it was granted me to see the Sun at the right, where there was a great and wide tract; mountains appeared, one next another. (A long description follows, the particulars of which seem to indicate that it was the imaginary Heavens which were thus seen.) See 4907. 4924. 4925. 4930. 4944.

4920. I was brought into a Hell which is under the feet. (Its scenery des.)

4925. (Swedenborg begins to witness the Last Judgment.)

4938. I was in a place of worship (in the other life) and heard the preacher, but with averted face, because I have the habit of thinking about the Things which are being preached; nor was I then led by the Lord to inspire affection into every doctrinal thing, provided it is from good, which, however, was the case afterwards. I afterwards spoke with them, and it was granted to say that . . . 4941. See also 5972.

4991. (A sorceress from India) was with me for many weeks . . .

5016. See LONDON, here.

5017, 8. In sleep I wandered through a certain city there (Amsterdam). . . When I had said this, I awoke. I (then) spoke with some in the city . . .

5044. These and many other things were prepared by (the Swedish Spirits) while I slept, and when I awoke I was so bound by them that I almost came into despair; but after some hours the bonds were loosed . . .

5059^e. Such are they who induced a penetrating pain in my left eye, even to lamentation.

5075. I have been sent among the Genii. Des.

5082. See LAST JUDGMENT, here. 5210-5213. etc. etc.

5102³. I have seen papers and letters in (spiritual) language, which I could read, but understand nothing, unless I was in the spirit separated from the body. 5561. 5579.

5103. Pain in my teeth caused by hypocrites, which lasted some hours, so that I complained . . .

5116. I have been introduced by the Lord among the celestials. Des. 5126.

5144. On the frigid zones in the other life . . . In a nocturnal vision, or dream, I was in places where I saw nothing but ice outside the houses, and linen things within them . . . Having awaked, I spoke with those who are there . . .

[D.] 5161. Frederick Gyllenborg . . . was such that he could retard my thoughts, and take away the influx from Heaven; inasmuch that I could not write the things which were to be written . . .

5179. I have been carried by the Lord to the left, which lasted an hour, and at last arrived at a certain mountain where all were naked . . . and I spoke with them at a distance . . . De Conj. 68.

5272. (Swedenborg taken to witness the events of the Last Judgment.) 5277. 5309. 5364. 5452. 5465. 5516.

5366^e. This was done Jan. 9th 1757.

5464^o. It has been granted me to perceive when I am in proprium, and when I am not in proprium; and, when in proprium, I have no power, and therefore I have been withdrawn from it by the Lord as much as possible.

5492. I spoke with Erland Broman on the third day after death.

5540. I was in a sorrowful state . . . and I heard that a vast number had been sent down from Heaven towards the lower parts . . . They were those who had rejoiced at having the heavenly doctrine . . . but as soon as they had heard that . . . the things contained in it are not only to be known and acknowledged, but . . . must also be willed and done . . . they had all rejected it. Hence my sadness.

5579. It was said to me from Heaven that . . .

5586^t. These things have been written in the presence of a Spirit who had no natural ideas, but spoke solely from the interior memory . . . and therefore I could not describe these things from thought; he hindered me thereby.

5587. For there is such a Celestial with me.

5594. I have often spoken with Angels and others by the tacit speech of ideas . . .

5619. I know many things about Abraham; but it is not yet time to divulge them all.

5734^e. I have been commanded to say these things openly.

5778^o. When Spirits and Genii have spoken together in their own language, I heard nothing of what they said; but only when they have spoken with me . . .

5789. I have seen such Societies in very lofty places, where I supposed that they were Angels of Heaven . . . when yet they were such (devils).

5807. I have long laboured in my breast through the influx from the Christian world. Des.

5809. I was then separated from those who are in the Christian world who were on the left; and was led by the Lord to the gentiles . . .

5810. I was afterwards led to those who had been of the Ancient Churches . . . and afterwards to the Most Ancients, who are in the acknowledgment of the Divine and of Divine things exactly as they are revealed to me. They examined them, and they coincided.

5827. Those in faith alone persecuted me. Des.

5841. I spoke with the last Pope . . . for some days . . . May 21st to 25th 1758.

5908. (The works of Swedenborg in the Spiritual World.)

5943. (When the Angels used this kind of speech) I, because I was in the Natural, did not hear the words; but I perceived the affections which they uttered in the words.

5947. It was granted me also to hear (the singing of a psalm in their temple on earth—in Abyssinia). S. 108.

5949. I saw the Czar Peter, and spoke with him in a dream . . . He said that everything belonging to his subjects was his . . . but I contradicted him . . .

5976. (Attempts of evil Spirits to kill me.) 5983. 5989^o. 5995. 6101^o.

5980. On the king of France. Dec. 13th 1759.

5990. The organist with whom I lived was also infested by them . . .

5997. I have written in the Explication on the Apocalypse some things which are of interior intelligence . . . and a certain wife who lived in the inn . . . and with whom I spoke when on a journey, being in simple faith from the heart, understood all things clearly; whereas a learned man there did not, nay, could not, understand them.

6009. On Aug. 15th 1761, in the early morning, there appeared to me an elegant chariot in which was . . . also Ulrica Eleonora. Des.

6012. By which there was communication effected with the Society in which I am.

6019. When I was in a state of the spirit by night, I was led by a companion to a certain house . . . (Here follows an account of an interview with Charles xi. and his queen, and their son Charles xii.)

6018. On garments and their correspondence. . . I have perceived that when I was naked I communicated with those who were of the Celestial Kingdom; and that when I lay in a nightshirt I communicated with those who are of the Spiritual Kingdom. E. 951⁷.

6067. I was in bed and slept sweetly . . . and when I awoke there were Chinese above me . . .

6101^o. It is not my work, but the Lord's, who wished to reveal the nature of Heaven and Hell, and the nature of man after death, and concerning the Last Judgment, and also that theological things do not transcend [the understanding]... I told them also that this is the man-child which the woman brought forth...

6108. A remarkable change has been effected in the Spiritual World. There have been congregated together for the most part those in faith alone, both above and at the side and below me, and an opportunity was granted them of inflowing into my brain, whence I came into such a state that I could not lift up my head, and this for three days and a half, and I appeared to those in the city which they had called, Jerusalem as if I were dead in the street...

A. 5. By the Divine mercy of the Lord it has been granted me now for some years to be constantly and continuously in the company of Spirits and Angels, hearing them speak, and speaking with them in turn. In this way it has been given me to hear and see the stupendous things which are in the other life, and which have never come to the Knowledge of any man, and not into his idea. I have been instructed there in regard to the different kinds of Spirits; the state of Souls after death; Hell, or the lamentable state of the unfaithful; Heaven, or the blessed state of the faithful; and especially concerning the doctrine of faith which is acknowledged in the universal Heaven.

65. Certain ones were taken up into the first court of Heaven when I was reading the Word; and from thence spoke with me (about what they saw in the Word).

67. As... it has been given me to know the internal sense of the Word... it is permitted me to disclose the things which I have heard and seen now for some years, during which it has been granted me to be in the company of Spirits and Angels.

68. Many will say that no one can speak with Spirits and Angels... and that it is phantasy... but I am not deterred; for I have seen, I have heard, I have felt.

70. In order that I might know that men live after death, it has been granted me to speak and to be in company with many who had not been known to me in the life of their body; and this not merely for a day or a week, but for months, and almost a year, speaking and having intercourse with them just as in the world.

150². During a period of several years it has been granted me to know how the case is with respect to man's proprium, namely, that I have not thought a whit from myself; and it has been granted me manifestly to perceive that every idea of thought inflowed...

168-180. (The experience of Swedenborg while passing experimentally through the process of resuscitation from the dead. Fully des.) H.449.

227². It has been granted me to feel the combats (between Angels and evil Spirits) thousands and thousands of times—almost continually for some years...

322. Spirits have talked with me for some years almost continually.

447. A certain recent Spirit spoke to me... It was granted me to tell him that he was now a Spirit, as he might know from his being over my head...

545. In order that I might know what Heaven and heavenly joy are, it has been granted me by the Lord, frequently and for a long time, to perceive the delights of heavenly joys. Des. H.413.

546. In order that I might know how the case is with those who desire to be in Heaven and are not such that they can be there, when I was in some heavenly Society an Angel appeared to me as an infant... whence it was given me to know that I was in some Society where there was charity...

699. In order that I might see the torment of those who are in Hell, and also the vastation of those who are in the Lower Earth, I have been some times let down thither. To be let down into Hell... is a being let into some infernal Society, the man remaining in the same place... I plainly perceived that a kind of column surrounded me... It was formed of angelic Spirits, so that I might be let down safely to the unhappy. While there, I heard miserable lamentations... and I was permitted to speak to those wretched ones... and to console them. D.228.

814. Certain Genii... sent forth thence in order that I might know their quality, so infected the atmosphere... as to cause me to vomit.

816. One came to me... stealthily behind... and I felt as it were a stab through the heart. (Fully quoted under D.1864.)

824². I have smelled this stench in the World of Spirits, and almost fell into a swoon from the effect of it.

953. I have been led through some abodes of the First Heaven, whence it was granted me to see afar off a great sea heaving with billows...

959. I was awakened one night out of sleep, and heard Spirits around me who wanted to ensnare me in my sleep; and, presently falling asleep again, I had a sad dream. Ex.

968. The devil does no harm to those whom the Lord protects... as it has been granted me to know by much astounding experience, so that at last I have no fear of even the worst of the infernal crew. (The reasons why) I spoke with them, stated.

994¹. It has been granted me to see by internal sight the things in the other life more clearly than I see the things in the world.

[A.] 1114. It has been granted me to speak not only with those whom I had known when they lived in the body, but also with those of especial note in the Word; and also with those who had been of the Most Ancient Church . . . and with some who had been of the Churches after that, in order that I might know that by the names in the first chapters of Genesis only Churches are meant; and that I might know what was the character of the men of the Churches of that time.

1121. I have been instructed by the sons of the Most Ancient Church concerning the state of their perception . . . 1122. 1384.

1123. I have spoken with the third generation of the Most Ancient Church . . .

1124. There were with me some of the posterity which lived before the Flood, not of those who perished . . .

1125. It was also granted me to speak with those of the Church called 'Enos' . . .

1126. There appeared to me a narrow room . . . and a tall man clothed in an intense white, (which) signified those called 'Noah' . . .

1127. It was granted me to speak with those . . . called 'Shem' . . .

1265. At some height above the head there were many who were inflowing into my thoughts, and holding them as it were bound, so that I was very much in obscurity. . . It was said that they were of those who lived before the Flood, but not of those called 'Nephilim' . . .

1268. I was conducted, guarded, towards that misty rock. To be led to such is not to be led from place to place, but is effected by means of intermediate Societies . . . the man remaining in the same place; and yet it appears to him as a letting down. . . I spoke with them about their persuasions . . .

1269. What these things signified, was not disclosed to me.

1270. Some (of the Antediluvians) were let out of that Hell; but the Lord made such disposition by means of intermediate Spirits and Angels that they could do me no harm. . . They appeared above on the left, so that from there . . . they might inflow into me. I was told that they were permitted to inflow into the right side of the head . . . but not at all into the left, for in that case I should be destroyed. Ex. . . When they began to inflow I fell asleep; and while I slept they inflowed by means of cupidities, and that with such violence that if awake I could not have resisted them. In my sleep I was sensible of their vehemence . . . they tried to kill me by their suffocating afflatus. . . I awoke, and saw that they were near me; and they (then) fled to their own place above, and inflowed from thence. 1271. D. 3364. 3585.

1273. I in like manner have been conducted through (the angelic Societies), and those there have spoken with me, in order that I might know how the case is . . .

1275. I have been in a Society where there was tranquillity . . . When I was translated thither, the Spirits around me appeared to be removed, and to be seen below me; and yet it was granted me to hear them speaking.

1368. That the worship (of those called 'Ur of the Chaldees') was such, it has been granted me to be instructed by themselves.

1376. I have often spoken with Spirits about the idea of place and of distance among them . . .

1378. I have been informed, both by speech with Angels, and by living experience, that . . .

1398. There were many Spirits around me who were not good. An Angel came, and I saw that the Spirits could not endure his presence . . .

1505. I have been informed . . . 1517. 1627. 1633. 2124. 6477.

1506. A certain Spirit who had been known to me, appeared . . . 1507.

1509. The effect of the sphere (of these Spirits) was to take from me the power of close application, and to make it so irksome for me to act and think in serious matters, true and good, that at last I scarcely knew what to do.

1511. It has been made known to me by much experience . . . that Spirits who are in falsities inflow into the thought, and induce a persuasion just as if falsity were truth . . . and this from their sphere. In like manner Genii . . . inflow into the will, and produce an effect altogether as if evil were good . . . The influx of the Spirits of both kinds it has been given me to perceive manifestly a thousand times . . . and how Angels from the Lord removed them . . .

1516. I have spoken with Spirits about the sense of taste . . .

1522. I have so often seen the light in which Spirits and Angels live, that I have ceased to wonder . . . 1526.

1523. That I might know the nature of the light, I have many times been conducted into the abodes where good Spirits and angelic Spirits dwell . . . 1525.

1526. I have been withdrawn from the ideas of particulars, or those of the body, so that I might be kept in spiritual ideas. There then appeared a vivid glow of diamond light . . . and, while I was kept in it, I perceived particulars as it were below me . . .

1531. In order that I might be confirmed in the fact that the Lord appears . . . as a Sun and Moon, my interior sight was . . . so far opened that I plainly saw the Moon shining . . . But it has not been granted me to see the Sun.

1533. Of the innumerable things which appear in the other life, I, before my sight was opened, could scarcely form any other idea than others do: that there could be no light, etc. there.

1622. That I might not be in doubt about it, I was conducted to the region where those are who live a paradisaical life, and I saw it . . .

1624. I saw the form of a certain larger rainbow, in order that I might know what they are in their least forms . . .

1627. Besides cities and palaces, it has sometimes been granted me to see their decorations . . .

1628. All the Angels have their own dwellings . . . which are magnificent. I have been there . . .

1632. I have spoken with Angels concerning representatives . . .

1634. As it has been granted me to hold converse with Spirits and Angels almost continually for some years, and to be in companionship with them as one of themselves, I may relate what it has been granted me to learn about their speech with one another.

1635. See SPEAK, here. 1637. 1638. 1639. 1640. 1649. 1762. 4652².

1636. For I have spoken with nearly all with whom I was acquainted during their bodily life; with some for several weeks; with others for a year, altogether as if they had been living in the body.

1690°. That all this was so, I know for certain. 2120°. 2161. 5006⁴.

1755. This has been made evident to me by much experience.

1768. That the Word of the Lord is so presented before good Spirits and Angels, it has been granted me to hear and see. 1769, Des.

1769². While this was taking place, I was reading the first chapter of Deuteronomy . . . 3474. D.2054.

1770. I saw others taken up into the Second Heaven . . . and they spoke with me while I was reading the third chapter of Deuteronomy . . . D.2061.

1771. While I was reading some of the Psalms of David, the interior insight or mind of these Spirits was opened . . .

1772. It has also been granted me in like manner to see the Word of the Lord in its beauty in the internal sense, and this many times; not as it is while the several words are being explained as to the internal sense; but all things in a series . . .

1773. The warmth of those Spirits (who had been delighted with the Word) was communicated to me. Des. —².

—². I was instructed by the Angels that this was so.

1775. I have spoken with certain Spirits concerning the Word . . .

1869. It has been shown me how many things there are in a single word of the Word in this way: that the ideas of thought have been opened. Ex.

1872. There appeared to me a beautiful girl with a radiant face. Des. and Ex.

1874. I have spoken with good Spirits . . . 6309. 6468². 6485.

1876. I have spoken with the Angels about these things many times, and have been fully instructed by them in the Truth.

1879. When I was in bed it was told me that evil Spirits were conspiring against me with the intention of suffocating me; but as I was protected and secure of the Lord, I disregarded the threats, and went to sleep.

But, on awaking in the middle of the night, I felt that I was not breathing of myself, but from Heaven . . . The conspirators were of those who hold in hatred the interior things of the Word . . . The leaders then tried to enter into the viscera of my body, and to penetrate even to the heart, and to this also they were admitted. This was all the time perceived by manifest sensation; for one to whom the interiors of the spirit are opened, receives at the same time also a sensible perception of such things. But I was then let into a kind of celestial state, which was that I made no effort to repel these visitors, still less to avenge the injury. They then said that there was peace; but soon they were as if deprived of rationality, breathing out vengeance, and striving to carry out their purpose; but in vain. They afterwards dispersed of themselves. 3891². D.458.

1880². It has been granted (to Spirits and Angels) to see the things in the world through my eyes, as plainly as I could see them myself, and also to hear men speaking with me. Through me some have seen their friends . . . some their consorts and children, and have wished me to tell them that they were close by and saw them, and to give an account of their state in the other life. But I was forbidden . . . because they would have called me insane . . . 1954.

—³. When my interior sight was first opened, and through my eyes they saw the world . . . Spirits and Angels were so amazed that they said it was the miracle of miracles; and they were affected with a new joy . . . This delight lasted for months, but afterwards it became familiar, and now they do not wonder at all. I have been instructed that the Spirits and Angels with other men do not in the least see the things which are in the world . . .

1883°. I have been let into this state (of being withdrawn from the body) only three or four times, merely that I might know how the case is . . . Des. H.440.

1884. As regards the other—being carried by the spirit into another place—it has been shown me by living experience what it is . . . but only two or three times. Des. (In this state Swedenborg walked for hours through streets and country in the natural world, being at the same time in conversation with Spirits, and in full view of spiritual scenery, but blind to that which surrounded him in the natural world.) H.441.

1885. These two kinds of visions are extraordinary, and were shown me only in order that I might know their nature. But the things ordinarily 'seen' [by me] are all those which you may see related . . . in the First Part, at the beginning and end of the chapters. These are not visions; but are things seen in the highest wakefulness of the body, and that for a number of years.

1886, Pref.³. It has been granted me . . . while I am in the body in this world, to be in the spirit in the other life . . . and there to speak with Souls . . . not long after death; and in fact with nearly all with whom I have been acquainted . . . also daily for some years with Spirits and Angels; and to see amazing things there, which have never come into anyone's idea, and this without any deception. As many say that they will believe if anyone comes to them from the other life, it will now be seen whether they will be persuaded against the hardness of their hearts.

[A.] 1949². Nor should I have known this, if I had not been instructed by living experience.

1966. As I have now for some years been almost continually with those who are in the other life . . . I have in this way been informed by experience itself . . .

1972. The sights . . . which I have seen in the World of Spirits, I have seen in clear light; but those in the Heaven of angelic Spirits, more obscurely; and those in the Heaven of Angels more obscurely still; for the sight of my spirit has rarely been opened to me so far; but it has been granted me to know what they were saying by a certain perception, the nature of which cannot be described, and, frequently, through intermediate Spirits: the things which are there have sometimes appeared in the shade of the light of Heaven, which is . . . a light which wanes and fades away from its incomprehensibility equally before the understanding and before the sight.

1973. I will relate two visions . . . 1974.

1975^e. I may relate the following particulars (concerning dreams) from experience. 1976. 1977.

1977. I was put into a state as of sleep and at the same time of wakefulness.

1979. It has been very often granted after such dreams to speak with the Spirits and Angels who introduced them: they told what they introduced, and I told what I saw. 1980.

1981. I dreamed a common dream; and when I had awaked I told it all . . . and the Angels said that it coincided throughout with what they had spoken of together. Ex.

—². There was a person of whom I had had the idea that he was in natural truth . . .

1983². I was once in a very sweet sleep . . . When I awoke, some good Spirits began to chide me for having infested them so atrociously. Ex.

2128. The idea of the Last Judgment before the evil, which has been seen by me two or three times. Des. See 2130.

2133. Two or three times . . . Heaven has been so far opened to me that I have heard a general Glorification . . .

2291. While I was praying the Lord's Prayer . . .

2294^e. I have been instructed (or informed) that . . . 2590. 2591. 2736. 4793^e.

2296. It has been shown me that . . . 2298. 2474^e. 2744. 2589^e.

2304². I have been informed by the Angels that . . . 2750. 4299⁵.

2306. There was represented to me . . .

2307. I have spoken with the Angels about . . . 2493. 2732.

2309. I saw little children fighting . . . Angels saw it through my eyes . . . H.344.

2343⁶. This might be evident to me from . . .

2477. I heard Spirits speaking together about . . .

2478. It has been permitted two or three times (that Spirits inflowed from their exterior memory); and I then knew no otherwise than that that was mine which was . . . the spirit's; and that I had thought the things before which I had not thought. But this I was not able to perceive until they withdrew.

2485. A certain one was with me whom I had not known . . . and by means of the interior sight he was led by me through the cities where I had been, and at last through the city from which he was, and then through its streets and squares, all of which he recognized, and at last into the street where he had dwelt; and if I had been acquainted with the houses . . . I should have been able to know his house. D.1933.

2488. Before I had been instructed by living experiences, I supposed . . . that no Spirit could possibly know the things in my memory and in my thought . . .

2592. A (Gentile philosopher) with me.

2593. It has been granted me to speak with others also who lived in ancient times . . .

2595. I heard (a sonorous choir of Gentiles) . . .

2596. One morning there was a choir at a distance from me, and it was granted to know from the representations that they were Chinese . . .

2601^e. I have spoken with them . . . 2602. 2603².

2605. I have spoken with some who had been in the Ancient Church . . . H.327.

2733. Certain Spirits . . . infested me with peculiar adroitness . . . I at last spoke with one of them who, it was told me, had been the commander of an army. As I perceived that in the ideas of his thought there was lasciviousness, I spoke with him about marriage . . .

2743. A great dog like Cerberus was seen by me, and I asked what it signified. It was said that . . .

2748. Some Spirits who had lived a life of adultery . . . came and spoke with me . . .

2751. They sent (an emissary) to me, supposing that I was a Spirit, because I spoke with the speech of Spirits. He uttered scandalous things . . . I answered that he should abstain from such things, as . . . I knew beyond all doubt that the Lord is one with the Father . . .

2757. When I was being led through several abodes, I came to one where heat seized on my feet and loins . . .

2759. I spoke with (some Spirits from the lower classes) . . .

2762. Horses shining as with fire have also been seen by me, when . . .

2796. (This) has become most fully known to me by the experience of many years. It has also been granted to know and observe what Spirits and Angels were with me, and what states they induced. And this I can solemnly assert: that all states . . . come from this source . . .

2888². That I might know that the influx (of life) is of such a nature, it has been granted me to speak with the Spirits and Angels who were with me, and also to feel and perceive their influx ; and this so often that I cannot number the times.

2998. That such correspondences exist, has during a number of years become so familiar to me that hardly anything can be more so. . . It has also been granted me to know what angelic Societies belong to each province of the body . . .

3214. There are Societies in which these representatives are effected ; and it has been granted me to be with them for a number of months.

3219. Birds once came into my view, one dark and deformed, and two noble and beautiful ; and, when I saw them, there fell upon me some Spirits with such violence as to strike a tremor into my sinews and bones. I imagined that . . . evil Spirits were assaulting me ; but that was not the case. Ex.

3346. That I might know these things with certainty . . . for a number of years it has been granted me to speak almost continually with Spirits and Angels, and with the Spirits or Angels of the First Heaven in their own speech ; also, at times, with the Angels of the Second Heaven in their speech ; but the speech of the Angels of the Third Heaven has only appeared to me as a radiation of light, in which there was perception from the flame of good which was in it.

3348. Spirits from another Earth were with me . . .

3628. I have been instructed about these things by much experience. 3629.

3642. I was one morning in company with angelic Spirits . . .

3748. This Spirit came to me, and spoke with me, and . . . I asked him, Who is the more intelligent, he who knows many falsities, or he who knows a little truth? . . .

3749. A certain Spirit came to me unawares, and inflowed into my head . . . The Angels with me said that he was taken from the Spirits with a certain learned man still living in the world . . . Communication was then given through this intermediate Spirit with the thought of that man . . .

3884. Once, when the interior Heaven was opened to me, and I was speaking with the Angels there, I was allowed to observe what follows. It is to be known that although I was there, still I was not outside of myself, but in the body ; for Heaven is in man . . . Thus it was granted me to observe the general operations of Heaven. Enum.

3889. In order that I might know (this) it was granted me for a considerable space of time to be with Angels, who showed it me . . .

3891^e. On many other occasions it has been granted me to be sensible of the respiration of Spirits, and also of Angels, by this : that they respired in me, and that my own respiration was still at the same time present, distinct from theirs.

4041. It has been shown me of what nature is the heavenly form in the lowest sphere . . .

4046. There appeared many Spirits at a middle distance over my head, who acted in general after the manner of the pulse of the heart . . . with a kind of cold breathing on my forehead . . . 4047. 4048. 4049.

4050. A certain face was first seen by me above a blue window. Des. . . It was a representation of the infundibulum of the brain.

4051^e. (A Society of diverse Spirits) applied themselves to my ear, and said that they were good Spirits . . . 5189. D.3822.

4054². Many Societies of such Spirits have been with me, and their presence was perceived by a dulness, sluggishness, and privation of affection ; and I have sometimes spoken with them. Des.

4067³. That it is really so, is evident to me from the continual experience of many years, from which it has become as familiar to me as (possible).

4077². These things appear manifestly to those to whom it is granted to speak with (Angels), and to be among them as one of them. By this means it has been granted me to know that it is so.

4186². By much experience it has been granted me to know how the affections of good and truth are communicated to others. Spirits of that sort have sometimes been with me, and, when conjoined by somewhat of affection, they knew no otherwise than that my thoughts and affections were theirs. And I have been informed that the like takes place with all men.

4293². That I might know this, it has been granted me to speak many times with the descendants of Jacob in the other life.

4329. I was in the opinion that what is general (must be obscure). . . But there was given them an intermediate Spirit, through whom they spoke with me, (and) after a quarter of an hour, they showed that they had a distinct idea of generals. Ex.

—³. They drew conclusions as to the interiors of my thoughts and affections so dexterously that I began to be afraid to think anything more ; for they disclosed things which I did not know to be in me ; and yet . . . I could not but acknowledge them. From this I perceived in myself a sluggishness of speaking with them . . . On the following day I spoke with them a second time . . .

4403. The quality of the Spirits, and to what province of the body they belonged, it has been granted me to know from their position and place with me, and also from the plane in which they were, and from their distance in it. They who were seen near me were for the most part Subjects of entire Societies . . .

[A.] 4412. A certain one had been known to me . . . not as to his interior affections. He spoke with me several times. Des. 5058.

4413. I have been elevated into a light which sparkled like the light which radiates from diamonds; and, while in it, I seemed to myself to be withdrawn from corporeal ideas, and to be led into spiritual ones . . .

4415². From that heavenly light they looked through my eyes into the light of the world, and perceived it as a dark cloud.

4419. There was a Spirit with me who . . . believed he was wiser than all . . . He was sent to me by a certain Society that he might serve them as a Subject . . . While he was with me, it was granted to speak with him about intelligence from self . . . But, as he would not attend to these things, I said that he would do a kindness if he would withdraw . . .

4527. I have spoken with some a few days after their decease . . . Speaking with me from the first of Heaven, they said that they had never seen such a light . . .

—³. I have spoken with some on this subject on the same day as that in which their bodies were entombed, who saw through my eyes their corpse, their bier, and that their burial was taking place . . . They wanted me to tell (about their state) to their near friends who were mourning; but it was given to reply, that if I should tell them, they would treat it with derision . . . 4622³.

4625². I have spoken some times with those who, in the Society into which I have been sent, belonged to the provinces of the lungs, heart, face, tongue, ear, eye, and . . . nostrils.

4652². Sometimes when Spirits have spoken with me in the midst of a company of men . . . some of them have supposed that they were heard also by those present. But . . . it was not so, because their speech inflowed into my ear by an internal way.

4654. There were Spirits with me who inflowed very strongly into my thought when it was exercised upon such things as are of Providence . . . It was said by the Angels that these were Spirits who . . .

4656. There was a Spirit who spoke with me at my left external ear . . . 4657.

4658². When these Spirits had struggled forth, they spoke with me, saying that they had been logicians and metaphysicians . . . Meanwhile two (others) were speaking with each other above my head . . . and it was said that one of them was a man most renowned in the learned world, and it was given me to believe that it was Aristotle. Who the other was, was not told me . . . The former applied himself to my right ear . . .

—⁵. A woman was seen by me who stretched out her hand, wishing to stroke his cheek . . . The angelic Spirits said that such women were sometimes seen by the ancients, and were called by them Pallasess. Ex.

4791². That they who are in the affection of truth belong to the province (of the tongue) understood in an extended sense, has often been granted me to experience, and this by manifest influx from them, now into the tongue, and now into the lips; and it has been granted me to speak with them . . .

4792^c. I have spoken with some who had died as infants, and who were seen by me as young men. Ex.

4793³. In order that I might know how this is, (these obsessors) were permitted to enter into my taste . . . and it was told me that if they penetrated quite into the taste, they would possess the interiors . . . But this was permitted only to the end that I might know how it is with the correspondence of the taste; for they were instantly driven away from it.

4799. There were Spirits with me from another orb . . . I spoke with them about their manner of living . . . They endeavoured to show me (their method of conversation) by an influx into my lips . . . But I could not receive the variations, because my lips had not been initiated into such things from infancy; and yet by the communication of their thought I could perceive what they said.

—⁴. While I was reading in the Word of the New Testament concerning the Lord, these Spirits were present, and also some Christians . . .

4802³. I have spoken with two who had been such, and they wondered that they were in Hell . . .

4923^c. As, by the Divine mercy of the Lord it has been granted me to be at the same time in Heaven as a Spirit, and on earth as a man, and thence to speak with Angels, and this now continually for a number of years, I cannot do otherwise than open those things of the Word which are called mystical, that is, its interiors . . .

4939. Once, when I was elevated into Heaven, it appeared to me as if I were there as to my head, and below as to my body, and as to the feet still lower. Ex.

4940. At another time, when, encompassed with an angelic column, I was let down into the places of lower things, it was granted me to perceive sensibly that they who were (there) corresponded to the feet, and to the soles. . . I spoke with those who are there . . .

5006². While my mind was dwelling on (spiritual) things, there were Spirits present from Christendom who . . . were seized with loathing . . . But it was granted to say to them that . . .

—⁴. This I can declare, because I know it; for I have spoken, after their decease, with almost all with whom I had been acquainted . . . and thus, by living experience, it has been granted me to know what lot awaits everyone, namely, a lot in accordance with his life.

5056. A certain Spirit from another Earth was with me . . . In the light of Heaven he was black, but he himself said that he was brown . . . I was told that they are such in the beginning who are afterwards received among those who constitute the province of the seminal vesicles. Des.

5078^d. In order that I might be certain of this thing, it has been granted me to touch the Spirits themselves, and to speak many times with them in regard to it. Ex.

5180. A manifest feeling of this suction (by Spirits) was perceived by me . . . I doubt whether others could have borne this, on account of the pain; but, having become accustomed to it, I at last often bore it without pain. The principal place of the suction was at the top of the head; and it extended itself thence towards the region of the left ear, and also towards the region of the left eye. Ex.

5427^c. There appeared to me a great City . . . I saw these things because a medium was granted me; but the Spirits who were with me, being without a medium, could not see the least thing there; and it was said that . . .

5511^e. That this is the truth, I know, for, of the Lord's Divine mercy, I have been with (the deceased), not merely with a few, but with many; not once, but often, and have spoken with them on the subject.

5567. A certain one applied himself to my left side, and I did not then know whence and of what quality he was . . . He wanted to penetrate into me more interiorly; but he was cast back. He induced a general sphere of the ideas of thought . . . such as I do not remember to have ever perceived before . . . I wondered that such a cleverness could be possible . . . He returned with an earthen pitcher in his hand, and wanted to give me something out of it to drink. It contained that which from phantasy took away understanding from those who drank . . . It was told me who he was . . .

5713^e. That this is the case it has been granted me to know by much experience, and this so frequently and of such long continuance, as not to leave a doubt remaining; for evil Spirits from such places have been often and for a long time applied to me; and, according to their presence, they have induced pains, and also diseases. It has been shown me where they were . . .

5714. A certain Spirit who had been a very great adulterer . . . was with me for some days: he was seen under the feet. When the sphere of his life was communicated to me . . . he inflicted some pain on the periosteum and on the nerves there . . . While his sphere operated, it also induced a great oppression on the stomach.

5715. There appeared a large square opening which tended obliquely downwards . . . A troublesome heat exhaled thence . . . and when it acted into my body, it instantly induced a disease like a burning fever . . .

—². That I might know for certain that this is the case, there have been with me Spirits from many Hells, through whom was communicated the sphere of the exhalations thence, and, accordingly as it was permitted to act into the solid parts of the body, I was seized with an oppression, with a pain, and even with the corresponding disease, which ceased in a moment as those Spirits were driven out: and, lest any room should be left for doubt, this has been done a thousand times.

5720. When hypocrites have been with me . . . and have been allowed to inflow into the parts of the body to which they corresponded, they have injected a pain into the teeth, which upon their nearer approach was so severe that I could not endure it; and, in proportion as they were removed, in the same proportion the pain ceased; which has been shown repeatedly, lest anything of doubt should remain. Among them was one who had been known to me . . .

5758^c. (That all good and truth are from the Lord) it has been granted me to perceive evidently for a number of years: and also that in proportion as I have been left to myself, in the same proportion I have been inundated with evils; and, in proportion as I have been withheld thence by the Lord, in the same proportion I have been elevated from evil into good.

5858. From much experience it has been granted me to know that whatever is thought or spoken by Spirits from the memory of a man, they suppose to be their own . . . In order to convince them . . . they have been asked how they know how to speak with me in my vernacular . . . and how they know the rest of the languages in which I am skilled . . . I have read before them in the Hebrew language, which they have understood as well as I, even infants . . . and all the scientifics which are with me are with them. D.2401.

5862. The Spirits with a man do not know they are with him . . . It is different in my case; for the Lord has opened my interiors in order that I may see the things which are in the other life. Hence the Spirits have known that I am a man in the body, and the faculty has been granted them of seeing, through my eyes, the things in the world, and of hearing those speak who were in companies with me.

5863. As evil Spirits have known that I am a man in the body, they have been in the continual endeavour to destroy me, not only as to the body, but especially as to the soul . . . but I have been continually protected by the Lord.

[A.] 5894^e. This I know from Heaven.

5977². (Genii) have been permitted to act into my desires, in order that I might know how they act; and I may confess that unless the Lord had guarded me by Angels, they would have perverted them into concupiscences of evil, and this so secretly and silently that I should have perceived scarcely anything of it.

5983. For subjects have been sent to me a thousand times; and, without them, the Societies could have known nothing of what was with me, and could communicate to me nothing of what was with themselves.

6054³. All the Spirits I have seen, which are thousands and thousands, have been seen by me altogether as men . . .

6200. As I have now for nine years been continually in company with Spirits and Angels, I have carefully observed how the case is with influx. Des.

—². When I have thought of a man known to me . . . the whole of him, as he was in my thought and affection, has appeared in a moment with the Spirits. . . . When I have thought of any city also . . . the Spirits knew in a moment all things which I had seen and known about it. The same is the case also with the Things of knowledge. Ex.

6202. Such Spirits have often been with me, and those who have infused anxieties have been perceived in the region of the stomach, without my knowing whence those anxieties were; but they have as often been detected, and then I have heard what they were speaking about together, and that they were such things as were adverse to my affections. . . This has happened repeatedly, in order that I might know for certain that that was the source of it.

6210. (When) I have thought inordinately about worldly things . . . I have noticed that I was relapsing into the Sensuous; and that in proportion as the thought was immersed in them I was removed from being in company with the Angels.

—^e. When I have been led through the abodes of Heaven, being in a spiritual idea, and it has happened that I have suddenly lapsed into thought about worldly things, then all that spiritual idea was dissipated . . . 6309².

6212². As I have longed to know how (the prophets, Saul, etc.) were acted upon by Spirits, it has been shown me by living experience. . . I was for a whole night possessed by Spirits, who so occupied my bodily things, that I could not feel, except very indistinctly, that it was my own body. Des.

6307^e. This (influx) has thus become so familiar to me, that at last I have been able to know whence each single thing of my thoughts and affections came; and nevertheless they have been my thoughts, just as were the thoughts I had before.

6326. There was a philosopher . . . who died some years ago, with whom I have spoken about the degrees of life in man . . .

6469. It has been granted me to perceive, by means of influx, the sweetness of the Angels . . . And when the Angels have inflowed to my perception, the Lord's presence has been manifestly apperceived . . .

—^e. Once, when I was thinking about the influx of life from the Lord, and was revolving some doubts, it inflowed from Heaven that we should not attend to a thousand objections and reasonings from fallacies. 6479, Ex.

6474. It has been shown me by an hour's experience, how all thoughts are ruled by the Lord. Des. . . In this manner, that which inflowed from the Lord led all the series of my thoughts into the consequences, and, although gently, still powerfully, inasmuch that I could not possibly wander into other thoughts; which it was also allowed me to attempt, but in vain.

6476. Whenever I have read the Lord's Prayer, I have manifestly perceived an elevation towards the Lord, which was like an attraction. Des.

6477. For a number of years I have observed the general sphere of the influxes around me. Des.

6486. I have heard the Angels speaking together about . . . I understood what they said, but little of it can be described . . .

6487. When I have spoken with the Angels about the Lord's Divine Providence, there were Spirits also present who had impressed on themselves something concerning fate . . .

6492. My father appeared to me in a dream. (Continued under FATHER.)

6493. I have often spoken with Spirits about fortune . . . When what appeared to be accidental befel me, it has been said by the Angels that it happened because such Spirits were present . . .

6494. During a number of years I have carefully observed whether fortune is anything, and I have found that it is, and that in such a case prudence avails nothing . . . Once, when I was playing . . . a game with dice, the Spirits who were with me . . . said that when a dusky cloud appeared to attend me, it was impossible for me to win . . .

6516³. There are writings in the Spiritual World, which I have sometimes seen, and which I could read, but not understand . . .

6597^e. The internal sense . . . has been dictated to me from Heaven.

6600. That I might know this for certain, it has been granted me to speak with some Societies to which my thought reached, and it was thence granted to know what was inflowing into my thought, from what Society it was, also where and of what quality the Society was, so that I could not be mistaken. (See under EXTEND.)

6601. One morning it was manifestly shown that there are innumerable things within every idea and minute affection . . . I was kept for some time in a certain affection and the derivative thought, and it was shown how many Societies concurred. Ex.

6604. An Angel has sometimes appeared to me, his face conspicuously, which was continually varied according to the affections . . .

6606. I have observed that when I was speaking with angelic Spirits, the affections and thoughts appeared like a stream around . . .

6609. The thoughts and speech of the Societies within which was my thought, have sometimes been represented to me by clouds. Des.

6611. I have spoken with Spirits about the changes of the state of man's life . . .

6615^e. (These things, not seen by Spirits) were seen by me, in order that I might know that higher things inflow into lower ones . . .

6616. When I heard Spirits speaking with me, I could perceive from the mere tone . . . whether they spoke from pretence, sincerity, friendliness, or from the good of love. Ex.

6619. That innumerable things are in the ideas of thought . . . has been evident to me also when I, morning and evening, have read the Lord's Prayer. Des.

6621. Some Spirits (who in the life of the body had studied merely the art of criticism) have been with me, and then all things which were being thought and written became confused, the thought being as it were kept in prison . . . insomuch that they greatly fatigued me.

6622. I have spoken with Spirits about the influx into the ideas of thought . . .

6626^e. (The infernals) have appeared to me in the gates which open into the World of Spirits . . .

6927. (What I have learned about other Earths from the Spirits of Mercury.)

6929. The Spirits of Mercury who were with me while I was writing and explicating the Word as to its internal sense . . . said that the things which I was writing were very gross . . . But it was granted to reply that by the men of our Earth the things which have been written are seen as subtle and elevated . . . D.3240.

7004^e. (This) has been told me from Heaven.

7072. I represented the birds of our Earth to them.

7170². I then felt a remarkable change in the brain . . .

7248. Their delight when they think of eating the spoil was communicated to me . . . —^e.

7251^e. When they were received into Heaven, I apperceived such a tenderness of gladness as drew tears from my eyes.

7479. They wondered that there were so many evil Spirits around me, and that they spoke to me. But it was granted to reply that this is permitted them in order that I might thus know their quality . . . But that no evil Spirit . . . can injure me, because I am continually protected by the Lord.

7746. This (idea) inflowed with me from angelic Spirits.

7809. The Spirits of Jupiter with me at first thought that I was a man of their Earth.

8021^e. He desired me to receive them favourably; but it was given to reply that this does not depend upon me; but that all are received by me according to what they themselves are.

8096^e. It has often been granted me to speak with those in the Lower Earth who are represented by the Philistines.

[A.] 8099². I have twice seen those who are being taken out of infestations, pass this way through Hell.

8383. While I was reading in the Word something about the passion of our Saviour . . .

8545. Spirits of Jupiter were with me while I was reading John xvii. . .

8629. A certain Spirit ascending from the Lower Earth came to me . . .

8735. I have been further instructed by the Spirits of Jupiter that . . .

8989³. (These spiritual objects) have been apprehended and seen by me a thousand times . . . 9090².

9094². It has been granted me to know from much experience that the things which the Angels see and think in the light of Heaven are ineffable; for, when I have been elevated into that light, I have seemed to myself to understand all that the Angels said there; but when I have been led down into the light of the external man, and in this light have wanted to recollect the things which I had there heard, I could neither express them by words, nor even comprehend them by ideas of thought, except a few, and these few in obscurity.

9152². This I can asseverate, because it has been shown from Heaven.

9393⁴. (This) has very often been said to me from Heaven.

9399³. (This) it has been granted me to know from much experience.

9410². When I read 'the blood of the Lamb,' and think of the Lord's blood, the Angels with me know no otherwise than that I read 'the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord,' and that I think of it.

be for those few who are in faith. That the rest, however, may be brought to something of acknowledgement, it has been conceded to relate such things as delight and allure the man who is desirous of having knowledge; which, now, shall be concerning the Earths in the Universe (outside our solar system). 9438.

9440. (How I have been translated to the Earths in the universe. Ex.) 9578. 9582. 9967. 9968. (See 10585.) 10734. 10736. 10783.

9670². It has sometimes been granted me to speak with Angels from those Societies (which are represented by 'the veil').

9697. I have heard from the Angels that (their sun) is among the lesser stars. 10162. 10771, Ex. (Compare 10834.)

9699. My sight was afterwards opened, so that I could in some measure look into their Earth itself. 9790. 9791, Ex. 9792. 10752. 10768, Ex. 10769. 10770.

9793. I afterwards spoke with the Spirits who were from that Earth. . . 9968. 9972. 10315. 10381. 10382. 10585. 10736. 10751. 10758. 10785. 10808. 10833.

9794. Finally there was shown me the Hell of those who are from that Earth. Des.

9967. I was two days being led to the (Second) Earth. . . This took place while I was awake.

9969. I was told by the Angels from our Earth that . . .

10299³. That it is so it has been granted frequently to experience; for it has been granted to perceive the influx (of the Divine of the Lord) itself; the calling forth of the truths which are with me; the application to the objects of prayer; the adjoined affection of good, and the elevation itself.

10712. When it is granted (the Spirits of the Fourth Earth) to see the objects of this Earth through my eyes, they paid very little attention to them. Ex.

10808. They said there was nothing but evil in me, thinking to deter me . . . but it was granted to reply that I well know it to be so . . .

10813². When I showed (a Spirit of the Sixth Earth) the city in which I dwell, at the first view of it he fled away, and was seen no more. (For) when the Lord pleases, Spirits and Angels can see through the eyes of a man the things which are in the world. Ex.

10814. It was then granted to speak with the Angels who were with me about the two kinds of dominion.

H. 1⁴. Lest such denial . . . should infect also the simple in heart . . . it has been granted me to be together with the Angels, and to speak with them as a man with a man; and also to see the things which are in the Heavens, and also those which are in the Hells, and this for thirteen years . . .

2. I have often spoken with the Angels about this matter . . .

18². (The Spirits) were brought forward at a distance where is the angelic Heaven, and spoke with me thence . . .

46. When I have been in the spirit, thus withdrawn from the body, and thus in company with the Angels, I then beheld some of them as if they had been known to me from infancy, and others not so. Ex.

68. That each Society of Heaven resembles a man . . . it has sometimes been granted me to see. Des.

74. Now for experience: that Angels are human forms . . . has been seen by me a thousand times. For I have spoken with them as a man with a man, sometimes with one, sometimes with a number in company . . . and, lest it should be said that it was a fallacy . . . it has been granted to see them in full wakefulness, that is, when I was in every sense of the body, and in a state of clear perception . . .

75. From all the experience, which is now that of many years, I can assert that in their form Angels are wholly men . . . It has been granted also to see an Angel of the inmost Heaven . . . I surveyed him . . .

79². These things have not only been told me by the Angels, but it has also been granted to perceive them, when I have been elevated into the interior sphere of Heaven.

109⁶. Often, when I have been in gardens, and have inspected the trees, fruits, flowers, and vegetables, I have observed the correspondences in Heaven, and I have spoken with those with whom [the correspondences] were, and have been instructed whence they were . . .

115. I have been instructed from Heaven that . . . 306.

118. That the Lord appears as a Sun . . . has not only been told me by the Angels, but it has been sometimes granted to see . . . 159, Des.

121⁶. The Lord has also been seen by me outside the Sun in an angelic form . . . and once also in the midst of the Angels as a flaming beam.

126. (The light in the Heavens) has been seen by me quite frequently.

130². I have been elevated into that light interiorly by degrees; and, as I was elevated, the understanding was illustrated, until at last . . . I perceived things such as I could not even comprehend from natural lumen. I have sometimes been indignant (at it).

143². Whenever I have been in company with the Angels, the presence of the Lord before my face has been observed, who, although not seen, was still perceived in light.

167. When anxiety has thence arisen in me, I have been elevated into the sphere of Heaven, and thus into the perception in which the Angels are about what is Eternal . . .

168. There have been Angels who have been admitted more closely into my thoughts . . . and I afterwards heard them saying that they had been in darkness. Ex.

174. When it has been granted me to be in company with the Angels, the things which are there have been seen by me . . . so perceptibly that I knew no otherwise than that I was in the world, in a king's court. I have also spoken with them as a man with a man.

184. Whenever I have spoken with the Angels mouth to mouth, I have been with them in their habitations. Des. . . This has been done in full wakefulness, while the interior sight has been opened to me.

228². That this is so has been shown me by much experience: it has been granted the Angels to move my steps, my actions, my tongue and speech, as they wanted, and this by influx into my will and thought; and I have found that I could do nothing from myself. They have afterwards said that every man is so ruled . . .

239². That this is so, it has been granted to know by experience. I have sometimes been let into the state in which the Angels are, and in that state I have spoken with them, and have then understood all things; but when I have been let back into my original state, and thus into the natural thought proper to a man, and I wanted to recollect the thing which I had heard, I could not. Ex.

246². I have spoken with the Angels about this matter, and have said that they perhaps suppose that they are speaking with me in my vernacular, because it is so apperceived, when yet it is not they who are speaking, but I. Ex.

255. When I have been in company with the Angels, and in a like state with them, I have spoken with them in their own language, and did not know anything about my own . . . But as soon as I have not been in company with them, I was in my own language.

261. It has been granted me to see these writings (of the Inmost Heaven) . . . and also those of the lower Heavens. Des.

281. I have spoken much with the Angels about innocence, and have been informed that . . .

282⁶. I say this from the apperception of it.

311². The Angels wish that I should assert from their mouths that . . .

312². In order that man may be convinced that it is not so, it has been granted me to have consort with the Angels, and to speak with those also who are in Hell, and this now for a number of years, sometimes continually from morning to evening, and thus to be informed about Heaven and about Hell, and this for the reason that the man of the Church should no longer remain in his erroneous belief about the resurrection . . .

—⁴. Lest the simple in faith and heart (should be troubled and seduced,) the interiors of my spirit have been opened by the Lord, and so it has been granted to speak with all I had ever known . . . with some for days, with some for months, and with some for a year; and also with so many others that if I should say 100,000, it would be too few; many of whom were in the Heavens, and many in the Hells. I have spoken with some two days after their decease . . . 437. J.26.

322. (I have conversed familiarly with some of the wise Gentiles of ancient times; one of whom it was granted to believe to be Cicero. His discourse.) 323.

340⁶. That I might know (this) for certain, it has been granted to speak with some who had been educated as infants in Heaven, and who had grown up there . . .

[H.] 363. It has been granted me to speak with some who lived seventeen centuries ago, and whose lives are well known . . . and it was found that each was still actuated by his own love. (Further des. 480.)

364². I have sometimes spoken with those who . . . were from the lower orders of society . . .

436. I have spoken with Spirits as a Spirit, and I have spoken with them as a man in the body . . .

456. That the spirit of man (after death) is a man, and in a like form, has been proved to me by the daily experience of a number of years; for I have seen and heard them a thousand times . . .

535². It has been granted me to speak with some of the papal saints . . .

577². For it has been granted me by the Lord to be in the Spiritual World as to the spirit, and at the same time in the natural world as to the body. This I can testify, that . . .

586. It has been granted me to look into the Hells. Ex. and Des.

U. 1^e. It has been conceded to me (to speak with Spirits) daily, for twelve years.

J. 9^e. Swedenborg appeals to his spiritual experience. E. 86². 232. 400². 429^e. 503⁷. 539. 714¹⁴. 763². 792. 796^e. 816^e. 817⁵. —¹³. 837². 889⁴. 897^e. 926. 976^e. 1092¹. 1133⁵. 1134². 1151^e. 1158². 1190². 1194^e. 1212⁴. 1214^e. 1222². D. Wis. vii. 2. P. 197².

26. It has been granted me to speak with some who lived before the Flood, and also with some who lived after the Flood; and also with some of the Jewish nation who are known from the Old Testament; with some who lived in the time of the Lord; with many who lived in the subsequent centuries down to the present one; and besides with all whom I had known here and who had died; and likewise with little children; and with many of the Gentiles. From this experience I have been fully convinced that there is not one who was ever born a man . . . who is not either in Heaven or in Hell.

35². Therefore it has been granted me by the Lord to explicate all things in (Matt. xxiv.) . . .

45². How the Last Judgment has been executed it has been granted me to see from beginning to end . . . 60. T. 115.

56. As it has been conceded to me (to be together with the Babylonians who are in the Spiritual World) I can speak from experience; for I have seen them, heard them, and spoken with them.

E. 53^e. All things which I have seen in the Heavens have been seen by the sight of the spirit; and I was then in a similar state of wakefulness to that in which I was when they were not seen.

78³. Jehovah has been seen by many . . . but they were encompassed at the time by a column of Spirits . . . In this way the Lord has been several times seen by me.

235³. I have heard the Angels say that . . . 992^e.

653¹². (This) has been told me from Heaven. 728². 988⁶.

902⁴. I have been confirmed that this is so from the Angels of the Third Heaven . . .

984^e. Reader, treasure this up within you; and after death . . . inquire whether it is true, and you will see.

1130^e. That this is so, it has been granted me to perceive by an elevation above the natural idea into the spiritual one.

1147³. I can testify that for fifteen years I have clearly perceived that I have thought nothing and willed nothing of myself . . .

1183². This (illustration) it has been granted me to see; and from it to perceive distinctly what comes from the Lord, and what from the Angels. What has come from the Lord has been written; and what has come from the Angels has not been written. Moreover it has been granted me to speak with the Angels as a man with a man; and also to see the things which are in the Heavens and those which are in the Hells. The reason was that the end of the present Church has come, and the beginning of a new one is at hand . . .

Ath. 2. All these works [here enumerated] have been written in the Latin language, and have been sent to all the archbishops and bishops [of Great Britain], and to some of the peers; and yet not a word has been heard . . .

201^e. A trial was made with Gyllenborg, as to whether he could abstain from torturing me in the breast . . .

De. Dom. 25. As it has been granted me to have consort with Angels, to speak with them, and to see the things which are in the Heavens; and also to speak with those who have died, with nearly all whom I had known, I wish to tell something which I have heard on this subject . . .

J. (Post). 19. I was in the spirit, and it was then granted me to go through a city . . .

186. Many of those in faith alone were present while I was writing the doctrine concerning the Lord and concerning the life of charity, in such a fury that I should scarcely have been able to write, unless I had been protected by the Lord by means of an Angel . . .

324. Spirits and Angels, while they are with me, are in my natural state. Shown.

De Verbo 3². I have often been sent among the spiritual Angels. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

—⁴. It has sometimes been granted me to be among Angels of the Middle and of the Highest Heaven. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

—¹⁰. It has been granted me to instruct the Angels themselves concerning this matter, because it has been granted me to be in the two worlds by turns, and from one to explore the other.

13°. As for me, I have not been allowed to take anything from the mouth of any Spirit, nor from the mouth of any Angel; but from the mouth of the Lord alone.

L. Pref. By the command of the Lord, who has been revealed to me, the following works are to be published. Enum.

37. It has been granted me to run through all the Prophets and the Psalms of David, to examine every verse, and to see what was there treated of; and it has been seen that nothing else is treated of there than the Church, the Lord's advent, etc.

S. 4. Lest, therefore, man should be in doubt that the Word is of such a character, the internal sense . . . has been revealed to me by the Lord . . . This sense can testify . . . and convince even the natural man, if he is willing to be convinced.

64. It has been granted me to perceive that when I have read the Word in the sense of the letter, communication has been effected with the Heavens, now with this Society of them, now with that; and that the things which I have understood according to the natural sense, the spiritual Angels have understood according to the spiritual sense, and the celestial Angels according to the celestial sense; and this in an instant. As this communication has been perceived thousands of times, no doubt has been left me concerning it.

70°. Lest the fact should be for ever hidden (that there is a Word in the Heavens) it has been granted me to be in consort with Angels and Spirits, and to speak with them, and to see the things which are about them, and afterwards to relate many things which I have heard and seen, which has been done in the work on Heaven and Hell . . .

90. A little paper sent me from the (Third) Heaven. Des.

93. I have spoken with some . . . who lived many ages ago, and who had confirmed themselves in the falsities of their religion; and I have found that they have remained constantly in the same. And I have spoken with some there who had been of the same religion, and who had thought as the former ones had done, but had not confirmed the falsities of their religion with themselves, and I have found that when instructed by the Angels they had rejected the falsities, and had imbuéd truths . . . W.268.

102. That the (ancient) Word was written by mere correspondences . . . has been related to me by the Angels . . .

Life 26. It has been granted me to see and hear many after death who have enumerated their good works . . .

F. 51. I want to communicate what I have heard from an Angel of Heaven (respecting faith separated from charity, and faith not separated).

56. (This) has not only been told me from Heaven; but has also been shown in the World of Spirits (by the appearance of a great dragon).

C. J. 35. As it has pleased the Lord to open to me the eyes of my spirit, and to keep them open now for nineteen years, it has been granted me to see the things which are in the Spiritual World, and also to describe them. I can asseverate that these things are not visions; but things which have been seen in complete wakefulness. 39.

D. Love iv°. (This) does not transcend my understanding, which is an illustrated rational one.

D. Wis. i°. It has been granted me to perceive that in the light of the Highest Heaven I was in wisdom; in the light of the Second Heaven, in intelligence; and in the light of the Ultimate Heaven, in knowledge; and when I was solely in natural light I was in ignorance of spiritual things.

iii. 4. I desire to describe this initial form (of man) as it has been shown to me in the Heavens.

vii. 1. I have had daily association with Angels and men who had died, from the year 1744 to the present time, a period of nineteen years.

3. I was once . . . brought into the respiration of my spirit, which I then plainly felt to be in accord with that of the Angels of Heaven. . . On one occasion it was granted the Angels to lead my respiration, and to diminish and successively withdraw the respiration of my body until only the respiration of my spirit remained, which respiration I then perceived by sense. Moreover I have been in the respiration of my spirit whenever I have been in a state like that of Spirits and Angels, and whenever I have been elevated into Heaven; oftentimes I was in the spirit and not in the body; and at other times in both the spirit and the body. W.391.

5. This difference can be known only to one who has been in both worlds . . . and who can change from the one to the other, so as to be at one time in the one world and at another in the other; and who can by reflection look at one from the other. From this privilege, which has been granted me, I have been instructed in what the natural man is, and what the spiritual man, who is a Spirit.

W. 79. Sometimes an entire Society of Heaven has appeared to me as one Angel-man . . .

82. I once heard the Angels speaking with Newton about a vacuum . . .

85. As the Spiritual World has lain so deeply hidden . . . it has pleased the Lord to open the sight of my spirit, that I might see the things which are in that World, just as I see those which are in the natural world, and might afterwards describe that World, which has been done in the Work on Heaven and Hell.

131. It has been granted me to see the Lord in this way as a Sun. I see Him before my face; and for many years I have so seen Him, to whatever quarter of the world I have turned.

179°. It has sometimes been granted me to see that Angels of the Ultimate Heaven had ascended to those of the Third . . .

182. As to the spiritual light in which the Angels (of the higher and lower Heavens are), it has been granted me to see it with my eyes. Des.

223. (Statements of the Angels quoted.)

233. (This) has been told me from Heaven. P.279°. R.842°.

[W.] 239². I knew a man of moderate learning . . . whom I saw after death and spoke with in Heaven; and I clearly perceived that he spoke like an Angel . . . for the reason that in the world he had applied the precepts of the Lord to life, and had worshipped the Lord; and had therefore been elevated by the Lord into the third degree of love and wisdom.

275². I have heard that a certain Divine truth flowed down out of Heaven into Hell . . . It has been granted me to see the Hells as they are placed relatively to the Heavens . . .

291. In regard to this matter I have spoken much with the Angels. They said that . . . P.36.

320². As it has been granted me (to be in the Spiritual World) I am able, from what I have seen there, to reveal this arcanum.

341. I once observed in my garden that . . . nearly all the dust was turned into minute insects . . .

355². (The wonders of nature) have been proofs to me of an influx of the Spiritual into the Natural . . . I have sensibly felt that influx continually for nineteen years.

391². Many times I have been in a state like that of the Angels, and also elevated into Heaven to them; and being then in the spirit and out of the body, I have spoken with them with a respiration in like manner as in the world.

394². It has (therefore) been granted me to speak with the Angels, and to be enlightened on the subject by their wisdom, as follows.

405². The correspondence has disclosed to me this and many other things . . .

412². By what I know of the structure of the lungs, I am fully convinced that . . .

432. (This) has been disclosed to me by the Angels, to whom it has been revealed by the Lord.

P. 39. I have heard this, and I have perceived this.

50². I have spoken with many after death, in Europe, Asia, and Africa . . . and no one has ever said, How could I speak with those at a distance?

64. I have not seen the universal Heaven as one man; for this can be seen by the Lord alone; but sometimes I have so seen an entire Society.

135. I have spoken with Spirits and Angels for many years; but no Spirit has dared, and no Angel has wanted, to say anything to me, and still less to instruct me, about anything in the Word, or about anything doctrinal from the Word; but the Lord alone has taught me, who has been revealed to me; and afterwards has continually appeared before my eyes as the Sun in which He is, just as He appears to the Angels, and has illustrated me.

153. I have often wondered that . . .

158². For many years it has been granted me to be in a like perception (to that of the celestial Angels respecting the influx of love and wisdom); from which I have been fully convinced that I will and think nothing from myself; but that it appears as if from myself; and it has also been granted me to will and love this.

169. This (actual) illustration (from spiritual light) has sometimes appeared to me in the Spiritual World . . .

187². I have sometimes thought in myself whether . . . and I have perceived that . . .

215⁹. It has been granted me to feel the nature and intensity of the delight of the love of dominating from the love of self. Des.

223. By much experience in the Spiritual World it has been granted me to know that man possesses in himself the faculty of understanding the arcana of wisdom like the Angels themselves; for I have seen fiery devils who . . . understood them . . .

265². I have asked more than a thousand newcomers from the world whether they know that to shun evils as sins is religion itself; and they said that they did not know . . .

274⁶. I have told many that such is the lot of such and such persons; and I have never as yet heard anyone say that they will have no lot until the time of the Judgment. M.28².

279². I was previously in the belief that . . .

296¹⁰. The withdrawal from evil is effected by the Lord in a thousand ways; of these only some have been disclosed to me, but only the most general . . .

310⁴. Some of the Genii were once let out of their Hell, that I might know their character. (Continued under GENII.)

324⁴. As it has been granted me to speak with the Angels, I will say something from experience. I have spoken with those who lived many ages ago; with those who lived before the Flood, and with some who lived after it; with those who lived in the time of the Lord, and with one of His apostles; and with many who lived in later ages: and they have all seemed like men of middle age; and have said that they do not know what death is . . .

340^o. By permission, some Spirits ascended from Hell, and said to me; You have written many things from the Lord, write also something from us. I replied, What shall I write? They said, Write that every Spirit, whether good or evil, is in his own delight . . .

R. Pref.⁴. Everyone can see that the Apocalypse cannot possibly be explained except by the Lord alone . . . on which account it has pleased the Lord to open the sight of my spirit, and to teach me. Do not believe, therefore, that I have taken anything herein from myself; nor from any Angel; but from the Lord alone.

11². I have spoken with Spirits and Angels who were from Great Tartary, who said that they possessed a Word . . .

29^o. It has very often been granted me to hear and speak the spiritual language; and I have compared it with the languages in the world . . .

43^o. This explanation of that chapter has been given me by the Lord, through Heaven.

86. It has been given me to know (this) by revelation.

99^o. It has often been granted me to see their infestations.

100^o. I know (this) from experience; for in my temptations I have seen the infernal Spirits who induced them; and have perceived the influx from the Lord, who delivered.

134. I have not before ventured to reveal this, because it offends the ears.

153¹¹. It has been granted me to enter some of (the infernal workhouses), and to see, to the end that I might make it known . . . The Angel who was with me told me that . . .

224. I saw a company of Spirits on their knees, praying . . .

342. As it has been granted me to see how the Last Judgment was accomplished . . .

363. That this is so has been revealed to me.

386. Once, when I looked around in the Spiritual World, I heard as it were a gnashing of teeth . . .

421². As it has been granted me to see that Hell (of the solidifians). . . I recognized some of them.

463. I desired to know what these things represented; as I knew that all the things which appear in the World of Spirits are correspondences . . . They then spoke with me from Heaven, and said . . .

—⁶. (Speeches of Swedenborg to the solidifian clergy.) 484². —¹.

484². After I went out, I again heard a harsh sound . . . I went in the direction of the sound . . .

—⁶. When I said this, he seized the candlestick to throw it in my face; but the candle being suddenly extinguished, he threw it against the forehead of his companion; and I went away laughing.

—⁶. These things, which I saw and heard, I saw and heard in the wakefulness of my body, and at the same time of my spirit; for the Lord has so united my spirit to my body, that I am in both at the same time. It was of the Divine auspices of the Lord that I came to those houses, and that they then deliberated concerning these matters; and that all took place as is described.

531. I was suddenly attacked with a disease almost mortal: my whole head was oppressed; a pestilential smoke was injected into me from the Jerusalem which is called Sodom and Egypt: I was half dead with severe pain: I awaited the end. I lay in bed thus for three days and a half: my spirit was affected thus, and from it my body. At the same time I heard around me the voices of those who said, See, he lies dead in the street of our city who preached repentance for the remission of sins, and the Man Christ only. And they asked some of the clergy whether he was worthy of burial; and they said that he was not: let him lie; let him be looked at. They passed to and fro and mocked. In truth this happened to me, when Rev.xi. was being explained. . . I heard these (harsh speeches) but could not answer, because I lay almost dead. But after three days and a half my spirit recovered; and I went forth in the spirit from the street into the city, and said again, Repent, and believe in Christ: and your sins will be remitted, and you will be saved. If not, you will perish. Did not the Lord Himself preach repentance for the remission of sins; and that they should believe in Him? Did He not command the disciples to preach the same? Does not complete security of life follow the dogma of your faith? But they said, What are you prating about? b.114. T.567. D.6108^o.

—³. After they had been engulfed . . . I desired to know their lot in the deep; and it was said to me from Heaven, You shall see and hear. Des.

543. While these (Four Leading) Doctrines were being written, the dragonists stood around me, and combined with all their fury to devour, that is, to extinguish them. This new thing I am allowed to relate, because in truth it so happened. The dragonists who stood around me were from all parts of the Reformed Christian world.

655. I spoke with certain who are meant by 'the dragon.' . . He led me through a shady forest, and upon a hill, from which I could view the delights of the dragons. Des. I said, Away, demon . . . I was afterwards thinking with myself why such things are permitted by the Lord; and I received the answer in my heart, that they are permitted so long as they are in the World of Spirits . . .

716. I have spoken in the Spiritual World with certain bishops of England concerning the small works published in London in 1758 . . . and which were presented to all the bishops, and to many of the peers, or lords. (The conversation reported.)

752. It was granted me to speak with Pope Sixtus Quintus. . . He wishes me to say to those who are now living, that Christ is the God of Heaven and earth, and that the Word is the Holy Divine; and that the Holy Spirit does not speak through the mouth of anyone, but Satan, who wants to be adored as God; and that those who do not attend to these things . . . are cast into Hell . . . I said, Perhaps these things are too hard for me to write. But he answered, Write, and I will subscribe them, because they are true. He then went away from me into his Society, and subscribed one copy, and sent it out as a Bull . . .

[R.] 768². I once spoke with the Babylonish nation there about the 'keys' . . .

776². I have spoken with . . . some who were delegates in the Councils of Nice, of the Lateran, and of Trent . . .

784^e. That this is so it has been granted me to know for certain, because it has been granted me by the Lord to be together with those who are in the World of Spirits, and to see all things, and thus to relate it from actual experience; and this now for twenty years. And therefore I can assert that Purgatory is a fiction . . .

875. Awaking one morning from sleep, I saw two Angels descending from Heaven . . .

—⁹. The figs in my hand became grapes. T. 461

—¹⁰. I then opened my mind, and said . . .

—¹⁵. I saw a cedar table, upon which was a book . . . written by me, called Angelic Wisdom concerning the Divine Love and the Divine Wisdom; and also concerning the Divine Providence; and I said that in that book it has been fully shown that . . .

876². Each Heaven is distinguished into three Heavens . . . in like manner this New Heaven: I have seen them, and spoken with them.

881. If they desire it, and pray to the Lord, they see (the Church) as a virgin . . . It has been granted me to see the Church thus.

949^e. I doubt not that . . .

—⁶. The Angels then perceived in my thought the common ideas . . . about a Trinity of Persons . . . and they said, . . . Are you not thinking those things from natural light . . . Unless you remove the ideas of that thought, we close Heaven to you, and go away. But I said to them, Enter, I pray, more deeply into my thought . . . And they did so, and saw that by three Persons I understood three preceding Divine Attributes, which are Creation, Salvation, and Reformation; and that these Attributes are of the one God: and that by the birth of a Son of God from eternity I understood His birth foreseen from eternity and provided in time. And I then narrated that my natural thought concerning a Trinity and Unity of Persons, and concerning the birth of a Son of God from eternity, I had from the doctrine of faith which has its name from Athanasius; and that that doctrine is just and right, provided that instead of a Trinity of Persons there be understood a Trinity of Person, which exists solely in the Lord Jesus Christ . . . The Angels then said, Good . . . After this the heavenly light . . . gradually descended, and filled the interiors of my mind, and enlightened my natural ideas about the Unity and Trinity of God: and I then saw the ideas about these things which I had first formed, and which were merely natural, separated, as chaff is separated from wheat in winnowing . . . and dispersed. B. 119. T. 26.

962. As it has been granted me by the Lord to see the wonderful things which are in the Heavens and under the Heavens, I must, as commanded, relate what has been seen. There appeared a magnificent palace, and in its inmost a temple . . . B. 120. T. 188.

5 M. Once, from a longing to know the quality of the mind of a man who is merely natural, I looked up into Heaven, and asked it of the Lord . . . There then suddenly ascended a certain satan . . . I asked why his face underwent those changes; and received the answer from Heaven, that . . .

3. As the place stank where he had stood, I went home in haste.

Docu. 229. (Letter to Oetinger.) I can solemnly bear witness that the Lord Himself has appeared to me, and that He sent me to do what I am doing now; and that for this purpose He has opened the interiors of my mind . . . so that I may see the things which are in the Spiritual World . . . which I have had for twenty-two years. Sep. 23rd 1766.

234. (Letter to Beyer.) I was forbidden to read writers on dogmatic and systematic theology, before Heaven was opened to me; because unfounded opinions and inventions might thereby have easily insinuated themselves, which afterwards could have been removed with difficulty; and therefore, when Heaven was opened to me, I had first to learn the Hebrew language, as well as the correspondences according to which the whole Bible is composed, which led me to read the Word of God over many times; and, as God's Word is the source whence all theology must be derived, I was thereby enabled to receive instruction from the Lord, who is the Word. Feb. 1767.

M. Title. By Emanuel Swedenborg, a Swede.

1. I foresee that many who read these things . . .

will believe that they are inventions of the imagination; but I asseverate in Truth that they are not inventions, but have been truly done and seen; and that they have been seen, not in any dozing state of the mind, but in a state of full wakefulness. For it has pleased the Lord to manifest Himself to me, and to send me to teach those things which will be of the New Church . . . For the sake of this end He has opened the interiors of my mind and spirit; by virtue of which it has been granted me to be in the Spiritual World with the Angels, and at the same time in the natural world with men; and this now for twenty-five years. (This statement is repeated in T.851, where he says twenty-seven years.)

2. The Angel let himself slowly down on the earth which was my standing-ground. . . I was in the spirit.

26. I asseverate in Truth that these things were done and seen as recounted.

39². As it is impossible for any Angel of Heaven to descend, or for any Spirit of Hell to ascend, and speak with any man, except with those who have the interiors of the mind . . . opened by the Lord; and as this cannot be done to the full, except with those who have been prepared by the Lord to receive the things which are of spiritual wisdom; therefore it has pleased the Lord to do this to me, to the end that the state of Heaven and Hell, and the state of men after death, may not be unknown . . .

—². There then appeared a chariot descending from the Third Heaven . . . and (the married pair) in it called out to me, Do you want us to come nearer? but in that case beware lest the sparkling which flashes from the Heaven whence we have descended, and which is flaming, penetrates interiorly; by its influx the higher ideas of your understanding . . . are indeed enlightened; but these ideas are ineffable in the world in which you dwell; and therefore receive rationally the things which you are about to hear, and thus set them forth to the understanding. I replied, I will take care; come nearer.

43. After these things, an Angel from that (Third) Heaven appeared to me, holding in his hand a parchment, which he unrolled, saying, I have seen that you have meditated about conjugal love. In this parchment there are arcana of wisdom about it which have not yet been disclosed in the world. They are to be disclosed now, because it is important. . . The Angel (then) let down the unrolled parchment, which a certain angelic Spirit took, and laid on a table in a certain chamber, which he at once locked, and held out to me the key, and said, Write.

55. There were then many Spirits around me . . .

56. Once, when I was speaking with Angels in the Spiritual World, I was inspired with a pleasant passion to see the Temple of Wisdom . . .

73^e. These things . . . were shown me when my spirit was awake, and were afterwards recalled to my memory by an Angel, and thus described. And as they are from the Spiritual World . . . I have decided to arrange them into six Memorable Relations according to the progressions of the ages.

75. Once, when I had meditated about conjugal love, my mind was seized with a desire to know what had been the quality of that love with those who lived in the (various) Ages. . . I therefore prayed to the Lord that I might be allowed to speak with them. . . And lo an Angel stood near me, and said, I have been sent by the Lord to be your guide and companion . . . I was in the spirit, and girded myself for the journey . . .

81⁵. My heart (then) exulted, and I went home with joy; and there I returned out of the state of the spirit into that of the body; in which latter state I committed to writing what I had seen and heard.

82. After these things, a man came running with vehemence from the northern quarter, and . . . said, Are you he who wants to seduce the world by instaurating a New Church? (Swedenborg states and demonstrates to him the five points of the Faith of the New Church.)

103. One morning, before sunrise, I looked towards the east in the Spiritual World, and saw four horsemen . . .

—². Wondering at these things, I looked up into Heaven, and asked where those horsemen were going; and I received for answer . . . It was (also) said to me, Go, and do you also enter (that house), and you will hear.

115. Awaking at midnight, I saw at some height towards the east an Angel holding a paper in his right hand . . . and I saw that there was written thereon, The Marriage of Good and Truth . . .

132. I once spoke with two Angels . . . who, when they perceived that I was meditating on the arcana of wisdom concerning conjugal love, said, Do you know anything about the Schools of Wisdom in our World? . . . They then took me by the hand, saying, Follow us . . . T.48.

—². I replied, I was led here by two Angels to see and hear; but not to sit down.

148². I have heard from the Angels that . . . 171². 172. 200². 205.

151a. As I was going home from the School of Wisdom, I saw in the way an Angel in a hyacinthine garment. He joined me, and walked by my side, and said, I see that you have come out of the School of Wisdom, and that you have been gladdened by what you heard there; and as I perceive that you are not fully in this world, because you are at the same time in the natural world, and therefore know nothing of our Olympic Gymnasia . . . if you like I will conduct you to the place . . . So he led me . . .

[M.] 155a. I was awakened one morning by the sweetest singing, which was heard from some height above me; and, during the first wakefulness, which is more internal, peaceful, and sweet than the rest of the day, I could be kept for some time in the spirit as it were out of the body . . . After this, I arose, and looked forth into the Spiritual World; and in the east, under the Sun, there appeared as it were a Golden Shower . . .

166². It does not become me to open these things circumstantially; but it does become the wives themselves . . .

182. After some weeks, I heard a voice from Heaven, saying, See, there is again an Assembly on Parnassus. Come here, and we will show you the way. Des.

—³. They asked, What news from the earth? They replied, This is new: that a certain person asserts that he speaks with Angels, and has his sight opened into the Spiritual World equally as into the natural world; and he brings thence many new things, among which are the following . . .

193³. I have heard that . . .

207. After some time I looked towards the city Athenaeum . . . and I heard thence an unwonted cry . . . I inquired from afar what was the matter . . . As I was in the spirit, and as distances with Spirits are according to the states of their affections . . . I seemed to myself to be present there . . .

218². I saw boys and girls through a window in the street of a great city, (and from their ways) I could see plainly that a man is born understanding, and a woman, love . . .

231. As [the idea] fell into my thought whether there are just, learned, and wise people in Hell, I was affected with a longing to see whether there are such there; and it was said to me from Heaven, You shall see and hear. I went out of the house in the spirit, and saw before me an opening . . . and I descended by a ladder . . .

—³. There was then given me illustration from Heaven, by which I perceived . . .

—⁶. It was then said to me, Wait a little, and there shall be granted you attendant Angels from the Society next above them. Through these, light from the Lord will be given you . . . 232.

232⁵. Having so said I went away, and they in indignation threw stones after me.

235^o. I have heard in the Spiritual World that . . .

242^o. I was once wandering in a great city, through the streets, seeking a dwelling-place, and I entered a house where dwelt married partners of diverse religion. Being myself unaware of this, the Angels spoke to me, and said, We cannot remain with you in that house . . .

261^o. Once, when I had meditated about Heaven and Hell, I began to long for a universal Knowledge concerning the state of both; knowing that he who knows universals can afterwards comprehend singulars . . . In this longing, I looked to that tract in the northern quarter near the east where were the places of instruction, and I went there by a way then open to me. I entered one of the colleges . . . and asked the head-masters whether they knew the universals concerning Heaven and Hell. They said . . . If we look towards the east to the Lord, we shall be illustrated, and we shall know. They did so, and said . . .

—^e. When I was at home, it was said to me from Heaven, Examine these three universals above and below, and we shall afterwards see them in your hand. Ex.

263. When I had meditated on these things, it was said to me through an Angel by the Lord, You shall see and be confirmed by sight what is the quality of that infernal love. Then suddenly the earth opened itself on the left, and I saw a devil ascending from Hell. Des.

267. After some space of time, I entered a certain grove, and walked there in meditation about those who are in the concupiscence . . . of possessing the things of the world; and I then saw at some distance from me two Angels conversing together, and by turns looking at me. I therefore approached nearer, and as I approached they accosted me, and said, We have perceived in ourselves that you are meditating on what we are conversing about, or that we are conversing about what you are meditating on, which is from the reciprocal communication of affections.

270. One morning, after sleep, my thought was deeply engaged on some arcana of conjugal love . . . I then saw two swans flying . . . An Angel (then) stood by me, and said, Do you understand what you have seen? I replied, Some little. He said . . .

—⁵. Being inflamed with a longing to see that palace, I asked whether anyone was permitted to enter and see it, as it was a representative palace? The Angel replied, None but those who are in the Third Heaven . . . from whom I have heard what I have related to you . . . He wanted to recount still more things about conjugal love from its effigies in that palace; but he said, Enough for this time; inquire first whether these things are above the common understanding. If they are, what is the use of more? But if not, more will be disclosed.

293. I once looked through a window to the east, and saw seven women sitting upon a bed of roses . . . I strained my eyesight to see what they were doing, and this affected them; and therefore one of them beckoned to me, and I went out of the house, and quickly approached them. I asked politely whence they were . . . They said, We are wives, and are conversing here about the deliciousnesses of conjugal love, and . . . we conclude that they are also the deliciousnesses of wisdom. This answer so delighted my mind that I seemed to myself to be in the spirit, and consequently in a perception more interior and illustrated than, previously, in any other way . . .

315. I once saw not far from me a meteor . . . I lifted up my eyes, and saw boys, young men, and old men, entering a house . . . over which was that phenomenon . . . I asked, What is going on there? He answered, It is a Gymnasium . . . I went in with them, being then in the spirit, that is, in a state like that in which are the men of the Spiritual World . . .

—¹². I then went away home; and lo, over that Gymnasium . . . there appeared a bright cloud . . .

316. Once, as I was walking in rest of the lower mind, and delightful peace of the interior mind, I saw from afar a grove, in the midst of which was a portico leading to a small palace . . . I went there in spirit, and asked a certain keeper . . . whether I might enter. He looked at me . . . in order to see whether the delight of peace which he saw in my face partook of the delight of conjugal love . . . I was then meditating on conjugal love . . . and he told me that I might enter . . .

326. As I saw them from my lodging—diversorio—I became in the spirit, and in the spirit I went out to them, and approached the head-master. . . He said, I was surprised as I saw you approaching that now you came into my sight, and now you went out of it . . . surely you are not in the same state of life as we are. To this I replied, smiling, I am neither a player, nor a Vertumnus; but I am alternate, being now in your light, and now in your shade; thus both a foreigner and a native. . . I am in . . . the natural world, and also in the . . . Spiritual World. Hence it is that I am in the natural state, and at the same time in the spiritual state; in the natural state with the men of the Earth, and in the spiritual state with you; and when I am in the natural state you do not see me; but when I am in the spiritual state, you do. That I am such has been granted by the Lord. (Fully ex. under SPIRITUAL.) T.280.

328³. I once thought . . . about God before the creation; and as I could not as yet remove spaces and times from . . . my thought, I became anxious . . . But it was said to me, Remove the ideas of space and time, and you will see. It was granted me to remove them, and I saw; and from that time I could think of God from eternity, and not at all of nature from eternity . . . T.31³.

329. After the head-master had gone away, some of the boys . . . followed me home, and stood near me for a little, while I was writing; and lo they saw an insect running upon my paper . . .

353. I was once in the midst of Angels, and heard their discourse . . .

355. Once, as I looked forth into the Spiritual World, I saw in a certain meadow men clothed in garments like those worn by men . . . I approached them . . .

368². This description of jealousy has been given me from Heaven . . .

372. I asked the jealous Angels concerning the seat of jealousy . . .

380². When I was in amazement at the multitude of such, there stood an Angel at my side, and he said to me, What are you meditating about? . . .

381. Once, when I looked around into the World of Spirits, I saw from afar a palace . . . besieged by a crowd . . . I swiftly betook myself out of the house . . . and entered . . .

415. One morning, when I awoke . . . and was meditating in the early and serene light before full wakefulness, I saw through the window as it were a flash of lightning . . . and heard from Heaven these words: There are some not far from you who are disputing about God and nature . . . T.77.

416. After these things, the two Angels, seeing me near, said of me to the bystanders, We know that this man has written concerning God and nature: let us hear it. . . I therefore read (from the Divine Love and Wisdom) as follows . . .

444³. I rejoiced at heart that it was granted me to speak with Angels of such innocence . . .

521. My eye was opened, and I saw a dense forest, and a crowd of satyrs there . . .

—⁴. I then joked with them . . .

522. After these things I returned home, and the next day . . . I looked towards the same forest, and saw . . . in its place a sandy plain, in the midst of which was a pool containing some red serpents. Some weeks afterwards, when I looked thither again, I saw on its right side some fallow land, and upon it some husbandmen. Again, after some weeks, I saw arising out of that fallow land some newly tilled land surrounded with shrubs. And I then heard a voice from Heaven, Enter into your bed-chamber, and shut the door, and apply to the work commenced on the Apocalypse; and work steadily at it until it is finished within two years.

532. I was once carried up as to my spirit into the angelic Heaven, and into one of its Societies; and some of the wise . . . said to me, What news from the earth? I said, This is new: that the Lord has revealed arcana which in excellence surpass those which have ever been revealed since the beginning of the Church. Enum.

533. The Angels rejoiced exceedingly . . . but they perceived sadness in me, and asked why. I said that . . . on earth those arcana are considered of no value. . . . The arcana were then written on a paper, which was let down from Heaven; and in its progress through the Spiritual World it shone like a star; but when it descended into the natural world, the light disappeared. Des. . . And, as the Angels became sad . . . it was said 'Until a time, and times, and half a time.'

534. After these things, I spoke with the Angels: that something further is being revealed . . . (namely) concerning love truly conjugal . . . They then said, Write about it, and follow the revelation; and afterwards the book written about it shall be let down by us from Heaven, and we shall see whether the things contained in it are received . . .

535. After these things I heard a hostile murmur from below . . . Do miracles, and we will believe. I asked, Are not these things miracles? . . .

1. Several works and tracts having been published by me, during some years past, concerning the New Jerusalem . . . and the Apocalypse having been revealed; I am resolved to give to light the Doctrine of that Church in its fulness, thus in its entirety. But, as this is a work of some years, I have thought it advisable to produce some sort of sketch of it, in order that a general idea of that Church and its doctrine may be conceived first . . .

37°. I can asseverate, that from the reason which has been given me, I can clearly see that . . .

81°. I can foretell that . . . T. 181.

I. 3. Hence it has pleased the Lord to open the sight of my spirit, and to elevate this into Heaven, and also to let it down into Hell . . . From this it has become evident to me that there are two worlds, which are distinct from each other . . .

117°. I once heard a voice from Heaven, saying . . .

18°. As it has been granted me to be in the Spiritual World and in the natural world, and thus to see both worlds and both suns, I am obliged by my conscience to make manifest these things . . .

19. After these things had been written, I prayed to the Lord to grant that I should speak with the disciples of Aristotle, of Des Cartes, and of Leibnitz, all together, in order that I might learn their opinions concerning the intercourse of the soul and the body. After my prayer there were present nine men . . . and they stood around me . . .

20. I was once asked, how from being a philosopher I became a theologian? I replied, In the same way as that in which fishermen were made disciples and apostles by the Lord; and that I too from my earliest youth had been a spiritual fisherman. . . A 'fisherman' = a man who investigates and teaches natural Truths, and afterwards, rationally, spiritual ones.

Letter (to Hartley). After reflecting on (your request that I should leave with you some particulars respecting myself), I have been led to yield to your friendly advice. (Swedenborg states many particulars relating to his birth, parentage, travels, intercourse with Charles xii., official position, and ennoblement.) I am (he proceeds) a Fellow and Member of the Royal Academy of Sciences in Stockholm; but I have never sought admission into any literary Society in any other place, because I am in an angelic Society, where such things as relate to Heaven and the soul are the only subjects of discourse. (He then gives an account of his family connections, and proceeds) moreover, all the bishops of my native country . . . and also the sixteen senators, and the rest of those highest in office, entertain feelings of affection for me; from their affection they honour me, and I live with them on terms of familiarity, as a friend among friends; the reason of which is, that they know I am in company with Angels. Even the King and the Queen, and the three princes, their sons, show me great favour . . . They all desire me to return home; wherefore I am far from apprehending, in my own country, that persecution which you fear . . . and if they choose to persecute me elsewhere, it can do me no harm. But all (this) I consider of comparatively little importance; for it is far exceeded by the circumstance that I have been called to a holy office by the Lord Himself, who most mercifully appeared before me, His servant, in the year 1743; when He opened my sight into the Spiritual World, and enabled me to converse with Spirits and Angels, in which state I have continued up to the present day . . .

Docu. 245. X. (Letter to the King of Sweden.) That our Saviour visibly revealed Himself before me, and commanded me to do what I have done, and what I have still to do; and that thereupon He permitted me to have intercourse with Angels and Spirits, I have declared before the whole of Christendom, as well in England, Holland, Germany, and Denmark, as in France and Spain; and also on various occasions in this country before their Royal Majesties, especially when I enjoyed the grace to eat at their table, in the presence of the whole royal family, and also of five senators and others; at which time my mission constituted the whole topic of conversation. Subsequently also I have revealed this before many senators . . . without mentioning many others, as well at home as abroad, among whom are both kings and princes. . . If any doubt should still remain, I am ready to testify with the most solemn oath . . . that this is the whole truth and a reality . . . That our Saviour permits me to experience this, is not on my own account, but for the sake of a sublime interest which concerns the eternal welfare of all Christians. [May 10th 1770.]

T. Title. By Emanuel Swedenborg, a Servant of the Lord Jesus Christ.

12°. I have perceptibly and sensibly observed this influx continually, for twenty-six years . . .

16°. From my infancy, I have not been able to admit into my mind any other idea than that of One God . . .

64. That there is such a presence of all there, has been evident to me from the fact that I have been able to see Africans and Indians there near together, although they are so many miles apart on Earth; nay, that I could become present to those in other planets . . . By virtue of this presence . . . I have spoken with apostles, deceased popes, emperors, and kings; with . . . Luther, Calvin, and Melancthon . . .

71. I once heard beneath me as it were a roaring of the sea . . . (A satanic Spirit said to me) Are you the man who thinks and speaks about order? . . .

73°. I said, I will supplicate to the Lord, and will bring you thence a remedy, by illustrating this matter . . .

74. When they saw me near them, some of them ran up to me, and with some vehemence said, Are you the man who has circumscribed God with laws, as with bonds? . . . On hearing these words I opened my mouth, and, speaking in a loud voice, I said . . .

—°. They saw Heaven open above me, and heard a voice thence: Listen with self control . . .

76. One day I was in meditation about the creation of the universe; and because this was perceived by the Angels who were above me on the right side . . . one descended and invited me, and I became in the spirit, and accompanied him; and, after I had entered, I was conducted to the Prince . . . One of them said, We have perceived here that you meditated about the creation . . . we have been in a like meditation, but could never come to a conclusion . . . and therefore we have called you out from the place where you were that you may declare your meditation. . . I said, I meditated long on this subject, but in vain; but afterwards, when I had been intromitted by the Lord into your world, I perceived that . . . Knowing these things, once, when I was in illustration, it was granted me to perceive that . . . —³.

78. The next day an Angel came to me from another Society of Heaven, and said, We have heard that . . . you were invited into a Society near ours, and that you there told them such things about the creation as they favoured then, and have since recollected with gladness. I will now show you how animals and plants of every kind were produced by God. Ex.

79. Once, when I was in thought about the creation . . . there came to me some from the Christian world who in their time had been among the most celebrated philosophers . . .

80. A satan once ascended by permission . . . his woman with him, and came to the house where I was. On seeing them I shut the window; but still I talked with them through it . . .

102^o. It was once granted me to speak with Mary the mother of the Lord . . .

112. Once, having awaked just after daybreak, I went out into the garden before the house, and saw the sun rising in his splendour . . . I then fell into a meditation about . . . Aurora . . . and my mind being delighted . . . I became in the spirit, and heard some . . . saying, Would it were granted to speak with the innovator who has thrown the apple of discord among the rulers of the Church, and which many of the laity have run after . . . By that apple they meant the Brief Exposition of the Doctrine of the New Church. . . Being in the spirit, I went to them, and said . . .

—^e. Then suddenly from the spirit I became in the body; and thus returned from the Spiritual World into the natural.

115. As it has been granted me to see all things (of the Last Judgment) I can describe how the Hells were subjugated, and how the New Heaven was built and ordained; but this would be the work of an entire Work.

123². How the Lord afterwards reduced all things . . . into order, has not yet been described by me, because the ordination of the Heavens and Hells has lasted from the day of the Last Judgment to the present time, and is still going on; but, after this Book is published, if it be desired, it shall be given to the public. As to myself, I have seen, and do see every day, the Divine omnipotence . . . in this matter.

134⁵. The Angel said . . . Go to him who stands there, and he pointed to me, and he will teach you from the Lord that the passion of the cross was not redemption . . .

—³. Then, by command of the Lord, three Angels descended and were associated with me, in order that from interior perception I might speak with those who had the idea of three gods . . . Then, from the inspiration afforded me, I spoke with them . . .

136³. I raised my hand (and addressed them as follows) . . .

—⁴. They wanted to pull my ears. . . I replied, I will speak; but I beseech you, stop the noise.

137. I heard that a Council was convened of those celebrated for their writings and learning concerning the present faith . . . and it was granted me to be present in spirit . . . (One of them) said, O my brethren, what an age! There has risen up one from the herd of the laity, having neither gown, tiara, nor laurel, who has pulled down our faith from heaven, and thrown it into the Styx. . . That man, although advanced in years, is entirely blind in respect to the mysteries of our faith . . . This man . . . has transferred faith to the second Person; and not to Him, but to His Human . . . His companions on the left said . . . Let that prophet tell us whence faith is . . .

—⁷. The Angel then looked at me, and said, You know what the so-called Evangelical believe . . . Recite, therefore, some things . . . Then, in the presence of the Assembly, I read the following passages which I had collected from . . . the Formula Concordiæ . . .

—⁸. I then turned to the president, and said, I know that all here are consociated with their like in the natural world; tell me, I pray, whether you know with whom you are consociated. He replied . . . I am consociated with a famous man . . . who lives not far from Luther's tomb. I said, smiling . . .

—⁹. I said, I will interpolate, if allowed, another interrogatory . . .

—¹². (Another) man said . . . I too am consociated with a man in your world . . . at Gottenburg; and I once thought from him that your new doctrine savours of Mohammedanism . . . To appease the just wrath (of those on the right), I stretched forth my hand, and begged a hearing, which being granted, I said . . . At these words, the consociated Spirit . . . said, I have heard harder things from you than ever. But I rejoined, The two charges of naturalism and Mohammedanism are the cause . . .

148^o. (This) it has been granted me to know by the experience of years in the Spiritual World.

157. By being in the spirit . . . is meant a state of the mind separated from the body . . . The prophets were then in a state such as is that of Spirits and Angels . . . This is the state in which I have been for twenty-six years, with this difference: that I have been in the spirit and at the same time in the body, and only sometimes out of the body.

[T.] 159. Once, when I was in company with Angels in Heaven, I saw, at a distance below, a great smoke, and fire occasionally bursting out of it . . . The Angels then said to me, Let us pray to the Lord that we may be allowed to descend and approach . . . and it was granted; and there appeared around us a column of light extending to that place; and then we saw . . .

—^e. The Angels, after they had accompanied me home, ascended into their Heaven.

160. Once, in company with Angels, I walked in the World of Spirits . . . and conversed with them . . . about the stars . . .

—⁷. We said . . . we are Angels . . . We said, Follow us into Heaven . . . and as we were with them, the keeper opened the gate . . .

185². I once had a desire to see some region in the frigid zone where were these boreal Spirits; and I was therefore conducted in spirit towards the north . . .

—⁸. I afterwards spoke with the priest . . .

186. I was once engaged in thought about . . . Then an Angel stood before me, and said . . .

277. One day, in the spirit, I rambled through various places in the Spiritual World, for the purpose of observing the representations of heavenly things . . .

279. Seven years ago, when I was collecting the things which Moses wrote from the Wars of Jehovah and the Enunciations, certain Angels were present, and said to me . . .

281. As it has been granted me by the Lord to be in the Spiritual World and in the natural world at the same time, and therefore to speak with Angels as with men . . . for I have spoken with all my relations and friends, and likewise with kings and dukes, as also with learned men, who have met their fate; and this now continually for twenty-seven years, I am able to describe from living experience the states of men after death . . .

335. Once in the twilight when I had awakened from sleep, I saw as it were spectres, in various shapes; and afterwards, when it was morning, I saw fatuous lights in diverse forms . . . And presently the sight of my spirit was opened, and I observed a number of Spirits . . . As I was in the spirit, I came to them . . . They were disputing about connate ideas . . .

—^e. After these things, I looked around, and saw near me Leibnitz and Wolff . . .

339^e. These things have been written in the presence of the twelve apostles, who were sent to me by the Lord while I was writing them.

341^e. I believe not . . . I believe not.

409². I have heard from Heaven that . . .

459¹³. I stretched forth my hand, and asked that I might be permitted, although a stranger, to present my opinion also . . . I spoke as follows . . .

—^e. I was then suddenly withdrawn from their sight; for from the spirit I re-entered my material body . . .

461. I was once carried away in spirit to the southern quarter of the Spiritual World, into a certain paradise there . . .

470^e. I have heard from the lips of the men of the Most Ancient Church that . . .

487. Some of the members of the Synod of Dort were sent to me . . .

492. I have sometimes heard words let down from Heaven concerning the good of charity, which passed through the World of Spirits, and penetrated into Hell . . .

503. I heard that an Assembly was called together . . . to deliberate on free will . . .

—⁵. I stood near and listened intently . . . and as I grew warm in my spirit, I asked in a loud voice . . .

504. I was in the interior spiritual sight in which are the Angels of the higher Heaven; but I was then in the World of Spirits. And I saw two Spirits . . .

—³. I afterwards conversed with both of them . . .

—⁸. Then, in the spirit, I drew near the place . . .

508. One day there appeared to me a magnificent temple, square in form . . . What each particular signified inflowed into my meditation. That temple signified the New Church . . . I saw over the gate the writing, Nunc licet . . . and it came into my thought that . . .

—⁶. The Angel of the Third Heaven . . . handed to me the paper; but as it was written with rounded letters, such as are in that Heaven, I returned the paper, and begged that they would themselves explain the meaning . . . in terms adapted to the ideas of my thought. And he replied, This is written there: Enter henceforth into the mysteries of the Word which has been hitherto closed up; for its several Truths are so many mirrors of the Lord.

664. I once looked into the Spiritual World to the right, and observed some of the Elect speaking together. I approached them, and said . . .

665. A voice was then heard from Heaven from the Angels directly over us, saying, Come up hither, and we will ask the one of you who is still in the natural world . . . what they know there about conscience . . .

695². One day I was carried up into Heaven, and was conducted into a Society, there in which were the Sophi . . . I told them that in the body I was in the natural world, but in the spirit in their Spiritual World. Those Angels were glad, and inquired, What do they know there about Influx . . . And having recollected what I had gathered on that subject from the discourse and writings of celebrated men, I replied . . .

—⁵. I afterwards spoke with the Angels about . . .

767³. Nor do I doubt that . . .

771². Lest naturalism and atheism . . . should spread still farther . . . it has been enjoined upon me by the Lord to make public various things from what I have seen and heard . . . and also to explain the Apocalypse . . .

772^e. This I attest, because I saw it (the Last Judgment) with my eyes, in full wakefulness.

776. As the Lord has opened to me the spiritual sense of the Word, and as it has been granted me to be together with Angels and Spirits in their World as one of them, it has been disclosed that . . .

779. That this Second Advent of the Lord is effected by means of a man, before whom the Lord has manifested Himself in Person, and whom He has filled with His Spirit, to teach the doctrines of the New Church through the Word from Him. Gen. art.

— As the Lord cannot manifest Himself in Person . . . and yet has foretold that He will come, and found a New Church . . . it follows that He will do this by means of a man, who can not only receive the doctrines of this Church with the understanding, but can also publish them by the press. That the Lord manifested Himself before me His servant, and sent me to this office, and that He afterwards opened the sight of my spirit, and so intronitted me into the Spiritual World, and granted me to see the Heavens and the Hells, and also to speak with Angels and Spirits, and this now continuously for many years, I testify in Truth; and likewise that from the first day of that call I have not received anything which pertains to the doctrines of that Church from any Angel; but from the Lord alone while I read the Word.

780. In order that the Lord might be constantly present, He has disclosed to me the spiritual sense of His Word . . .

796. I have often spoken with the three leading reformers of the Christian Church . . .

—³. See LUTHER, here.

796. I have not spoken with Melancthon so often, because . . . I was surrounded with angelic Spirits who are in charity . . .

798⁵. As Calvin then enjoyed the liberty of . . . coming nearer the place where I was staying, it was granted me to speak with him . . . From the zeal of converting him, I said . . .

850. I saw some persons ascending from the lower regions . . . who said to me, Why has your Lord revealed the aræana you have just enumerated to you who are a layman . . . I replied, Such is the good pleasure of the Lord, who has prepared me for this office from my earliest youth. I will ask you in return, Why did the Lord choose fishermen for His disciples . . . Discuss this . . . and you will discover the cause.

851. I foresee that many who read the Relations . . . will believe that they are inventions of the imagination. But I assert in Truth that they . . . were truly seen and heard, and that not in any state of a dozing mind, but in a state of full wakefulness. For it has pleased the Lord to manifest Himself to me, and to send me to teach those things which will belong to His New Church . . . For this purpose He opened the interiors of my mind or spirit, whereby it has been granted me to be in the Spiritual World with Angels, and at the same time in the natural world with men, and this now for twenty-seven years. Who in the Christian world would have known anything of Heaven or Hell, if it had not pleased the Lord to open in some one the sight of his spirit, and to show and teach? . . .

Theorem (at the end of T.) I once saw in the Spiritual World a certain duke, an Elector of Germany . . . and near him two bishops . . . and heard their conversation . . .

Docu. 246. (Letter to the Landgrave of Hesse-Darmstadt.) As the Lord our Saviour cannot come into the world in Person, it was necessary that He should do it by means of a man, who should not only receive the doctrine of that Church by his understanding, but also publish it by means of the press; and as the Lord had prepared me for this from my childhood, He manifested Himself in Person before me His servant, and sent me to do this work. This took place in the year 1743; and He afterwards opened the sight of my spirit, and thus introduced me into the Spiritual World . . . and this continually for twenty-seven years. I declare in truth that this is so. This took place with me on account of the New Church, the doctrine of which is contained in my books. [1771.]

Docu. 277. (Swedenborg was asked for news about a Prince of Saxe Coburg Saalfeld . . . who was lost in 1745, without anyone having the least knowledge of his fate. The following memorable answer was given by Assessor Emanuel Swedenborg with his own hand:—) Of this no one can have any experience, because the departed themselves do not know how they have died . . . For death to them is not as death, but as . . . a continuation of the former life . . . hence to ask anyone about his departure from this world would seem to him like asking about a thing which has not taken place. Moreover it is difficult to find a person who has been deceased twenty-seven years, because he is already firmly established in a Society into which it may be difficult for me to gain entrance. As to asking the Angels about this, they do not have any such knowledge; and as to asking the Lord Christ Himself, it is too small a matter. For the rest I wish you the Lord's blessing. [1772.]

Ecc. Hist. 3. The books are to be enumerated which were written . . . by the Lord through me.

4. The writing there is such that it shines brightly before those who believe in the Lord, and in the new revelation; but it appears dark and of no consequence to those who deny them, and who are not in favour of them on account of various external reasons. Experimental proofs that their style of writing is such. Enum. . . When I read to myself the writings which I had printed, they appeared to me vain, so long as a certain cunning and sinister one was present; but it was different in the presence of others.

7. When the Brief Exposition was published, the angelic Heaven from east to west, and from south to north, appeared of a crimson colour with the most beautiful flowers. This took place before myself, and before the kings of Denmark, and others. (See also Docu. 244.)

8. There was inscribed on all the books, The Advent of the Lord, on all in the Spiritual World. I wrote the same by command on two copies in Holland.

Summary of Coro. Lastly, on Miracles. iv. In place of miracles at this day there has been effected the manifestation of the Lord Himself, intronission into the Spiritual World, and illustration there through immediate light from the Lord in such things as are the interior things of the Church. But principally the opening of the spiritual sense of the Word, in which is the Lord in His Divine light.

[Summary of Coro.] v. These revelations are not miracles, because every man is as to his spirit in the Spiritual World without any separation from his body in the natural world; but I with some separation; but only as to the intellectual part of my mind, and not as to the voluntary part.

Inv. vii. That this (New) Church has been established not by miracles, but by the revelation of the spiritual sense of the Word, and by the introduction of my spirit and at the same time of my body into the Spiritual World, in order that I might know there what Heaven and Hell are, and might imbibe immediately in light from the Lord the Truths of faith, by means of which man is led to eternal life.

29. The things which are related are not miracles, but testimonies that I have been introduced by the Lord into the Spiritual World . . .

39. It is more than miracles that I speak in the Spiritual World with Angels and Spirits; that I have described the state of Heaven and of Hell, and of the life after death; and also that the spiritual sense of the Word has been opened to me, besides many other things. This intercourse has so far as I know been granted by the Lord to no one previously; a sign that this is for the sake of a New Church . . . Testimonies that I am in the Spiritual World may be seen in abundance in my books.

41. In the Spiritual World no one knows another from his mere name; but from an idea of his quality. This causes the other to be present . . . It has been granted me to speak with these; but with the rest it is not possible [for me to speak].

43. The manifestation of the Lord in Person, and introduction into the Spiritual World by the Lord, as well as to the sight as to the hearing and speech, is better than all miracles; for we do not read anywhere in history that such intercourse with Angels and Spirits has been granted to anyone since the creation of the world. I am daily with Angels there, as in the world with men, and this for twenty-seven years. The testimonies of this intercourse are the books published about Heaven and Hell, and also the Relations . . . the things said there about Luther, Melancthon, Calvin, and the inhabitants of many kingdoms, besides various testimonies known in the world, and many which are not known. Say who ever before knew anything about Heaven and Hell, the state of man after death, and about Spirits and Angels.

44. In addition to these most evident testimonies . . . the spiritual sense of the Word has been disclosed by the Lord through me . . . This surpasses all the revelations there have ever been since the creation of the world. Ex.

52. The manifestation of the Lord and immission into the Spiritual World surpasses all miracles. This has not been granted to anyone in the same way as to me, since the creation. The men of the Golden Age did indeed speak with Angels; but it was not granted them to be in any other light than natural light; but to me to be in both spiritual and natural light at the same time. By this means it has been granted me to see the marvels of Heaven: to be among the Angels as one of them; and at the same time to imbibe Truths in the light, and thus to perceive and teach them: consequently to be led by the Lord.

55. For this reason it pleased the Lord to prepare me from my earliest youth to perceive the Word; and He introduced me into the Spiritual World, and illustrated me more nearly with the lumen of His Word. Hence it is evident that this is before all miracles.

On Miracles. My discourse (on Miracles) being finished, the Angels kissed me for what I had told them; and said that they would occasionally invite me to their assemblies. I thanked them, and promised to return when leave was granted by the Lord.

Sweep. Verrere.

See under CLEANSE.

A. 3142. 'I have swept the house' (Gen. xxiv. 31) = that all things were prepared and full of goods. 'To sweep' = to prepare and infill . . . for nothing else is required of man than that he sweep the house, that is, reject the cupidities of evil and the derivative persuasions of falsity: he is then infilled with goods . . . Hence it was a formula of the ancients 'to sweep or cleanse the house,' and also 'to sweep and prepare the way;' and by 'to sweep the house' was meant to cleanse one's self from evils, and thus prepare one's self for the entrance of goods; and by 'to sweep the way' was meant to prepare one's self for the reception of truths. Ill.

—e. 'To sweep the house,' in the opposite sense, = the man who deprives himself of all goods and truths, and thus is infilled with evils and falsities. Ill.

9496³. 'Sword'=truth combating against falsity. 9552⁹.

10488. 'Put ye everyone his sword upon his thigh'

(Ex.xxxii.27)=truth from good combating against falsity from evil. Ex.

P. 278a⁵. 'To be devoured by the sword' (Is.i.20)=to perish by the falsity of evil.

R. 52. Mention is often made in the Word of 'swords'—gladius, machaera, et romphaea;' and nothing else is signified by them than truth combating against falsities, and destroying them; and, in the opposite sense, falsity combating against truths; for by wars are signified spiritual wars . . . Ill. 836. E.131.

836². 'The sword—gladius' is upon the thigh, and therefore=combat from love; 'the sword—machaera' is in the hand, and therefore=combat from power; and 'the sword—romphaea' is of the mouth, and therefore=combat from doctrine.

D. 4733. (Good Spirits who are interiorly Angels) have given them a sword with a silver hilt, together with a belt; and, when they carry that sword, the evil Spirits dare not do anything.

4786. The angelic Societies with a Spirit inflow . . . also into the things which are external to his body . . . (as) is the case with those who have a sword, or even a staff with a cross-piece of wood, silver, or gold. This is done by influx from the Societies which are in the power of truth.

4966. See LAST JUDGMENT, here. This is what is signified in the Word also by the flashing of a sword.

E. 131². That 'a sword,' in the Word,=truth combating against falsity, and falsity against truth, and the consequent dispersion of falsities, and also spiritual temptation. Fully ill.

—¹⁸. From all these passages it is evident what is signified by 'a sword'—romphaea, machaera, seu gladius—in both senses. That such things are signified by 'a sword,' is also from the appearances in the Spiritual World. When there are spiritual combats there, which are those of truth against falsity, and of falsity against truth, there then appear various war arms, as swords—enses, spears, etc.; not because the combats are carried on with these, for they are only the representative appearances of spiritual combats. When falsities are combating sharply against truths, there sometimes appears from Heaven the brightness or flashing of a sword—ensis—vibrating both ways, and causing great terror, by which those who are combating from falsities are dispersed. Ill.

1527. 'The sword shall be upon . . . his right eye' (Zech.xi.17)=that all truth in the understanding will perish through falsity. 600¹⁷.

240¹. 'They shall cut thee in pieces with swords' (Ezek.xvi.40)=that the Church will utterly die through falsifications of truth.

288⁹. 'Gird Thy sword upon Thy thigh' (Ps.xlv.3)=Divine truth combating from Divine good. 208⁷.

304¹⁰. 'The sword of Jehovah devoureth . . .' (Jer. xii. 12)=falsity destroying truth. 314⁸. 374⁶. 730⁸.

—⁶⁰. 'Neither shall the sword go through your land' (Lev. xxvi. 6)=that falsity will not cast out truth. 365¹⁴. 650⁵⁸.

357³. 'The sword of Saul' (2 Sam. i. 22)=truth from good.

—⁵. 'He hath given the nations . . . as the dust to His sword' (Is. xli. 2)=that the Lord disperses evils . . . as if they were nothing, by His Divine truth.

—⁹. 'He hath made my mouth like a sharp sword' (Is. xlix. 2)=that in the Lord and from Him is the Divine truth, by means of which falsities are dispersed.

—²³. 'God hath sharpened His sword' (Ps. vii. 12). . . . It is the evil man who sharpens the sword against himself . . . 'He sharpeneth the sword'=that he acquires for himself falsity, by which he combats against truths.

367. In the Word mention is made of 'sword-gladius,' 'shortsword-machaera,' and 'longsword-romphaea,' and by 'sword' is signified this combat in general; by 'short sword,' the combat of truth from good, or of falsity from evil; and by 'long sword,' the combat of truth from doctrine against falsity, or of falsity from doctrine against truth; for a short sword is for the arm; and a long sword is said to go forth from the mouth.

386⁵. 'Sword' (Is. li. 19)=the deprivation of the Knowledge of truth, even until there is no more truth.

—⁷. 'Sword'=the deprivation of truth through falsities. —⁸, Ill. 388²⁰.

519⁶. 'I will send a sword after them' (Jer. ix. 16)=to destroy by the falsities of evil.

537¹⁰. 'His words are softer than oil, yet are they drawn swords' (Ps. lv. 21)=those who simulate good affections while they speak falsities by which they seduce. . . 'Drawn swords'=falsities destroying.

540⁸. 'The sword shall cut thee off' (Nahum iii. 15)=that they will perish through falsities. 543¹⁰.

556². 'Their tongue is a sharp sword' (Ps. lvii. 4)=crafty reasonings from falsities. These are called 'a sharp sword,' because 'a sword'=falsity destroying truth.

589⁶. Those are said to be 'thrust through with the sword' who have perished by falsities of evil. 659²⁰.

600¹⁶. The direfulness and enormity of the falsity which destroys truth, is described by 'the sword made into lightning, and sharpened for slaughter' (Ezek. xxi. 15).

—¹⁷. 'The sword shall be upon his arm' (Zech. xi. 17)=falsity destroying every good of the will.

632³. 'They shall fall by the mouth of the sword' (Luke xxi. 24)=that they will perish through falsities. (=the destruction of truth through falsities. 811.)

652¹⁶. 'He shall slay the people with the sword' (Ezek. xxvi. 11)=that it will destroy truths through falsities.

654⁴⁴. 'The sword shall devour and be satiate, and shall be made drunk with their blood' (Jer. xlv. 10)=the total destruction of the natural man through falsities, and through the falsifications of truth.

724¹⁴. 'The sword of a mighty man' (Zech. xi. 13)=truth powerfully destroying falsity.

734³. That by the consent of all, combats will then cease, is signified by 'they shall beat their swords into ploughshares . . .' (Is. ii. 4; Micah iv. 3); 'sword,' and 'spear'=falsities from evil combating against truths from good, and the converse.

811⁸. 'They who are for the sword to the sword' (Jer. xliii. 11)=destruction through the derivative falsities.

—¹¹. 'To fall by the sword' (Dan. xl. 33)=to perish through falsities.

—¹⁴. 'My sword shall devour flesh' (Deut. xxxii. 42)=that falsities will destroy all things of good.

812². 'All they that take the sword shall perish by the sword' (Matt. xxvi. 52)=to receive the falsity of faith, and to perish by it.

863³. 'My virgins and my young men have fallen by the sword' (Lam. ii. 21)=that all the affection of truth and understanding of truth have perished through falsities.

—⁶. 'Her priests have fallen by the sword' (Ps. lxxviii. 64)=that the goods of the Church, which are the goods of works, of charity, and of life, have been destroyed through falsities.

911¹⁴. 'To be impoverished with the sword' (Jer. v. 17)=to be destroyed through falsities of evil.

Sword. Machaera.

A. 4502. 'Instruments of violence are their swords' (Gen. xlix. 5)=that falsities and evils have inflicted violence on truths and goods. (=that doctrinal things serve to destroy the works of charity. . . 'Swords'=doctrinal things; for 'swords-gladii'=the truths of faith by which combat is waged against falsities and evils; thus 'swords'=doctrinal things. 6353.) E. 443⁶.

6353³. That 'sword'=falsity combating and slaying. Ill.

S. 12². 'A great sword' (Rev. vi. 4)=falsity combating against truth. (=the destruction of truth through the falsities of evil. R. 308.) E. 367.

R. 52. See SWORD-gladius, here. 836. E. 367.

592. 'If anyone shall kill with the sword, with the sword must he be killed' (Rev. xiii. 10)=that he who destroys the soul of another by means of falsities, shall be destroyed and shall perish by falsities. E. 811²⁴. 812.

829. 'Which has the stroke of a sword and lived' (Rev. xiii. 14)=the quality of those natural things by which the things taken from the natural sense of the Word were conjoined. 'A sword'=the combat of falsity against truth, and the destruction of truth through falsities.

Sword. Romphaea.

R. 52. 'Out of His mouth goeth a sharp two-edged sword' (Rev.i.16)=the dispersion of falsities by means of the Word and the derivative doctrine by the Lord. 108. 117. E.73.

[R. 52]. See WORD-gladius, here. 836. E.367.

299. By 'the sword out of His mouth' (Rev.xix.) is signified the Divine truth of the Word combating against falsities and evils. (=the dispersion of falsities by means of the derivative doctrine by the Lord. 827.)

323. 'By the sword,' etc. (Rev.vi.8)=by falsities of doctrine, etc. 'A sword=truth combating against evils and falsities and destroying them; and, in the opposite, falsity combating against goods and truths, and destroying them . . . E.131. 385.

836. 'And the rest were slain with the sword of Him that sat upon the horse, which proceedeth out of His mouth' (Rev.xix.21)=that all from the various heresies among the Reformed, who have not lived according to the Lord's precepts in the Word, with which they were acquainted, being judged from the Word, perish. . . By 'the sword of Him that sat upon the horse which proceedeth out of His mouth' are signified the truths of the Word combating against the falsities of evil.

E. 131. 'These things saith He that hath the sharp two-edged sword' (Rev.ii.12) = the Lord, who alone combats in temptations.

144. 'I will fight against them with the sword of My mouth' (ver.15)=that (such) will be dispersed.

Sychar. Sichar.

A. 4430². See SHECHEM, here.

Sycomore. Sycomorus.

A. 7553². 'The sycomore' (Ps.lxxviii.47)=the truths of the External Church. (=the natural truth of the Church. E.503⁴.)

E. 815¹⁰. 'If ye had faith . . . ye would say to this sycomore, Be thou rooted up, and be thou planted in the sea . . .' (Luke xvii.6). . . 'A sycomore'=the faith of the love of (evil), which is a faith of falsity from evil; and 'the sea'=Hell. . . In the Spiritual World such things actually take place. There . . . the faith of falsity from evil sometimes appears as a sycomore, which an Angel can root up and cast into Hell through faith from the Lord. . . 'A fig-tree,' or 'a sycomore'=the natural man in respect to the goods and truths there; and, in the opposite, the same in respect to evils and falsities.

Sycophant. Sycophanta.

P. 224. For a man can act the sycophant both in civil and moral things, and in spiritual ones.

M. 267³. Hence every man who is not led by the Lord interiorly is a pretender, a sycophant, a hypocrite; and thus an apparent man . . . of whom it may be said that his shell or body is wise, and his kernel or spirit insane . . .

T. 434². Occurs.

493. Man's will is twofold . . . and therefore a sycophant can act and speak before the world in one way, and with his familiars in another . . .

657². It is like a pious sycophant.

5 M. 22. The interiors of their minds are infernal, and the exteriors are as it were heavenly from a feigned morality; for they are sycophants and hypocrites.

Syllable. Syllaba.

A. 6516^e. Every syllable (of the writings in the Spiritual World) involves such things as are in that World.

9198^e. In everything the Lord has said . . . there are celestial and Divine things . . . not only in the words, but also in each syllable of the words, and even in each apex of each syllable. 9349².

10705². (The Jews) say that Divine secrets are hidden in every syllable (of the Word).

R. 29². Alpha and Omega are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. T.19².

T. 159⁷. God is not a word of three syllables . . .

483. A blank paper without a syllable on it.

D. 5562. In the celestial Heaven . . . they see in each syllable, little horn, and apex (of their writing) the many things which they signify.

5578. There was shown me a paper containing something written in Hebrew letters, and a certain Spirit . . . saw the inmost sense, not from the words, but from the syllables (or letters) and their . . . apices and little horns.

5580. (The celestial Angels) saw the spiritual writing . . . but understood other things from the inflections of the syllables . . . There was shown me a certain syllable: there were only curvatures in various forms, almost as with some of the oriental [letters].

5619². The correspondence of the Hebrew language in respect to the syllables, is with celestial forms.

5620. The celestial Angels said that all the letters, or syllables, in the Hebrew language, have a correspondence. Ex.

5621. (Thus) the Word is Divine not only in its words, but also in the syllables, or letters . . .

De Verbo 4. That the Word is Divine in respect to the syllables and apexes.

—³. They explained the internal sense of Ps.xxxii. 1, from the letters or syllables alone . . .

Syllogism. Syllogismus.

Syllogistic. Syllogisticus.

A. 5128². The learned confirm falsities by syllogistic and philosophical things.

D. 866. Philosophical things . . . have consisted solely in terms, and the syllogism . . .

—^e. It is the same with syllogistic philosophy, which so confines the ideas of men's minds that there is scarcely any opening for the light.

2606. How worthless syllogistic philosophy is . . . By a thousand syllogisms formed by those devoid of understanding, this Truth itself seems as if it might be destroyed . . .

D. Min. 4578^e. The conclusion (in logic) is frequently such that it is intelligible without any syllogism.

Symbol. *Symbolum.Symbolic. Symbolicus.

See APOSTLES' CREED, ATHANASIAN CREED, and NICENE CREED.

A. 1083². In place of sacrifices . . . there have succeeded symbolic things, from which the Lord is in like manner regarded.

1727. Bread and wine were therefore made symbols in the Holy Supper. 4217².

2156². In the Christian Faith, called the Creed . . .

2165⁵. This external Symbolic (the Holy Supper) was commanded because the greatest part of mankind are in external worship.

2329⁵. Yet in their creed—fide symbolica—it is said . . . that there are not Three Uncreates . . .

2702⁰. Baptism is a symbol of regeneration . . . 9032².

3478². In the (show) bread . . . as in a representative and symbol, they perceived the food by which Angels live . . .

4690². By faith the common people understand that of creeds, or that which books of creeds teach.

4721⁰. The creed—fides symbolica—called that of Athanasius . . .

B. 31. There are three creeds, called the Apostolic, the Nicene, and the Athanasian, which specially teach a Trinity; the two former, the Trinity itself, and the last, a Trinity of Persons. These three creeds are set forth in many of the Psalm books . . . The Apostolic Creed was written after the times of the Apostles; the Nicene Creed at the Council of Nice . . . and the Athanasian Creed, after that Council, by a person or persons, to utterly overthrow the Arians, and was afterwards accepted by the Churches as ecumenical.

D. 2409⁰. As symbols of confirmation.

Can. Trinity v. 1. There are three summaries of the doctrine of the Christian Church concerning the Divine Trinity and Unity, which are called creeds . . . These three creeds have been received by the Christian Church as ecumenical and catholic, that is, as universals of doctrine concerning God the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Symmetry. *Symmetria.Symmetrically. Symmetrice.

A. 1627. (The decorations there) vary themselves with an ever new beauty and symmetry.

4409. All things of the external sight relate to truth and good, because they relate to the symmetries of objects, consequently to their beauties . . .

T. 365⁰. It is that (spiritual) light from which the understanding sees and perceives rational things analytically, as the eye sees and perceives natural things symmetrically.

Sympathy. *Sympathia.Sympathetic. Sympatheticus.

M. 47a². If the inclination is concordant and sympathetic, they continue (there) their conjugal life; but if it is discordant and antipathetic, they dissolve it.

171. Everything sympathetic and antipathetic derives its origin from (the spheres) . . . D. 1847.

273. When man is stripped of his material body, he is in his internal affections . . . hence it is that . . . the homogeneities and heterogeneities, or sympathies and antipathies, are not only felt there, but also appear in their faces, speech, and gestures . . .

393². It appears as if the love of infants is in mothers from the nourishing of them in the womb with their blood . . . and thus from a sympathetic union . . .

T. 44². The sympathies, and the efforts, of homogeneous things . . . to conjunction, derive their origin from (the universal sphere of the Divine love, which pervades the universe).

99. All conjunction . . . is from the reciprocal accession of the one to the other, while they both will one thing. Hence is effected what is homogeneous and sympathetic . . . in every particular of each.

331. That evil and good cannot be together . . . is because in the Spiritual World there exhales from every one the sphere of his love, which . . . causes sympathies and antipathies.

365¹. Sympathies and antipathies are nothing else than exhalations of affections from the mind, which affect another according to the similitudes, and cause aversion according to the dissimilitudes . . .

Symphony. Symphonia.

M. 3³. Dancing (there) to the measures of symphonies and flutes.

Synagogue. Synagoga.

A. 4859. That the truth of the Church is obscured to (the Jews) is represented at this day by their covering themselves with veils in their synagogues.

C. J. 80. See JEW, here. D. 5421.

R. 97. 'But are the synagogue of Satan' (Rev. ii. 9) = because they are in falsities as to doctrine. 'The synagogue' is mentioned because the Jews are; and, as they tangled in the synagogues, by 'a synagogue' is signified doctrine. 181. E. 120, Ex. and Ill.

E. 120³. That differences in matters of doctrine were adjusted in the synagogues. Ill.

210. 'I will give from the synagogue of Satan' (Rev. iii. 9) = those in the doctrine of faith alone and in no charity. Ex.

Synchronous. *Synchronus.Synchronously. Synchrone.

W. 403⁰. When the lungs expand . . . each and all of the (organs) are excited to an action synchronous with the pulmonic one.

405². This enables the lungs to respire non-synchronously with the heart.

412. They are correspondences, that is, they act correspondently, or synchronously.

Syncretist. *Syncretista.Syncretism. Syncretismus.

R. 386². There then arose one who was called by the Angels a Syncretist. (He states his opinions on faith and charity.) T.460.

[R. 386]⁵. The intermingled hoarse sound was from the Syncretist.

D. 5662a. (See LAST JUDGMENT, here. On the union of religions, or Syncretism.)

Synod. Synodus.

T. 486². The Synod of Dort. 759².

632. The Nicene Synod.

Synonym. Synonymum.

S. 84. (These pairs of words in the Word) appear like synonyms, but are not. Ex.

Ath. 156^e. That 'the Anointed,' 'Messiah,' 'Christ,' and 'Son of God,' are synonyms.

Syria. Syria.

Syrian. Syrus.

Syriac. Syriacus.

See ARAM.

A. 1137. A certain Church which came into existence in Syria, being instituted by Eber, which is to be called the Second Ancient Church. Tr.

1238. The First Ancient Church extended through Syria, etc. 2385⁵. E.422²⁰.

—². Afterwards, in Syria, there commenced a certain external worship . . .

1250^e. Those who dwelt in Syria were called 'sons of the east.'

1343⁶. Balaam was from Syria, where had lived Eber, or whence came the Hebrew nation.

1360^e. Besides other nations in Syria which were from Nahor.

1366². Terah and Abram . . . worshipped other gods, and had no knowledge . . . of the good and truth of faith; and had thus become better fitted to receive the seed of truth than others in Syria, among whom Knowledges as yet remained. That they did remain with some, is evident from Balaam, who was from Syria . . . 1675⁵.

1796. Damascus was the principal city of Syria, where there were remains of the Ancient Church, and whence came Eber, or the Hebrew nation, with which there was nothing but the external of the Church.

1992. In Syria, whence came Abram, there still remained remains of the Ancient Church, and many families there retained the worship, as is evident from Eber . . .

3031. From this it is evident that the land whence Abram came was Syria, where was the Second Ancient Church, which was called 'Hebrew' from Eber . . .

3249. As by 'the Syrians,' or 'the sons of the east,' were signified those in the Knowledges of good and truth, they . . . were called 'the wise.' Ill. . . As in Matt. where it is said . . . 'Wise men from the east came to Jerusalem . . .'

—². For in Syria were the last remains of the Ancient Church, and therefore in that land the Know- ledges of good and truth were still preserved, as may be evident from Balaam . . .

—^e. When Jacob went into Syria, he is said to have gone to 'the land of the sons of the east' (Gen. xxix.1). 3762.

3762. That by 'Syria,' in general, are signified the Knowledges of good. Refs. But here it is not said that Jacob went 'to Aram, or Syria,' but 'to the land of the sons of the east,' in order to signify . . . an ascent to the truths of love.

4195. 'Jegar-sahadutha,' means 'the heap of the witness,' in the idiom of Syria, whence Laban came.

4680². The Hebrew Church was in Syria and Mesopotamia, and also among some nations in Canaan.

6952^e. 'Rezin king of Syria' (Is.vii.1,4)=the Knowledges of evil. That 'Syria'=the Knowledges of good. Refs. Thus, in the opposite, it=the Knowledges of evil.

9340⁶. 'Syrians from Kir' (Amos ix.7)=those in the Knowledges of good and truth, which they have perverted. Refs.

9688². That by 'Syria' are signified the Knowledges of truth and good. Refs.

9868³. 'Syria is thy trader . . .' (Ezek.xxvii.16)= . . . the Knowledges of good (which are) the truths of celestial love. E.717¹⁰.

9942⁴. The manner of writing of the Arabians, Syrians, and Greeks . . .

S. 21. How it was that the science of correspondences came to be cultivated in Syria, etc. 102.

102. The Ancient Word existed in Syria, etc.

E. 195⁸. 'Syria'=the Church as to the Knowledges of truth and good.

391³¹. That altars were in use in Syria, from which Abram came. Ill.

411¹³. 'Cephas,' in the Syriac language, means 'a rock.'

475¹⁸. 'Naaman a leper of Syria' (2 Kings v.10)=those who falsify the Knowledges of good and truth from the Word; for . . . 'Syria'=the Knowledges of good and truth.

559⁸. 'Rezin, and Syria' (Is.vii.4)=a perverted Rational. . . It is the Rational in respect to knowledges which confirm, which is signified by 'Rezin and Syria;' for a man cannot have understanding of the Word unless he has a Rational . . .

706¹³. 'The king of Syria' (who made war upon Ahaz) (Is.vii.)=the external or Natural of the Church.

827². The idolatry and magic which then existed in Syria. etc.

Syringic. Syringicus.

A. 1763. A pain as of the drawing of a syringic [instrument].

D. 1129. They imitate the action of the cistern of the chyle by a like syringic drawing . . .

System. Systema.

Systematic. Systematicus.

T. 13. This great system, which is called the universe, is a work cohering as a one . . .

75^e. Such a system of theology as this . . .

159². (They said,) God operates (only) universally in the whole system of our mind and body . . .

343. For faith enters into the parts of a system of theology, as the blood enters into the members of the body.

62^{8e}. The whole system of theology of the present day is dependent on this imputation.

758². By which (the Christian Church) has fashioned its system—systematicum.

D. 2311. This is in the general system of the World of Spirits.

2782^e. Therefore . . . the universal system of man has been perverted.

2986. The tone may be from the whole consonant bony system . . .

3034. To one action . . . the universal system of the purer parts concurs . . .

3035. It is the lungs which operate in general into the system of the muscles.

4627. The soul (is conceived of) as dominant in its own systematic world.

Systole. Systole

Systolic. Systolicus.

H. 445. When . . . the systolic motions of the heart cease . . .

446. The systolic motion of the heart (is one of the) bonds, which, being broken, the spirit is left to itself . . .

F. 19. Like the motion of the heart, which is called systole and diastole. P. 319, Def.

W. 378. As the motions of the heart, which are called systole and diastole, change and vary according to the affections of each man's love . . .

E. 1088². The celestial things of the Word are like the systole and diastole of the heart.

D. Wis. vii. 3². Hence there is in man both an internal and an external systolic and animatory motion; an external one which is natural, and an internal one which is spiritual.

Tabernacle. Tabernaculum.

See under DWELL and TENT.

A. 414³. When they began to profane their tents by profane worships, the tabernacle was built, and afterwards the temple. And as a tabernacle, afterwards 'a temple,' and also 'tents,' were significative, a holy man was called 'a tent,' 'a tabernacle,' and also 'a temple,' of the Lord. Ill.

—⁴. In the supreme sense, the Lord as to His Human essence, is 'the tent,' 'the tabernacle,' and 'the temple.' Hence every celestial man is so called; and, derivatively, everything celestial and holy.

—^e. As the Most Ancient Church was more beloved by the Lord . . . and also because they lived alone by themselves . . . and celebrated worship so holy in their tents, therefore tents were accounted more holy than a temple, which had been profaned; and in remembrance of this the feast of tabernacles was instituted, when they gathered in the increase of the land, during which, like the Most Ancients, they dwelt in tents (Lev. xxiii. 39–44; Deut. xvi. 13; Hos. xii. 9). 3312. 4391^e.

3478. There was represented before certain Spirits the tabernacle with the ark . . . with all their appurtenances . . . The three Heavens were represented by the tabernacle . . .

4236. The tabernacle in the midst of the encampment . . . represented the Lord Himself.

4288³. In the Representative Church they had tents or tabernacles, and Divine worship in them, and they accounted this holy because 'tents' or 'tabernacles' signified the Holy of love and of worship.

4391. 'Booths,' or 'tents,' in the Word, properly = the Holy of truth, and are distinguished from 'tabernacles,' which are also called 'tents,' by this: that the latter = the Holy of good. The former are called 'succoth;' but the latter 'ohalim.' Ill.

5922⁷. Hence it was that upon the tabernacle there appeared a cloud by day, and a fire by night, because 'the tabernacle' represented the Lord's Divine Human; consequently the Divine truth which proceeds from Him; thus the Word. Ill.

6537^e. See FEAST, here. 9286. 9294⁴.

9294⁶. The like was represented by the dwelling of the sons of Israel in Canaan, as by . . . 'the feast of the ingathering of the fruits of the earth' . . . called also 'the feast of tabernacles,' namely, the implantation of good, and thus life in Heaven. 9296⁴, Ex. and Ill.

9296⁶. By 'the tabernacles in which they were to dwell seven days' is signified the Holy of love from the Lord, and, reciprocally, to the Lord. Refs. And, that it = the Holy of union. Ref.

9457⁴. For this tabernacle was so constructed as to represent the three Heavens, and all things which are therein . . .

9479^e. (Thus) the tabernacle was called 'the Sanctuary' from the fact that by it was represented Heaven and the Church; and that by the holy things therein were represented the Divine things which are from the Lord in Heaven and the Church.

9485^e. That the Inmost Heaven was signified by the ark, was because by the whole tabernacle, or tent, was represented the universal angelic Heaven; its ultimate, by the court; its middle, by the habitation where the priest ministered; and its inmost, by the habitation within the veil, where was the ark containing the Testimony. 9594.

10545². From the fact that the Most Ancient Church was more loved than the rest, and the Lord dwelt with them in tents... in memory of these things the tabernacle or Tent of the Assembly was constructed among the Israelitish nation, in which holy worship was held; and on the same account there was instituted the feast of tabernacles or of tents. See R. 585³.

S. 2^o. In other places, the Word is called 'the Sanctuary,' and 'the Tabernacle,' in which the Lord dwells with man.

46. That the sense of the letter... is signified by the curtains and veils of the tabernacle. By 'the tabernacle' was represented Heaven and the Church, and therefore its form was shown by Jehovah upon Mount Sinai; and consequently by all the things which were in the tabernacle... were represented the holy things of Heaven and the Church; and by 'the Holy of Holies,' where was the ark... was represented the inmost of Heaven and the Church; and by the Law itself written on the two tables of stone... was signified the Lord as to the Word... Hence by the ultimates of the tabernacle, which were the curtains and veils, thus the coverings and containants, were signified the ultimates of the Word, which are the truths and goods of the sense of its letter.

Life 55². On account of the holiness of the tabernacle from the Law in the ark, the whole Israelitish people encamped around it by command in order according to the tribes, and marched in order after it; and there was upon it a cloud by day, and a fire by night...

P. 250³. That they may receive them into everlasting habitations.

R. 585. ('Blasphemies against His tabernacle, and against them that dwell in heaven' (Rev. xiii. 6) = scandals against the Lord's Celestial Church, and against Heaven. Nearly the same is signified by 'the tabernacle' as by 'the temple'; namely, in the supreme sense, the Lord's Divine Human; and, in the relative sense, Heaven and the Church. But by 'the tabernacle,' in this sense, is signified the Celestial Church, which is in the good of love from the Lord to the Lord; and by 'the temple,' the Spiritual Church, which is in truths of wisdom from the Lord... The reason why by 'the tabernacle' is signified the Celestial Church, is that the most Ancient Church... held holy worship in tabernacles; whereas the Ancient Church... held it in temples. The tabernacles were of wood, and the temples of stone; and wood = good, and stone truth.

—². That by 'a tabernacle' is signified the Lord's Divine Human as to the Divine love, and also the Heaven and Church which are in love to the Lord. III.

669. 'The temple of the tabernacle of the testimony in heaven was opened' (Rev. xv. 5) = that there was seen the inmost of Heaven, where is the Lord in His holiness in the Word, and in the Law which is the decalogue... By 'the tabernacle of the testimony' is signified the inmost of that Heaven where is the Lord in His holiness in the Word, and in the Law which is the decalogue; for by 'the tabernacle' is equally signified Heaven; and the inmost of the tabernacle was where the ark was, in which were the two tables... That by 'the tabernacle of the testimony' is also signified where the Word is, is because 'the testimony' is predicated (also) of the whole Word, and of the Lord as the Word, because the Word testifies of Him. (=the interior Divine truth in the Word revealed by the Lord. E. 948.)

882. 'Behold the tabernacle of God is with men' (Rev. xxi. 3) = the Lord from love speaking and evangelizing that He will now be present with men in His Divine Human. This is the celestial sense of these words... By 'the tabernacle of God' is meant the Celestial Church; and, in the universal sense, the Lord's Celestial Kingdom; and, in the supreme sense, His Divine Human. The reason why by 'a tabernacle,' in the supreme sense, is meant the Lord's Divine Human, is that by 'a temple' this is signified... with this difference: that by 'a temple' is meant the Lord's Divine Human as to the Divine truth or the Divine wisdom; and by 'a tabernacle' is meant the Lord's Divine Human as to the Divine good or the Divine love. III.

926³. There was then seen in the same place (as that in which the solididant temple had been) a tabernacle, simple in its external form; and the Angels who were with me said, Behold the tabernacle of Abraham, such as it was when the three Angels came to him, and announced that Isaac was to be born. This appears simple before the eyes; but it becomes more and more magnificent according to the influx of the light from Heaven. (They opened the Second Heaven) and then, from the light which inflowed from it, that tabernacle appeared like a temple similar to the Jerusalem one... (And when they opened the Third Heaven) the temple vanished; and in place of it was seen the Lord alone, standing upon the foundation stone, which was the Word... (Afterwards the passage for the light from the Third Heaven) was closed by the Lord, and that from the Second Heaven was opened: in consequence of which the former appearance of a temple returned, and likewise that of a tabernacle, but in the temple. By this was illustrated the meaning of the words: 'Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and He will dwell with them.' Also of these: 'I saw no temple in the New Jerusalem; for the Lord God Almighty is the Temple of it, and the Lamb.' B. 118. T. 187.

M. 75. (In the Heaven of the Golden Age) were seen tabernacles and tabernacles, to the number of many thousands, in front, and at the sides, as far as the sight could reach. And the Angel said, We are now in the Camp, where is the Army of the Lord Jehovah; for so do they call themselves and their dwellings. These Most Ancients, while in the world, dwelt in tabernacles; and therefore now dwell in them.

—⁷. I then saw the tabernacle (of this married pair) as it were overlaid with gold, (which was) from the flaming light, which... irradiates... the curtains of the tabernacle while there is converse about conjugal love.

—⁸. I then saw a great light upon the hill in the midst of the tabernacles, (which was) from the Sanctuary of the tabernacle of their worship... On approaching it, I saw the tabernacle, both outside and inside, exactly like the description of the tabernacle built for the sons of Israel . . . the form of which was shown to Moses upon Sinai (Ex.xxv.40; xxvi.30).

—e. The man then ran to his tabernacle, and returned with a pomegranate . . .

T. 221. By the tabernacle is represented the Heaven where are the celestial Angels . . . who are in love from the Word.

283. The holiness of the whole of that tabernacle was from no other source than the Law which was in the ark. E.700^b.

669². The sacraments may be compared also to the tabernacle. Des.

D. 1909. On Spirits who were celebrating the feast of tabernacles. Des.

E. 62². For by 'the tabernacle' was represented the whole Heaven in the complex. 576^a. 586³.

109⁶. For by 'tabernacles' were signified the goods of celestial love, and the derivative holy worship; and by 'the feast of tabernacles,' the implantation of this good, or love.

365³⁸. 'In Salem is His tabernacle' (Ps.lxxvi.2). . . By 'the tabernacle of God,' which is there, is signified the Church which is from these things. 'His habitation in Zion'=the good of love . . .

431¹³. 'How good are thy tabernacles, O Jacob; thy habitations, O Israel' (Num.xxiv.5). . . 'Tabernacles,' and 'habitations'=such dwelling-places as there are in the Heavens; 'tabernacles,' the dwelling-places of those who are in the good of love; and 'habitations,' the dwelling-places of those who are in truths from that good. (Compare 700³.)

455¹⁰. 'Thou hidest them in a tabernacle from the strife of tongues' (Ps.xxxi.20). . . By 'the tabernacle in which He hides them,' is signified the Divine truth.

458⁴. As by 'the feast of tabernacles' was signified the implantation of good through truths . . .

504¹⁰. For by 'the tabernacle' was represented Heaven and the Church; and by 'the cloud' and 'fire' on it, protection . . .

659¹⁸. By 'a tabernacle,' in the Word, is signified the Holy of worship, and the good of love, because in the most ancient times Divine worship took place in tabernacles; and because their worship was from the good of celestial love . . .

700⁴. For this reason that tabernacle was called 'the Habitation of Jehovah God,' as Heaven itself is called. That (the three) Heavens were represented by 'the tabernacle,' is evident also from the fact that the form of it was shown to Moses by the Lord upon Sinai; and what is shown in form by the Lord must represent either Heaven, or the things which belong to it.

799. 'And His tabernacle' (Rev.xiii.6)=all the doctrine of the Church and the derivative worship. For 'a tabernacle'=the Church as to doctrine and worship; hence also the doctrine and worship of the Church; and therefore to falsify these is signified by 'to blaspheme the tabernacle of God.' The reason 'a tabernacle'=the Church as to doctrine and worship, is that those who belonged to the Church in the most ancient times dwelt in tabernacles and tents, and also journeyed with them . . . and the father of the family taught those born of his house the precepts of charity, and thus a life of love, in the tabernacles, as was afterwards done in temples; and this is why 'a tabernacle' has a like signification to 'the house of God,' namely, the worship of God according to doctrine, and consequently the Church; for the Church is the Church from a life according to doctrine; and a life according to doctrine is worship.

—². As the Church with the Most Ancients was such, and as the doctrine of love to the Lord was taught in the tabernacles, and as consequently tabernacles were more loved by the Lord than temples, therefore, by the command of the Lord upon Mount Sinai, a tabernacle was built in which the Israelitish nation were to have holy worship; and afterwards, in memory of the most holy worship in tabernacles, the feast of tabernacles was instituted. From these things it is evident whence it is that 'a tabernacle'=the doctrine of the Church and the derivative worship. Ill.

—³. Here, and elsewhere, in the Word, both 'tabernacles,' and 'tents,' are mentioned; and by 'a tabernacle' is signified the Church from those who are in the good of love to the Lord; and by 'a tent' . . . the Church from those who are in truths from that good. And, as doctrine and the derivative worship constitute the Church, by 'a tabernacle' is signified the doctrine of the good of love; and by 'a tent,' the doctrine of truth from that good. Hence, too, by 'tabernacles,' in the plural, are signified the goods of the Church and of doctrine; and by 'tents,' the truths of the Church and of doctrine. Ill.

—⁶. 'In the secret of His tabernacle shall He hide me' (Ps.xxvii.5)=to keep in Divine good, and to be protected from evils.

—⁷. 'Who shall abide in Thy tabernacle?' (Ps.xv.1). By 'a tabernacle,' here, also, is signified the Church as to the good of love; thus also the good of love.

—⁸. 'I will abide in Thy tabernacle for ever' (Ps.lxi.4)=to be in the Divine good of love.

—¹⁰. Heaven and the Church as to the good of love and the truth of doctrine are 'a quiet habitation,' and a tabernacle which shall not be taken down' (Is.xxxiii.20). 'The stakes which shall never be removed'=a strengthening by Divine truths; and 'the cords which shall not be broken'=conjunction through Divine good.

—¹¹. 'My tabernacle is laid waste' (Jer.x.20)=the Church in which there is no longer any good. —¹².

—¹³. 'They shall pitch tabernacles against her' (Jer.vi.3)=the evils and their falsities which devastate the Church.

—¹⁴. That evils of falsity will destroy all their good, is signified by, 'the thorn shall be in their tabernacles' (Hos.ix.6).

—¹⁶. 'I will yet make thee to dwell in tabernacles' (Hos.xii.9)=that they shall yet be in the Church where good is.

—¹⁷. 'The tabernacles of Judah' (Hos.xii.7)=the goods of the Word, and the goods of the Church.

—¹⁷. 'In the heavens He hath set a tabernacle for the sun' (Ps.xix.4)=in the Lord's Heaven from the good of love (in which dwells the Lord as to His Divine love).

[E. 799]¹⁸. By 'a habitation' are signified Heaven and the Church as to truths; and by 'a tabernacle' (Ps. xci.9,10), Heaven and the Church as to goods.

— That he must be expelled from all the good of the Church, is signified by, 'he shall pluck thee out of the tabernacle' (Ps. lli.5).

—¹⁹. By 'a tabernacle' is signified the Church as to good, or the good of the Church, in the following passages also. Ill.

—²⁰. As 'a tabernacle'=Heaven and the Church as to the doctrine of the good of love; and 'a tent,' the Church as to the doctrine of truth from that good; and this from the holy worship of the Lord by the Most Ancients . . . it therefore pleased the Lord that a tabernacle should be erected by Moses, in which representative worship should be performed. Ill.

820⁶. 'I will make here three tabernacles' (Matt. xvii. 4). . . By 'tabernacles' is signified the worship of the Lord from the good of love and the derivative truths.

827². As the Church with (the Israelites) was representative, the tabernacle was built . . .

1088³. The spiritual and celestial things of the Word are comparatively like the holy things of the tabernacle . . .

1145². As 'wood'=good, therefore, with the Most Ancients . . . the temples were of wood, which were not called temples, but houses of God: with many these things were in their tabernacles, in which they not only dwelt, but also had holy worship.

Table. Mensa.

A. 5120³. 'Thou preparest a table before me' (Ps. xliii.5)=to endow with the good of charity.

6405⁴. 'To prepare a table for Gad' (Is. lxxv.11)=to be in works only.

8352³. Meat and drink nourish the body better when a man is in the delight of converse with others . . . than when he sits at table alone. D. 3566.

8377. When (the inhabitants of Jupiter) sit at table, they sit . . . on the leaves of a certain tree.

9468². For the inmost things, which are of the Celestial Kingdom or Church, were signified by those things which were upon the table, especially by the loaves (Num. iv.8).

9527. 'Thou shalt make a table' (Ex. xxv.23)=a receptacle of celestial things; for 'a table'=Heaven as to the reception of such things as are from the Lord there, which are the good of love and the good of faith, and the derivative bliss and happiness. These things are signified by 'a table,' because by 'foods' are signified the celestial things which are of the good of love and of faith, and the derivative wisdom and intelligence. . . Moreover, these things are sometimes presented representatively in Heaven as a table, upon which are foods of every kind. Ill.

—². In the opposite sense, 'a table'=a receptacle of such things as are in Hell. Ill.

9543. 'The table shall be carried with (the staves)' (Ex. xxv.28)=the continuance (in a state of good, of the receptacle of celestial things). Thus is described the Third Heaven as to the reception of good from the Lord; for the loaves of faces=the celestial good which is from the Lord, and the table on which they were=the receptacle of that good. But we may not set forth the particulars of this subject according to its actual manifestation—existentium, because . . . (Continued under CELESTIAL KINGDOM.) 9545.

9683. 'Thou shalt set the table outside the veil' (Ex. xxvi.35)=influx through the celestial things which are of love. . . 'Outside the veil'=outside the uniting medium through which there is mediate influx; and, as that table was behind the veil, there is therefore signified influx through the celestial things which are of the Inmost Heaven, which are the goods of love. Ex.

9684. 'The table' upon which were the loaves of faces, and opposite to which was the candlestick (ver.35)=the Lord as to celestial good, thus that good itself from which and through which the Lord inflows into the Spiritual Kingdom.

9685. 'Thou shalt set the table on the north side' (id.)=good in obscurity. . . For, in the Spiritual Kingdom, good appears through truth . . .

10206⁴. By 'the table' upon which were the loaves, is signified the derivative good of love.

10270. 'And the table and all its vessels' (Ex. xxx.27)=in spiritual good which is from the Celestial which is of the Second Heaven; and in the ministering goods and truths. For the Tent of the Assembly outside the veil, where that table was,=the Second Heaven; and 'the table' upon which were the loaves of faces=spiritual good from celestial; for 'the loaves'=celestial good; and 'the table' upon which they were, spiritual good. Refs. 10341.

E. 118⁴. 'Desiring to be fed with the crumbs that fell from the rich man's table' (Luke xvi. 21)=to long for some truths from the Word; for . . . 'a table'=a receptacle for (knowledge, intelligence, and wisdom; and, in general, for good and truth).

235⁷. 'All tables are full of the vomit of voiding' (Is.xxviii.8). . . 'Tables'=all things which should nourish the spiritual life; for by 'tables' are meant the foods which are upon them . . . and therefore by (the above words) are signified the same things falsified and adulterated.

324³. 'The table' upon which were the loaves of faces, =the reception of celestial good in spiritual good.

340¹³. 'Sons around the tables' (Ps.cxxviii.3)=the derivative truths of good. 'Tables'=instructions. ('Around the tables'=delights from spiritual appropriation and nourishment. 638¹³).

Table. Tabula.

Boarded. Tabulatus.

Flooring. Tabulatio.

A. 576^e. That remains are in the internal man, is represented by 'the tables' (of the decalogue).

1038⁵. Therefore the tables upon which the ten precepts were written, are called 'the tables of the covenant.' 9396⁴.

1298³. 'The tables' of stone . . . =holy truths, and therefore they were of stone, that is, their foundation was stone. Ill. 8940³. 9416.

6385². The Knowledges of good and truth are described by such things as belong to a ship, as 'the planks,' etc. (Ezek.xxvii.5).

9414². Therefore Moses . . . broke the tables; and was afterwards commanded to hew out other tables, upon which the same words were to be written; by which was signified that that people by no means wanted to acknowledge anything doctrinal from the internal sense . . . but only from the external sense separated from the internal.

—². The reason there was not one table, but two, was that there might be represented the conjunction of the Lord with the Church through the Word; and through the Church with the human race; and they are therefore called 'the tables of the covenant'

[A. 9416]³. Moreover, writing, and engraving on tables, in the Word, = those things which must be impressed on the memory and the life, and which will thus permanently remain. Ill.

9738. 'Hollow, boarded, shalt thou make it' (Ex. xxvii. 8). . . 'Hollow, boarded,' as said of the altar . . . = application; for it was thereby rendered applicable to its use.

10375. 'He gave to Moses . . . the two tables of the testimony' (Ex. xxxi. 18) = the conjunction of the Lord with man through the Word. . . 'The two tables' = the Law in the whole complex, thus the Word. . . Conjunction thereby with man is signified by the tables being two, and joined together in the resemblance of a covenant.

10376. 'Tables of stone written with the finger of God' (id.) = the Divine truth therein from the Lord Himself. For 'the tables' = the Law in the whole complex, thus the Word; and 'stone' = Divine truth in ultimates. . . The reason these tables were of stone, and the words of the law were written on stone, was that 'stone' = truth in ultimates; and Divine truth in ultimates is the sense of the letter . . .

10393. That with that people interior things were completely closed up, lest they should profane the holy things of Heaven and the Church, is signified by the tables of the law having been broken by Moses.

10451. 'And the two tables of the testimony in his hand' (Ex. xxxii. 15) = the Word of the Lord in special and in general; for 'the tables' . . . = the Word in the whole complex. . . The reason why by these tables is signified the Word in the whole complex, thus in special and in general, is that there was written on them the law of life . . .

10453. 'These tables were the work of God, and this writing was the writing of God, cut out upon the tables' (ver. 16) = the external and the internal sense of the Word from the Divine, and the Divine truth. For 'the tables' = the Word in the whole complex; here, the external of the Word; 'the work of God' = from the Divine; 'the writing' = the internal of the Word; and 'cut out upon the tables' = what is internal upon what is external, thus in it.

—². The reason 'the tables' here = the external of

—³. That the tables which were the work of God were broken by Moses when he saw the calf and the dancing, and that other tables were hewn out by Moses, upon which the same words were inscribed; and thus that the tables were no longer the work of God, but the work of Moses, whereas the writing was still the writing of God; involves an arcanum, which is, that the sense of the letter of the Word would have been different if the Word had been written among a different people, or if this people had not been such as they were. Ex. —⁴. 10461, Sig. and Ex. 10603, Sig. and Ex. 10604. 10613.

10687. 'He wrote upon the tables the words of the covenant' (Ex. xxxiv. 28) = the Word, through which is the conjunction of Heaven with man. 'The tables' upon which the Law was written = the Word. Refs. 10690.

10837. They are placed behind a boarded [partition] as high as the middle of their bodies.

Life 56. This is evident from the two tables, of which one contains all things which are on the side of God, and the other contains in the complex all things which are on the side of man . . . 57. 58. (See E. 1179³, below.)

62. That the first table contains all the things which belong to God, and the second one all things which belong to man, does not appear in the letter . . .

P. 95. As there is a conjunction of the Lord with man, and of man with the Lord, therefore there are two tables of the Law; one for the Lord, and the other for man. In proportion as man, from himself, does the laws of his own table, the Lord grants that he may do the laws of His table; whereas the man who does not do the laws of his own table—which all relate to love towards the neighbour—cannot do the laws of the Lord's table, which all relate to the love of the Lord. Ex. . . As thus and no otherwise is effected conjunction with the Lord, therefore those two tables are called 'a covenant;' and a covenant is between two.

326⁷. This is why there are two tables of the decalogue; one for God, and the other for man. God continually operates that man may receive the things which are in His table; but if man does not do the things which are in his table, he does not receive by acknowledgment of the heart the things which are in God's table; and, if he does not receive them, he is not conjoined. For this reason those two tables were joined together so as to be a one, and were called 'the tables of the covenant;' and 'a covenant' = conjunction.

329. These two things—the shunning of evils because they are contrary to the Divine laws in the decalogue, and the acknowledgment of the existence of God—are joined together as the two tables of the decalogue were joined together; of which the one is for the Lord, and the other for man. The Lord, from His table, enlightens everyone, and gives power; and in the same proportion as man does the things which are in his table, he receives the power and the enlightenment. Before this, the two appear as if lying the one upon the other, and closed together with a seal; but in proportion as man does the things which are in his table, they are folded back and opened.

—². When the decalogue was mentioned, they rejected it with contempt. This was because . . . in its second table, which is the table of man, it teaches that evils are to be shunned . . .

R. 461². If the good of life is not religion, then the second table of the decalogue, which is the table of repentance, is like a tabula rasa in which there does not appear anything written. That the second table . . . is a table of repentance, is evident, because in it it is not said that good works are to be done; but that evil works are not to be done; as 'Thou shalt not kill; thou shalt not scortate; thou shalt not steal; thou shalt not bear false witness; thou shalt not covet the things which are thy neighbour's . . .'

490². There are two tables on which these precepts have been written, the one for the Lord, and the other for man. The first table contains [the teaching] that many gods are not to be worshipped, but one. The other table contains [the teaching] that evils are not to be done. When, therefore, one God is worshipped, and man does not do evils, conjunction is effected . . .

559^c. 'Gog and Magog' mean 'roofed and floored.'

903². These two things—the worship of the Lord, and a life according to His precepts—are conjoined as are the two tables of the Law, of which one contains the things which belong to the Lord, and the other those which belong to man . . . Think how it would be with these tables of the Law, if the first only was extant, and the second was taken away; or (the converse).

M. 75⁵. I asked, What is there within that Sanctuary (in the Heaven of the Golden Age), from which so great a light proceeds? He replied, There is a table on which is the inscription, The Covenant between Jehovah and the Heavens.

77⁶. He showed us that the writings of the Most Ancients were upon wood and stone tables (or tablets).

T. 285. For this reason there were two tables; one for God, and the other for man. Conjunction is effected by the Lord; but only when man does the things which have been written in his table. Ex.

286. For that Law was written on two tables, of which one contains in the complex all things which regard God, and the other all things which regard man . . . 287.

287². As the decalogue in the first table contains in a summary all things of love to God; and in the second table all things of love towards the neighbour, it follows that the decalogue contains all things which are of doctrine and of life.

— . From a view of the two tables, it is evident that they have been so conjoined, that God from His table regards man, and that man from his regards God . . . and if man receives and does the things which are in his table, reciprocal conjunction is effected . . .

456. It is known that the Law promulgated from Mount Sinai was written on two tables; and that one of these is concerning God, and the other concerning men; and that in the hand of Moses they were one table, on the right side of which was the writing concerning God, and on the left that concerning men; and that when so presented to the eyes of men, the writing on both parts was seen together; thus one part was in view of the other, like Jehovah speaking with Moses, and Moses with Jehovah, face to face, as we read. This was done in order that the tables, thus united, should represent the conjunction of God with men, and the reciprocal conjunction of men with God . . .

—². From these two tables, thus united, may be seen the conjunction of love to God and love towards the neighbour. The first table involves all things which belong to love to God, which are, primarily, that man ought to acknowledge one God, the Divinity of His Human, and the holiness of the Word; and that He is to be worshipped by means of the holy things that proceed from Him. That this table involves these things is evident from the commentary, in the fifth chapter, on the precepts of the decalogue. The second table involves all those things which belong to love towards the neighbour; its first five precepts, those things which relate to doing, and which are called works; and the last two, the things which belong to the will, thus the things which are of charity in its origin; for in these it is said, 'Thou shalt not covet . . .'

514². 'They have made all thy planks of fir-trees' (Ezek. xxvii. 5).

701²¹. These 'tables,' that is, the Law written upon them, = the Divine truth, through which there is conjunction with the Lord; from which conjunction they are called 'the tables of the covenant.'

1026³. For this reason there were two tables . . . and they were afterwards placed in the ark, not one beside the other, but one above the other, for a testimony of the conjunction between the Lord and man. Upon one table were written the precepts of love to the Lord, and upon the other table were written the precepts of love towards the neighbour. The first three precepts are those of love to the Lord, and the last six are those of love towards the neighbour, while the fourth precept—which is, ‘Honour thy father and thy mother’—is the mediating precept . . .

[E.] 1027⁴. When man through the last six precepts conjoins himself with the Lord . . . the Lord conjoins Himself with man through the first three, which are, that man must acknowledge God, believe in the Lord, and keep His name holy. These man does not believe . . . unless he abstains from as sins the evils which are forbidden in the second table, that is, in the last six precepts.

1179³. The conjunction of God with man and of man with God, is taught in the two tables that were written with the finger of God . . . In one table is God, in the other man. These tables exist with all nations with whom there is religion. From the first table they know that God must be acknowledged, regarded as holy, and worshipped: from the second table they know that they must not steal, etc. . . From his table, man knows the evils which must be shunned; and, in proportion as he knows them and shuns them as of himself, God conjoins him with Himself, and enables him from His table to acknowledge Him . . . and also not to will evils, and (in the same proportion) to know truths in abundance. In this way these two tables conjoin themselves together in a man; and God’s table is placed upon man’s table; and they are put as one table into the ark . . .

—². ‘Tails like scorpions, and stings in the tails’ (Rev.ix.10)=adroit reasonings from falsities, by which they persuade, and thus injure. 10071². (=persuasions. S.13³).

—³. ‘Tails like serpents’ (ver.19)=reasonings from falsities, by which injury is inflicted; and this is still more so because it is said that such were the tails ‘of the horses,’ and that ‘they had heads.’ Ex. 10071².

—⁴. ‘The tail of the dragon’ (Rev.xii.4)=reasoning from falsities . . . (=truths falsified, especially by application to evils. 10071⁰.)

—⁵. That ‘tail,’ in general,=the Sensuous separated, which does not look upwards, but downwards . . . consequently, falsity. Ill.

—⁶. (In these passages) ‘the tail’=what is lowest, which looks downwards or outwards, that is, to the world and to the earth, and not to Heaven and the Lord. Ex.

9656². ‘The head and the tail’ (Is.xix.15)=(the interiors and the exteriors of the Church).

10071. ‘(Thou shalt take) the tail’ (Ex.xxix.22)=all the truth (in the Heavens); for ‘the tail of the ram’=truth. The reason ‘the tail’=truth, is that it is the ultimate, and in the ultimates is truth. Moreover the tail is the ultimate of the cerebrum and the cerebellum; for these are continued into the spinal marrow, which is terminated in the tail, which is thus their ultimate appendix; and therefore it is said that in the sacrifices ‘the tail was to be removed near the spine of the back’ (Lev.iii.9).

— That ‘the tail’=truth in the ultimates; and, in the opposite sense, falsity. Ill.

C. J. 28^e. They who constituted the tail of the dragon, were they who in the world had been in faith separated from charity, and had been like the former as to their thoughts and intentions. (They who constitute its ‘tail’ are they who have falsified all the truths of the Word; and therefore it is said that with its tail it dragged down the third part of the stars, that is, all the Knowledges of truth. F.56^e.)

R. 438. ‘They had tails like scorpions’ (Rev.ix.10)=the truths of the Word falsified, by means of which they induce a stupor (on the understanding). By ‘the tail’ is signified the ultimate of the head, because the brain is continued through the spine into the tail; and therefore the head and the tail make a one as the first and the last. When, therefore, by ‘the head’ is signified faith alone . . . by ‘the tail’ are signified all confirmations of it in the aggregate which are from the Word, thus the truths of the Word falsified. Everyone who takes a principle of religion from his Own intelligence, and puts it for the head, takes confirming things from the Word, and puts them for a tail . . . As to the tail being the continuation of the brain through the spine to its ultimate . . . look at a dog or other wild beast which has a tail, and coax and caress him, and you will see the crest of the back smooth down, and the tail move correspondingly; and, on the contrary, the crest will rise, if you irritate him. (=sensuous scientifics which are persuasive. Ex. E.559.)

—². The first of the understanding, which is taken for a principle (or beginning), is signified by ‘the head:’ and the ultimate of it by ‘the tail,’ in the following passages. Ill.

— As the ultimate is signified by ‘the tail,’ and the ultimate is the complex of all things, Jehovah said to

Moses, 'Take hold of the tail (of the serpent) . . . and it was commanded that they should remove the entire tail next the spine . . . and sacrifice it with the fat . . .'

439. 'There were stings in their tails' (id.)=cunning falsifications of the Word; (for) 'the tails'=the truths of the Word falsified.

455. 'For their tails were like unto serpents, and had heads, and in these they do hurt' (ver.19)=that . . . they are sensuous and inverted, speaking truths with the mouth, but falsifying them from the principle which makes the head of the doctrine of their religion; and in this way they deceive. Ex. (=that from sensuous scientifics, which are fallacies, they reason craftily. E.581.)

541. 'His tail drew the third part of the stars of heaven, and cast them into the earth' (Rev.xii.4)=that by means of the falsifications of the Truths of the Word they have alienated from the Church all the spiritual Knowledges of good and truth, and have utterly destroyed them by applications to falsities. By 'the tail,' where it treats of those who have confirmed heretical things from the Word, are signified the truths of the Word falsified. (=the falsification and adulteration of all the Truths of the Word. E.718.)

714¹³. (Thus) by 'the tail of the dragon' is meant the falsification and adulteration of the Word from those who constitute its head, its body, and its most external parts; for its tail, like the tail of every animal, is a continuation of the spine, which is extended from the brains, and thus is moved, bent, and vibrated, according to the appetites, concupiscences, and pleasures of the head and body . . .

—¹⁴. In the light of Heaven such are seen as dragons with a long tail; and, when there are a number of such, the tail has been seen extended from the south through the west into the north; and that tail has also been seen to draw down as it were the stars from heaven and cast them into the earth.

Talaris. Talaris. (A garment which reached down to the ankles.)

R. 45. 'Clothed with a talaris' (Rev. i. 13) = the proceeding Divine, which is the Divine truth. The reason 'a talaris' (has this signification) is that 'vestments,' in the Word, = truths; hence 'a talaris,' which is a general vestment, when predicated of the Lord, = the proceeding Divine truth. A. 6432². E. 64.

M. 15. The Prince was clad in a talaris of a crimson colour, set with embroidered stars of a silver colour.

42³. The (angelic) husband . . . was clad in a talaris, and in a vest under the talaris of a hyacinthine colour . . .

A. 4424. The Knowledges of good and truth are separated from them in the other life . . . lest by them they should communicate with Heaven, and by evils and falsities with Hell, and thus hang between the two; and lest also they should profane goods and truths . . . This is signified by, 'Take the talent from him . . .' (Matt.xxv.28). 4661. 7984⁴. R.676^e, Ex. E.193¹⁰, Ex.

[A.] 529¹⁴. 'The servant who received five talents' = those who have admitted goods and truths from the Lord; thus who have received remains. 'He who received two' = those who in advanced age have adjoined charity to faith. 'He who received one' = those who have received faith alone without charity.

9574. 'Of a talent of pure gold shall it be made' (Ex.xxv.39) = one good from which are all things; for 'a talent' = one.

R. 714. 'Great hail as of the weight of a talent' (Rev.xvi.21) = direful and atrocious falsities . . . because the talent was the greatest weight of silver and also of gold, (which) = truth and good. E.1026.

Tamar. Thamar.

A. 4811. The genuine Church is described by 'Tamar.' 4829.

4812. The sons of Tamar = the two essentials of the Church: faith and love.

4831. 'Her name was Tamar' (Gen.xxxviii.6) = the quality of the Church: that it was a Church representative of spiritual and celestial things . . . which was to be instituted among the posterity of Judah. 4843.

—e. The internal of the Church, here, is 'Tamar,' 4864, Ex. 4914.

4848. '[Tamar went] and remained in her father's house' (ver.11) = alienation . . .

4855. Truth obscured is here represented by 'Tamar.'

4856. 'It was told Tamar' (ver.13) = something of communication with the Church representative of spiritual and celestial things. Ex.

4858. 'She put off the garments of her widowhood' (ver.14) = simulated truth from good.

4869. 'His daughter-in-law' (ver.16) = the truth of the representative Church . . . For 'Tamar,' who is here the 'daughter-in-law' = a Church representative of spiritual and celestial things.

4903. 'Tamar thy daughter-in-law hath played the harlot' (ver.24) = perception then that it is false that anything of marriage exists between them. . . 'Tamar' = the internal of the representative Church.

4906. 'Let her be burnt' (id.) = that the internal of the Church ought to be extirpated.

4917. 'Her travail' (ver.27) = acknowledgment on the part of internal truth; (for) 'Tamar' = the internal of the representative Church; and therefore internal truth.

3941^e. 'The tares' (Matt.xiii.) = evils and falsities. (=falsity. 7571.) (=the falsities and evils of the former Church. T.784^e.)

9295⁴. 'The sons of the evil kingdom,' who are 'the tares' = the falsities of faith of the Church.

D. 1436. The evils (in man) are tares, which strike wide roots, and obstruct the roots of the good seed.

1437. Unless there are the Truths of faith . . . there are the roots of tares, which obstruct (the truths and goods inseminated by the Lord); but still they do not extirpate them; for they are reserved, so that while the tares are taking root, they are produced, and grow.

1480. If there are falsities in the ideas, they must be eradicated; for they are like tares . . .

5222. The Lord compares the Kingdom of God . . . to a man gathering tares . . . This is presented to view in the other life. (Fully des. under FERMENT, here.) This is the gathering of the tares into bundles.

E. 374¹⁵. (The parable of the tares) treats of the Last Judgment, when there must be a separation of the good from the evil. . . 'While men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares, and went his way' = that with natural men the falsities of evil inflow from Hell, and are received. . . 'Tares' = the evil of falsity, and thus those who are in evil through falsities. (=evils, or those in whom evils are. 397².) (=the evil. 426³.) (=infernal falsity. 683⁶.) 911². 'While men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares'=that while men are leading a natural life, or a life of the world, then evils from Hell secretly, or while they are unconscious of it, insinuate and implant falsities. . . 'When the blade sprang up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also'=that when truth grew and produced good, falsities from evil were intermingled with it. . . 'Lord wilt thou that we . . . gather up the tares?'=the separation and casting out of falsities from evil before truths from good are received and increase. 'Nay, lest haply while ye gather up the tares, ye root up the wheat with them'=that so truth from good, and its increase, would also perish. For, with the men of the Church, truths are intermingled with falsities, and these cannot be separated . . . until they are reformed. (Further ex.) 'The tares are the sons of the evil'=the falsities with those who are in evil.

—¹⁰. 'The ships of Tarshish in the beginning' (Is. lx.9)=the goods which they bring forth and do; for 'Tarshish'=the natural man as to Knowledges; and 'Tarshish in the beginning,' the natural man as to the Knowledges of good, because in Tarshish there were gold and silver, and the ships carried them from it (1 Kings x.22). (=Knowledges of truth and good such as are possessed in the beginning by those being reformed. 514⁶.)

—¹¹. 'Tarshish'=the Knowledges of good from the Word; and 'Tyre,' the Knowledges of truth therefrom.

— 'Tarshish'=interior goods and truths in the Natural.

514⁵. 'The ships of Tarshish'=doctrinals from the Word; for these ships carried gold and silver, by which are signified goods and truths, and the Knowledges of them from the Word.

—⁸. 'Thou breakest the ships of Tarshish with the east wind' (Ps.xlviii.7)=false doctrinals devastated.

Tartar. Tartarus.

R. 11². This Ancient Word is still preserved among the people who dwell in Great Tartary. I have spoken with Spirits and Angels who were from that country, who said that they possessed a Word, and had possessed it from ancient times; that they conduct their Divine worship according to that Word; and that it consists of nothing but correspondences. They also said that the Book of Jasher is in it . . . and that among them are the books called 'the Wars of Jehovah,' and 'the Prophecies;' and when I read in their presence the words which Moses has taken therefrom, they searched . . . and found them. Thus it is evident that the Ancient Word is still among them. . . They said that they worship Jehovah; some as an invisible God, and some as visible. They told me that they do not suffer strangers to come among them, except the Chinese, with whom they cultivate peace, because the emperor of China is from their country; and also that they are so populous, that they do not believe any region in the whole world to be more so; which is also credible from the wall . . . which the Chinese constructed as a safeguard against invasion from them. Seek for it in China, and perhaps you will find it there among the Tartars. M.77². T.266. 279³.

T. 279^e. The Angels and Spirits from Great Tartary appear in the southern quarter, on its eastern side, and are separated from others by dwelling in a higher expanse, and by their not admitting anyone to come to them from the Christian World; and, if any ascend, by guarding them to prevent their going away. The cause of this separation is, that they possess another Word.

D. 6077. On the inhabitants of Tartary near China—Lesser Tartary.—There were some from that country with me . . . They said that their land was populous, and that they know nothing about war. They knew about China and Siberia. They said that among them he governs who is able to govern, and that if he cannot do so he is dismissed with a fine . . . and that they are all engaged in their own works at home, making garments, cultivating the earth, and the like. They wondered (that anyone should not know) that God is a Man. In like manner with the commandments of the decalogue, and only one wife. . . They said that they have houses where they are taught concerning life, and the commands of God. They said that they have a book their possession of which is not known elsewhere, which they called a Divine Book, and which they read and are instructed by, and which they understand. Inquiry was made, and it was the Psalms of David. They said that newcomers are indeed admitted, but they give them no opportunity to go away: they give them the necessities of life, and if they are willing to labour they are accepted. They have the decalogue also. They call the Chinese their friends, because they are from their nation. . . They fear Siberia somewhat; but say that they have nothing, and if they come they at once give themselves up to them . . . [In the parallel passage in J. (Post.) 133, it is said that these people] dwelt outside the Chinese wall, and that they are of a calm and peaceful disposition.

Coro. 39. The Ancient Church was scattered through the whole of Asia . . . and, in course of time, into Great Tartary.

Taste. Gustus.

Taste, To. Gustare.

See under RELISH, and TONGUE.

A. 1480^e. The appetite and taste themselves, correspond to the desire for knowledges.

1516. I have spoken with Spirits about the sense of taste, which they said that they do not possess; but a something from which they know the nature of taste; and which they likened to an odour . . . It was brought to my recollection that taste and smell meet in a certain third [sense], as is evident from animals which examine their food by the smell . . . D. 3998.

1521. Spirits and Angels have every sense except taste far more exquisite than is ever possessed by man. 1880.

1973. Spirits have not the sense of taste; but in place of it a desire like an appetite for knowing and learning.

4404^e. The sense of taste corresponds to the affection of knowing.

4622^e. Spirits and Angels enjoy sensations much more exquisite than those of men . . . namely, sight, hearing, smell, something analogous to taste, and touch . . .

4791. On the correspondence of taste with the Grand Man. Gen.art.

4792. As food and nutrition correspond to spiritual food and nutrition, therefore taste corresponds to the perception and affection of them. Spiritual food is knowledge, intelligence, and wisdom . . .

4793. As taste corresponds to the perception and affection of knowing, being intelligent, and being wise; and as the life of man is in this affection, therefore no Spirit or Angel is permitted to inflow into man's taste; for this would be to inflow into the life which is proper to him. Yet there are roaming Spirits of the infernal crew . . . who strive in every way to enter into man's taste; and, when they have entered into it, they possess his interiors, that is, the life of his thoughts and affections . . . Very many are at this day possessed by these Spirits. Ex. and Des.

—³. If they had penetrated quite into my taste, they would have possessed the interiors, for the reason that the taste depends on these interiors by correspondence.

4794. A Spirit . . . has all the senses . . . but not taste; but in place of it something analogous, which is adjoined to the sense of smell. The reason he has not taste, is that he may not be able to enter into the taste of man, and so possess his interiors; and also that this sense may not turn him away from the desire of knowing and being wise; thus from spiritual appetite.

5077³. The Sensuous . . . which is subject to both the intellectual and the voluntary part together, is the smell, and still more the taste.

5620¹¹. As 'the manna' = truth Divine . . . it is described as to delight and pleasantness by its 'taste,' which was 'like that of a cake kneaded with honey' (Ex.xvi.31). That 'the taste' = the delight of good, and the pleasantness of truth. Ref.

7038². The delight of taste (is the second in intensity) because it serves for nutrition, and the consequent health of the body, according to which the mind acts soundly. H.402².

9996. Sensuous delight, which is the ultimate of the Voluntary, is drawn in through two senses, which are taste and touch. Sig.

10199. Hence taste = the perception and affection of knowing and being wise.

H. 462². The rest of the senses with the Angels are not so exquisite as are those of sight and hearing . . .

(for) if they were so, they would take away the light and delight of their wisdom, and would introduce the delight of the pleasures which are of the various appetites and of the body, which obscure and debilitate the understanding in proportion as they excel; as also happens with men in the world, who are obese and stupid in respect to spiritual truths in proportion as they indulge the taste and the tactile blandishments of the body.

W. 41. The sense of taste is only an affection of the substance and form of the tongue: the tongue is the subject.

363°. The appearance is that . . . the tongue tastes; but it is the understanding which from its perception smells, and also tastes; and therefore to smell and to taste are predicated of perception.

M. 210. The love of nourishing one's self from the love of inbuing one's self with goods and truths, has the sense of taste; and its delights are delicacies.

D. 645. That Spirits invert the taste.—That which has a good flavour . . . has had a different taste. Examp. . . . Thus the taste of man is changed according to the phantasies of Spirits . . .

2409. Noisome tastes were taken away from me . . . and a good savour induced.

3529. Spirits know the taste of the things I eat and drink, although they have not taste.

3567. Spirits have every sense except taste . . . They are delighted with the spiritual food with men, thus with the Knowledges of truth and good. But they do not insinuate themselves into the taste, which sense has been properly allotted to bodily food, in which they take no delight.

3716. Sirens laboured to come into the taste, (and thus) into the interiors of man. Ex. 3723, Ex. 3858.

5595. To taste is also said of perception, but in a grosser sense (than to smell).

E. 427. The taste corresponds to the desire to know and be wise.

455°. 'Taste'=appetite, longing, and affection.

519. 'Savour,' and 'taste,'=the affection of knowing and being wise.

—2. 'Tasting He would not drink' (Matt. xxvii. 34). Ex.

618. For Spirits and Angels have taste equally as men; but the taste of Spirits and Angels flows forth from a spiritual origin, but that of men from a natural one. The taste of bitterness, with Spirits, if from the adulterated truth of good . . .

990. As an organ of taste, the tongue=the natural perception of good and truth; while smell=the spiritual perception of them.

1146°. So the sensory of taste is excited by the foods which come in contact with the tongue from without.

J. (Post.) 323. When what is spiritual tastes what is spiritual, it is just as when what is material tastes what is material.

H. 226. See PREACHER, here.

488². The lot of those who study knowledges merely to be thought learned.

S. 26². The Lord teaches everyone through the Word; and He teaches from those truths which the man has, and does not pour in new ones immediately . . .

50. Thus the Lord is the most present in the sense of the letter, and from it teaches and illustrates man. 53.

F. 5. There is a spiritual idea . . . which inflows with those who are in the affection of truth, and which dictates interiorly that what is heard, or read, is true, or not . . . These are they who are called 'taught by Jehovah' (Is. liv. 13; John vi. 45); and who are spoken of in Jer. xxxi. 31-34.

30. (The effect on others of a) lack of truth with those who teach.

P. 135. The Spirits who of the Lord's permission speak with man, never . . . teach: the Lord alone teaches man, but mediately through the Word, in illustration. From experience.

154. That it is a law of the Divine Providence that man be led and taught by the Lord from Heaven through the Word, doctrine, and preachings from it; and this in all appearance as of himself. Chapter.

— . It is from the appearance that man is led and taught by himself; but it is from the Truth that he is led and taught by the Lord alone. They who confirm the appearance with themselves . . . cannot remove from themselves evils as sins . . .

—². The Lord gives these to interiorly perceive that they are not led and taught by themselves, but by the Lord.

155. That man is led and taught by the Lord alone. Gen.art.

156. That man is led and taught by the Lord alone, is because he lives from the Lord alone; for the will of his life is led, and the life of his understanding is taught. Ex.

162. That man is led and taught by the Lord alone through the angelic Heaven and from it. Gen.art.

165. That man is led by the Lord by influx, and is taught by illustration. Gen.art.

172. It follows that the man who is taught from the Word, is taught by the Lord alone. Ex. —⁵.

—⁵. But everyone is taught according to the understanding of his love: what goes beyond this, does not remain.

— . All who are taught by the Lord in the Word, are taught a few truths in the world, but many when they become Angels; for the interiors of the Word . . . are simultaneously implanted, but are not opened with the man until after his death . . .

—⁶. The Word cannot be taught otherwise than mediately, through parents, masters, preachers, books, and especially through the reading of it; but still it is not taught by these agencies; but through them by the Lord.

174. That in external things man is led and taught by the Lord in all appearance as of himself. Ex.

233². These . . . are led by the Lord; and they who are led, are also taught, according to their religion, concerning God and the neighbour; for they who so live love to be taught; but they who live otherwise do not; and, as they love to be taught, they are instructed by the Angels after death . . .

R. 129. The Truth, and the study of acquiring and teaching it. Sig. and Ex.

379. For all who have fought against evils . . . and have believed in the Lord, are taught by Him after their departure from the world . . .

383. That the Lord alone will teach them. Sig. and Ex.

— . That 'to feed-pasce'=to teach. Ill.

463⁶. We, said they, are the purple-clad doctors.

491. That . . . these two essentials of the New Church are to be taught until the end and the beginning. Sig. and Ex. E.636.

595. That they speak, teach, and write from the Word . . . and yet it is truth falsified. Sig. and Ex.

606. That no one is permitted (by the solitidians) to teach from the Word . . . but those who acknowledge that doctrine . . . Sig. and Ex. E.840.

653. The understanding so closed that man can scarcely be taught any longer. Sig. and Ex.

M. 316⁵. That they should 'let down the net on the right side of the ship' . . . =that they should teach the good of charity, and in that way they would gather men.

T. 320. They who teach false and heretical things . . . and yet read the Word, and are able to know from it what is false and what is true . . . may be compared to impostors . . .

D. 263. On the teachableness of Spirits. . . Spirits are easily taught-dociles. Examp.

1643. That no one claims anything in Heaven because he has taught many things (here).

— . An intense love of teaching; its motives.

4001. No Spirit is allowed to teach man, and consequently not to lead him, except from cupidity; but the Lord alone wills to teach and lead man; which would not be possible if a Spirit possessed anything of the corporeal memory.

4440. A certain doctor of great dignity who supposed himself to be more learned than others . . .

4940. Women can give utterance with affection, and thus excite to what is devout and holy; but cannot teach.

5917. Men who teach . . . have two states; one when they teach and think from doctrine; and the other when they are thinking outside of doctrine. Ex.

E. 160. 'To teach, and to seduce My servants' (Rev. ii. 20). . . 'To teach' is predicated of truths, or falsities.

— . This delight (of the love of self and the world) teaches and seduces those who are in truths.

212². 'To be taught in the streets' (Luke xiii. 26)=to know the things which must be of faith.

365²⁴. 'The sons who shall be taught of Jehovah . . .' (Is. liv. 13)=those who in the New Heaven and New Church will be in truths from good from the Lord.

[E.] 388³. Those who teach falsities and through them ead to evil of life. Sig.

559⁴. 'The teacher of a lie' (Is.ix.15)=one who teaches falsity by applying scientifics from the sense of the letter to confirm falsities.

600¹¹. Instruction in the truths of doctrine, is signified by, 'Thine eyes shall look again to thy teachers' (Is.xxx.20). 'Teachers'=doctrine.

684⁶. 'Be not ye called Rabbi; one is your teacher, Christ' (Matt.xxiii.8). 'Rabbi,' and 'teacher'=one who teaches truth; thus, in the abstract, the doctrine of truth; and, in the supreme sense, the Divine truth, which is 'Christ.' (Thus these words mean) that the Lord alone is the Divine truth. 746¹³.

696¹². 'Teach me Thy way, O Jehovah' (Ps.lxxvi.11) =to teach the truth according to which we are to live.

734². That they will be taught in truths by which they will be led, is signified by, 'He will teach us of His ways, and we shall go in His paths' (Micah iv.2).

741⁶. 'When Thou teachest the earth Thy judgments, the inhabitants of the world learn righteousness' (Is. xxvi.9)=that the Church is in truths from the Lord, and, through truths, in good.

746¹³. For the Lord is the teacher of all . . . and from Him as the teacher is all the truth of that good.

979⁶. Only abstain from evils as sins, and look to the Lord, and the Lord will teach and lead.

1173². The ninth law of the Divine Providence is, That the Lord does not teach man truths immediately, either from Himself or through the Angels; but that He teaches mediately through the Word, preachings, readings, speech and intercourse with others, and thus by thoughts in ourselves therefrom. Ex. 1177, Ex.

J. (Post.) 31. Who do not want to learn, but to teach.

109⁶. These are more teachable than the rest.

De Verbo. 13². Leave is granted to no Spirit, or Angel, to teach any man in this Earth Divine truths; but the Lord Himself teaches everyone through the Word, and He teaches him in the proportion that he receives from the Lord good in the will; and he receives it in proportion as he shuns evils as sins. Ex.

4951². They can move others to shed tears. —.

7251⁶. A tenderness of gladness from them which drew tears from my eyes.

9223². In the Original it is said 'the tear of the wine.' . . . 'Tears' are what fall in drops.

10031². Grief on account of truth destroyed, is signified by, 'Mine eyes are consumed with tears' (Lam.ii.11).

H. 238. A hard-hearted Spirit was so affected by the speech of an Angel that he shed tears. He said it was love speaking, and that he had never shed tears before.

S. 84. 'The shedding of tears' is predicated of truth, or falsity.

R. 385. 'God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes' (Rev.vii.17)=that they shall be no longer in combats against evils and their falsities, and thus not in griefs; but in goods and truths, and consequently in heavenly joys from the Lord. (=a state of blessedness from the affection of truth, after falsities have been removed by means of temptations. E.484.)

884. 'God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes' (Rev.xxi.4)=that the Lord will take away from them all grief of mind; for the shedding of tears is from grief of mind-animi.

6426². For 'the Stone,' in general, =the temple; and, in special, its foundation; and 'the temple'=the Lord's Divine Human, Ill.

6435¹². Hence the temple at Jerusalem was built upon a mountain.

6637^e. Everyone who lives in the good of charity and faith is a Church, and is a Kingdom of the Lord, and is hence called 'a temple,' and also 'a house of God.'

7839^e. 'The New Temple'=the Lord's Spiritual

Kingdom. 8468². (=the Spiritual Church. 7847³.) (=the Heaven of the Lord. 8369^e.) (=a new Spiritual Church from the Lord. 9050¹⁰.)

[A.] 7847⁴. 'The temple,' in the supreme sense, = the Lord as to the Divine Human; and therefore, in the representative sense, His Church.

8253. A life of piety consists in . . . frequenting churches, and in listening devoutly to the preaching there, etc.

8369³. For 'the temple' = the Lord Himself; and, in the representative sense, Heaven.

8941⁶. The temple at Jerusalem was also built of whole stones (1 Kings vi. 7); for by 'the temple of the Lord' was represented the Lord as to Divine truth. That the Lord was represented by 'the temple' He Himself teaches in John ii.; and that it was as to the Divine truth, was because it was taught there, and therefore also it was built of stones, (which) = Divine truth. E. 585¹¹.

9093⁴. The Jerusalem temple, whence were the 'vessels,' in the supreme sense, = the Lord; in the representative sense, His Kingdom and Church. 9437^e.

9229⁸. 'The temple which sanctifies the gold' (Matt. xxiii. 17). 'The temple' represented the Lord Himself; and 'the gold,' the good which is from Him. E. 391⁵. 608^e.

9303. 'The Lord shall suddenly come to His temple' (Mal. iii. 1). 'To the temple of the Lord' = to His Human, as He Himself teaches . . . 10528². E. 242⁹. 444⁸.

9714². There were two things by which the Lord as to the Divine Human was represented: the temple, and the altar. Ill. . . But the temple was a representative of the Lord as to His Divine truth, thus as to Heaven; for the Divine truth proceeding from Him makes Heaven; and it is therefore said of the temple, that 'he who shall swear by the temple, will swear by it and by Him who dwelleth in it' . . . E. 391³. 915.

10123². 'The temple of God, and the altar' (Rev. xi. 1) = Heaven and the Church; 'the temple' = the Spiritual Church; and 'the altar,' the Celestial Church.

A. 8. The second state of regeneration rarely exists at this day without temptation (or trial), misfortune, sadness, which cause the things of the body and the world . . . to be quiescent, and as it were to die; thus are the things of the external man separated from those of the internal.

245. The Lord never leads anyone into temptation.

—°. The Lord turns the evil of temptation into good.

268°. (Goods and truths) do not come forth, except when the external man as it were dies, as is wont to be the case in temptations (or trials), misfortunes, diseases . . .

270°. Dead men . . . could not endure any combat or

* The student should bear in mind that the Latin word tentare means, primarily, to try; and thus that tentationes are trials, either natural or spiritual. And so the Greek word peirasmos, which, in the N.T., is translated 'temptation,' (as in the Lord's Prayer), is derived from peira, which means 'a trial,' 'an attempt.' It is perhaps a pity that the English rendering has not always been 'trials,' instead of 'temptations;' for this latter word has come to mean, in English, a mere state of inducement to evil; whereas the real idea conveyed by the Latin word tentationes is, primarily, that of suffering. 'Temptation,' therefore, in the Writings, means a state of suffering which tries a man, and shows what he is. But this is said merely to set the student on his guard. A full idea of what is meant in the Writings by 'temptation' can be obtained only from a careful study of the whole subject.

temptation; for if it came upon them . . . they could not live; and they would thus . . . plunge themselves more deeply into damnation. For this reason it is spared them until they pass into the other life, when they can no longer die from any temptation and misery. They then undergo most grievous things.

[A.] 605. Before this new Church could exist . . . it was necessary for the man of that Church to undergo many temptations, which are described by the elevation, fluctuation, and stay of the ark upon the waters of the Flood.

606. That the Flood, ark, etc. = . . . the temptations which precede, is . . . known to the learned, who compare . . . temptations to the waters of a Flood. 705.

653. When man is being reformed, which is effected by combats and temptations, such evil Spirits are associated with him as excite only his scientific and rational things . . . These Spirits bring forth all his falsities, and endeavour to persuade him that false things are true, and even turn truths into falsities; with whom the man, while he is in temptations, ought to fight; but the Lord, through Angels who are adjoined to the man, fights. After that, by the combats, the falsities have been separated, and as it were dispersed, the man is prepared so as to be able to receive the truths of faith. Ex. . . Such is the case with the reformation or regeneration of the spiritual man. Tr. (See EVIL SPIRIT, here.)

702. His temptations as to intellectual, and as to voluntary things. Tr.

705. Temptations are compared in the Word to 'floods,' or 'inundations.' Ill. 739, Ill.

—³. For temptations are like floods and inundations of waters: there are evil Spirits who inflow with their persuasions and principles of falsity . . . and excite the like things with man. But with the man who is being regenerated there are temptations; with the man who is not being regenerated, there are desolations.

711. Unless man is prepared, that is, instructed in truths and goods, he cannot be regenerated, still less undergo temptations. For the evil Spirits who are then with him, excite his falsities and evils; and unless truths and goods are present . . . he succumbs. Truths and goods are remains . . .

728. 'In yet seven days' = the beginning of temptation. . . It treats, in general, of the temptation of 'Noah.'

— Thus to the man of this Church, the Lord's coming was the beginning of temptation; for, when man is being tempted, he then begins to become new, and to be regenerated. Ill.

729. 'To ram' = temptation. Ex.

730. 'Forty days and nights' = the duration of temptation. Ill.

— As, when man is in temptation, he is in vastation of all things which are his Own and which are corporeal—for (these) must die, and this by means of combats and temptations, before he is reborn . . .

734. It now treats of his temptation, of the first state, and ~~ex~~ of the beginning of temptation . . . It is the first temptation, which is as to his intellectual things; and afterwards his temptation as to voluntary ones; which temptations succeed one another with him who is to be regenerated; for to be tempted as to intellectual things is quite a different thing from being tempted as to voluntary ones. Temptation as to intellectual things is light; but temptation as to voluntary ones is grievous. 735, Ex.

735². Therefore when such come into temptation as to intellectual things . . . they can be only lightly tempted. And this is the first temptation, and scarcely appears as temptation, of which it now treats. But different is the case with those who do not from a simple heart believe the Word . . .

737. 'Noah a son of 600 years' = his first state of temptation.

— In what precedes it has treated of his preparation for temptation, in that he was instructed . . . in intellectual truths, and voluntary goods (which) are remains, and which are not brought out . . . until the man is being regenerated. With those who are being regenerated through temptations, the remains are for the Angels with the man, who take out from them the things by which they defend the man against the evil Spirits who are exciting the false things with him . . .

739. 'A flood of waters' = the beginning of temptation; for it here treats of temptation as to intellectual things, which temptation precedes, and is light . . . For 'waters' = the spiritual things of man . . .

—³. Here (Is.xxviii.2) the degrees of temptation are described.

741. Temptations are nothing else than combats of the evil Spirits with the Angels who are with a man. (Fully quoted under EVIL SPIRIT.)

751. As it here treats of the temptation of the man of the new Church called 'Noah,' and to few, if any, is it known how the case is with temptations, because few at this day undergo such temptations, and they who do undergo them know no otherwise than that it is something inherently in themselves which thus suffers, the subject shall be briefly explained. Evil Spirits then excite the falsities and evils of the man, and this from his memory, all that he has thought and done from infancy, which they do so skilfully and maliciously that it cannot be described; but the Angels who are with him bring out his goods and truths, and thus defend him. This combat is what is felt and perceived with the man, and causes the sting and torment of conscience.

—². There are temptations of two kinds: one as to intellectual things, the other as to voluntary ones. When a man is being tempted as to intellectual things, the evil Spirits excite only the evil deeds that he has done—which are here signified by 'the unclean beasts'—and also indeed his good deeds—which are here signified by 'the clean beasts'—but these they pervert in a thousand ways. At the same time they excite the things he has thought—which are here signified by 'the bird'—and such things too as are signified by 'the things that creep upon the ground.' But this temptation is light, and is perceived solely by the recalling of such things into the memory, and a certain consequent anxiety.

—³. But when man is being tempted as to voluntary things, the things he has thought and done are not so much excited, but evil Genii . . . inflame him with their cupidities and filthy loves, with which he is imbued, and thus combat by means of the man's cupidities themselves, which they do so maliciously and secretly that it could never be believed to be from them. For they pour themselves in a moment into the life of his cupidities, and almost instantly turn and bend an affection of good and truth into one of evil and falsity, so that the man cannot possibly know otherwise than that it is done from himself. . . This temptation is very grievous, and is perceived as an internal pain, and a tormenting fire.

755. 'The 600th year, the 2nd month, and the 17th day' = the second state of temptation . . . which was as to voluntary things. Ex.

—². '17' = both the beginning and the end of temptation. Ex. and Ill.

756. 'All the fountains of the great deep were broken up' = the extreme of temptation as to voluntary things. Ex.

757. 'The cataracts of heaven were opened' = the extreme of temptation as to intellectual things.

— Temptation as to voluntary things, or cupidities, cannot possibly be separated from temptation as to intellectual things: if they were separated, there would not be any temptation, but an inundation such as there is with those who live in the fires of cupidities . . .

760². How far man is removed from heavenly life. Des. For this reason he is regenerated . . . by means of temptations; (and) this is why this temptation is grievous; for it touches, assails, destroys, and changes man's very life.

761. Spiritual temptation with man is a combat of the evil Spirits with the Angels who are with the man, and this combat is commonly felt in his conscience . . . of which combat this is to be known, further, that the Angels continually defend the man, and avert the evils which the evil Spirits try to do to him: they even defend things which are false and evil with the man; for they very well know (that these) come from evil Spirits and Genii. . . Otherwise the man would succumb. Ex.

762. But spiritual temptations are little known at this day. Nor are they permitted so much as formerly, because man is not in the Truth of faith, and would therefore succumb. In place of these temptations there are others, such as misfortunes, sadnesses, and anxieties, which arise from natural and bodily causes, and also sicknesses and diseases of the body, which however in some measure subdue and break his life of pleasures and cupidities, and determine and elevate the thoughts to interior and pious things. But these are not spiritual temptations, which exist solely with those who have received from the Lord a conscience of what is true and good. Conscience itself is the plane of temptations, in which they operate.

763. The end [in view] of the temptation is now treated of.

790. For desolations and temptations are nothing but inundations of the falsities excited by evil Spirits. Sig.

832. The state of the man of the new Church 'Noah' after temptation, even to his regeneration. Tr. S3S.

840. The end of temptation, and the beginning of renovation. Sig. and Ex.

— So long as temptation continues, the man supposes the Lord to be absent. Ex. . . But the Lord is more present then. But when temptation ceases, he receives comfort . . .

841². This is usually the case with man after temptation, in whom things living and dead, or those of the Lord and those proper to man, appear so confused that the man then scarcely knows what is true and good; but the Lord then disposes all things into order. Sig.

847. As the subject here is the first state after temptation (these words) must = a fluctuation between truths and falsities. . . Such as is the temptation, such is the fluctuation after it. When the temptation is celestial, the fluctuation is between good and evil; when the temptation is spiritual, the fluctuation is between truth and falsity; when the temptation is natural, the fluctuation is between the things which are of cupidities and those contrary.

—². There are many temptations: in general they are celestial, spiritual, and natural; which are by no means to be confounded. Celestial temptations are possible only with those who are in love to the Lord; spiritual ones, with those who are in charity towards the neighbour; natural ones are quite distinct from these, and are not temptations, but only anxieties from the fact that their natural loves are being assailed, which anxieties are excited by misfortunes, diseases, and a bad condition of the blood and other fluids of the body. (Thus) it may be known what temptation is, namely, a straitness and anxiety from those things which oppose the loves. With those in whom there is love to the Lord, whatever assails love to the Lord produces an inmost torture: this is celestial temptation. With those in whom there is love towards the neighbour, whatever assails this love occasions torture of conscience: this is spiritual temptation. But with those who are natural, what the most of them call temptations, and the pains they call the stings of conscience, are not temptations; but only anxieties from the fact that their loves are being assailed; as when they foresee and feel themselves deprived of honour, the goods of the world, reputation, pleasures, the bodily life, and the like; but still [these things] are wont to be productive of somewhat of good. Moreover, temptations exist with those also who are in natural charity; thus with all kinds of heretics, Gentiles, and idolaters, from those things which assail the life of their faith, which they hold dear. But these are straitnesses which emulate spiritual temptations.

848. When temptations are over, there is as it were a fluctuation; and if the temptations are spiritual, there is a fluctuation between truth and falsity, as may also be sufficiently evident from this: that temptation is the beginning of regeneration . . . (and) as his former life is destroyed by temptation, he cannot but fluctuate . . .

—^e. Thus is it with everyone who emerges out of spiritual temptation. Des.

933⁴. When corporeal and worldly things begin to be in excess . . . man comes into straitnesses and temptations, until he has been reduced into such a state that the external man becomes compliant to the internal.

986². Therefore as soon as a man does or speaks anything against conscience, he comes into temptation and the stings of conscience, that is, into a kind of infernal torment.

1023^e. Temptations . . . cause the voluntary proprium of the man to be quiescent . . . 1044^e.

1444. It is known that the Lord underwent the most grievous temptations . . . temptations so great that He fought alone . . . against the whole of Hell. No one can undergo temptations unless evil adheres to him: he who has no evil cannot have the least of temptation: evil is what the infernal Spirits excite. 1573⁴, Ill.

1573⁶. No Angel can ever be tempted of the devil. Ex.

1651. Gen. xiv. treats of the Lord's combats of temptations, by (these) 'wars.'

1659³. 'The Wars of Jehovah'=the combats of the Church . . . that is, their temptations, which are nothing but combats or wars with the evils in themselves, and consequently with the diabolical crew who excite the evils . . .

1661². A man does not know what evil is, still less falsity, until he has the full use of his understanding . . . which is the reason why man does not come into temptations before adult age. . . But the Lord [did so] in His childhood.

1663. That the Lord underwent the most grievous temptations . . . is not so well known from the Word; where it is only mentioned that He was in the wilderness forty days, and was tempted by the devil. The temptations He then had are described in a few words; but these few involve them all. Ex. 1690.

1664. 'Wars'=spiritual wars, or temptations. Ex. and Ill.

1668. The beginning of (His) temptations in childhood. Sig. and Ex. 1690.

—^e. With those who have conscience there arises (from this infestation and combat) a dull-mutus-pain; but with those who have perception a sharp one; and the sharper in proportion as the perception is more interior; from which may be evident the quality of the Lord's temptation . . .

1676^e. Unless the Lord had . . . conquered the Hells by temptations admitted into Himself, the human race would have perished . . .

1690. That the Lord's life, from His earliest childhood to the last hour . . . was continual temptation, and continual victory, is evident from many things in the Old Testament. That it did not cease with the temptation in the wilderness, is evident from (the words) 'the devil . . . departed from Him for a season' (Luke iv. 13); and also from the fact that He was tempted even to the death of the cross . . . The last one was when He prayed on the cross for His enemies, and thus for all in the whole world.

—². In the Gospels, none but the last is mentioned, except His temptation in the wilderness. More were not disclosed to the disciples. The things disclosed appear so light . . . as to be scarcely anything; for to speak and answer in that way is no temptation; when yet His temptation was more grievous than can be at all comprehended . . . No one can know what temptation is but he who has been in it. The temptation which is related in Matt. iv. contains the temptations in a summary; namely, that from love towards the whole human race the Lord fought against the loves of self and of the world, with which the Hells were filled.

—³. All temptation is an assault upon the love in which the man is; and the temptation is in the same degree as the love. If the love is not assailed, it is no temptation. To destroy anyone's love is to destroy his very life . . . The Lord's life was love towards the whole human race . . . Against this His life, continual temptations were admitted . . . from earliest childhood to His last hour. (This) love is signified by His 'hungering.' (The account in Matt. iv. further ex.) 1691^e.

—⁶. In brief, the Lord, from His earliest childhood to His last hour . . . was assailed by all the Hells; against which He continually fought, and subjugated and overcame them; and this solely from love towards the whole human race. And, as this love was . . . Divine; and, as is the love, so is the temptation, it may be evident how grievous the combats were . . . 1820².

1691⁵. The Lord's temptations against the Hells are described by (these words of) Jonah when in the belly of the great fish.

— He who is in temptations is in the Hells . . .

1692. What temptations, or the combats of temptations, effect, scarcely anyone can know. They are the means by which evils and falsities are broken up and dispersed, and by which a horror for them is induced; and not only is conscience given, but it is also strengthened, and the man is thus regenerated; which is the reason why they who are being regenerated are let into combats, and undergo temptations; and they who do not undergo them (here), do so in the other life, if they are capable of being regenerated . . . But the Lord alone sustained the most cruel combats of temptations by His own strength . . . For He was surrounded by all the Hells, and continually conquered them.

—². It is the Lord alone also who fights in men who are in the combats of temptations, and who overcomes. Man from his own power can effect nothing at all against evil Spirits; for they are so connected with the Hells that if one were overcome, another would rush in, and so on for ever. They are like the sea . . . So would it be unless the Lord alone sustained the combats of temptations in man.

1695². In the combats of temptations, the evil Spirits are permitted to draw forth all the evil and falsity in the man, and to fight from the man's evil and falsity; but when they have been overcome, they are no longer permitted to do so; for they instantly perceive in the man that what is good and true has been confirmed.

1708. How apparent good, after the combats of temptations, becomes genuine good . . .

1717². He who is in the combats of temptations, and overcomes, acquires more and more a Power over evil Spirits . . . till at last they dare not tempt at all . . .

—³. The external man (cannot) be reduced into correspondence without the combats of temptations; for temptations are the means of dissipating evils and falsities, as also of introducing good and truth, and of reducing the things of the external man into obedience . . . That these things are effected through temptations, no one can know but he who has been regenerated through temptations.

1725². The interior man (in the Lord) when in a state of the combats of temptation, and not as yet so purified by the combats of temptations. Sig.

1737. The conjunction of men with the Lord is effected through temptations . . .

1745³. So long as the Lord was in a state of temptations, He spoke with Jehovah as with another . . .

1787. (These) are words of consolation after temptations. All temptation is attended with some species of despair; otherwise it is not temptation; and therefore, consolation follows. He who is tempted is brought into anxieties, which induce a state of despair about the end. The very combat of temptations is nothing else. He who is sure of victory is not in anxiety, and thus is not in temptation.

—². The Lord, also, as He endured the most direful and cruel temptations of all, could not but be driven into states of despair, which He dispelled and overcame by His own power; as may be evident from His temptation in Gethsemane. Ill.

—³. (Thus) the Lord's temptations were the most terrible of all; and He had anguish from the very inmosts, even to the sweating of blood; and He was then in a state of despair concerning the end and the event; and He also had consolations. Ill.

1793. The Lord is called 'Jehovih' in respect to temptations.

1820. Temptation against the Lord's love. Sig. and Ex.

— . He who is in temptation is in doubt concerning the end; the end is the love, against which the evil Spirits and Genii fight, and thus put the end in doubt; and the more in doubt the more one loves. If the end which is loved were not placed in doubt, and even in despair, there would be no temptation. —², Fully ex. —³. —⁴.

—⁵. From these statements . . . it may be evident what temptations are: that they are, in general, such as the loves are.

1846. 'They shall afflict them' = their grievous temptations. Ill.

—². Their afflictions in the wilderness also = the Lord's temptations.

—³. By His 'bearing our sorrows,' etc. is not meant that the faithful are to undergo no temptations . . . but that by the combats and victories of temptations He has conquered the Hells, and that thus alone, even as to His Human essence, He would endure the temptations [that occur] with the faithful.

—⁵. External and internal temptations. Sig. External ones are persecutions by the world; internal ones are persecutions by the devil.

—^e. Temptations (were represented by) their slavery in Egypt, and afterwards by their forty years affliction in the wilderness.

1865. The consolation after these temptations and horrors. Sig. and Ex.

1875. The idea of temptation rejected from the Lord's Prayer . . . 3605².

—². Temptation and its evil are from man only.

1917. In temptations there are vastations and desolations, and states of despair, and thence of pain and indignation, besides other interior painful emotions; and this with variety and alternation, according to the state of evil and falsity which are excited . . . It is common with diabolic Spirits to induce what is false, and then to accuse.

1923^e. As is the case in temptations, which are nothing but intestine combats, and disputes and contentions about power and command, [between] evils on the one side, and goods on the other.

1926. Every temptation and victory united (the Lord to Jehovah).

1937⁵. In temptations, when man is compelling himself against what is evil and false . . . there is more of freedom than is possible in any state outside of temptations. Ex. 1947.

— . Hence it is that they who do not resist in temptations from freedom, succumb.

1947. And therefore the Lord is more present in temptations.

1902⁵. 'Shaddai' properly means 'the Tempter,' and 'the Benefactor after temptations.'

— . For temptation is a species of vastation.

—⁶. For vastation, temptation, etc. are never of good, but of truth.

2129^e. The Lord is merciful . . . especially to those who have been in spiritual miseries and temptations, which are persecutions by the evil . . .

2272. 'Peradventure forty shall be found there' = those who have been in temptations.

2273. 'I will not do it for forty's sake' does not = that they should be saved on account of temptations; for some undergo temptations who succumb in them . . . Nor is man saved on account of temptations if he places anything of merit in them; for (to do so) is from the love of self, in that he boasts himself of them, and believes he has merited Heaven above others . . .

—². The temptations in which man overcomes are attended with a belief that all others are more worthy than himself, and that he is infernal rather than heavenly; for such things come to him in temptations. When, therefore, after temptations, he comes into thoughts contrary to these, it is an indication that he did not overcome; for the thoughts which he had in temptations are those to which can be bent the thoughts which he has after temptations; and if the latter cannot be bent to the former, he has either succumbed in the temptation, or he again comes into similar ones, and sometimes into more grievous ones, until he is reduced to such sanity that he believes he has merited nothing.

—⁴. All above twenty died in the wilderness, because . . . they represented those who succumb in temptations.

2294^e. The temptation of infants there. Des. H. 343. D. 5668.

2334. The doubting which is wont to attend temptations. Sig. and Ex.

— In all temptation there is a state of doubt-dubitativum—concerning the Lord's presence and mercy, and concerning Salvation, and the like; for they are in interior anxiety, even to despair; in which they are for the most part kept, to the end that they may be at length confirmed in this: that all things are of the Lord's mercy; that they are saved by Him alone; and that with themselves there is nothing but evil; concerning which things they are confirmed by the combats in which they overcome. After the temptation, there remain from it many states of truth and good, to which their thoughts may afterwards be bent by the Lord . . .

—². Before man comes into this state, he is to be reformed, which is done by a certain kind of temptation; but they who are in external worship undergo only a light temptation. Sig.

2338. 'Lot urged (the Angels) exceedingly' = the state of temptation when one overcomes.

— The evil Spirits who . . . induce the temptation, strongly inspire a denial (of the Lord's presence and mercy, etc.); but the good Spirits and Angels . . . dispel this . . . and hold the man in continual hope, and at length confirm the affirmative. Hence the man who is in temptation hangs between the negative and the affirmative. He who succumbs remains in doubt and falls into the negative; whereas he who overcomes is indeed in doubt; but still, if he suffers himself to be raised up by hope, stands fast in the affirmative. As, in this combat, the man seems to urge the Lord . . . to be present, to be merciful, to give help, and to deliver from damnation; here, where the temptation of those who are becoming men of the Church is treated of, these things are described by the Angels' saying, at first, 'Nay,' and that they 'would tarry all night in the street;' and by Lot's then 'urging them exceedingly,' so that they . . . 'came into his house.'

2380⁴. The reason some think they are not in good when they are, is that when they reflect upon good as being with them, it is immediately insinuated by the Angels . . . that they are not in good, lest they should attribute the good to themselves . . . If their thought were not thus guarded, they would fall into temptations.

—⁵. And the reason some think they are in good when they are not, is that when they reflect upon it, it is immediately insinuated by evil Genii and Spirits . . . that they are in good . . . Wonderful to say, if they should think otherwise, they would fall into temptations, in which they would succumb.

2463². 'Cave' = obscure good, such as there is in temptations.

2625^e. Man is then first regenerated, for the most part through temptations in which he overcomes.

2689³. Those become spiritual men . . . who overcome in temptations.

— If these should be brought into temptations, they would wholly succumb; and they are therefore exempted from them.

2714⁴. The Lord sustained temptations from His Human Divine. Sig.

2764. Gen. xxii. treats of the Lord's most grievous and inmost temptations, through which He united the Human essence to the Divine. 2765. 2776. 2795, Ex.

2767². Here the Lord's temptation as to the Rational ('Isaac') is treated of; for through temptations the Lord made His Human Divine, thus His Rational . . . by chastising and expelling all in the Rational that was merely human.

2768. 'God tempted Abraham' (ver. 1) = the Lord's most grievous and inmost temptations.

— That God 'tempted' is according to the sense of the letter, in which 'temptations' etc. are attributed to God; but it is according to the internal sense that God tempts no one; but in the time of temptations is continually delivering from them, as far as possible . . .

and is continually looking to the good into which He is leading him who is in temptations; for God never takes part in temptations in any other way . . . It is the evil within man which causes, and also leads into, temptation . . .

2769. 'God' is here named because temptation is treated of. . . For all temptation and damnation is from truth . . .

2775. 'Get thee to the land of Moriah' = the place and state of temptation. Ex.

— . Jerusalem, where the Lord endured the extremity — ultimum — of temptation, was in the same land.

2776². The passion of the cross was the last extremity of the Lord's temptation, through which He fully united the Human to the Divine, and the Divine to the Human . . . which union could not be effected in any other way than through the most grievous combats of temptations and victories . . .

2777. As it was the Divine love from which the Lord fought and overcame in temptations . . . it is here said that Abraham should offer up Isaac . . . 'upon one of the mountains.'

2786. The Lord's first preparation for the state (when He underwent the most grievous and inmost temptations). Sig. and Ex. 2811.

2813. 'He bound Isaac his son' = the state of the Divine Rational thus about to undergo as to truth the last degrees of temptation. Ex. 2817.

— . The Lord's Divine Rational as to good could not . . . undergo temptations; for no Genius or Spirit inducing temptations can come near good Divine . . . But truth Divine bound was what could be tempted; for there are fallacies, and still more falsities, which break in upon and thus tempt it. Ex. . . It was truth Divine which was no longer acknowledged when the Lord came into the world; and therefore it was that from which the Lord underwent and endured temptations. Truth Divine in the Lord is what is called 'the Son of Man,' (which) the Lord said was to suffer. Ill.

—². That 'the Son of God,' or the Lord as to good in His Human Divine, could not be tempted, is evident from His answer to the tempter . . . 'Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.'

2816. Temptation even to the utmost of power. Sig. and Ex.

— . It is according to the internal sense, that the Lord's Divine led His Human into the most grievous temptations . . . It was in this way: the Lord admitted temptations into Himself in order that He might expel thence all that was merely human; and this until nothing but what was Divine remained. Ill.

2818. 'To slay his son' = . . . The Lord's most grievous and inmost temptations, the last of which was that of the cross, in which it is evident that what was merely human died.

—^c. For no one is tempted except through that to which he is inclined.

2819. As to the Lord's temptations in general, they were exterior and interior, and the more interior, the more grievous. The inmost ones are described in Matt. xxvi. 37-39, 42, 44; xxvii. 46; Mark xiv. 33-36; xv. 34; Luke xxii. 42-44.

— . Refs. to passages on temptations.

2821. 'The Angel of Jehovah called unto him out of Heaven' = consolation from the Divine Itself. . . So when the Lord sustained the most grievous temptation in Gethsemane, an Angel . . . was seen by Him strengthening Him (Luke xxii. 43).

2822. A perception of consolation in the Divine good of the Rational after temptation. Sig. and Ex.

—². In this verse the Lord's first state after temptation is treated of, which was a state of consolation. . . All consolation after temptation is insinuated into good; for from good is all joy; and from good it passes into truth. Sig.

2824. That He should admit the temptation no further into the truth Divine which belonged to the Rational. Sig. and Ex.

2827. The union of the Human with the Divine by the utmost of temptation. Sig. and Ex. 2854.

2857. For after temptations the Rational was always elevated; and this takes place also with man. Sig. and Ex.

2921². Full union was effected after the last temptation, which was that of the cross . . .

2967². The reducing of the external man to correspondence is effected chiefly by temptations, and by many kinds of vastation.

3268². That they will not sustain combats of temptations, because they are no longer in good. Sig.

3281. That the Lord made Divine His Rational as to truth through the combats of temptations; thus by His own power. Sig.

3318. Good cannot be conjoined with truth in the natural man without combats, or, what is the same, without temptations. 3601.

—³. This softening (of the vessels in man) is effected by no other means than temptations; for temptations take away those things which are of the love of self, and which are of contempt for others . . . of self-glory, and of hatred and revenge . . .

3322². That the Lord . . . through the combats of temptations conjoined truths in the Natural with good. Sig.

3381. The union of the Divine essence with the human essence through temptations. Sig. and Ex.

[A.] 3469. A state of temptation as to the natural good of truth. Sig. and Ex.

3470³. In order that natural good may be reduced to a state of compliance . . . it is wearied out by states of vastation and temptation, until its concupiscences languish . . .

3488⁷. 'He that endureth to the end'=who does not suffer himself to be seduced, thus who does not succumb in temptations.

3614⁴. 'I have trodden the wine-press alone,' treats of the Lord's victories in temptations.

3652⁶. If (a man who is in the good of charity) should think and act from the understanding . . . he would fall into temptations in which he would succumb. Sig.

3667. The temptations of that truth and good through which is conjunction. Sig. and Ex.

3696². In the beginning (of regeneration) man is in a state of tranquillity; but as he passes into new life, he passes . . . into an untranquil state; for the evils and falsities which he had before imbued emerge . . . and disturb him, and this at last to such a degree that he is in temptations and vexations from the diabolical crew, who are continually striving to destroy the state of his new life. But still, inmosty, he has a state of peace, (otherwise) he would not combat. (Continued under COMBAT.)

3812⁷. It treats here (Ps.xxii.14, 17, 18) of the Lord's temptations as to Divine truths, which were His proprium . . . and as to Divine good, which was His proprium.

— . Recreation through truths after temptations. Sig.

3864. 'My affliction'=a state of arriving at good; for 'affliction'=temptation (which) is a means of arriving at good, (thus) of coming from truth.

—². In the supreme sense, these words=Own power, because the Lord . . . sustained all temptations by His Own power . . . differently from every man, who never sustains any spiritual temptation . . . from his own power; but the Lord sustains and overcomes in him.

—³. In the external sense (these words)=resistance by the natural man, for all temptation is nothing else; for in spiritual temptations . . . there is dispute about . . . the supremacy of the . . . spiritual and the natural man . . . For when a man is in temptations, his internal man is ruled by the Lord through Angels, and his external man by infernal Spirits; and the combat between them is what is perceived by the man as temptation. When the man is such in faith and love that he can be regenerated, he will overcome in temptations; but when he is such that he cannot be regenerated, he succumbs in temptations.

3928. 'Naphtali'=the quality of the temptation in which there is victory.

— . For temptation is the means of the conjunction of the internal man with the external; since they are at variance with each other, but are reduced to agreement and correspondence by temptations. Ex.

—². Temptation is the second means (of regeneration), and is signified by 'Naphtali'; for this means follows the first, inasmuch as they who do not affirm and acknowledge the good and truth of faith and charity, cannot come into any combat of temptation; because there is nothing within which offers resistance to the evil and falsity to which natural delight persuades.

—³. In other places, 'Naphtali'=man's state after temptations. Ill. and Des.

— . For in temptations the combat is concerning freedom.

4031⁴. It sometimes appears as if man were compelled to good, as in temptations and spiritual combats; but he has then a stronger freedom than at other times. Refs.

4175. 'In the day the heat consumed me, and in the night the cold, and my sleep has been chased from mine eyes'=temptations. Ex. . . For these are such things as are experienced in temptations. Des.

4182. 'God hath seen my misery, and the labour of my hands=volarum'= . . . temptations. And as the Lord by temptations and victories united the Divine to the Human . . . and that by His own power, the above words=this also.

4232. (Gen.xxxii.) treats, in verses 24 to 32, of the wrestlings of temptations which are then to be sustained.

4248. Temptations and their duration. Sig.

—². When the state with a man being regenerated is being inverted, that is, when good is taking the first place, then come temptations. Before this, man cannot undergo them, because he is not as yet in the Knowledges by which to defend himself, and to which he may have recourse for taking consolation. For this reason also no one undergoes temptations until he has arrived at adult age. Temptations are what unite truths to good.

4249. 'Jacob feared exceedingly, and was distressed'=the state when being changed . . . for fear and distress are the first of temptations.

— . When good is taking the first place, and is subordinating truths to itself, which is being done when man undergoes spiritual temptations, the good which then inflows from within has with it very many truths which have been stored up in the interior man . . . whence it becomes apparent what things in the Natural are in agreement, and what are discordant, from which come the fear and distress that precede spiritual temptation. For spiritual temptation acts into the conscience, which is of the interior man, and therefore the man does not know, when he enters into this temptation, from what source he has the fear and distress; but the Angels who are with him know this well. For the temptation is from this: that the Angels are holding the man in goods and truths, and evil Spirits are holding him in evils and falsities. Ex. 4251⁶. 4256, Ex.

—². (Thus) the combat of the evil Spirits with the Angels from the things which are in the man . . . appears under the aspect of fear and distress, and of temptation. . . This it has been granted me to know from the experience of many years. —⁶.

4256². This is why those to be regenerated, after the fear and distress, come also into temptations; for temptations are the Divine means for removing these falsities. This is the most secret cause that man, when being regenerated, undergoes spiritual temptations. But this cause is in no way apparent to man, because it is above the sphere of his apprehension.

—². The reason the first of the combat is as to truth . . . is that this is what he principally loves. . . But after he loves good more than truth, he is tempted as to good.

—¹. But few know what temptation is; because at this day few undergo any temptation, inasmuch as no others can be tempted than those who are in the good of faith, that is, in charity towards the neighbour. If those not in this charity should be tempted, they would succumb at once; and they who succumb come into confirmation of evil and persuasion of falsity. . . This is why few at this day are admitted into any spiritual temptation; but only into some natural anxieties, in order that they may thereby be withdrawn from the loves of self and of the world, into which they would otherwise rush without restraint.

4276. That He overcame in temptations. Sig.

4283. That the temptation ceased when the conjunction was at hand. Sig. and Ex.

4286². 'Israel,' in the Original, means 'one who strives with God as a prince,' by which is signified . . . that He overcame in the combats of temptations . . . and temptations, and victories in temptations, are what make man spiritual . . . which is involved in this name. 4287². —³.

4287⁴. 'To strive with God and with men' = to be tempted as to truths and goods. Ex.

4295². The Lord in temptations fought at last with the Angels themselves, nay, with the whole angelic Heaven. Ex. and Sig.

—³. Hence, in order that the Lord might reduce the universal Heaven into heavenly order, He admitted into Himself temptations from the Angels. . . These temptations are the inmost of all; for they act only upon the ends, and with such subtlety as not at all to be observed. But in so far as they are not in proprium . . . they cannot tempt.

4298. 'Peniel' = a state of temptations. . . For 'Peniel' means 'the face of God;' and to see the face of God is to sustain the most grievous temptations.

4299. 'For I have seen God face to face, and my soul is delivered' = that He sustained the most grievous temptations, as if they were from the Divine. Ex.

—¹. The proximate causes of temptations are the evils and falsities in man, which bring him into temptations. . . But still no one can be tempted—that is, undergo any spiritual temptation—unless he has conscience; for spiritual temptation is nothing else than torment of conscience; and consequently none can be tempted but those who are in celestial and spiritual good; for these have conscience. . . Conscience is a new will and understanding. . . and is thus the Lord's presence in man. . . and if the Lord's presence is nearer than in proportion as man is in the affection of truth and good, the man comes into temptation. The reason is, that the evils and falsities in the man, tempered by the goods and truths in him, cannot sustain a nearer presence. Ex. and Ill.

—³. Temptations and torments appear as if from the Divine, because . . . they come forth through the Lord's Divine presence; but still they are not from the Divine. . . but from the evils and falsities which are in him who is tempted or tormented. Ex.

4307. For temptation is never brought by good Spirits, but by evil ones; for temptation is an excitation of the evil and falsity in man. Refs.

—¹. The posterity of Jacob succumbed in every temptation, both in the wilderness and afterwards. (Yet these temptations were external. 4317⁶.)

—². They also believed that Jehovah led into temptations. . . for which reason it was so expressed in the Word. . .

4317⁶. As to spiritual things they could not be tempted, because they knew no internal truths, and had no internal goods; and no one can be tempted except as to what he knows, and what he has. Temptations are the veriest means of regeneration.

4341. '400' = the state and duration of temptation.

—³. The good itself which is to be conjoined with truth is not tempted, but the truth. And the truth is not tempted by the good; but by falsities and evils; and by the fallacies and illusions also, and the affection of them, which adhere to truths in the Natural. For when good inflows. . . the ideas of the natural man . . . cannot endure its approach, for they are in disagreement with it; and hence comes anxiety in the Natural, and temptation. These are the things (here) described.

4393². But so long as they are in exterior truths, and especially when they are coming from exterior into interior ones. . . there are combats of temptations. Tr.

4572. A state of temptation passed, and now Divine consolation. Sig. and Ex.

—². It is to be known, in general, that all conjunction of good with truth is effected through temptations. The reason is that evils and falsities offer resistance. . . This combat takes place between the Spirits who are with the man . . . and is perceived by the man as a temptation within himself. When, therefore, the (evil) Spirits are conquered by the (good ones) . . . the latter have joy, (which) is perceived by the man as consolation . . .

[A.] 4586. 'Rachel . . . suffered hard things in her bringing forth'=the temptations of interior truth. Ex.

4590. 'She was about to die'= . . . the last of temptation, which is when the old man dies, and the new receives life.

4599⁵. The temptations which those undergo who are of the Church . . . are signified by their 'cross which they must bear;' and that they do not overcome by themselves . . . by 'whosoever . . . forsaketh not all that he hath, cannot be My disciple.'

4843⁴. As, in temptations, there is a combat of evil against truth, and of falsity against good—spiritual temptations being nothing else than vastations of the falsity and evil in a man—therefore spiritual temptations or combats are described by the Lord in almost the same words (concerning a man's foes being those of his own household, Matt.x.34-36) as those in Micah vii.3-6. These words, as quoted from the prophet,=the vastation of the Church; but in Matthew, they=the temptations of those who are of the Church; because temptations are nothing else than vastations, or removals, of falsity and evil; for which reason also both temptations and vastations are signified and described by inundations of water, and by floods. . . That temptations are described, is evident from the Lord's saying that He 'came not to send peace on earth, but a sword.' Further ex.

—^c. Temptations are meant by 'persecutions.'

4961. Temptation, which is the means of conjunction, is described (in Gen.xxxix.).

5035. 'Joseph's lord took him'=temptation from the Natural. . . For Joseph's being put in prison=the temptation of spiritual good in the Natural.

—Temptations are of two kinds, namely, as to truths, and as to goods; (the former) are effected by Spirits; (the latter) by Genii. Ex. . . In what follows it treats of the temptations which are effected by evil Spirits; thus which are effected as to false-speaking against good. These temptations are milder than those effected by evil Genii; and also occur first. 5036,Sig. and Ex.

5036. Scarcely anyone in the Christian world at this day knows whence temptations come. He who undergoes them believes that they are feelings of anguish which creep in from the evils which are within man, and which first make him uneasy, then anxious, and finally torture him; but he is quite unaware that they are effected through the evil Spirits with him.

—². As to temptations, they take place when man is in the act of regeneration; for no one can be regenerated unless he undergoes temptations; and they then arise through the evil Spirits who are around him. For the man is then let into the state of the evil in which he is, that is, into that very thing which is his proprium; and, when he comes into this state, evil or infernal Spirits encompass him; and, when they perceive that he is interiorly protected by Angels, they excite the false things which he has thought and the evil things which he has done; but the Angels defend him from within. It is this combat which is perceived in man as temptation; but so obscurely that he scarcely knows otherwise than that it is merely an anxiety . . . and yet the battle is about the man and his salvation, and it is fought from the man. (Continued under COMBAT.)

—³. Temptations, as said, come forth especially at the time when man is becoming spiritual; for he then spiritually apprehends the truths of doctrine. The man is often unaware that he does so; but the Angels with him see the spiritual things . . . and therefore when a man has come into such a state, he can be defended by the Angels when in temptation and being assailed by evil Spirits.

—⁴. When, therefore, ultimate truth has been withdrawn, and the man has nothing by which to defend himself . . . he then comes into temptations, and is accused by evil Spirits . . . especially of false-speaking against what is good. Examps. . . Such is the source of spiritual anxieties, and of the torments called those of conscience . . .

5037. 'To be put in prison, and to be kept bound there'=to be let into temptations as to false-speaking against what is good. Ex.

—They who are in the Lower Earth are let into temptations; for principles of falsity, and the derivative delights of life, cannot be cast out except by temptations. Ill.

5038. For temptation is the vastation of what is false, and at the same time the confirmation of what is true.

5044. 'The prince of the prison'=truth governing in a state of temptations. . . (For) with all who are in temptations, there inflows truth from the Lord, which rules and governs the thoughts, and raises them up whenever they fall into doubts, and also into despairs. This governing truth is that truth and such truth as they have learned from the Word, or from doctrine, and have confirmed in themselves. . . 5045.

—². It is not this truth itself, but the affection of it, by which the Lord governs those who are in temptations. . . As the case is thus with the man who is in temptations, therefore no one is admitted into any spiritual temptation until he reaches adult age, and has thus become imbued with some truth by which he can be governed; otherwise he succumbs, and then his last state is worse than the first.

5072. In (Gen.xl.) the subject is continued concerning a state of temptations by which the very corporeals might be reduced into correspondence.

5086. In the foregoing chapter, it treated of the state of temptations of the Celestial of the Spiritual in the Natural as to those things which were of the interior Natural; but here, as to those which are of the exterior Natural.

5120¹². Hence by 'cup' is signified temptation, because this takes place when falsity fights against truth, and, derivatively, evil against good. Ill.

—'. 'Baptism' (therefore)=temptation.

5182². This cleansing (of recent Spirits) is effected by vexations, which are nothing but temptations of various kinds.

5236. That by reason of temptation the guiltlessness of the Church was rejected. Sig. and Ex.

5246. 'They hastened him out of the pit'=the hasty rejection of such things as arise from a state of temptation.

—². A state of temptation, relatively to the state after it, is like the state of a pit, or prison: squalid and unclean. For, when a man is being tempted, unclean Spirits are near him, and encompass him, and excite the evils and falsities in him, and likewise detain him in them, and exaggerate them even to despair. This is why the man is then in what is unclean and squalid. (Des. as seen in the other life.)

—³. But when the state of temptation ceases, that mist is dissipated, and there is a serenity. The reason is that the falsities and evils in the man are opened by temptations, and are removed: when they are opened, that mistiness appears; and when they are removed, the serenity appears. The change of this state is signified by Joseph's polling himself, and changing his garments.

—⁴. A state of temptation may also be compared to the state in which a man is when among robbers. Des. If he succumbs in the temptation, he remains in that state; but if he overcomes in the temptation, he... comes into a cheerful and serene state. It is infernal Spirits and Genii who, like robbers, then surround and assail, and induce the temptations.

5248². The garments which Joseph changed were those of the prison, by which are signified the fallacies and falsities which are excited by the evil Genii and Spirits in a state of temptations...

5280³. The truths of faith having been introduced by these (evil) loves, the man cannot be regenerated until these loves have been removed; and, in order that they may be removed, he is let into a state of temptation, which is done in this way: these loves are excited by the infernal crew, for that crew want to live in them, but the affections of truth and good which have been insinuated from infancy... are then excited by the Angels... Hence there is a combat between the evil Spirits and the Angels, which is felt in the man as temptation. And, as the combat is then about truths and goods, the truths which had been previously insinuated are as it were exterminated by the falsities injected by the evil Spirits, so that they do not appear; and then, in proportion as the man suffers himself to be regenerated, the light of truth from good is insinuated by the Lord into the Natural by an internal way, into which light the truths are sent back in order... Few are now admitted into this state.

—⁴. All do indeed begin to be reformed by instruction... but as soon as they grow up, they suffer themselves to be carried away by the world, and thus take part with infernal Spirits, by whom they are gradually estranged from Heaven, so that they scarcely believe that there is a Heaven, and consequently they cannot be let into any spiritual temptation; for they would at once succumb...

—^e. In this verse is described the last state of temptation, which is one of despair.

5291^e. Unless such things were stored up in man by the Lord, there would be nothing to elevate him in a state of temptation and vastation. 5342, Sig.

5352. 'God hath made me forget all my labour'=the removal, after temptations, ... of the evils which occasioned grief.

5353^e. In like manner in temptations, which are spiritual griefs, and thence interior miseries, and despairs: by these, chiefly, are evils removed; (and then) celestial good inflows...

5356. 'In the land of my affliction'=in the Natural where he suffered temptations; (and where) truth from good was multiplied; for (this) is especially effected by means of temptations.

—². Temptations also give the quality of the apprehension of good and truth, by the opposites which the evil Spirits then infuse.

—³. Temptations also confirm goods and truths; for the man then fights against evils and falsities, and by overcoming comes into a stronger affirmative.

—^e. Through temptations, also, evils and falsities are subdued, so that they no longer attempt to rise up: thus evils with falsities are rejected to the sides...

5386^e. When such (over conscientious Spirits) are present, they induce a sensible anxiety in that part of the abdomen which is immediately below the diaphragm. They are present with man also in temptations. (And inject anxieties which are sometimes unbearable. 5724².)

5725^e. They who are in temptations are in such an inundation. Des. D.4155^e.

5729. It next treats (in Gen.xliv.) of the temptation of the external natural man, and this until they submitted themselves of their own accord to the Internal Celestial. The temptation is described by their being accused, and by their returning in despair to Joseph... The conjunction of the external man with the internal, is not effected without temptation, and spontaneous submission.

5773². When (instead of being led through truth to good, regenerating men begin to be led from good to truth) there is mourning; for they are then let into temptation, whereby the things of the proprium are weakened, and good is insinuated; and, with good, a new will; and, with this, a new freedom; thus a new proprium. Sig.

—^e. For, when temptation is past, the Lord shines in with comfort. Sig.

6024⁶. Temptations in which are victories, and doctrinals about them. Sig.

6097. 'Few and evil have been the days of the years of my life'=that the state of the life of the Natural is full of temptations.

—³. All temptations appear evil, because they are anxieties and interior pains (or griefs), and as it were damnations; for the man is then let into the state of his evils, consequently among evil Spirits, who accuse, and thus torture the conscience. But still the Angels defend, that is, the Lord through the Angels, Who keeps him in hope and trust, which are the forces of combat from within, whereby he resists.

[A. 6097]. The Natural is especially let into temptations when it is receiving the Spiritual, because evils of life and falsities of doctrine reside there.

6144. There are many reasons why despair is the last of desolation and temptation. Enum.

—². By desolations and temptations, also, states contrary to heavenly life are perceived, and from this there is implanted a sense and perception of the happiness of heavenly life . . . In order, therefore, that full relations may be had, desolations and temptations are brought to their height, that is, to despair.

6202². Such is the influx (from Spirits who speak together about things which are adverse to a man) into those who are in spiritual temptation; but in this case not only do such Spirits inflow in general, but infernal Spirits, in particular also, excite the evils which the man has done, and pervert and put a wrong interpretation upon the goods, and the Angels then fight with these. A man who is being regenerated comes into this state by his being let into his proprium; and this happens when he immerses himself too much in worldly and corporeal things; and when he is to be elevated to spiritual ones.

6412. 'Naphthali' (Gen. xlix.) = the state after temptations.

6413. Deliverance from a state of temptations is compared to 'a hind let loose.' Ex. and Ill.

6505. A state of preparation by temptations. Sig. and Ex.

6539. Thus the things previously loved by man must be destroyed, and therefore also he must undergo temptations.

6574². The Lord permits the infernals in the other life to lead the good into temptation, consequently to pour in falsities and evils . . . but the Lord Himself immediately, and mediately through the Angels, is present with those who are in temptation, and resists, by refuting the falsities of the infernal Spirits, and by dissipating their evil; whence come refreshment, hope, and victory. Sig.

6611. The extension of the sphere into (the more interior heavenly Societies) is granted by the Lord to those who are being regenerated especially by temptations, in which resistance is made to evils and falsities; for the Lord then fights against evils and falsities through the Angels, and thus the man is introduced into Societies of those Angels who are more interior; and into whatever Societies he has once been introduced, there he remains; and also receives thence a more extended and elevated faculty of perceiving.

6657². Therefore, when the man of the Church comes into temptation, which takes place when he is let into his evil, there is a combat around him between Spirits from Hell and Angels from Heaven, which combat lasts so long as the man is kept in his evil. (Continued under EVIL SPIRIT.)

6658. The Church is not fully established with a man until he has fought against evil and falsities, thus until after he has sustained temptations. He then becomes truly a Church.

6677. When the infernals try to assault goods . . .

6726. 'The waters compassed me about even to the soul . . .' (Jonah ii. 5). In this prophetic is described a state of temptations: these 'waters' = falsities; 'the deep' = the evil of falsity; 'the weeds wrapped about the head' = that false scientifics beset truth and good. Such is the case in a state of desolations.

6762^e. When infernal Spirits who are in falsities have been in the World of Spirits, and have there endeavoured to destroy truths with those who are in temptation, they are relegated to the Hells, whence they can no more come out. Sig.

6828. After those in the truth of simple good had undergone temptations. Sig. and Ex.

— For he who is in temptation is in vastation and desolation, because the falsity and evil which are in him emerge, and obscure and almost take away the influx of truth and good from the Lord; nor does the truth which inflows appear to him to have such life that it can dispel the falsities and evils. Evil Spirits are also then present who inject grief and pain, and despair about salvation.

6829. 'He came to the Mount of God' = the good of the Divine love appearing after they had undergone temptations. . . The case herein is this. When man is in temptation, he is beset on all sides by falsities and evils, which impede the influx of light from the Divine . . . and the man is as it were in darkness. . . But when the man emerges from the temptation, light appears with its spiritual heat, that is, truth with its good. Hence he has gladness after anxiety. This is the morning which succeeds night in the other life. The reason good is then perceived, and truth appears, is that after temptation truth and good penetrate towards the interiors, and are inrooted. For when man is in temptation, he is as it were in hunger for good and thirst for truth; and therefore when he emerges from it, he draws good in as a hungry man does food, and receives truth as a thirsty man does drink; and besides, when light from the Divine appears, falsities and evils are removed, on the removal of which a passage is made for truth and good to penetrate more interiorly. These are the reasons why, after temptations, there appears the good of love with its light from the Lord. That after the obscurity and anxiety of temptations there appears what is lucid and glad, being a common thing in the other life, is known to all there.

6854. The temptations of the Spiritual Church are here treated of. 7067.

6997⁴. 'Inundation of anger' = temptation in which evils cause torment.

7193. The Lord's temptations as to the human; and the temptations of the faithful; and consolations afterwards. Sig. and Ex.

—². The Lord could be tempted as to the human before it was made Divine; but not as to the Divine Human . . . The infernals who tempt cannot approach even the celestial Angels . . .

—³. A state of temptations, of infestations, and also of desolations, is evening and night there . . .

7194. That those of the Spiritual Church in a state of temptations did not think about the Divine things of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

7284. 'Eighty'=states of temptation.

7313. For they are in obscurity when they emerge from a state of infestations and temptations. Ex.

7474³. Infestations are not temptations; for temptations take place with anguish of conscience; for they who are in a state of temptations are kept in a state of damnation, which causes them anguish and pain.

7854. 'Upon bitters'=by means of the undelightful things of temptations . . . For the good of innocence, which is represented by the paschal lamb, cannot be appropriated to anyone except through temptations . . .

—^e. Those who have succumbed in temptations. Sig.

7861. 'To burn with fire'=to undergo temptations . . . because when man is let into temptations, he is let into his cupidities.

7906³. See FERMENT, here.

8039. The Spiritual Church, in the Lower Earth . . . were first led safely through the midst of condemnation; and then underwent temptations, the Lord being constantly present. Tr. 8099, Ex. 8100.

8098. 'But God led the people by the way of the wilderness'=that, of the Divine auspices, they were brought to confirm the truths and goods of faith through temptations. Ex.

8104. The first state of [their] temptations. Sig. and Ex. 8124, Tr. 8130. 8159.

8131. The derivative influx of temptation. Sig. and Ex.

—². So is it with Spirits, when they undergo temptations. (Ex. under COMBAT, here.)

— . Therefore when [men or Spirits] are to undergo temptations, the interiors, that is, the truths and goods, in them, are disposed by the Lord into such a state, that through immediate influx from Himself, and mediate through Heaven, the falsities and evils which are from the Hells can be resisted; and thus he who is in temptation can be defended.

—^e. When man is being tempted, he is near Hell, especially near this Hell ('Suph'); for in it are those who have been in the knowledge of truth, but in a life of evil, and thus in falsities from evil. From the Hells, through Spirits, inflow those things which induce anxiety on man in temptations.

8155. For all temptation comes forth through an influx from the Hells. 8159.

—². The Spiritual Church could not undergo temptations until after the Lord had glorified His Human. Ex.

— . 'A refiner's fire'=temptation.

—³. In temptations, the Hells fight against man, and the Lord for him. To every falsity which the Hells inject, there is an answer from the Divine; the falsities . . . inflow into the external man, but the answer . . . into the internal; the latter does not come so fully to the man's perception . . . neither does it move the singulars of thought, but its generals, and so that it comes to perception scarcely otherwise than as hope, and the consequent consolation, in which, however, there are innumerable things of which the man is unaware, and which are such as accord with his affection or love . . .

—⁴. (Thus) by the life of the sons of Israel in the wilderness, are described, in their series, the temptations undergone by those of the Lord's Spiritual Church, and from which they were delivered. The reason they underwent temptations, was that they might be further prepared for Heaven; for through temptations, as the only means, goods and truths are confirmed and conjoined; and through temptations charity becomes the charity of faith, and faith becomes the faith of charity.

— . That those of the Church must undergo temptations. Ill. (by a number of passages which speak of 'the cross' which men must bear).

—⁵. In temptations it is not the man who fights, but the Lord alone for the man, although this appears as if done by the man; and, when the Lord fights for the man, the man overcomes in all things.

—^e. At this day few are admitted into temptations, because they are not in the life of faith, and therefore not in a conscience of truth; and he who is not in a conscience of truth from the good of life succumbs . . .

8162. 'They feared exceedingly'=a horrible dread; (for) 'to fear' is here predicated of temptation; (and) when temptation assails, the conscience, and thus the internal man, is smitten by falsities and evils . . . Hence comes horror . . .

8164. The height of temptation, and despair. Sig. and Ex.

— . As few (now) undergo temptations . . . I may say something further about them. There are spiritual temptations, and natural temptations. Spiritual temptations are of the internal man; but natural ones are of the external. Spiritual temptations sometimes come forth without natural ones, and sometimes with them. Natural temptations are when a man is suffering as to the body, honours, wealth; in a word, as to the natural life; as happens in diseases, misfortunes, persecutions, unjust punishments, and the like. The anxieties which then come forth are what are meant by natural temptations. But these temptations do nothing whatever to the man's spiritual life, and they cannot be called temptations, but sufferings—dolores, for they arise from the injury done to the natural life, which is that of the love of self and of the world. The wicked are sometimes in these sufferings, and they suffer the more in proportion as they love themselves and the world the more . . .

[A. 8164]². But spiritual temptations are of the internal man, and they assail its spiritual life. The anxieties then felt are not on account of any loss of natural life; but on account of the loss of faith and charity, and consequently of salvation. These temptations are frequently induced through natural temptations; for when a man is in these, namely, in disease, pain and grief, the loss of wealth, or of honour, and the like—if, then, thought comes about the Lord's aid, His Providence, the state of the evil in that they glory and exult when the good suffer . . . then is spiritual temptation conjoined with natural temptation. Such was the last temptation of the Lord in Gethsemane, and when He suffered the cross, which was the most frightful of all.

—^e. There is also a third kind (of temptation), namely, melancholy anxiety, which for the most part originates from an infirm state of the body or lower mind. In this anxiety, there may be, or there may not be, something of spiritual temptation.

8165. 'To die in the wilderness'=to succumb in temptation, and thence to be condemned.

—². But such despairing thought is not injurious, and is not attended to by the Angels; for every man has only a limited power; and, when temptation reaches the last limit of his power, he sustains it no further, but sinks. But then he is elevated by the Lord, and is thus delivered from despair; and is for the most part then brought into a clear state of hope and of consequent consolation, and also into happiness.

—^e. They who succumb in temptations, come into a state of condemnation; for temptations are for the sake of the end that truths and goods . . . may be confirmed and conjoined; and this end is attained when the man overcomes in temptations; but when he succumbs, then truths and goods are rejected, and falsities and evils are confirmed . . .

8168. See FORCE, here.

8169. That condemnation through the violence of falsity in a state of infestations, is preferable to condemnation through succumbing in a state of temptations. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. For to succumb in temptations is to be confirmed in falsities and evils against the truths and goods of faith; whereas to succumb in a state of infestations, is to be confirmed in falsities and evils, but not manifestly against the truths and goods of faith. From this it is evident that in succumbing in temptations there is a reviling of truth and good, and sometimes profanation . . .

8170. For all elevation in a state of temptations is effected by means of truth Divine. Sig.

8172. 'Stand still, and see the salvation of Jehovah' . . . It is here said that they should have faith that Salvation is of the Lord alone, and nothing of themselves, because this is the principal thing of faith in temptations. He who believes, when being tempted, that he can resist from his own forces, succumbs. The reason is that he is in what is false . . . and shuts out the influx from the Divine; whereas he who believes that the Lord alone resists in temptations, overcomes; for he is in what is true . . .

8179. 'Why criest thou unto Me'=that there is no need of intercession for deliverance from temptation. 'Speak unto the sons of Israel, and let them journey'=that they will have help; but still the temptation will be continued until they have been prepared.

—^e. For they who are in temptations are wont to let down their hands, and betake themselves to prayers solely . . . not knowing that prayers do not effect [anything], but that combat must be waged against the falsities and evils which are being injected by the Hells. (Continued under COMBAT.)

—². Besides, they who are in temptations, and are not in any other active life than that of prayers, do not know that if the temptations were intermitted before they had been carried out to the full, they would not have been prepared for Heaven, and thus could not be saved. For this reason, the prayers of those who are in temptations are but little heard; for the Lord wills the end, which is the Salvation of the man, and which He Himself knows, and not the man . . . He who overcomes in temptations is also confirmed in this truth; but he who does not overcome, as he is not heard, he entertains a doubt about the Divine aid and power; and then, sometimes, because he lets down his hands, he partly succumbs. . . The supplicant (should therefore) supplicate that the Lord's will, and not his own, may be done; according to the Lord's words in His most grievous temptation in Gethsemane. 8181.

8185. 'To pass over the sea of straitness'=temptations.

8199. 'Night,' here,=that obscurity which follows immediately after temptations; for they who are delivered from them, first come into what is obscure, before into what is clear; for the falsities and evils injected by the Hells inhere for some time, and are only successively dissipated.

8259. It here treats of the second temptation of those of the Spiritual Church, which is described by the murmuring of the people at Marah . . . and then of their consolation . . . 8346. 8348. 8351. 8367.

8278². 'Deep's' (therefore)=temptations; for temptations are effected through evils and falsities injected by the Hells. Ill.

8321. By continual temptations admitted into Himself . . . 10828.

8349². The genuine affection of truth is to want to know what is true for the sake of life in the world, and for the sake of eternal life. Those [in it] come into temptation when truths begin to fail them, and still more when the truths which they know appear undelightful. This temptation derives its origin from the fact that the communication with good has been intercepted; and this (happens) when the man comes into his proprium . . . 8352, Ex.

8351. The feeling of pain from the bitterness of the temptation. Sig. and Ex. 8403.

— The temptations to be undergone by those of the Spiritual Church . . . are described by the murmuring of the Sons of Israel in the wilderness . . .

—². Faith cannot possibly be implanted in those of the Spiritual Church except through temptations, thus neither can charity; for in temptations the man is in combat against falsity and evil. These inflow into the external man from the Hells, and good and truth inflow through the internal man from the Lord . . .

—^e. Hence it is that (temptation is necessary to regeneration).

8358. 'There He proved him' (Ex.xv.25)=as to temptations in general; for in what precedes it has treated of the first temptation in the wilderness; and in what follows it treats of instruction how they should live so as not to succumb in temptations.

8367. For after every spiritual temptation there come enlightenment and affection, thus what is pleasant and delightful . . . The reason is that through temptations truths and goods are implanted, and are conjoined; hence the man is as to his spirit introduced more interiorly into Heaven, and to the heavenly Societies with which he had been before. When the temptation is finished, communication is opened with Heaven, which previously had been partly closed; and hence come enlightenment and affection . . .

8370. That after temptation the truths of faith are ordained by means of the good of love. Sig. and Ex.

8392. A state of compulsion is a state of disease; of spirits cast down by misfortune; a state of imminent death . . . To a good man these states are states of temptation, in which he overcomes.

8395. Ex.xvi. treats of the third temptation, which is caused by a deficiency of good . . . Consolation after the temptation is signified by the manna and the quails . . . 8398. 8403.

8397. For when those of the Spiritual Church are undergoing temptations, they are brought from one temptation into another. This is what is signified by 'journeying.'

—³. (Thus) man is not regenerated by one temptation, but by many; for there are very many kinds of evil which have made the delight of the former life; and all these evils cannot be subdued at once. Ex.

8413². When the good of charity is to be insinuated, the delight of pleasures is removed; (and then) the man comes into temptation; for he believes that if he is deprived of the life of pleasures, he is deprived of all life. Ex.

8419. 'That I may prove him' (Ex.xvi.4)=that it will be for exploration.

8435. That hereafter they should guard against such complaints in temptations. Sig.

8442. A remembrance of the state of temptation in which they had been. Sig.

8464². 'Manna'=the good of truth, which is given those who undergo temptations and overcome. 8527, Ex. 8537.

8494. 'Rest'=a state of peace when there is no temptation.

— The six days which precede the sabbath= combat and labour, consequently temptations; for after temptations there comes a state of peace, and the conjunction, then, of good and truth. 8506.

8554. In Ex.xvii. it treats of the fourth temptation, in that there was a deficiency of truth. This temptation is signified by the murmuring of the sons of Israel because they had no water; and therefore the truth of faith was given them by the Lord, which is signified by the water from the rock of Horeb.

8557. The increase of spiritual life is continually [going on] by means of temptations. Sig. The reason spiritual life increases by means of temptations, is that the truths of faith are confirmed by means of them, and are conjoined with the good of charity. 8559, Ex.

8558. '(Journeyed) from the wilderness of Sin'= (progressed) from a state of temptation as to good.

8561. The ordination of the interiors to undergo temptation as to truth. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. Temptation assaults that which the man loves and longs for.

8569. A greater degree of suffering (from the bitterness of the temptation). Sig.

[A.] 8587. 'He called the name of the place Massah' = the quality of the state of temptation. . . For 'Massah,' in the Original, means 'temptation.'

8588. 'And Meribah' = the quality of the complaining; for 'Meribah,' in the Original, means 'contention,' or 'chiding.' . . As to this temptation, and its quality, it is to be known that those are here described who almost succumb in temptations, namely, those who complain against Heaven, and against the Divine, and at last scarcely believe in the Divine Providence. —².

8594. ('Amalek) fought with Israel at Rephidim' = that (these Genii) assaulted while they were sustaining grievous temptation. (See 8622.)

8643². This ordination (of truths) takes place with the man of the Spiritual Church when he begins to act no longer from truth but from good; for this state is his second state, [of regeneration], and it comes forth after he has undergone temptations; for while he is acting from truth he is tempted, in order that the truths with him may be confirmed; and, when they have been confirmed, they are reduced into order by the Lord; and, when they have reduced into order, he then enters the second state . . . 8657, Sig. 8658², Ex. 8755.

8958. (The Doctrine of Charity) on temptations. Gen. art. N. 187.

8960. Temptation is induced by the evil Spirits who dwell with a man in his evils and falsities: these Spirits excite his evils, and accuse him; but the Angels . . . defend.

8961. In temptations, the combat is concerning the dominion of the evil which is with a man from Hell, or of the good which is with him from Heaven. The evil . . . is in his external man, and the good in his internal man. Hence it is that in temptations the combat is also concerning the dominion of one [of these] over the other.

8965. As at this day faith is rare, the Church being at its end, therefore few (now) undergo any spiritual temptations. Hence it is that it is scarcely known what they are, and to what they conduce.

8966. Temptations conduce to the confirmation of the truths of faith, and also to the implantation of them, and to the insinuation of them into the will, so that they may become goods of charity. Ex. . . By means of temptations, also, the concupiscences which are of the loves of self and the world are subdued, and the man is humbled; and is thus rendered fit to receive the life of Heaven from the Lord.

8967. It follows that through temptations the internal man acquires dominion over the external, thus the good of charity and faith over the evil of the love of self and of the world; (and then) the man has enlightenment and perception as to what is true and good, and also what is evil and false, and the consequent intelligence and wisdom, which afterwards increase daily.

8968. While man is being introduced through the truths of faith to the good of charity, he undergoes temptations; but when he is in the good of charity, temptations cease; for he is then in Heaven. 9431.

8969. In temptations, man ought to fight against evils and falsities as of himself; but still believe that it is from the Lord. If he does not believe this while in the temptation itself, because it is then obscure to him, still he must believe it afterwards. If a man, after temptation, does not believe that the Lord alone has fought for him . . . he has undergone only an external temptation, which temptation does not penetrate deeply, nor inroot anything of faith and charity.

9102². The man is then let into temptations, through which the evil is subdued and removed; and these are the penalties here signified.

9818². 'A broken spirit,' and 'a broken heart,' = a state of temptation and the consequent humiliation of the life of the understanding and of the will.

9930¹. As the good of wisdom is acquired through the combats of temptations . . .

9937⁶. 'To bear diseases,' etc. = a state of temptations; for then there are grief and pain of the lower mind, straitness, and despairs . . . The Hells induce such things; for in temptations they assault the man's love itself, against which they fight . . .

10685. Temptations before the internal of the Church, of worship, and of the Word, exists. Sig. and Ex. For the internal, which is called the internal man, is opened and given to man through temptations; and hence it is that everyone who is regenerated must undergo temptations. (Continued under COMBAT.) This interior resistance does not then come to the apperception of the man, because, while he is in temptations, he is in obscurity . . . But after the temptations those who are in the perception of truth (perceive it).

10686². The goods of love and truths of faith are not appropriated to man while he is in temptations; but after them. Ex.

H. 527. This has been tried with many. . . Some of those with whom it was tried . . .

N. 187, 188. Only those being regenerated undergo spiritual temptations; for spiritual temptations are sufferings of mind with those who are in goods and truths, which are induced by evil Spirits. When these excite the evils in those people, there arises an anxiety which is temptation. The man is unaware whence this comes, because he is unaware of this origin of it. . . When the evil Spirits come near, they bring forth the man's evils, and the good Spirits, his goods, whence here is a collision and combat, causing the man an interior anxiety, which is temptation. From this it is evident that temptations are induced by Hell, and not from Heaven; which is also according to the faith of the Church, that the Lord tempts no one. (Compare these statements with the parallel ones in A.8958-8960.) L.33.

196. It is called spiritual temptation, when, within man, an assault is made on the truths of faith which he believes at heart, and according to which he loves to live; especially when the good of love is assaulted, in which he places spiritual life. These assaults are made in various ways. (Continued under ATTACK-impugnare.) And when these things take place they appear under the form of interior anxieties, and of pains of conscience, because such things affect and torture the spiritual life of the man, who does not believe that it is from evil spirits, but from himself in his interiors. . . These temptations are the most grievous when they are combined with sufferings inflicted on the body, and still more if these last long and become worse, and the Divine mercy is implored, and still there is no deliverance. Hence comes despair, which is the ending.

33. That He made His Human Divine by temptations admitted into Himself. Gen.art. R.820².

—². Thus, when man, from the Lord, overcomes in temptations, he is drawn out of Hell, and is elevated into Heaven; and hence it is that through temptations, or combats against evils, man becomes spiritual, thus in Angel.

P. 19. From this (conjunction of the infernals with the evil in the good) are temptations, which are instigations from the evils (or the evil ones) with one's self, and consequent combats, through which the good can be delivered from their evils.

25. Purification is effected in two ways: by temptations; and by fermentations. Spiritual temptations are nothing else than combats against evils and falsities which exhale from Hell, and affect the man . . .

141. Such (mental) sicknesses (enum.) are sometimes counted as temptations; but they are not; for genuine temptations have spiritual things as their objects, and the mind is wise in them; whereas the former have natural things as their objects, and the mind is insane in them.

145². Hence arises combat, which, if it becomes severe, is called temptation. (See also under COMBAT, here, and at P.147². 284.)

R. 100. 'And ye shall be tried' (Rev.ii.10)=through falsities fighting against them. For all spiritual trial

(or temptation) is a combat between the devil and the Lord as to which shall possess the man; for the devil brings forth his falsities, and blames and condemns; and the Lord His truths, and leads away from falsities and delivers. It is this combat—which appears to the man as if in him—. . . which is called temptation. That spiritual temptation is nothing else, I know from experience; because in my temptations I have seen the infernals who induced them, and have perceived the influx from the Lord, who delivered. (=an increase of longing for truth. E.123.)

101. 'Ye shall have affliction ten days'=that this (temptation) is to last the full time, that is, so long as they want to remain in falsities. 'Affliction' here=infestation, thus temptation. E.124.

185. For he who is tempted in the world is not tempted after death.

186. 'I also will keep thee from the hour of trial to come upon the whole world, to explore them that dwell upon the earth' (Rev.iii.10)=that they will be protected and preserved at the day of the Last Judgment. . . (For) they who passed through it were let into temptation, and were explored. E.215.

215. 'As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten'=that (these) are loved by the Lord, and that they cannot but be then let into temptations, in order that they may fight against themselves. . . 'To rebuke'=temptation as to falsities; 'to chasten,' temptation as to evils. E.246.

—². They who are here treated of cannot but be let into temptations, because without them, denials of and confirmations against Divine truths cannot be extirpated. Temptations are spiritual combats against the falsities and evils in one's self, and thus against one's self.

5928. A certain one who underwent a certain temptation, which had caused him to think about his evils . . .

D. Min. 4630. Why some of the faithful are let into (these) trials . . . Some, if exempted from them, would ascribe it to their own goodness . . . To prevent this, they are let into common misfortunes . . .

4798. These spheres from the Hells . . . produce anxieties and temptations; they reach—according to the state—to the feet, over the feet, to the stomach, to the neck, and to the head; rarely above the head.

4816. They frequently attempted.

E. 130. 'The Church in Pergamos' = those within the Church who are in temptations.

— . As no one can be imbued with Knowledges of truth and good as to the life, or persist in the spiritual affection of truth, unless he undergoes temptations, these are next treated of.

131. The Lord, who alone fights in temptations. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'Sword' = temptation, because temptation is a combat of truth against falsity, and of falsity against truth. —², Ill.

138. Those in temptations are among those who are in falsities of every kind. . . When man comes into spiritual temptation, he is among those Spirits who are in falsities. Des. . . Such are spiritual temptations. Sig.

—^e. But none are let into temptations except those who acknowledge the Lord's Divine in His Human, and are in the spiritual affection of truth. All others are natural men, who cannot be tempted.

146. 'To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna' = to those who overcome in temptations the delight of celestial love from the Lord's Divine Human.

156. For the conjunction of the spiritual man with the natural is effected through temptations. Sig.

164. '(I will cast them) into great affliction' = grievous temptations for those who yield themselves to their falsities.

— . Temptation is nothing but the infestation of truth by falsities.

—^e. This combat (between the spiritual and natural man) is temptation.

167⁴. As truths are separated from falsities, and goods from evils, by temptations, it is said 'try me' (Ps. xxvi. 2).

246². It is infernal Spirits who tempt men. God tempts no one. Ex.

— . As he is in constant thought about salvation . . . he has interior anxiety, and consequent combat, which is called temptation. But those not in truths and goods . . . cannot be let into temptations. Ex. . . This is why few are tempted now.

247. No one is let into spiritual temptation unless he is in spiritual affection, which is called charity; (for otherwise) there is no combat with falsities and evils . . .

256. Temptations are combats against evils and falsities.

365¹⁵. 'The miserable' = those who are in temptations in the world; 'the multitude of peace' = delights after temptations.

—³¹. The Lord's fearful temptations are meant by, 'He was pierced for our transgressions . . .'

405⁹. These three temptations involve all the temptations which the Lord sustained . . . For by temptations admitted into Himself . . . He reduced all things . . . to order, and also glorified His Human. . . The reason His temptations are described so briefly is that He revealed them in no other way; but still they are fully described in the internal sense of the Word. 730⁴¹.

411¹¹. The temptations in which such a man of the Church does not succumb, but overcomes, are signified by, 'The rain descended, the floods came, the winds blew, and beat upon that house, and it fell not.' 419²¹, Ex. 644²¹, Ex.

419²³. 'The stormy wind, and the waves of the sea lifted up' = temptations. . . Spiritual temptations are caused by an irruption of falsities into the thoughts . . . and deliverance from them is signified by 'He made the storm to cease, that the waves might be still.'

—²⁴. The miracle (of the calming of the storm and sea by the Lord) involves spiritual temptations, and deliverance from them. Ex.

439. 'Of the tribe of Naphtali were sealed twelve thousand' = regeneration and temptation. Ill.

— . For all temptation is a combat between the spiritual man and the natural; for the spiritual man loves and wills the things of Heaven; and the natural man loves and wills the things of the world; consequently the desires of the two are opposite; from which there is a collision and combat which is called temptation.

—². The state after temptation, which is full of joy from affection because the Spiritual and the Natural, and good and truth, have been conjoined; for these are conjoined through temptations. Sig. —³, Sig. 441.

452. For those in the good of life according to their religion, in which are no genuine truths, in the other life undergo temptations, by which the falsities of their religion are dispelled, and genuine truths are implanted in their place. Sig. (by the 'great multitude' who 'come out of the great tribulation.' 474, Ex.)

474². The reason these are let into temptations in the Spiritual World, is that they could not be tempted in the natural world on account of the falsities of religion in which they were.

— . All are saved who are let into temptations; for the evil, who are in falsities from evil, are not tempted. Ex.

—^e. The temptations which those undergo with whom falsities are to be shaken off, are treated of in many places in the Word; and are called 'afflictions,' 'tribulations,' and 'vastations.'

475. While in temptations they appear in squalid garments; but when they come out of temptations, in white robes . . .

[E.] 484. 'God shall wipe away every tear from their eyes' = a state of bliss from the affection of truth, after falsities have been removed through temptations.

518³⁹. As all spiritual temptations come through falsities which break into the thoughts and infest the interior mind, thus through reasonings from falsities. Sig.

538¹². For temptations are as it were immersions in the Hells, and obsessions by evils and falsities. Sig.

556¹¹. That temptations so suppressed the interiors of (Job's) mind that he became sensuous . . . but still he did not think falsities, but truths. Sig.

600¹¹. They who are in temptations, and who by means of them, and after them, admit and receive instruction in truths of doctrine. Sig.

631. 'Lead us not into temptation,' is so said because it appears as if the Lord did so.

644²⁴. The 'great fall' of 'the house built upon the sand' = that he who receives Divine truths into the understanding only . . . succumbs in temptations. Ex.

654⁶². In order that man from rational may become spiritual, it will be absolutely necessary for him to undergo temptations; for through these the Rational is subdued so as not to call forth from the Natural such things as favour concupiscences.

659⁷. Temptations. Tr. and Des.

— For temptations immerse a man in falsities and evils.

700⁸. 'The resting of the ark' = the state after temptations . . .

—¹². The faithful, who, after enduring temptations, are brought into the Church. Sig.

—³³. He who knows what spiritual temptations are, knows that when a man is in them he is so infested by evils and falsities as scarcely to know otherwise than that he is in Hell; that the Lord fights in man against temptations from within, and that He meanwhile sustains man with spiritual food and drink . . . that the natural man loathes these; that nevertheless the natural man is thus subdued. . . All this is involved in what is related about the sons of Israel in the wilderness. Ill. seriation.

750. 'They loved not their life, even unto death' = the faithful who have endured temptations on account of these truths, and who have regarded the life of the world as of no account in comparison with the life of Heaven.

— These and many other thoughts inflow from Heaven with those who endure spiritual temptations.

768⁵. The whole of Is. liii. treats of the Lord's temptations. Ex.

893³. There are spiritual temptations which those undergo who receive genuine charity from the Lord; for such must fight against the evils which are in every man by birth, and some must fight against the falsities which they have imbibed from childhood . . . These falsities and evils are removed through the combats of temptations. Sig.

—⁴. Yet before anyone can act from the Lord, he must undergo temptations; because the internal of man . . . is opened through temptations.

—⁵. Temptations are also signified by 'the cup' of which they were to drink. Ex.

— The difference between the Lord's temptations and those of men.

897. Consolation by the Lord after temptations. Sig. and Ex.

—². Why only those who are in the marriage of good and truth can be let into spiritual temptations. Ex.

— This is why man is distressed in temptations by the evils and falsities which rise up into his thought; and in proportion as he then acknowledges his sins, regards himself as guilty, and supplicates for deliverance, the temptations are useful to him.

— (Thus) man has spiritual temptation while his . . . spiritual mind is being opened . . .

— Therefore, when the man's evils and falsities have been removed, temptations are brought to an end, and then joy inflows . . . from the Lord, and fills his natural mind. . . These consolations are received by all who undergo spiritual temptations. I speak from experience. The reason man receives joys after temptations, is that after them he is admitted into Heaven; for through temptations man is conjoined with Heaven and is introduced into it.

900. 'Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours' = that such will no longer have combat against evils and falsities, and infestation by them . . . 'Labours' = (these combats and infestations) thus temptations. Ex. and Ill.

1164². Evils are removed from man either through penalties; or through temptations and the consequent aversions; or through affections of truth and good. (The first method is used) with the unreformed; (the second) with those to be reformed; and (the third) with the regenerate. . . Temptations are not penalties, but combats; (and) those to be reformed are not compelled to resist evils, but they compel themselves, and implore the Lord, and thus are delivered from the evils which they have resisted. They afterwards desist from them . . . from an aversion to evil . . . But with the regenerate there are not any temptations or combats, but there are affections of truth and good, which keep evils far away from them . . .

Ath. 192^e. The Lord retained the infirm [human] while He was in the world, because in no other way could He be tempted, and least of all on the cross; there the whole Maternal was expelled.

Can. Redemp. vii. 2. The Lord sustained the most grievous temptations of all, because He fought against all the Hells, and also against the evils and falsities of the Jewish Church.

9. Contrition and repentance are temptations which are means of regeneration.

Coro. 59³. For temptations and afflictions in a state of vastation and oppression are . . . combats of the Lord with the devil about man, that is, about his soul, as to who shall possess it; and, in relation to this state, it may be said that the God of Israel or Lord Messiah stands on one side, and Beelzebub and the Devil Serpent on the other, and that the latter casts out scandals against the Lord like a flood out of his mouth, and the Lord averts and takes them away, and thus delivers the man from spiritual captivity and servitude. This combat is felt in the man as being from himself. That temptation is such a combat, and that there is such a perception from the man, and a consequent co-operation, I can testify upon oath; for, having often experienced it, I know. The reason it takes place outside the man, but is felt in him as if from himself, and that the man stands in the middle, and co-operates, is to the end that the reward may be imputed to him when he overcomes. But only that man overcomes who looks to the Lord, and confides in Him alone for aid. (Ill. by comparisons.)

Ten. Decem.

576. That 'ten,' like 'tenths'=remains. Fully ill. 2280, Ex.

858. 'The tenth month' (Gen. viii. 5)=the truths which are of remains.

901⁴. 'Tithes' (Deut. xvi. 12)=remains, which, being of the Lord alone, are holy.

1657. 'Tenths' (Gen. xiv. 20)=remains, or states of good and truth from combats. 1738, Ex.

1906. 'From the end of ten years' (Gen. xvi. 3)=(the Lord's) remains of good and truth.

—⁴. The Angels do not know what 'ten' is; but the moment it is mentioned by man, there comes to them the idea of remains . . .

2075². 'Ten'=remains through which is conjunction. Ill.

2141^e. Those with whom there is a state of the affection of truth, are signified by 'ten' (in Sodom).

2180^e. Three tenths of fine flour offered with the son of an ox; only two tenths with a ram; and with a lamb, one tenth.

2239^e. 'If ten been found there, the city should be spared'=if there were still any remains, that is, anything of good and truth. 2284, Ex.

2280². The good of infancy is until the tenth year.

2468¹³. 'The tenth generation'=remains. Ex.

2567¹⁰. 'The flock' which he 'will take tithe of' (1 Sam. viii. 17)=the remains of good which he will do violence to.

3048. 'Ten camels' (Gen. xxiv. 10)=general scientifics. 'Ten'=remains . . . which, when predicated of the Lord, are the Divine things which He acquired for Himself . . . and as the general scientifics were Divine, or acquired by the Lord, it is said that they were 'ten.'

3107. 'Ten of gold their weight' (ver. 22)=full for initiation; for 'ten'=a full state, like 'a hundred.'

3176. 'Days, at least ten' (ver. 55)=the state for departure appearing to them full. . . 'Ten'=what is full.

3740. 'All Thou shalt give, tithing I will tithe it to Thee' (Gen. xxviii. 22)=that the Lord made each and all things Divine by His Own power. . . 'To tithe,' and 'tithes'=the goods and truths which are stored up by the Lord in the interiors of man . . . and which, when predicated of the Lord, are the Divine goods and Divine truths which He acquired for Himself by His Own power.

4077. 'He hath changed my wages ten ways' (Gen. xxxi. 7)= . . . a very great change (in them). 4179.

4638. 'The ten virgins'=all who are in the Church; both those in good and truth, and those in evil and falsity. 'Ten'=remains, and also what is full, thus all. 10253^e. S. 17². E. 675⁶.

5291. 'To tithe,' in the Word,=to make remains, that is, to collect truths and goods and then store them up.

—². See FIVE, here. —⁵.

5958. 'Ten asses' (Gen. xlv. 23)=many things of service. 'Ten'=much. 5959.

7831. 'In the tenth day of this month' (Ex. xii. 3)=the state of initiation of the interiors. 'The tenth day'=the state of the interiors; for . . . 'ten'=remains . . . and as these are in the interiors, and through them man is prepared and initiated to receive good and truth from the Lord, therefore by 'the tenth day' is here signified a state of initiation of the interiors.

8468. 'Ten'=what is full; hence 'a tenth part'=as much as is sufficient. 8540. 9595.

—³. For when 'ten'=much, 'a tenth part'=little.

8715. 'Princes of tens' (Ex. xviii. 21)=primary truths in the third place. . . 'Tens'=many things, but in a less degree.

9416. 'Ten'=all. 9636.

— 'The ten words'=all truths of doctrine and goods of life. 10689.

9595. 'Ten curtains'=all truths from which.

9757. 'Ten bases'=supporting truths as much as sufficient for use.

—^e. 'Ten,' here, involves the like as 'fifty,' or 'five,' namely, what is sufficient for use; for 'ten' arises from 'five' by multiplication.

10136. 'The tenth of an ephah'=as much as is sufficient, and as much as is sufficient for use.

10235⁷. 'The diameter of ten cubits'=what is full.

E. 112^e. 'Ten cities' = much intelligence and wisdom. 223^e.

316¹⁵. 'Ten horns' (Dan. vii. 7) = falsities of every kind; for 'ten' = all.

323³. See PSALTERY, here.

336². 'Ten' = many things.

374⁶. 'Ten men' (Jer. xli. 1) = all who are such; for 'ten' = all people and all things. 433²⁷.

548². '10,' '100,' and '1000' = much, and all.

675. 'A tenth part of the city fell' = no truths of doctrine any longer. 'Ten' = all; also many and much; and 'a tenth part' = all and much.

—⁵. That 'ten' = all persons and all things, and also many persons and many things. Ill.

—⁷. 'The ten servants' = all who are in the world; in special, in the Church. . . 'The ten pounds' = all the Knowledges of truth and good from the Word, with the faculty to perceive them. . . Those who acquire much are meant by the servant who from a pound gained ten pounds. . .

—⁸. 'The ten talents' = much wisdom.

—¹⁵. 'Ten' (Zech. v. 2) is here predicated of truth, and of all of it.

—¹⁶. 'Ten times' = at all times, or always. Ill.

—¹⁸. Hence 'the tenth part' = everything. It is from this that 'tithes' and 'tithings' derived their origin; and signified that everything was holy and blessed when the tenth part . . . was given to the Levites; and in like manner for the Levites, when the tenth part was again tithed and given to Aaron. Ill.

—²¹. That 'ten' = all things, originated from Heaven itself. . . All the forces of life of the Grand Man cease in the two hands and feet, and these cease in the ten digits; and therefore all things of man as to power, and as to support, being finally collated into the ten digits, these = all things of man; and besides, 'ultimates,' in the Word, also = all things.

706¹⁶. 'Ten (degrees backward)' (Is. xxxviii. 5) = many — plura.

A. 414. 'To dwell in a tent' (Gen. iv. 20) = the Holy of love. Ill.

—'. 'Tent' = what is celestial. —².

471^e. This is 'to dwell in tents.'

1063. 'The tents of Ham' (Ps. lxxviii. 51) = the worship therefrom. 3323¹³.

1074. 'The midst of a tent' (Gen. ix. 21) = the principal of faith; for 'tent' = charity, or worship from charity. Charity is the inmost thing of faith and worship; and this is 'the midst of the tent.' That 'tent' = the Holy of love, or charity. Ref.

1102. 'He shall dwell in the tents of Shem' (ver. 27) = that the internals of worship may be in the externals.

—'. 'Tents' = the Holy of love, and worship thence. 'To sojourn and dwell in tents' was a wonted formula among the Ancients, by which was signified holy worship; for the reason that the Most Ancients not only sojourned with tents, but also dwelt in tents, and performed holy worship therein. 1293. 3312.

—². That 'tents' = holy worship. Ill.

1452. 'He stretched his tent' (Gen. xii. 8) = the holy things of faith; for 'a tent' = the Holy of love, consequently the Holy of faith from love. His stretching his tent there = that this was now beginning.

1556. 'Even to the place where his tent was before' (Gen. xiii. 3) = to the holy things which there were before... 'A tent' = the holy things of faith... thus the celestial things which the Lord had...

1564. '(Lot) had flock, and herd, and tents' (ver. 5) = the things with which the external man abounds.

1566. 'The tents' = the worship of that (external man) which was separating itself from the internal.

—'. 'Tents,' in the opposite, = worship not holy. Ill.

1598. 'He tented as far as Sodom' (ver. 12) = extension to cupidities.

1616. 'Abraham tented...' (ver. 18)... 'To tent,' that is, to move and fix a tent, = to be conjoined; for 'a tent' = the Holy of worship, by which the external man is conjoined with the internal.

2145. 'He was sitting at the door of the tent' (Gen. xviii. 1) = the holy state of love in which He then was. 2152.

2174. 'A tent' = the Lord as to the Holy of love.

2190. 'Behold in the tent' (ver. 9) = in what was holy. Ex.

2195. 'Sarah heard at the door of the tent' (ver. 10) = that rational truth was near what was holy.

2576². 'The tent,' which was outside the ark, = the Lord's Kingdom.

3210. 'The tent of Sarah his mother' (Gen. xxiv. 67) = the sanctuary of truth in the Divine Human. 'A tent' = what is holy, thus a sanctuary.

3268⁵. 'Tents and flocks' = goods of the Spiritual Church.

3312. 'Dwelling in tents' (Gen. xxv. 27) = worship therefrom.

—². Hence it was commanded that they should make a tent...

3322⁴. 'The tent of David' (Amos ix. 11) = the Church and worship of the Lord. (= the good of love and of charity from the Lord. 4926³.) 9163^e.

3439^e. Hence it was called 'the tent of meeting.'

3444. 'Isaac stretched his tent there' (Gen. xxvi. 25) = what was holy there.

3540³. The tent was a representative of the three Heavens, thus of the celestial and spiritual things of the Lord's Kingdom.

3762⁴. 'Tents' = holy things of good.

4128. 'Jacob fixed his tent in the mount' (Gen. xxxi. 25) = the state of that love.

4153. 'Laban came into the tent of Jacob, and into the tent of Leah, and into the tent of both the handmaids' (ver. 33) = that in their holy things there were not such truths.

4288⁵. In the representative Church they had tents or tabernacles, and Divine worship in them... because tents or tabernacles = the Holy of love and of worship.

—⁴. They were therefore restricted... to a tent in common, which was called the tent of meeting.

4391. See HUR, here.

4398. 'Where he had stretched his tent' = what was holy.

4599. 'To stretch the tent' = the progression of what is holy, here, towards interior things.

4922⁶. As the tent of meeting with the ark represented Heaven...

5135⁶. 'Tent' = what is holy.

8379. They have tents also in Jupiter. Des.

—'. They take their meals in their tents.

8470. 'Tent,' here (Ex. xvi. 16) = a society as to good; for a tent here has the like signification to a house; for when they were sojourning they were in tents.

8666. 'They came into the tent' (Ex. xviii. 7) = the Holy of union... because love is union. Hence 'to come into the tent' = to be united from holy love.

9592. The Second Heaven is here represented by the habitation and the tent.

9595. The curtains from the goats for the tent which was round about. 9615.

—². 'Enlarge the place of thy tent' (Is. liv. 2) = the Holy of worship from the good of love.

—³. 'My tents are laid waste' (Jer. iv. 20) = holy worship from the good of love. (= the Church. 9854³.) E. 724¹⁶.

9615. 'The tent over the habitation' = the external of Heaven; for 'the habitation' = Heaven; and the tent which covered it above = its external.

9686. The Heaven which is represented by the tent of meeting...

9784. 'In the tent of meeting' (Ex. xxvii. 21) = the Lord's presence; for the tent was made that the Lord might meet Moses and Aaron there, and also the sons of Israel; and on this account the Holy of worship was instituted there. III.

[A. 9784]^e. For the tent represented Heaven; and Heaven is Heaven from the Lord's presence there.

9854². For the habitation, and the tent=Heaven.

9963. 'When they go into the tent of meeting' (Ex.xxviii.43)=in worship representative of all things of Heaven and the Church. . . For 'the tent' represented Heaven where the Lord is. . . Moreover all the worship at that time took place in the tent. . .

10001. 'The tent of meeting'=Heaven.

—². 'The altar' which was placed at the door of the tent, represented the Lord as to Divine good; and the tent of meeting represented the Lord as to Divine truth.

10005³. As to the tent of meeting, by which is represented Heaven in which is the Lord. . . its inmost, where was the ark, represented the Third Heaven; the habitation, which was outside the veil, represented the Second Heaven; and the court, the First Heaven. 10268². 10338. E.630⁴. 700.

10022. 'Before the tent of meeting' (Ex.xxix.10)=for purification, the reception of truth from Heaven, and its conjunction with good; for 'the tent of meeting'=Heaven where the Lord is.

— The place 'before the tent,' which is called its 'door,'=the conjunction of truth and good. . .

10129². The tent of meeting outside the veil represented the Spiritual Kingdom, or, what is the same, the Lord where He is present in the good of charity. . .

10150. 'I will sanctify the tent of meeting' (ver.44.)=what is receptive of the Lord in the Lower Heavens.^e The reason 'the tent of meeting'=the lower Heavens, is that 'the altar'=the higher ones. Ex.

10160^e. Because the habitations of the Most Ancients were tents, a tent was constructed in memory of it which was used as a house of God, and the feast of tents was afterwards instituted in which they rejoiced from the heart.

10206^e. Next, the tent itself is described, by which is signified Heaven and the Church which is from the foregoing things.

10230. 'Thou shalt give it for the work of the tent of meeting' (Ex.xxx.16)=conjunction with Heaven through the acknowledgment that all truths and goods are from the Lord. . . 'The tent of meeting'=Heaven where the Lord is, thus also that which conjoins man with Heaven. . .

10242. 'In their entering into the tent of meeting' (ver.20)=worship from the good of faith. Ex.

—^e. For that tent (where Aaron and his sons made the daily ministration) represented the Heaven where spiritual good reigns.

10268. 'Thou shalt anoint with it the tent of meeting' (ver.26)=in order to represent the Divine of the Lord in the Heavens. . . 'The tent of meeting'=Heaven in the whole complex. Ex.

10304. 'Thou shalt put of it before the testimony in the tent of meeting' (Ex.xxx.36)=the worship of the Lord in Heaven and the Church. . . 'The tent of meeting'=Heaven; and (therefore) the Church also; for the Church is Heaven on earth.

10338. 'The tent of meeting and the ark for the testimony' (Ex.xxxi.7)=a representative of Heaven in general, where the Lord is. Ex.

10545. 'Moses took the tent' (Ex.xxxiii.7)=the Holy of worship, of the Church, and of the Word; for 'the tent,' in the supreme sense,=the Lord, and also Heaven and the Church; and, in the relative sense, all the Holy of Heaven and the Church, and hence also the Holy of worship and the Holy of the Word. . . The reason 'a tent'=these things, is that the Most Ancients dwelt in tents, and also held in them their holy worship. . .

—³. That by 'a tent' are signified these holy things; and, in special, the Holy of worship. III.

—⁴. 'Tents' (Jer.iv.20)=the goods of the Church; 'curtains,' its truths.

—⁸. As 'tents'=the goods of the Church and of worship, therefore, in the opposite sense, 'tents'=the evils of worship and of the Church. III.

10546. 'To stretch the tent' (Ex.xxxiii.7)=to provide, dispose, and ordinate the things which are of the Church and of worship.

10547. 'He called it the tent of meeting' (id.)=the external of worship, of the Church, and of the Word, in which are internal things. . . 'Meeting,' in the sense of the letter, means the meeting (or assembly) of the sons of Israel; but in the internal sense is signified the assembly of the truths and goods of the church. . . 10548.

10557. 'The tent'=the Holy of the Word, of the Church, and of worship.

10769. Their dwellings (in the Fifth Earth) were low houses in the form of tents, such as the ancients had. Des.

M. 75⁵. A union like that of the two tents in the breast, which are called the heart and lungs.

T. 110. Two tents were seen, one directly above the place (where the meteor fell); and the other at the side, towards the south. . . A Spirit fell from Heaven and was cast into the (first) tent; and I was in the other. . . In the door of this I stood, and saw the Spirit in the other also standing in the door of his tent; and I asked him why he fell. . .

E. 205³. The 'tents of Judah' (Zech.xii.7)=the Celestial Kingdom.

223¹⁶. 'To enlarge the place of the tent'=that they have worship from good. 600¹².

324³. 'The tent'=the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom; and that part of the tent which was within the veil=the Lord's Celestial Kingdom. Ex.

365⁴⁰. 'Tents of securities' (Is.xxxii.18)=the derivative goods of love and of worship without infestation by evils and falsities.

392⁷. 'The tent of meeting' represented Heaven. 727¹¹. 1042⁵.

412⁸. 'To hide in Thy tent' (Ps.xxi.20)=in the Divine truth.

555⁷. 'Ohola and Oholibah,' that is, 'the tent, or habitation of God;' for this=Heaven where are the Divine truth and the Divine good, and thence also the Church. 576⁶.

583³. The sacrifices at the door of the tent represented the worship of the Lord, because the altar, and also the tabernacle, represented Heaven where the Lord is present . . .

630⁴. This was the court of the tent of meeting, (which last) represented Heaven.

— The three Heavens were represented by the tent. Refs. 700. —⁴, Ex. —³³, Ex.

654⁵⁶. 'Thorns shall be in their tents' (Hos.ix.6)=the falsity of evil in the worship.

684²⁶. 'Surely I will not enter within the tent of my house' (Ps.cxxxii.3)=that he will not enter into and know the holy things of the Church.

700³³. The primary representatives of the Lord, and thence of Heaven and the Church, were the tent of meeting . . . the altar . . . and afterwards the temple . . . with the difference that the tent of meeting was a more holy representative . . .

724¹⁷. 'The tents of Jacob' (Jer.xxx.i8)=all things of the Church . . . 'tents'=its goods; 'habitations,' its truths.

799³. 'Tabernacle'=the Church from those in the good of love to the Lord; 'tent'=the Church from those in truths from this good . . . Therefore 'tabernacle'=the doctrine of the good of love; and 'tent,' the doctrine of truth from this good; thus 'tabernacles,' in the plural,=the goods of the Church and of doctrine; and 'tents,' the truths of the Church and of doctrine. Ill. —²⁰.

811⁵. 'A tent' (Ps.lxxviii.60)=the Church which is in the truths of doctrine.

Tent-companionship. Contubernium.

M.290⁶. 297. D.Wis.iii.4 (contubernalis). vi⁷.

Terah. Therach.

A. 1353. 'Terah' was a nation named from Terah as its father, by which nation is signified idolatrous worship. 1355. 1356, Ex. 1359.

1356. Here it is very plain that Terah, Abram, and Nahor were idolaters.

1357^e. These three kinds of idolatry were signified by the three sons of Terah.

1359. Terah was a son of Nahor, and also a nation named from him . . . 1362.

1360. 'These are the nativities of Terah' (Gen.xi.27)=the origins and derivations of the idolatry from which came the representative Church. . . Here a third Church after the Flood is treated of, which followed when the second became idolatrous in Terah. Terah, Abram, Nahor, and Haran were idolaters; and also the nations from them . . .

1362. Terah was a nation from this: that the nations springing from his sons acknowledged him as their father. Ex.

1363. Idolatry is signified by 'Terah' . . .

1366. See HARAN, here.

—². Terah and Abram worshipped other gods, and had no knowledge of Jehovah, nor therefore of what the good and truth of faith are. They had thus become better fitted to receive the seed of Truth than others in Syria. 1992².

1367. Idolatrous worship in general is signified by 'Terah.'

1373. 'Terah took Abram his son; and Lot the son of Aaron . . . and Sarai . . . and they went forth with them from Ur of the Chaldees, to go into the land of Canaan' (ver.31)=that they who were in idolatrous worship were instructed in the celestial and spiritual things of faith, in order that a representative Church might thence come forth.

1375. 'And the days of Terah were 205 years; and Terah died in Haran' (ver.32)=the duration and state of that idolatrous worship; the end of that idolatry; and the beginning of a representative Church through Abram.

3778. Terah, who was the father of three sons: Abram, Nahor, and Haran, represents the common stock from which the Churches were. Terah himself was indeed an idolater; but representatives do not regard the person . . . And, as the representative Jewish Church commenced in Abraham . . . therefore Terah and his three sons took on the representation of Churches . . . 4207.

5628². The family of Terah . . . acknowledged Shaddai as their god.

Teraphim. Theraphim.

A. 1356². Laban worshipped images, or teraphim, which Rachel took away (Gen.xxiv.10; xxxi.19-34).

4111. 'Rachel stole the teraphim'=to take away the truths. 4149. 4151. 4153.

—⁴. For 'the teraphim' mean his gods. Ill.

—⁵. The teraphim were idols which they employed when they consulted or interrogated God; and, as the answers they received were to them Divine truths, therefore truths are signified by those teraphim.

— 'Ephod and teraphim' (Hos.iii.4)=the Divine truths which they received by the answers.

— 'The teraphim' (Zech.x.2)=the answers, but in this state wrong ones.

—⁶. As such things were signified by 'teraphim,' they were found with some, although prohibited. Ill.

4155. 'Rachel took the teraphim' (Gen.xxxi.34)=interior natural truths which are from the Divine. . . 'Teraphim'=truths which are from the Divine.

4162. 'He searched, and found not the teraphim' (ver.35)=that those truths were not his. Ex.

—². That 'the teraphim'=truths from the Divine, is because those who were of the Ancient Church distinguished the Divine . . . by various names . . . and the truths Divine which they received by answers they called teraphim . . . They who were wise among them understood by all these names the one only Lord; but the simple made for themselves so many representative images of that Divine . . . Hence came idolatry . . . But, as in ancient times Divine things had been understood by these names, some of them were retained, as teraphim, etc. By 'teraphim' are signified truths Divine which came from answers, as is evident in Hos. iii. 4.

[A.] 9824^e. 'Teraphim' = Divine answers. III.

Terraqueous. Terraqueus.

W. 106. Our terraqueous globe.

165. The terraqueous globe . . . is a kind of base and support; for it is the ultimate work . . .

T. 31. Of the terraqueous globe, regarded in itself, are predicated the things of space; and of its rotation and progression, are predicated those of time.

33. Things at rest, of which the terraqueous globe consists.

76³. At last . . . the terraqueous globe . . . was formed of earths . . . 78⁴.

769. When the universal firmament together with the terraqueous globe is expected to perish.

Terrestrial. See EARTHLY.

Terrible. Terribilis.

A. 3719. 'How terrible is this place' (Gen. xxviii. 17) = holiness of state. . . For the word 'terrible,' in the Original, is derived from the same word as 'fear' (which) = what is holy.

7573. But in Hell (truth Divine) is terrible.

L. 5. 'The terrible' day = the advent of the Lord to Judgment.

E. 556⁵. Because this state is profane and powerful, it is called 'terrible,' etc. (Dan. vii. 7). 650⁶⁸.

783³. Hence those in falsities are called 'terrible,' etc.

See under DREAD, and FEAR.

A. 390. They who are in falsity and evil are in continual terror lest they be killed. III.

950^e. A mere hiss would drive them into terror . . . They thought in their terror that all Hell was rising . . .

955. From (these penalties) they contract terrors and horrors for such things.

963^e. Under the veil they feel such anxiety and terror . . .

986. 'The fear of you, and the terror of you' (Gen. ix. 2) = the dominion of the internal man; 'fear' regards evils; and 'terror,' falsities. . . For, when the internal man dominates, the man is in fear on account of evils, and in terror on account of falsities . . . But it is (only) the external man that is terrified . . . (Continued under FEAR.)

1740^e. (Evil Spirits) are sometimes seized with terror on their first approach (to such a man).

1839. 'A terror of great darkness' (Gen. xv. 12) = that the darkness was terrible. . . (= that He shuddered at so great a vastation. —³.)

1951^e. When Spirits merely think of such truth (without good), there arises something of terror. Ex.

4555. 'A terror of God was upon the cities . . .' (Gen. xxxv. 5) = that falsities and evils could not come near; for 'a terror of God' = protection. —², Ex.

—^e. Not that the Lord terrifies them . . .

4935. This naked arm . . . according to its position excites terror; in this position, incredible terror . . . Even those who have not been timorous . . . are thrown into extreme terror by it.

5313⁶. 'The lightnings,' etc. = the terrors caused by the Divine truth with those who are not in good.

5378². They enlarged themselves, and thus terrified (those other Spirits).

—². For it is allowed the Spirits (of the peritoneum), when infested by others . . . to strike them with terror D. 991.

5502. See TREMBLE, here. 8312.

7280². From terror of the penalties.

8316. 'Terror took hold of them' (Ex. xv. 15) = that they dared not attempt anything . . . For with those who are in terror, the blood grows cold, and rushes into the veins, and the circulation ceases; hence the nerves become flaccid, and the forces fall, so that they dare not do anything.

8816^e. They who are in evil are in terror at the presence of the Divine . . .

9327. 'I will send My terror before thee' (Ex. xxxiii. 27) = the terror of those who are in evils of falsity on account of truths of good. Ex.

9330². When they are in Hell, they are in terror and consternation on account of the truths from good in which the Angels are . . .

9331. Terror is predicated of those in evils; 'dread-formido' of those in falsities.

R. 331. 'A great earthquake' = . . . terror. Ex.

342³. They saw nothing but terrors before their eyes.

517. 'The rest became terrified' (Rev. xi. 13) = from fear when they saw the destruction of others. (= they were disturbed in mind and turned away. E. 677.)

936^e. The leaves of these trees strike terror (there) when they are shaken by a strong wind; but not the leaves of the others.

M. 263². On seeing (that devil) I was terrified.

D. 149. On the terror of those who have led a perverted life.

996. That the Truth terrifies.

— . In the other life, people can be struck with so much terror that they as it were melt away . . . even those who had lived almost devoid of terror. This terror comes forth from that Truth in which there is not goodness, or mercy; then such a terror penetrates the marrows, and as it were breaks the bones; for Truth condemns to the lowest Hell . . .

1754. That there are those who strike terrors.—There are Spirits who trust in their own forces, who are sometimes permitted to induce terrors, incredible ones. They are permitted to represent a naked arm. Ex.

1783. These were such as had formerly slain whole armies . . . for they rushed into the chambers of the brain, and injected such terror that one slew another . . . At this day however [they can do this] only a little (in certain cases of suicide). Ex.

4756. How certain evil ones are reduced into terror, on account of evils they had perpetrated (here).

D. Min. 4705. The crowd was dispersed, and so the terror (caused by those who correspond to cats) ceased.

4814. The terror caused by those who are called the east wind. Des.

E. 395^o. The consequent damnation is signified by 'they shall be clothed with terrors . . .' (Ezek.xxvi.16).

453¹¹. 'Thine heart shall meditate terror . . .' (Is. xxxiii.18)=remembrance of the state of the Church . . .

677⁴. 'Terror,' and 'consternation,' in the Word, = a state of the lower mind disturbed and changed by an imminent or visible danger to the life; but this is one thing with the good, and another with the evil. Ex. and Ill.

—⁸. These passages (show) that 'terror,' and 'dread,' in the Word, mean various disturbances of the lower mind from such things as cause amazement, and which are conjoined also with joy.

—⁹. Again, 'terror'=terror on account of evils and falsities from Hell; for these terrify the spiritual man, because they are the opposites of goods and truths, which the spiritual man loves, and the loss of which he fears. Ill.

721²⁰. 'Terror on every side' (Jer.iv.25)=spiritual death.

911¹². 'Terror' (Is.xvii.14)=destruction.

Testimony. Testimonium.

Bear Witness. Testari.

A. 1038³. A covenant . . . was (therefore) established by the laws of society given from the Lord in the Jewish Church, called testimonies . . .

[A.] 2720⁷. 'That it may be a witness unto me' (Gen. xxi.30)=certainty.

3478. The Lord Himself was represented by the testimony in the ark.

3488⁸. 'For a testimony' (Matt.xxiv.14)=that they may know, and not make it a pretext that they have been ignorant.

4195. 'Jegar-sahadutha' means 'the heap of witness,' in the idiom of Syria. Ex.

4197⁸. 'A witness—testis'=confirmation of good through truth, and of truth by good; and hence 'a testimony'=the good from which is truth, and the truth which is from good. Ill. —⁸, Ill. —⁹, Ex.

8535. 'Aaron laid it up before the testimony' (Ex.xvi.34)=that it was in the Divine presence. . . 'The testimony'=the Divine . . . because, in the universal sense, 'the testimony' means the Word; and the Word is truth Divine, thus the Lord.

—². That 'the testimony'=the Lord as to Divine truth, is evident from the ark in which was the Law . . . which is called 'the testimony.' That the tabernacle derived all its sanctity from it; and that the testimony was the Holy Divine itself, is evident from . . .

9410⁵. 'The word of their testimony' (Rev.xii.11) =truth Divine received by man. 9503².

9455. The testimony, or Law, in the ark, represented the Lord. 9482.

9485. The reason the testimony, or Law, in the ark =the Lord, is that 'the testimony'=Divine truth, (which) is the Lord in Heaven.

9503. 'Thou shalt put the testimony to the ark' (Ex.xxv.16)=the Divine truth, which is the Lord in Heaven. 'The ark'=Heaven; and 'the testimony,' the Divine truth, thus the Lord in Heaven. 9519. 9524.

—². A distinction is made in the Word between 'laws,' 'statutes,' 'judgments,' 'precepts,' 'testimonies,' etc. . . as in 'the testimony of Jehovah is firm, making wise the simple' . . . From these things it may be evident that 'testimony'=the Divine truth, which bears witness concerning the Lord; thus the Word; for this, in the supreme sense, treats of the Lord alone, and then, in the internal sense, bears witness concerning Him, that is, teaches Him, and the truths of faith and goods of love which are from Him. Ill.

—³. That the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord is called 'the testimony' from the fact that it testifies concerning the Lord. Ill. . . 'To this end came I into the world, that I may bear testimony to the Truth.'

9680². 'The testimony'=the Lord as to Divine truth. 9785. 10304. 10375. 10451.

9682. 'The testimony'=the Lord. E.283¹⁴. 727¹¹.

9818²². 'The testimony of Jesus' (Rev.xix.10)=the Divine truth which is from Him and about Him.

10196. 'The testimony'=the Lord as to the Word.

10206². 'The testimony' is described first, by which is meant the Lord.

Life 57. This Law is called 'a covenant' because it conjoins; and 'a testimony' because it bears witness. . .

62. 'False testimonies,' etc. with the concupiscences to them, are the sins which are to be shunned. Ex.

87. In proportion as anyone shuns false testimonies of every kind as sins, he loves the Truth. Gen.art. E.949³.

— . To 'bear witness falsely.' Def.

R. 6. 'Who bore witness to the Word of God, and to the testimony of Jesus Christ' (Rev.i.2)=who from the heart, and thus in light, receive Divine truth from the Word, and acknowledge the Human of the Lord to be Divine. . . The Angels bear witness, that is, see, acknowledge, and receive from the heart in light, and confess, the truths of the Word; especially this truth: that the Human of the Lord is Divine. 35. E.10, Ex. 52.

—². As to the spiritual signification of 'bearing witness,' it is predicated of the Truth, for the reason that in the world the Truth is to be borne witness to; and, when it has been borne witness to, it is acknowledged. But in Heaven the Truth itself bears witness concerning itself, because it is the very light of Heaven . . . And, as the Lord is the Truth itself . . . He is, in Heaven, the testimony of Himself. Hence it is evident what is meant by 'the testimony of Jesus Christ.' Ill.

325. 'The souls of them that were slain . . . for the testimony which they held' (Rev.vi.9)=those hated and rejected by the evil on account of . . . their acknowledgment of the Lord's Divine Human. E.392.

— . In Heaven, testimony is given solely to those who acknowledge the Lord's Divine Human; for the Lord is He who bears witness, and He gives to the Angels to bear witness.

490. That the Lord is the God of Heaven and earth, and that His Human is Divine, is 'the testimony.' Ill.

—². And that the second essential of the New Church, which is conjunction with the Lord by a life according to the commandments, is also 'the testimony.' Ill.

499. 'When they shall have finished their testimony' (Rev.xi.7)=after the Lord has taught that He is the God of Heaven and earth, and that there is conjunction with Him by a life according to the commandments. (=at the end of the Church, when the Divine of the Lord is no longer acknowledged, and hence there is no longer good of love and truth of doctrine. E.649.)

555. 'They overcame him . . . by the word of their testimony' (Rev.xii.11)=victory . . . through the acknowledgment that the Lord is the God of Heaven and earth, and that the precepts of the decalogue are precepts of life according to which men must live. (=through the confession and acknowledgment of the Divine in His Human. E.749). E.329²⁰.

— . 'Testimony'=the Divine Truth; in especial, these two things.

565. 'The remnant of her seed, who keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ' (ver.17)=novitiates, who receive the doctrine concerning the Lord, and concerning the decalogue. (=who acknowledge the Divine in the Lord's Human. E.770.)

669. 'The temple of the tabernacle of the testimony' (Rev.xv.5)=the inmost of Heaven, where is the Lord in His Holiness in the Word, and in the law which is the decalogue. (=interior Divine truth in the Word revealed by the Lord. E.948).

—². That the law which is the decalogue was called 'the testimony.' Ill. E.392^o.

818. 'I am of thy brethren who have the testimony of Jesus' (Rev.xix.10)=... that he is in conjunction with the Lord, through the acknowledgment of the Divine in His Human, and a life according to His commandments. E.1230.

819. 'For the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy' (id.)=that the acknowledgment that the Lord is the God of Heaven and earth, together with a life according to His commandments, is, in the universal sense, the all of the Word and its derivative doctrine. Ex. E.1232.

846. 'The souls of them that were beheaded for the testimony of Jesus' (Rev.xx.4)=those rejected... because they had worshipped the Lord, and had lived according to the truths of His Word. Ex.

T. 149. 'The testimony of Jesus'=confession from faith in Him.

285. This Law is called... 'the testimony,' because it confirms the articles of the covenant; for... 'testimony,' in the Word,=the confirmation and witnessing of the articles of (conjunction).

E. 10. For 'to bear witness'=to acknowledge at heart.

27². 'To bear witness,' and 'testimony.' Ill.

392⁴. That 'testimony'=confession of the Lord; and the Lord Himself. Ill. —⁷.

—⁵. That 'testimony'=the Lord; and, with man, the confession of the Lord from the heart; and in special, the acknowledgment of the Divine of the Lord in His Human. Ill. —⁹, Ill.

—⁸. Hence the Word before the Lord's advent is called 'the old Covenant;' and that after His advent, 'the New Covenant;' it is also called 'the Testament, Old and New;' but it should be called 'the Testimony.'

—¹¹. 'Testimony'=that in the Word which teaches goods of life; 'law,' that which teaches truths of doctrine. Ill.

803². 'False witness.' Def. (See T.321.)

1050. 'The testimony of Jesus'=the acknowledgment of the Divine of the Lord in His Human; and that He alone is to be worshipped and adored.

A. 5957. The Lord requires from man thanksgivings, etc. but not for His own sake. Ex.

9286. A continual thanksgiving for deliverance from condemnation. Sig. and Ex.

—². The 'three feasts'=thanksgiving because of regeneration.

9287. 'The feast of unleavened things'=worship and thanksgiving for purification from falsities. (=thanksgiving for deliverance from evil and the falsities of evil. 10655.)

9293. 'My faces shall not be seen empty'=the reception of good from mercy, and thanksgiving.

9294. 'The feast of harvest'=... thanksgiving for the implantation of truth in good.

9391⁴. Confession and thanksgiving from a good heart. Sig.

H. 9³. The Angels therefore refuse all thanksgiving for the good they do.

R. 249. 'When the animals gave glory, and honour, and thanksgiving' (Rev.iv.9)=that the Word ascribes all truth, good, and worship to the Lord... 'Thanksgiving'=all worship. (=Glorification. E.288.) (=the Lord's Divine Spiritual. R.372.)

372^o. 'Thanksgiving' is said of Divine truth; for man gives thanks from and through it.

522. 'We give Thee thanks, Lord God Almighty' (Rev.xi.17)... 'To give thanks'=the acknowledgment and Glorification of the Lord.

803. Thanksgiving, confession, and celebration of the Lord by the Angels of the lower Heavens. Sig. and Ex. 807. 808.

M. 25. After giving thanks—gratiarum dictionem—they went home.

D. 2098. The Lord does not demand any thanksgiving... and if a Spirit purposes to give thanks, he can by no means do so except from manifest permission.

E. 340. Thanksgiving that from the Lord is all good and truth... Sig. and Ex.

[E.] 466. 'Thanksgiving and honour' (Rev.vii.12)= that this is from the Divine good which proceeds from the Lord in the three Heavens. . . 'Thanksgiving and honour' are predicated of the reception of Divine good.

—^e. For 'thanksgiving' is made in the heart from good.

Theatre. Theatrum.

Theatrical. Theatralis.

A. 3000. The universe is a kind of theatre representative of the glory of the Lord . . .

348³. The universe is a theatre representative of the Lord's Kingdom; and this is a theatre representative of the Lord Himself.

5173². Hence it is that the universal visible world is a theatre representative of the Spiritual World.

R. 655². Such theatrical scenes are then turned into direful infernal ones.

M. 17⁵. The dramatic spectacles upon the stages (in that Heaven). Ex.

55³. Suddenly the plain on which they were standing was changed into a theatre (in which they held a discussion).

132. The trees on an elevated piece of ground formed as it were a theatre. Des.

T. 12. The universe is like a stage, upon which are continually exhibited testimonies that there is a God, and that He is one.

67. Therefore the universe may be called a theatre of uses.

136³. The Council of Nice thereby turned the Church into a theatre . . .

173². Like a player upon the stage who can personate two characters . . .

320². Like those who by theatrical things lead men away from true Divine worship; and from places of worship to playhouses.

381⁴. Like players who . . . as soon as they have put off their theatrical garments, visit brothels.

665³. They said, Is not the whole world like a stage on which every man acts his part?

D. 1880. There appeared, at Upsala, a theatre consisting of statues of a brown colour . . . one or two of which, like skeletons . . . made a beginning as if they would institute a theatrical play . . .

1882. Such Spirits appear (thus) . . . who in externals have lived as it were in theatrical things. They supposed that those who are theatrical, and love that life, and who are like them, namely, men of external life, are such.

D. Wis. i⁵. Those who took the way of folly, wished to enter what appeared in the shade like a palace, and behold it was a theatre of actors; and there they put on stage garments, and personated characters, and became fools.

Theologian. Theologus.

See NATURAL THEOLOGY.

A. 8944. They who have written on natural theology.

8987². They call the doctrine of charity and of life moral theology. 9300⁸. N. 257². E. 789². 796².

C. J. 45. In England there is a twofold theology; one from the doctrine of faith, and the other from the doctrine of life; the former with the priesthood, the latter with the laity.

S. 115^e. The writers on natural theology have not derived anything such (as relates to the immortality of the soul) from themselves; but merely confirm those things which they know from the Church . . .

F. 39. (The present Faith, or theology, stated seriatim.)

W. 72^e. This agrees with the mode of speech of the theologians . . .

374⁴. Everything of religion . . . has been banished from the sight of man by the dogma . . . that theological things, which are spiritual ones . . . are to be believed blindly . . .

R. 133. Upon this they build all theology. Sig. and Ex.

— The universal doctrine of the Salvation of man, which is called theology, is at this day this faith, consequently is 'the woman Jezebel.'

566. A discussion as to whether anyone can see any doctrinal theological truth in the Word, except from the Lord.

701, 702. That from a theology founded upon the doctrine of a Trinity of Persons . . . and upon the doctrine of justification by faith alone . . . there arise mere reasonings and cupidities of falsifying truths. Sig. and Ex.

721. 'To be drunken' = to be insane in spiritual things, that is, in theological ones.

914². They who have confirmed themselves in the dogma that the understanding is to see nothing in theological things . . . cannot see any truth in the light.

M. 313. All that which precedes with a theologian, and composes his erudition . . .

I. 20. How I, from being a philosopher, became a theologian. Ex.

—⁴. What Christian theologian does not study philosophy in the schools, before he is installed as a theologian? From what other source has he intelligence?

—⁵. He said, As you have become a theologian, explain what is your theology. I replied, These are its two principles: There is One God; and, There is a conjunction of charity and faith. He replied, Who denies these principles? I rejoined, the theology of the present day, when interiorly examined.

B. 30. That the universal theology in the Christian world at this day has been founded on the idea of three Gods . . .

39. That the dogmas of this theology appear to be erroneous, after the idea of a Trinity of Persons has been rejected . . .

40^c. Theological things reside in human minds above all others . . .

—^e. The idea of three Gods in theological things may be compared to . . .

57. Many will say, How can theological things be perceived in the understanding . . .

T. Title. The True Christian Religion, containing the Universal Theology of the New Church . . .

4. From the division of the Divinity into three Persons . . . a sort of frenzy has gone forth into universal theology . . .

14. For Divine things, which are called theological, constitute the Church.

15². Thus not only is the unity of God divided, but also theology itself . . .

75^e. This does not enter properly into a theological system such as that of this book . . .

98. For God . . . is the all in all of theology.

133. From this idea of God and redemption, universal theology has from being spiritual become in the lowest degree natural. Ex.

163. For on a just idea of God depends the universal theological body.

176. Then no genuine theological truth is perceived in its internal form . . .

181. The doctrine of justification by this faith alone . . . reigns with the clerical order, almost as the one only theological thing.

186. In what region of the mind reside theological things? At first I believed that they are in the highest region . . . Then an Angel stood before me, and said, Theological things, with those who love truth because it is truth, rise up into the highest region . . . (But) with those who love truth only for the glory of their reputation, theological things reside in the ultimate region, where scientifics are. (Continued under region.)

343. For faith enters into the parts of a theological system, as the blood into the members . . .

351. On account of the mystical and enigmatical faith which makes every point of the present theology.

391. What a . . . theological meagreness there is at this day. Ex.

396^e. For what is anything theological without the understanding?

482. For spiritual things, which are called theological, reside in the highest region of the mind, like the soul in the body. Ex. Can. God ii.9.

497. Cannot anyone think . . . after he has studied theological things, of the particulars (of these subjects)?

503^b. I asked, If you make man a pillar of salt in spiritual things, what are your theological things? Are they not spiritual? They replied, In our universal theology there is nothing spiritual which reason apprehends. Ex.

508³. To enter with the understanding into dogmas of faith composed from Own intelligence (causes) the understanding to be closed above, and gradually below also, to such an extent that theological things not only cause disgust, but are also obliterated . . .

619. Consequently, without truths there is no theology; and, where there is not this, there is no Church. Such is the condition at this day . . .

620^e. Such would all students of theology become, unless genuine truths from the Word were opened by the Lord.

627. If one of these three (faith, imputation, and the merit of Christ) were taken away, the present theology would become nothing . . .

628^e. For at this day the universal theological system hangs on this imputation, as a long chain does on a fixed hook.

644. From which this faith has been seen as if it were true theology itself. . . If, therefore, while reading the Word, they were to think of any other than this imputative faith, that light, together with all their theology, would be extinguished; and a darkness would arise by which the whole Christian Church would vanish. It has therefore been left to them, like 'the stump of roots in the earth . . . until seven times pass over' (Dan. iv. 23).

815. Free nations, in relation to the spiritual things of the Church, which are called theological, are like eagles . . .

—². There are like differences between the judgment of the one and that of the other in the mystical Things of theology. Ex.

D. 4570. Bedbugs are those who have been theologians, and have believed that religion is nothing but a political affair, which they have affected while supposing that when they die they will die altogether; and that theological things may be of service to them in the world to persuade and to dominate by.

5031. For they reject good works from their theology, and consign them to moral doctrine.

5814. They had scarcely wanted to hear about spiritual truth, except merely the first theological rudiments.

6025^e. I said to them that it is not good to devote one's self to theology and piety unless the Lord and the Word are acknowledged.

[D.] 602¹⁹. It was afterwards shown of what quality they are who have not denied God, the worship of God, and the theology, but still have not reflected anything thereupon. . . They very much lamented that interiorly they are honest and have something internal, which pains them. . . Good things to eat do them no good; everything good effects nothing with them. Bye and bye they throw themselves into some business; but, as soon as it is over, it comes again. They like to eat horseradish, strong.

6073. There was a certain person who in his youth had read the Word diligently; and afterwards, because he did not understand it, he rejected it from his attention, saying to himself that moral or natural theology teaches better. . . He came to the Angels; and they told him what use the Word performs: that a moral life without a theological life effects no use; it does not purify from evils, and alone does not conduce to eternal life. . .

6101. (This English bishop) was examined as to what he knew in theology; and he knew nothing but confirmations of the received faith. . .

E. 700²⁴. The Philistines counselled that this should be done; for at that time a knowledge of correspondences and representations was common; for this was their theology, well known to the priests and diviners. . .

805⁹. Where are the truths which should be of faith, and the goods which should be of life, which must make the genuine doctrine from the Word, and the derivative theology, in the Christian world? . . . Many in the Spiritual World, and all in Heaven, wonder that the theology in the Christian world has been reduced to such inanity and vacuity that at last it has all been brought within the compass of an utterance of thought which may be made even by the evil at the hour of death. . .

—¹³. Yet this faith, although it is empty, fills the entire theology of the Christian world.

819³. Close the understanding, bring forth reasonings, and cite confirmations from the sense of the letter of the Word, and you can persuade yourself of anything you wish, especially in theological things, which ascend into the interiors of the rational mind.

1100²³. There is a thought of light concerning God, and Divine things, which in Heaven are called celestial and spiritual things, and in the world ecclesiastical and theological things; and there is a thought not of light concerning them. Ex.

Ath. 58. In theological things, concerning anything whatever, the idea is formed according to each person's understanding; and this is the case also with those things of which it is said that the understanding must be kept under obedience to faith. Ex.

J. (Post.) 55. From these things it is evident that (the Moravians) have hatched their theology from their skull, and have afterwards consulted the Word. . .

353. The English have a twofold theology; one for the learned, and one for the unlearned.

Can. Trinity x. 7. God, faith, and charity are the three essentials of the Church, and on them universal theology, thus the Church, depends. And therefore where falsities are taught concerning these three things, and are imbued, man has not salvation.

Inv. 16. All theologians, when preaching, know nothing of the falsities of their religion. Ex.

21. The universal modern theology is nothing else than the Divine omnipotence. Ex.

Thesis. Thesis.

See HYPOTHESIS.

D. 1312. If Truths are received as theses or principles, innumerable Truths are then disclosed, and all things confirm them. Ex.

1469. They who from their own ingenuity assume certain theses, and from them want to hatch out spiritual and celestial Truths, or to confirm them, suffer trouble, because this is an inverted way.

1581. That Falsities assumed as a thesis are sometimes confirmed so that they do not know what the Truth is. . .

1737. (Such) will admit an interior sense in the Word while they want to affirm their own theses, or articles of faith. . . For in this way they agree with their theses.

1953. They who labour in controversies propose to themselves innumerable things. . . which agree with their theses, or propositions; and thus close the interior sense more and more. . .

1955. Even when the thesis which a man wants to defend is derived from a general Truth, it is obscured when the mind is too intent upon controversies. Ex. and Examp.

Thick Darkness. See DARKNESS-caligo.

Thicket. Dumetum.

A. 984^r. Those things which are not of the life are represented by rocky places and thickets . . .

M. 78^s. Beyond the forest, thickets appeared, and then grassy plains . . .

T. 614^e. The wild beasts flee to the thickets.

Thicket. Perplexum.

Entangled. Perplexus.

See under ENTWINE.

A. 2831. 'Caught in a thicket' (Gen.xxii.13)=entangled in the Scientific Natural, as is evident from the signification of . . . 'a thicket-perplexi aut implexi'—which is what is scientific.

—⁶. That a 'thicket,' or a 'thicket-implexum,' = the Scientific Natural, that is, that Scientific which inheres in the external memory. Ill.

—¹⁰. That scientifics, in the Word, are called 'thickets,' is because relatively they are such, especially when they breathe forth cupidities of the love of self and of the world, and principles of falsity. Celestial and spiritual love is what disposes into order the scientifics which are of the external memory; but the love of self and of the world perverts the order, and throws into confusion all things therein. The man does not notice these things, because he places order in perverted order, good in evil, and truth in falsity. Hence are those things in a thicket; and also from the fact that those things which are of the external memory, where scientifics are, relatively to those things which are in the internal memory, where rational things are, are in a thicket, or as in a dense forest. Ex.

4552. 'An oak' also signified that which was entangled, and, moreover, fallacious and false, since the lowest of the Natural is relatively entangled and fallacious, so far as it derives its Scientific and pleasure from the sensuous things of the body, and thus from fallacies.

6945^e. They who are of the Spiritual Church . . . are in such a thicket. Ex.

8133. 'They are entangled in the land' (Ex.xiv.3)=that they are in confusion as to the things of the Church.

9011^e. 'Thickets of the forest' (Is.x.34)=scientifics.

Thief. Under ROBBER and STEAL.

Thigh. Femur.

A. 2760^e. 'Upon His vesture and upon His thigh a name written' (Rev.xix.16)=truth and good. (His 'thigh'=the Divine good of His love. 3021^s.) 4973^s.

3021. 'Put thy hand under my thigh' (Gen.xxiv.2)=pledging it . . . to the good of conjugal love. . . 'The thigh'=the good of conjugal love . . .

(for) the thighs together with the loins correspond to conjugal love. This was known to the Most Ancients, and therefore (it was one of their rites) to place the hands under the thigh when they were being pledged to any good of conjugal love. 3045.

—². That 'the thigh'=conjugal love, from its correspondence. Ill.

—³. And as 'the thighs,' and 'the loins'=the things of conjugal love, they also=the things of love and charity. Ex.

— . That 'the thigh'=the good of celestial love and the good of spiritual love. Ill.

—⁴. Truth, because from good, is called 'the girdle of the thighs' (Is.xi.5) . . . Thus 'thighs' are predicated of the love of truth. —⁵.

—⁸. 'The belly and thighs of brass'=the third state of the Church, which was a state of natural good.

—^e. (Thus) 'the thighs,' and 'loins'=principally, conjugal love, and thence all genuine love; and, in the opposite sense, the opposite loves, which are the loves of self and of the world. Ill.

3915. 'The knees,' or 'thighs'=the things which are of conjugal love.

4272^s. 'He touched the hollow of his thigh' (Gen. xxxii.25)=where conjugal love is conjoined with natural good. (=where celestial spiritual good is conjoined with the natural good signified by 'Jacob;') for 'the thigh'=conjugal love, and thence all celestial and spiritual love . . . 4277.) 4280.

— . 'The hollow of Jacob's thigh out of joint' (id.) =that in the posterity of Jacob that conjunction was altogether impaired and displaced. (=that truth had not yet the power of conjoining itself altogether with good. 4278.) 4281, Ex.

4280. 'The hollow of the thigh'=where there is the conjunction of conjugal love. That conjunction there with natural good is signified, is because the thigh is there conjoined with the feet.

—². That 'the thigh'=conjugal love . . . was well known to the Ancient Church. . . With them the thighs and loins=what is conjugal . . . The thighs have this signification from the correspondence of all man's members with the Grand Man.

—⁴. These loves are said to be conjoined with natural good, when the internal man is conjoined with the external . . . This conjunction is what is signified by 'the hollow of the thigh.'

4302. 'He halted upon his thigh' (ver.31)=that truths were not yet disposed into such an order that all together with good might enter into celestial spiritual good. . . 'The thigh'=celestial spiritual good.

4303. 'The hollow of the thigh'=where there is the conjunction of conjugal love with natural good; and consequently where there is the influx of spiritual truth into natural good.

4317. 'The thigh'=conjugal love, and thence all celestial and spiritual love; and 'the hollow of the thigh'=where there is the conjunction of conjugal love, and also of all celestial and spiritual love, with natural good. Hence 'to touch it,' or to injure it so that halting results,=to destroy the good of these loves.

[A]. 5051. Such are those who belong to the province of the thighs next above the knees. Des. (Compare D.2612.)

— It was shown that there is a communication through the feet with the soles and heels, (as) is evident from that great nerve in the thigh, which sends forth its branches not only through the loins to the members of generation . . . but also through the feet to the soles and heels. It was then disclosed what is meant by the hollow and the sinew of the thigh which was put out of joint with Jacob. D.2613.

5057. Such things were never commanded, nor permitted, except to those the sinew of whose thigh was out of joint. D.2617.

6024⁷. 'All the soul that came with Jacob . . . which came out of his thigh' (Gen.xlvi.26)=all the truths and goods . . . which were from the marriage.

6179. 'Put thy hand under my thigh' (Gen.xlvii.29) = a holy pledging. . . For 'the thigh'=that which is of conjugal love. Ex.

6265. 'Joseph brought them out from his thighs' (Gen.xlviii.12)=the good of the Voluntary and the truth of the Intellectual from the affection of love on the part of spiritual good. . . 'The thighs'=the affection of love.

6641. 'All the soul which came out of the thigh of Jacob' (Ex.i.5)=all things which are from general truth. . . 'The thigh'=conjugal love, (thus) all love, both celestial and spiritual; and therefore 'to come out of the thigh'=truth and good from the heavenly marriage, consequently the truth and good of the Church.

8408³. The good which is 'the flesh,' here, (Ezek.xxiv. 4) is 'the thigh and the shoulder.'

9828³. Girdles of the thighs'=spiritual goods and truths in the ultimates or extremes.

9961. 'From the loins even to the thighs' (Ex.xxviii. 42)=the extension of the exterior things of conjugal love; for 'the loins and thighs'=the things of conjugal love . . . 'the thighs,' those which belong to 'its' exteriors . . . because they are below . . . Therefore as by the thighs is meant the lower part of the loins, which look towards the feet, the exterior or lower things of conjugal love are signified by them.

10379⁶. The feet correspond to natural things; the thighs to celestial ones; and the knees to the conjunction of these.

10488. 'Put ye everyone his sword upon his thigh' (Ex.xxxii.27)=truth from good fighting against falsity from evil. . . 'The thigh'=the good of love. It is said 'the sword upon the thigh,' because truth combating against falsity and evil, and overcoming, must be from good. Ex. and Ill. 3021⁴.

R. 830. The Lord's 'thigh' (Rev.xix.16)=the Word as to Divine good. 'The thighs,' and 'loins'=conjugal love; and, as this love is the fundamental love of all loves, 'the thighs' and 'loins'=the good of love. . . Therefore, when 'the thigh' is said of the Lord, there is signified Himself as to the good of love; here, the Word also as to the same.

D. 1189. (The correspondence of the left thigh,) 1686.

2611. On the dislocated sinew of Jacob's thigh. Ex. 2613⁶. 2617.

2612. 6110¹⁵. The thighs (in women) are broader, because the thighs=conjugal love.

—²⁰. How the husband's life enters his wife through the thighs, and through love.

E. 288⁹. 'Gird Thy sword upon Thy thigh' (Ps.xlv. 3)=Divine truth combating from Divine good. 2987. 684¹⁵.

355²⁵. 'His pleasure is not in the thighs of a man' (Ps.cxlvii.10)=(not in) those things which are from man's Own will, from which are nothing but evils.

—³⁵. 'The thighs'=the good of love.

618⁸. 'Her belly should swell, and her thigh fall away' (Num.v.27)=that the Conjugal would perish, that is, conjugal love itself, both spiritual and natural; 'the womb,' or 'belly'=that love spiritual; and 'the thigh,' the same natural.

780⁶. 'Righteousness shall be the girdle of His loins, and truth the girdle of His thighs' (Is.xi.5)=that the Divine good which proceeds from the Lord's Divine love will conjoin those in Heaven and in the Church who are in love to Him; and that the Divine truth which proceeds from Him will conjoin those in Heaven and in the Church who are in love towards the neighbour. . . 'His thighs'=those in love towards the neighbour.

1182². 'To make bare the thigh passing through the rivers' (Is.xlvii.2)=to adulterate goods by means of reasonings.

Thin. Tenuis.

Thinness. Tenuitas.

A. 8443⁶. (This cloud appears) in density or tenuity according to the quality of the Truths.

H. 120. The Angels are covered over with a thin cloud . . .

M. 182⁶. (The Greeks said) We believed that Souls were . . . thin, because spiritual.

E. 799¹⁵. 'Who stretcheth out the heavens as something thin' (Is.xl.22)=omnipotence to enlarge the Heavens at will.

Thing. Res.

A. 801^e. So it is with every Thing (in the Word); for Things are altogether as are their subjects, for they are of their subjects, because they come forth from them. Things separated from their subject, or from their substance, are no Things. This is why Things are described in the Word as to (both the understanding and the will). In this way the description of every Thing is full.

1174. Spiritual and celestial Things. 1197. 1403.

1197. They are then Things of memory and Things of life simultaneously.

1361. Either persons, or Things . . .

1970. Visions of those Things which really come forth there . . . are nothing but Things which can be seen with the eyes of the spirit.

2094. See So, here.

2157. In everything in the Word there are the affection and the subject matter. . . And the spiritual Angels perceive what the Word is in the internal sense as to the subject matter.

2171. Everything has relation to the Thing which is treated of in the internal sense.

2184¹. All these things . . . are predicated according to the subject treated of.

4264. All numbers, in the Word, = Things.

—². Where numbers were read in the Word, Things were understood by the Angels.

4345². For there is nothing in the nature of Things which does not exist from other things.

5075. 'Words,' in the Original, = also Things. Ex. 5272, Ex.

— . As nothing which comes forth in the universe is anything, that is, is a Thing, unless it is from Divine good through Divine truth, therefore 'words' in the Hebrew, are also Things. Sig. 5272².

5147⁵. Therefore all the words in the Word are significative of heavenly Things, and all the Things are representative of them.

5225. In the internal sense, 'no one' = the negation of a Thing . . . for the idea of person is there turned into the idea of Thing. . . The reason is that in the Spiritual World, not persons, but Things, come under the view; for persons limit the idea . . . whereas Things do not . . . but extend it to the infinite. Examps.

5948³. Essentials, in the Word, are called 'Things' . . .

6040². Ideas are thus abstracted from persons, and determined to Things; and Things, that is, goods and truths, are what live with man, and cause man to live. . .

6648^e. For every Thing which is of wisdom is of infinite extension; and the Things of wisdom are infinite in number.

6811. (The Spirits of Mercury) viewed the Things themselves; for Things to which earthly things do not adhere bear the mind upwards.

8717³. This Thing falls with difficulty into the idea . . . Such attribute contingent Things to dead causes . . . When Things succeed happily they say it is from God . . .

10217⁸. 'The number of a man' = the condition and state of that Church.

H. 156. So the states of the various Things which are outside the Angels are changed.

W. 209². As love and wisdom are not abstract Things; but are substance; so are all Things which are called civil, moral, and spiritual. 211.

P. 212^e. As the Divine Providence is in the smallest particulars of Things so insignificant, what must it not be in those of Things not insignificant, which are the affairs of peace and war in the world, and the Things of salvation and life in Heaven.

217³. The good do uses for the sake of the honours and gains of the Thing itself . . . whereas the evil regard the honours and gains of the person as the principal causes, and those of the Thing as the instrumental ones. But who does not see that the person . . . is for the sake of the Thing which he administers. Examps.

R. 425. The Things of the Church.

D. 5604. In the Word in the other life there are not names, nor numbers, but, in their stead, Things. 5618^e.

E. 411²³. 'The abominable Thing' which they did (Jer.xviii.13)=that they turned the goods of the Church into evils, and its truths into falsities, and from these worshipped Jehovah.

J. (Post.) 31. In the connection of Things.

De Verbo 3⁷. Every letter (there) means a Thing. —.

Third. Under THREE.

Third Heaven. Coelum tertium.

Inmost Heaven. Coelum intimum.

Highest Heaven. Coelum supremum.

Celestial Heaven. Coelum coeleste.

See CELESTIAL ANGEL, and CELESTIAL KINGDOM.

A. 634^e. (Thus the understanding of truth and will of good) can be predicated only of the celestial man, or of the Angels of the Third Heaven.

996. The angelic or Third Heaven. Des.

1042^e. The Celestial Heaven, or that of the celestial Angels, was represented 'from the loins upwards.'

1053^e. In the Heaven of the Celestial Angels, the Lord Himself is a Sun; and in that of the spiritual Angels, a Moon. 1529. 6832².

1389^e. Their faculties are elevated . . . at last to the angelic faculties of the Third Heaven.

A.] 1399. Every Spirit has communication with the interior and the Inmost Heaven . . .

1525. All good Spirits in the First Heaven, all angelic Spirits in the Second, and all Angels in the Third, are distinguished in general into the celestial and the spiritual; the celestial being those in the love of good, and the spiritual those in the love of truth.

1752^e. Angels properly so called are in the Third Heaven.

1799². Angels, who are in the Third Heaven, are internal.

— The Lord . . . wills to have all near Himself . . . in the Third Heaven.

1802. So the Angels in the Second Heaven are subordinate to those in the Third. This subordination . . . is the influx of . . . the Lord's life through the Third Heaven into the Second; and, through this, into the First.

—². In proportion as there is what is internal with an Angel of the Third Heaven, in the same proportion he is an heir of the Lord's Kingdom; (and the same with the other Heavens). Ex.

—³. So with angelic Spirits; before they can be taken up into the Third Heaven, or among Angels, (they must be instructed in the goods of love and the truths of faith).

1906. These inflow through the Heaven of innocence and peace, which is the Inmost.

1914³. For the Angels of the Third Heaven do not think from intellectual truth; but from the interior of the Rational.

1999³. The Heaven nearest the Lord is formed of these human internals; but is above the Inmost angelic Heaven.

2306. The innocent ones themselves, who are in the Inmost Heaven, and thus nearest the Lord, appear before the eyes of other Angels as naked little children.

2576⁴. This 'veil' represented the proximate and inmost appearances of rational good and truth in which are the Angels of the Third Heaven. Ex.

2736. They who have lived in conjugal love . . . are in the Inmost Heaven, which is called the Heaven of innocence. Through this Heaven the Lord inflows into conjugal love; and Angels from this Heaven are present with the men who live in conjugal love. They are also present with infants in their first age.

2744. The progression of the delights . . . (was) even to the celestial blessednesses themselves of the Inmost Heaven, or that of innocence.

3344. The speech of the Third Heaven. (See SPEAK, here.) 3346. 6996². D.4821.

3475. (How representatives, such as those of the Word, appear in the First, Second, and Third Heavens. Fully quoted under HEAVEN.)

3691⁴. They who are in love to the Lord itself, so as to have a perception of the love, are in a higher degree of good and truth, and are in the Inmost and Third Heaven, thus are nearer the Lord, and are called celestial Angels.

3720. 'The house of God' . . . in a more universal sense, = the Heaven of the Celestial Angels.

3739. It is from this that the proximate image of the Lord is the Inmost Heaven, which is the Heaven of innocence and peace, where the celestial are. This Heaven, because the nearest to the Lord, is called His 'likeness.'

3969⁴. Those who are in love to the Lord, and thence in charity, constitute the Third or Inmost Heaven.

—¹⁰. For the celestial constitute the Third Heaven, which is the Inmost; but the spiritual the Second Heaven . . . and, there, they are one, because the one inflows into the other, namely, the Celestial [Heaven] into the Spiritual one; the Spiritual Kingdom being as a plane to the Celestial. Thus are they co-established. Sig. For the Divine Celestial in the Third or Inmost Heaven is love to the Lord; and the Celestial Spiritual there is charity; (which) is the principal in the Second Heaven.

4240. For the Inmost or Third Heaven is celestial, because in love to the Lord . . .

4279. There are three Heavens; and the Inmost Heaven is called the Third Heaven . . . and therefore the Word, when it ascends as it descends . . . in the Third Heaven is celestial; for that Heaven is the Celestial Heaven.

—². The sense of the Word is according to the Heavens: the supreme sense of the Word, in which the Lord is treated of, is for the Inmost or Third Heaven . . . Man has communication with the three Heavens; for he was created unto the image of the three Heavens . . .

4286². There are three Heavens. . . The Inmost or Third Heaven is celestial; for the Angels there are called celestial; for they are in love to the Lord, and are thence most closely conjoined with the Lord; and are therefore pre-eminent to all the rest in wisdom. They are innocent, and thence are called Innocences and Wisdoms. These Angels are distinguished into internal and external ones; and the internal ones are more celestial than the external.

4411. The light which proceeds from the Lord, when it inflows into the Inmost or Third Heaven, is received there as good, which is called charity . . .

4581. The Angels of the Inmost or Third Heaven are in the good of love; but . . . the Angels of the Middle or Second Heaven are in the good of faith.

4605². 'Judah' = celestial good, such as is in the Inmost or Third Heaven.

4618³. The Inmost or Third Heaven does indeed live distinct from the Heavens which are below it; but still unless there were reception in the Second Heaven, the wisdom there would be dissipated. (Continued under HEAVEN.)

4750. They who are in love to the Lord are most closely conjoined with Him, and are therefore in the Inmost Heaven, where they are in a state of innocence, from which they appear to the rest as little children, and indeed as loves in form. Others are not able to go near them; and whenever they are sent to others, they are encompassed by other Angels, by whom the sphere of their love is tempered, which would otherwise throw into a swoon those to whom they are sent ; for the sphere of their love penetrates even to the marrows.

5052. It is the Inmost Heaven through which the Lord insinuates conjugal love. The Angels there are in peace beyond all others. . . The Angels who are there are the wisest of all ; and from their innocence they appear to others as little children ; for they love little children much more than their fathers and mothers do. They are present with infants in the womb ; and, through them, the Lord takes care that the infants there are nourished and protected : thus they have charge over those who are with child.

5145². The interior Rational constitutes the first degree : in this are the celestial Angels, or, in this is the Inmost or Third Heaven.

—³. Hence it is that man after death, if he has lived a life of charity and love, can be transferred even into the Third Heaven. But, that he may be such, it is necessary that all the degrees in him should be well terminated. Ex.

5321². Not even the Angels in the Inmost Heaven can apprehend that which proceeds immediately from the Divine Itself, because it is infinite . . .

5328. When the whole Heaven is presented before the sight as one man, the Inmost or Third Heaven relates to the head . . . because it is celestial . . .

5492. The literal sense . . . passes into a sense still more remote when it goes to the Inmost Heaven, where all and each of the things of the Word pass into affections which are of love and charity . . .

5608. The Inmost or Third Heaven consists of those who are in innocence ; for they are in love to the Lord ; and, as the Lord is innocence itself, therefore those who are there, being in love to Him, are in innocence ; and although they are the wisest of all in the Heavens, they appear to others as little children . . . 7877².

5922². It is called 'the glory of Jehovah' relatively to the Inmost Heaven . . .

6013. For the Inmost or Third Heaven is the Heaven of innocence . . .

6065. In good from an origin in the will were the Most Ancients of the Celestial Church . . . in this good are those in the Inmost or Third Heaven . . .

6313². The three Heavens are distinct no otherwise than according to the elevations towards the interiors ; thus according to the degrees of light : the Third Heaven, being in the inmost things, is in the greatest light, thus in wisdom which far surpasses that of the lower Heavens.

6366. The Celestial Kingdom is the Third Heaven. (Explained under CELESTIAL KINGDOM, here.) 6417. 6436. 8796. 8945. 9543².

6524³. Those are called wise who are in the Third or Inmost Heaven, thus who are nearest the Lord . . .

6701. (The Angels from the various Earths) are not consociated together in the Heavens, except in the Inmost or Third Heaven : they who come thither are together from every Earth, and constitute this Heaven in the closest conjunction. 7078.

7058². This conjunction (of the truth which proceeds immediately from the Divine with that which proceeds mediately) exists especially with the Angels who are in the Third or Inmost Heaven, and are called celestial : these have an exquisite perception of both truths, and thus of the Lord's presence : the reason is that they are pre-eminently in good ; for they have the good of innocence ; and therefore they are nearest the Lord, and are in refulgent and as it were flaming light ; for they see the Lord as a Sun, the rays of which are such from their propinquity. 9865².

7211². The reason the Divine Human is the all in Heaven, is that no one there, not even an Angel of the Inmost or Third Heaven, can have any idea of the Divine Itself. Sig. and Ex.

7270². Such is the successive order as far down as the Heaven nearest the Lord, which is the Third Heaven, where are those who are innocent and wise . . .

7836⁵. In the Third or Inmost Heaven, which is proximately above the Heaven where the spiritual are . . . innocence reigns ; for the Lord, who is innocence itself, inflows immediately into this Heaven. (Continued under SECOND HEAVEN.)

—³. That they who are in the Inmost or Third Heaven are in such a state that they perceive what the truth of faith is, and therefore do not make it a matter of memory knowledge. Refs.

8443². Truth Divine in the third degree is such as is in the Inmost or Third Heaven, and is such that not a whit of it can be apprehended by man.

8665². 'Peace' = the Lord, and thence the state of the Inmost Heaven, where are they who are in love to the Lord, and thence in innocence ; for these are pre-eminently in peace, because in the Lord. Their state is called Divine Celestial.

8794⁴. The extension of life of those of the Spiritual Church . . . is not to the Third Heaven where the celestial are ; because the man of the Spiritual Church cannot receive the Divine such as it is in the Inmost or Third Heaven where the celestial are, except so generally that it does not come to any of their perception. Ex.

8802. By 'the jubilee' was represented the marriage of good and truth which is in the Inmost Heaven.

8827. 'At the head of the mountain' = in the Inmost Heaven. Ex.

— . There are three Heavens. Ennum. In the Third Heaven there is more of the Divine than in the two lower ones ; for there they are under the Lord's immediate view, because those who are there are in love to the Lord, and thence pre-eminently in peace and innocence. The Angels who are there are called celestial Angels

... Hence the Divine in this Heaven is called the Divine Celestial.

[A.] 8830. Lest those of the Spiritual Church should desire to be in the Heaven where is what is celestial, (or in the Celestial Heaven). Sig. and Ex. 8842.

8920². The form of truth Divine, that is, the perception, thought, and utterance of it, in the Inmost or Third Heaven, so transcends that in the Second Heaven, that in the latter it cannot be apprehended, it is so Divine and supereminent; for it contains innumerable things which cannot be uttered in the Second Heaven. It consists of mere changes of state as to the affections of love.

8945. Those are called celestial things which are in the Inmost Heaven; those spiritual ones which are in the Middle one.

9186². All the ideas of thought of the Angels in the Third Heaven... are from good; and they are consequently in wisdom itself.

9212². They who are solely in good, as are the Angels of the Inmost Heaven, who are called celestial, appear naked.

9216³. The Inmost or Third Heaven inflows into the Second Heaven...

9262. Innocence is to acknowledge at heart that of ourselves we will nothing but evil and perceive nothing but falsity; and that all the good of love and truth of faith are from the Lord alone. None can acknowledge this at heart except those who have been conjoined with the Lord through love. Such are they who are in the Inmost Heaven, which is thence called the Heaven of innocence; and therefore the good which they have is interior good; for it is the Divine good of love which proceeds from the Lord which is received by those in the Heaven of innocence. Hence, too, they appear naked, and also as little children. 9301². 10132³.

9389². The supreme sense of the Word, which treats of the Lord alone, is presented especially in the Inmost or Third Heaven...

9404². The Heaven of the Lord is divided into the Celestial Heaven, and the Spiritual Heaven; and the Celestial Heaven is the Inmost or Third Heaven; and the Spiritual Heaven is the Middle or Second one.

9407. The Word is the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord... and which, in its progression through the Heavens, in the Inmost Heaven is celestial...

9408. 'Habitation' = the truth Divine proceeding from the Lord as received in the Inmost Heaven, which, relatively, is good.

9455. 'The ark' = the Inmost Heaven.

9457². 'There are three Heavens... In the Inmost Heaven reigns the good of love to the Lord... 9466.

9468³. The Word is the Divine truth proceeding... and appears, in the Inmost Heaven, as a flaming light.

9489. All heights in Heaven from its Sun as a centre are differences of good and the derivative truth. Hence those in the Inmost Heaven are nearer the Lord, because they are in the good of love to Him, thus pre-eminently in good; those in the Middle Heaven are more distant, because they are in a lower good; and still more those in the Ultimate Heaven.

9543. Thus (by 'the table') is described the Inmost or Third Heaven as to the reception of good from the Lord. Ex.

9549. The Inmost or Third Heaven is celestial; and the Middle or Second is spiritual; and the Lord inflows through the Celestial Heaven, which is in the good of love to Him, into the Spiritual Heaven, which is in the truth of faith in Him. Sig.

9592. The medium uniting the Second and the Inmost Heaven was represented by the veil between the habitation and the ark. 9670, Ex.

9666². The inmost things in Heaven, being nearer the Lord, are in a more perfect state than the more exterior ones. Hence it is that the Inmost Heaven is in wisdom and intelligence, and thence in happiness, surpassing the Heavens which are beneath.

9670². The Inmost Heaven and the Middle one are so distinct that it is not possible to enter from one into the other; but still they constitute one Heaven through middle angelic Societies, which are of such a genius as to be able to accede to the good of both Heavens. Sig.

— To the Angels of the Inmost Heaven correspond those things with man which pertain to the provinces of the heart and of the cerebellum. Ex.

9673. The guard to prevent the commingling of... the Middle Heaven and the Inmost Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

9679. The manifestation of the Inmost Heaven within that uniting medium. Sig.

9680. 'The Holy of holies' = the good which reigns in the Inmost Heaven.

— The good of love to the Lord in the Inmost Heaven is the internal good there, and the good of mutual love is the external good there... In each Heaven there is an internal and an external, as in the Church.

—². 'The ark' = the Inmost Heaven where the Lord is. The Lord is also in the Middle Heaven; but He is more present in the Inmost Heaven; for they who have been conjoined with the Lord through the good of love are with Him...

9682. 'The mercy-seat upon the ark in the Holy of holies' = the hearing and reception of all things which are of worship from the good of love in the Inmost Heaven from the Lord. 'The ark of the testimony' = the Inmost Heaven where the Lord is.

—². How the case is with the presence of the Lord in the Inmost, Middle, and Ultimate Heavens. Ex.

9687. In the Inmost Heaven reigns the good of love to the Lord; in the Middle Heaven the good of charity towards the neighbour; and in the Ultimate Heaven the good of faith. Sig. 9741, Ex. 9933³, Ex.

9741. There are three Heavens... The Inmost Heaven was represented by the inmost of the habitation, where the ark was; the Middle one by the habitation outside the veil; and the Ultimate one by the court. Fully ex.

9810. The Divine Celestial is the Divine of the Lord in the Inmost Heaven; for the Angels there are called celestial Angels, and are receptions of Divine truth in their voluntary part. The Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord, when received in this part, is called celestial good . . .

9812². Divine celestial good, which makes the Third or Inmost Heaven, is the good of love to the Lord . . .

9865. (The three stones in the first row of the breast-plate) correspond to the things which are in the Inmost Heaven, where reigns celestial love, that is, love to the Lord.

9868. In the Inmost Heaven there are the celestial love of good, and the celestial love of truth; the former is its internal, and the latter its external.

9933². In each Heaven there is an internal and an external. The internal in the Inmost Heaven is the good of love to the Lord; and the external is the good of mutual love, which is the love of good for the sake of good, and is what is meant by the truth of celestial love. Sig.

9992. In the Inmost Heaven, which is also called the Third Heaven, there is the Celestial. Ex.

10005⁴. The head with man corresponds to the Inmost or Third Heaven, where there is celestial good . . . 10062.

10130³. All are consociated according to loves: those in love to the Lord from the Lord are consociated in the Inmost Heaven . . .

10159. It is a memorable circumstance that Angels who are elevated into the sphere of the Third Heaven come into a manifest perception (that God is in the human form). The reason is that all in that Heaven are in the Lord's love, and thus as it were in the Lord . . .

10181³. The things in a more interior degree are more perfect than those in a more exterior one, and there is no likeness between them except by correspondences. Hence it is that those who are in the Inmost Heaven are more perfect than those in the Middle one; and these are more perfect than those in the Ultimate one.

10195. In the interior Heaven, where it is conjoined with the Inmost Heaven. Sig. and Ex.

10252. 'The oil of anointing' = celestial good, which is the Divine good of the Lord's Divine love in the Inmost Heaven.

10265. In the Inmost Heaven all things of the Word are applied to the Divine Human of the Lord; for the Angels there think immediately from the Lord, and perceive the Word in its inmost sense, which is the celestial sense. Examp.

10276³. In the Inmost Heavens, there are affections of good and truth from the Lord with the Angels which make their life and happiness. These affections are presented in the Ultimate Heaven in external forms . . .

10438^e. 'Mount Zion' = the Inmost Heaven.

10606. (The rise of the new revelation of Divine truth) from the Inmost Heaven where is the Divine love. Sig. and Ex. . . For in the Inmost Heaven there reigns celestial love, which is love to the Lord from the Lord; whereas in the lower Heavens there reigns spiritual love, which is charity towards the neighbour. H.15.

H. 8. The Angels of the Inmost Heaven clearly perceive and feel the influx (of the Divine which proceeds from the Lord) . . .

29. There are three Heavens, and they are most distinct from each other: the Inmost or Third, the Middle or Second, and the Ultimate or First; and they follow in order and subsist together as do the highest of man which is called his head, his middle which is called his body, and his ultimate which is called his feet; and as the highest part of a house, its middle, and its lowest.

31. The Divine which inflows from the Lord and is received in the Third or Inmost Heaven is called Celestial, and from it the Angels there are called celestial Angels . . .

—e. (Those in the First Heaven) are called celestial natural who receive influx from the Third or Inmost Heaven, which is the Celestial Heaven. (There are internal and external Angels in each Heaven. 32.)

33. Those with whom the third degree of the interiors has been opened, are in the Inmost Heaven . . . The interiors are opened by the reception of Divine good and Divine truth. They who are affected with Divine truths, and admit them at once into the life, thus into the will and derivative act, are in the Inmost or Third Heaven, and are there according to the reception of good from the affection of truth . . . 267.

34. All perfection increases towards the interiors . . . As the interiors with the Angels of the Inmost Heaven have been opened in the third degree, their perfection immensely surpasses that of the Angels in the Middle Heaven . . .

49². They who are in the Inmost Heaven, and in the middle there, have extension into the universal Heaven . . .

65². In general, the Highest or Third Heaven forms the head down to the neck (of the Grand Man) . . .

70. The Societies which are in the Inmost or Highest Heaven, and in the middle there, appear in the most perfect and beautiful human form.

75^e. I saw an Angel of the Inmost Heaven: he had a brighter and more resplendent face than the Angels of the lower Heavens. I surveyed him, and he had the human form in all perfection.

178^e. But the Angels of the Inmost Heaven are naked.

206. The communication of the Third or Inmost Heaven with the Second . . .

207. That there is no communication of one Heaven with another, but an influx, may be evident from their relative situation: the Third or Inmost Heaven is above . . .

208. One Heaven is conjoined with another, or a Society of one Heaven with a Society of another, by the Lord alone, through influx immediately and mediately . . . and therefore the greatest precaution is taken to prevent any Angel of a higher Heaven from looking down into a Society of a lower one, and speaking with anyone there. As soon as this is done, the Angel is deprived of his intelligence and wisdom. Ex. . . With those in the Inmost Heaven, the third or inmost degree of life is open . . . As soon, therefore, as an Angel of the Third Heaven looks down into a Society of the Second, and speaks with anyone there, his third degree is closed, and he is deprived of his wisdom . . . for he has none in the second and first degrees. Sig.

[H.] 209. See HEAVEN, here.

210. The thoughts and affections, and also the discourse, of the Angels of the Inmost Heaven, are never perceived in the Middle Heaven, because they so far transcend it. But, when it pleases the Lord, there appears from these thoughts something like a flame in the lower Heavens; and the thoughts in the Middle Heaven appear as something lucid in the lowest Heaven . . .

211. (Thus) the form of Heaven . . . in the Inmost Heaven is the most perfect of all; in the Middle Heaven it is also perfect, but in a lower degree; and in the Ultimate Heaven in a degree still lower; and the form of one Heaven subsists from another through the influx from the Lord.

227. The doctrine of the Inmost Heaven is fuller of wisdom than that of the Middle Heaven; and this is fuller of intelligence than that of the Ultimate Heaven; for the doctrines are adapted to the perception of the Angels in each Heaven. The essential of all the doctrines is to acknowledge the Divine Human of the Lord.

260^c. The writing in the Inmost Heaven. (See WHITE, here.) 261. S.90². D.5562. De Verbo 37.

267. Hence the wisdom of the Angels of the Inmost Heaven immensely transcends that of the Angels of the Middle Heaven; and the wisdom of these that of the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven. Ex.

277^d. Infants receive influx from the Inmost Heaven . . . 332^e.

295. In infancy Spirits are present who are in innocence, thus who communicate with the Heaven of innocence, which is the Inmost or Third Heaven . . . And in old age Spirits are present who are in wisdom and innocence, thus who communicate with the Inmost or Third Heaven.

382. Genuine conjugal love is in the Inmost Heaven; because the Angels there are in the marriage of good and truth, and also in innocence. The Angels of the lower Heavens are also in conjugal love, but only so far as they are in innocence. Ex.

459. Hence it is that the Angels in the Inmost Heaven are the most beautiful, because they are forms of celestial love . . .

—^e. I have seen angelic faces of the Third Heaven, which were such that no painter with all his art could ever give anything of such light to colours as to equal a thousandth part of the light and life which appeared in their faces . . .

489³. They who have at once applied to life the doctrinal things of the Church which are from the Word, are in the Inmost Heaven, and are pre-eminently to others in the delight of wisdom. They see Divine things in every single object. The objects they do indeed see, but the corresponding Divine things inflow at once into their minds, and fill them with bliss, with which all their sensations are affected: hence all things as it were laugh, sport, and live before their eyes.

W. 67. The third degree is opened only with those who become Angels of the Third Heaven: these are they who see God.

85^e. The Angels of the Third Heaven see the Sun constantly . . .

110^e. On account of the differences of the reception of the Lord by the Angels, the Heavens appear distinct from each other. The Highest Heaven, which is called the Third, appears above the Second, and this above the First; not that the Heavens stand apart, but that they appear to do so; for the Lord is equally present with those in the Ultimate Heaven as with those in the Third Heaven.

179. The Angels of the Third Heaven so far excel in love and wisdom those of the Second, and these the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven, that they cannot be together. Ex.

202. Neither can the Angels of the Middle Heaven ascend to the first threshold of the perfections of the Highest Heaven. Ex.

205. The angelic Heavens are in successive order; the Third Heaven being the highest; the Second one middle; and the First lowest. Such is their relative situation.

215^e. The Angels of the Third Heaven perceive from a person's will the end for which he acts; and those of the Second Heaven, the cause through which the end operates.

231. That these three degrees are in man, may be evident from the elevation of his mind even to the degrees of love and wisdom in which are the Angels of the Second and of the Third Heaven.

258. Every man is born into the faculty of understanding truths even to the inmost degree, in which are the Angels of the Third Heaven . . .

427². These are they who are in the Third Heaven, who are the wisest of all. Such have they become who in the world at once applied to life the Divine things they heard, by turning away from evils as infernal, and adoring the Lord alone. As they are in innocence, they appear to others as little children; and as they say nothing about the truths of wisdom, and there is nothing of conceit in their discourse, they appear simple. Nevertheless, when they hear anyone speaking, they perceive from the tone all things of his love, and from the speech all things of his intelligence. These are they who are in the marriage of love and wisdom from the Lord, and who relate to the Cardiac of Heaven.

P. 44. The Angels of the Third Heaven, being the wisest of the Angels, perceive (that they are the Lord's); and call this freedom itself; whereas to be led by self they call slavery. Ex.

158. The Angels of the Third Heaven perceive the influx of Divine love and Divine wisdom from the Lord: and, as they perceive it . . . they say that they live from the Lord, and not from themselves . . . and they also love and will it to be so; and yet they are in all the appearance of living from themselves, even more strongly so than other Angels.

219°. Such a conversation (as Yea, yea; Nay, nay) exists with all in the Third Heaven; for they never reason about Divine Things . . . but see in themselves from the Lord . . .

254°. It does not matter whether (Angels) are in joy such as that of the Angels of the Highest Heaven, or in such as that of the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven; for everyone who comes into Heaven, comes into the highest joy of his heart. He cannot endure a higher joy; for he would be suffocated in it.

123°. By (these words) are signified that they will be Angels of the Third Heaven if they read the Word, draw thence truths of doctrine, and approach the Lord.

615. When the Lord speaks through Heaven, He speaks from the Third Heaven through the Second; thus from Love through Divine wisdom; for the Third Heaven is in His Divine love, and the Second is in His Divine wisdom . . .

744°. 'Called, chosen, and faithful' . . . = that those whom the Lord . . . convinces by the Word, are with Him in Heaven; some in the Ultimate; some in the Second; and some in the Third Heaven, everyone according to his reception. (Compare E.1074.)

375². There are three Heavens; and the Inmost or Third Heaven is in inmost goods and truths, or in those of the third degree . . .

436². The inmost degree of life is opened with those in the Inmost or Third Heaven; for it is opened by the Lord immediately with those who are in love to Him; for through love there is conjunction and thence reception. It is from this that they are in all truths, which they see in themselves; and, through these, they are in the good of life.

438². By the first three tribes (Judah, Reuben, and Gad) are meant those who have been received into the Highest or Third Heaven, where all are in love to the Lord . . . 443.

445². In the Inmost or Third Heaven are those who are in goods of life from celestial affection . . .

594¹⁷. 'Cherubim'=in special, the Inmost or Third Heaven, because the Angels who are there receive the Divine truth in the good of love . . .

627⁵. Divine truth of the first degree is that which arrives at the perception of the Angels of the Inmost or Third Heaven, and is called Divine truth celestial: from this is the wisdom of these Angels . . .

638⁶. For in the Inmost Heaven, where is the Lord's Celestial Kingdom, and love to Him reigns, the paradises and forests consist of olive and fig trees . . .

—³. This Heaven, with the Angels there, is a guard lest anything be elevated to the Lord Himself except what proceeds from the good of love to Him from Him. For all the worship of God passes through the Heavens even to the Lord, and is purified on the way, even until it is elevated to the Third Heaven, and there it is heard and received by the Lord . . . This is why cherubim of gold were placed over the mercy-seat . . . and also why that place was called the Holy of holies . . . and was divided off by the veil . . . —³⁴.

726⁴. Hence there are three Heavens: an Inmost Heaven in a purer aura . . . D. Wis. xii. 5².

739⁴. As there are these three degrees of life in every man . . . there are three Heavens. In the Third or Inmost Heaven are those in whom the third degree has been opened (and so on). 832⁶. 1125².

744. For there is a connection of all in the Heavens from those in the Inmost or Third Heaven . . . to those in the First; for the Lord inflows through the Third Heaven into the Ultimate one, and by the influx conjoins the Heavens . . .

817². The celestial goods and derivative truths in which are the Angels in the Third Heaven, are signified by 'lambs' . . .

Angels are in love to the Lord from the Lord, their interior life consists of mere affections of good and truth from that love. Hence it is that they do not speak truths, but do truths, thus good works. . . Moreover, they perceive in themselves the quality of the uses or works, from the affection from which they are; and also the differences between them, from the conjunction of a number of affections. Thus they do all things with interior wisdom. . . Thus it is evident that love to the Lord consists in doing truths from the affection of them . . .

—⁶. Those become Angels of the Third Heaven who draw the laws of life from the Word, and live according to them, and who worship the Lord.

828. Love towards the neighbour with the Angels of the Third Heaven. Ex. By the neighbour they mean uses . . . but uses with them are all things which take place with them from the Lord, and which chiefly regard the worship of the Lord, His Church, the implantation of its holy things, especially with little children, with whom they have conjunction, and whom they inspire with innocence and its affections: and also the good of society in general and also particular. These things are especially [matters] of their love because they are so of the Lord's love. The Lord operates these things with them through the love implanted in their life, which is such that they perceive in these things the delight of their life. The reason these things are their neighbour, is that they do not have regard to persons, but to such things as pertain to persons; for they are in wisdom more than the other Angels. Ex. . . Hence it is evident what love towards the neighbour is in the Third Heaven.

—². As to the other things which concern civil, moral, and domestic life, these, too, are works which they do from affection; but they are not such works as they understand by 'the neighbour,' or 'brother and companion;' for they derive somewhat from the world, and also from what is useful to themselves and theirs. They are derivations and productions from the uses before mentioned, and are such things as proceed from their thought, therefore they can discourse about them. These works keep the life of their body in such a state, that the life of their love can dwell in it and perform its uses. These Angels, being such, do not know what charity and faith are; but instead of charity they have the love of good, and instead of faith the love of truth. Moreover, they are continually in the love of good and truth, because their life is the affection of good, in which and from which is the perception of truth. . . As the Angels of the Third Heaven are such, they appear before the Angels of the lower Heavens as infants; some as children; and all as simple; they also go naked. (These points fully ex.) They are perfected from the speech of those who are in the understanding of truth, from preachings, and from books. They also write, but not by letters . . . but by curvatures and inflections which contain arcana that transcend the understanding of the Angels in the lower Heavens. They dwell in expanses above others, in gardens planted with trees and flowers, and thus they are in perpetual representatives of heavenly things; and, what is wonderful, not a stone is found there, because stone = natural truth; while wood=good; a tree, perception; and a flower, implantation.

[E.] 831². The celestial Angels are in love to the Lord from the reception of the Divine good from Him; while the spiritual Angels are in love to the Lord from the reception of the Divine truth from Him. The difference is like that between love in the will and love in the understanding, or like that between a flame and its light; moreover the light with the Angels of the Third Heaven partakes of what is flaming, and that with the Angels of the Second Heaven of what is bright white. Their life differs in like manner: the life of the Angels of the Third Heaven consists in affections of good, and that of the Angels of the Second Heaven in affections of truth. The difference is such that they are well distinguished by their faces and speech. . . The celestial Angels do not first admit truths into the memory; but at once into the will, and by acts into the life: hence they cannot speak about Divine truths, but only will and do them.

—³. The Societies of the Third Heaven are above those of the Second, for the sake of the influx of celestial love into spiritual love . . .

837¹⁰. Hence it is that the Angels of the Third Heaven, since they perceive truths from good, are unwilling even to mention faith, and indeed do not know that it exists . . .

957³. The idea of the Lord is full in the Inmost Heaven, less full in the Middle one, and still less full in the Ultimate one; and therefore those who are in the Inmost Heaven are in wisdom; those in the Middle one are in intelligence; and those who are in the Ultimate one are in knowledge . . .

985². All the members devoted to generation, in both sexes, especially the womb, correspond to Societies of the Third or Inmost Heaven. The reason is that love truly conjugal is derived from the Lord's love towards the Church, and from the love of good and truth, which love is the love of the Angels of the Third Heaven . . . De Conj. 101. 106.

995⁶. The genuine Conjugal exists especially in the Third Heaven, because the Angels there are in love to the Lord, acknowledge Him as the Only God, and do His commandments. Ex.

1001⁸. Such are the angelic forms of the Inmost Heaven; and they are truly human forms.

1073. In the Highest or Third Heaven, Divine good is more received than Divine truth . . . and therefore the Third Heaven is called the Lord's 'dominion' . . . and hence the Angels in the Third Heaven are called the Lord's sons, thus also lords.

1133⁶. There are six expanses: in the highest dwell the Angels of the Third Heaven (and so on).

1145². As 'wood'=good, the Angels of the Third Heaven dwell in houses of wood, and this because they are in the good of love to the Lord . . .

1211³. In the Inmost or Third Heaven especially, there are plantations of trees whose fruits drop oils; beds of flowers from which fragrant odours are spread abroad, and the seeds of which are sweet to the taste from the fragrance and the oil; and there are lawns diffusing like things. . . Moreover, in the Inmost Heaven there are fruits and seeds of pure gold. (Continued under HEAVEN.)

J. (Post.) 196. When I came to the abodes of the Third Heaven, which are celestial, I wanted to speak with them about the Knowledges which are called of faith . . . and wondered that they did not want to reply. They said that they see all things in themselves from the love in which they are . . . I was told that these [Angels] are such because in the world they had applied to life all the truths which they had heard . . .

De Verbo 2. The celestial ideas with the Angels of the Third Heaven partake of the flame of good . . .

3. There are three Heavens . . . in the Third Heaven they are celestial . . .

—³. See SECOND HEAVEN, here.

—⁴. It has sometimes been granted me to be among the Angels of the Middle and of the Highest Heaven, and to hear them talking among themselves; and I was then in an interior natural state, remote from worldly and corporeal things. (The intelligibility to him of what they said. Ex.)

· 4. Thus has the Word been written in many places, from which, when it is read by a Jew or a Christian in the Hebrew text, it is known in the Third Heaven what the letters themselves signify; for the Angels of the Third Heaven have the Word written with such letters, and read it according to the letters. They have said that in the sense drawn out from the letters the Word treats of the Lord alone. Ex. and Examp. —².

—². They added that harshness in the letters is in use in the Spiritual Heaven, because there they are in truths, and through truths in understanding; but in the Celestial Heaven all are in the good of love and thence in wisdom; and truth admits what is harsh, but not good.

15. That there was a Word among the Ancients (which) has been lost, has been related to me by Angels of the Third Heaven . . .

D. Love xiii. This may be illustrated by the celestial love in which are the Angels of the Third Heaven. These Angels are in love to the Lord more than the Angels in the other Heavens. They do not know that to love the Lord is anything else than to do goods which are uses, for they say that uses are the Lord with them. By uses they understand the uses and goods of ministry, of administration, of function, both with priests and magistrates, and with traders and workmen. The goods which do not flow from their occupations they do not call uses, but alms, benefactions, and gratuities.

De Conj. 7. Hence those in the Third Heaven, who are all in love to the Lord, are in love truly conjugal.

29. The Third Heaven is the Conjugal of Heaven.

66. The Angels of the Third Heaven are those who are in the heavenly marriage more than all the rest; for they are in love to the Lord, and thence in the marriage of good and truth. Hence, too, they are in conjugal love more than the rest of the Angels, and in innocence and chastity. They walk with a cincture round the loins when out of doors, and without a cincture when at home, and yet in nakedness they regard their married partner as their married partner, without anything of lasciviousness. They say that to look at a married partner clothed takes away the idea of marriage; and, wonderful to say, nakedness does not excite or instigate, and yet it is as it were the external bond of conjugal love. (Continued under CELESTIAL ANGEL.)

70. The Angels of the Third Heaven dwell upon mountains, not of stone, but of soil, upon which are paradises, and sylvan gardens. The mountains appear elevated to a peak, and the best and most chaste are on the highest part of the mountain. Lower down [they dwell] according to the degrees in [their] marriage, spiritual and spiritual natural. They have distinctions also according to the quarters; the east is where they are who are in love; the south, where in wisdom.

105. The Inmost Heaven, through which the Lord insinuates conjugal love, contains those who are in peace more than all others . . . The Angels who are there, are the wisest of all, and, from innocence, appear to others as infants; they also love infants more than their fathers and mothers had loved them; and they also preside over those who are with child.

108. It suffices to know that love truly conjugal has immediate communication with the Third Heaven . . . Its acts; as kissing, embraces, and many more, delight that Heaven; for that Heaven is in the communication of good affections; while the Spiritual Heaven is in the communication of thoughts of truth. Hence it is evident that filthy affections and thoughts entirely close both Heavens.

C. 94. The Third Heaven, which is from the first men, is in love and wisdom . . .

Coro. 17³. The Angels . . . dwell in the regions of these three atmospheres: the Angels of the Highest Heaven in a celestial aura which proximately encompasses the Sun where the Lord is . . .

3240⁴. Celestial things, that is, the goods of faith, or, what is the same, the works of charity, in which they are, are signified by 'bringing waters to meet him that is thirsty, and meeting with bread him that wandereth' (Is. xxi. 14).

3424². That the Word of the Lord is such that it gives life to him that thirsteth, that is, to him that desireth life . . . the Lord teaches in John iv. 10, 14.

4017. The reason 'to come to drink' = the affection of truth, is that it involves thirst; for 'thirst,' in the Word, = the having an appetite and longing, thus an affection, for knowing and imbibing truth; and this because 'water' = truth in general.

4956². By 'one who thirsts,' the Angels with man perceive those who from affection long for truth. 4958, Ex.

5893. 'Thirst' = a deficiency of truth. 6745^e.

6432⁵. 'To slay her with thirst' (Hos. ii. 3) = to extinguish all truth. E. 240⁵. 730¹¹.

6829². When man is in temptation, he is as it were in hunger for good and thirst for truth; and therefore, when he emerges, he draws in good as a hungry one does food, and receives truth as a thirsty one does drink.

7260. They called those 'the thirsty' to whom they should give to drink.

7668⁴. 'To faint for thirst' (Amos. viii. 13) = to be deprived of truth. 8568.

8568. 'The people thirsted there for waters' (Ex. xvii. 3) = an increase of the longing for truth; for 'to thirst' = to desire eagerly and long for, and is predicated of truth. Ill.

[A. 8568]. 'Not a thirst for waters; but for hearing the words of Jehovah' (Amos viii.11). A longing to know truth is here described by 'to thirst.'

—². 'Ho, everyone that thirsteth, come ye to the waters' (Is.lv.1) evidently=one who longs for the truths of faith. E.617¹⁰, Ex. 840².

—³. 'To him that is athirst I will give from the fountain of the water of life freely' (Rev.xxi.6)=that one who longs from affection [shall receive] the truth and good of faith. (=that to those who long for truths from any spiritual use the Lord will give from Himself through the Word all things which conduce to that use. R.889.)

—, 'Everyone that drinketh of this water shall thirst again; but he that drinketh of the water that I shall give him, shall never thirst' (John iv.13). . . 'Not to thirst,' here,=that he shall no longer lack truth. In like manner in 'he that believeth in Me shall never thirst' (John vi.35).

—⁴. 'To thirst'=to long for truth. Further ill.

9412⁴. 'To thirst and eat'=to be informed by the Lord.

9818¹⁴. 'To thirst and drink'=a longing to know and perceive truth.

9960¹³. 'Thirst'=the deprivation of all things of faith.

R. 381. 'They shall hunger no more, nor thirst any more' (Rev.vii.16)=that hereafter they shall not lack goods and truths. . . For 'thirst' is said of wine and of water, (which)=truth. (=that they shall not lack good and truth, and the derivative happiness. Ex. E.480.)

889. That 'to thirst'=to long for from some spiritual use, is because there exists a thirst or longing for the Knowledge of truth from the Word from natural use, and also from spiritual use; from natural use with those who have erudition as their end, and thereby reputation, honour, and gain . . . but from spiritual use with those who have as their end to be of service to the neighbour from love for him, to seek the good of his soul, and of their own also; and thus for the sake of the Lord, the neighbour, and salvation: to these there is given from the fountain of the water of life . . . as much truth as conduces to this use. To the rest, truth therefrom is not given. Ex.

956. 'Let him that is athirst come' (Rev.xxii.17)=that he who longs for the Lord's Kingdom, and for truths then, should pray that the Lord may come with light.

—². That 'to thirst'=to long for truths. Ill.

—³. That 'thirst' and 'to thirst'=to perish, from a deficiency of truth. Ill.

E. 83³. Jesus said, 'I thirst' (John xix.28) because He had longed for a New Church which would acknowledge Him. (=that from Divine love He willed and longed for the salvation of the human race. 386³⁰.) (=Divine spiritual thirst, which is for Divine good and truth in the Church, through which is the salvation of the human race. 519².)

118³. 'The hungry and thirsty,' in the Word,=those who continually long for truths, and to be perfected by means of them. Ill.

223³. 'The hungry and thirsty' (Ps.cvii.5)=those who have a longing to know good and truth. 386³⁷.

275⁷. 'To die of thirst' (Is.l.2)=the extinction of truth. (=desolation from a deficiency of truth from a spiritual origin. 342⁸.)

376⁴. 'To thirst'=to long for.

386⁶. 'To be hungry and thirsty'=to be deprived of the good of love and truths of faith.

—¹². 'To be dried up with thirst'=a deficiency of truth.

—²⁴. 'He that thirsteth for drink'=those who long for truths.

—²⁷. 'To thirst'=to believe in the Lord.

483². 'To thirst'=to long for truth.

—⁷. 'The wild asses quench their thirst' (Ps.civ.11)=the instruction of those in the Church who long for truths.

504²⁷. 'A land of thirst' (Ezek.xix.13)=a Church where there is no truth. (=no truth, but falsity in its stead. 730¹⁰.)

518⁷. 'I will pour out waters upon him that is thirsty' (Is.xliv.3)=to instruct in truths those in the affection of truth.

727⁴. 'Thirst'=a deficiency of truth.

730³⁴. That man in temptations is so infested by evils and falsities as scarcely to know otherwise than that he is in Hell, is meant by 'Jehovah led thee through the great and terrible wilderness, of the serpent . . . and of thirst, where there were no waters' (Deut. viii.15). . . 'Thirst where there were no waters'=a deficiency and shutting off of truth.

750⁹. 'Drink for the soul of the thirsty' (Is.xxxii.6)=the understanding of truth.

Thirteen. Tredecim.

Thirteenth. Tertius decimus.

A. 1668. 'In the thirteenth year they rebelled' (Gen.xiv.4)=the beginning of temptation in childhood. . . The thirteenth year is intermediate between the twelfth and the fourteenth (and the) intermediate between no temptation and temptation is 'thirteen.'

2109. 'A son of thirteen years' (Gen.xvii.25)=holy remains; for 'ten'=remains; and 'three,' what is holy. Hence the number 'thirteen,' being composed of ten and three,=holy remains.

Thirty. Triginta.

Thirtieth. Trigesimus.

A. 481. See NUMBER, here. 647. 7984.

1342. 'Shelah lived thirty years' (Gen.xi.14)=the beginning of the third state.

1345. 'Eber lived four and thirty years' (ver.16)=the beginning of the fourth state of this Church.

1347. 'Peleg lived thirty years' (ver.18)=the beginning of the fifth state.

1349. 'Reu lived two and thirty years' (ver.20)=the beginning of the sixth state.

1351. 'Serug lived thirty years' (ver.22)=the beginning of the seventh state of this Church.

2141. 'Thirty' (Gen.xviii.30)=those in some combats against evils.

2276. 'Peradventure there shall thirty be found there' (id.)=something of combat. The reason 'thirty'=something of combat, thus a little combat, is that this number is composed by the multiplication of five—which=a little—and six, which=labour or combat. Hence 'thirty,' wherever read in the Word,=some little, relatively. III.

—². 'Thirty pieces of silver'=that which they valued so little. III.

—⁴. The reason the Levites were taken to discharge the ministry . . . from a son of thirty years to fifty (Num.iv.) was that by 'thirty' were signified those being initiated, thus who could as yet but little carry on the (spiritual) warfare. (Compare 5335².)

—⁶. 'Thirty' (in the parable of the sower)=a little result, and that he had laboured but little. (=a fulness of remains. 5335².)

2959³. 'Thirty'=the state of vastation of the sons of Jacob: that it was no vastation. Ex.

2966⁶. 'They took the thirty pieces of silver . . . and gave them for the potter's field' (Matt.xxvii.9). 'Thirty'=what is little so as to be scarcely anything.

5291¹⁰. The brazen sea . . . thirty cubits in circumference . . . (=a plenary complex. 10235⁷.)

5335. 'Joseph was a son of thirty years' (Gen.xli.46)=a full state of remains.

— The number 'thirty,' in the Word,=something of combat, and also a full state of remains. The reason it has this double signification, is that it is composed of five and six multiplied together, and also of three and ten . . . and 'three'=what is full, and 'ten,' remains. (See above, at 2276.)

—². That 'thirty'=a fulness of remains. III.

—³. The reason the Lord did not manifest Himself until He was thirty years of age (Luke.iii.23) was that He was then in a fulness of remains. Ex.

7984². When they have a full state of remains, they are elevated into Heaven: this state is what is signified by 'thirty.' —⁴.

8851. The age of the men (in Jupiter) is for the most part thirty years, according to the years of our Earth: those who exceed it are said to be unteachable. Ex.

9082. 'He shall give to their lord thirty shekels of silver' (Ex.xxi.32)=that the internal man shall restore it to the full. . . 'Thirty'=what is full.

9617. 'The length of one curtain thirty cubits' (Ex.xxvi.8)=what is full of the truth which is from good. . . 'Thirty'=what is full.

10833. (In the Sixth Earth) the nations with their families assemble every thirtieth day, and hear preachings.

H. 426. Some stay many years in the World of Spirits, but not beyond thirty. (Compare R.866².)

Thistle. Carduus.

A. 272. 'The thorn and the thistle' (Gen.iii.18)=curse and vastation. 273, Ex. and III.

R. 439⁶. 'Thorns,' 'briers,' 'thistles=tribuli,' and 'thistles'=the falsities of evil, from their stings.

T. 78⁵. With those in Hell, there appear . . . briers, nettles, thorns, and thistles . . .

E. 654⁵⁶. 'The thistle shall possess them' (Hos.ix.6)=that evil will pervert them. (=that falsity will destroy all truth. 799¹⁴.)

714¹⁸. See THORN, here.

Thistle. Tribulus.

A. 9144⁷. 'The thistle and the thorn' (Hos.x.8)=evil and falsity vastating the goods and truths of worship. (=that evils and falsities will enter and make worship. 9714⁸.)

P. 313³. 'The thorn and the thistle' (Gen.iii.)=mere falsity and evil. T.498².

R. 439⁶. See THISTLE=carduus, here.

E. 391²⁸. 'The thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars' (Hos.x.8)=truth falsified and the derivative evil in all their worship.

Thoracic duct. Ductus thoracicus.

D. 1127. On those who constitute the province of the thoracic duct, etc.

Thorn. Spina.

Thorny. Spineus, Spinus.

A. 272. See THISTLE=carduus, here. R.439⁶.

3310². 'Thorns' (in the parable of the sower)=evils. (See 9144⁸.) (=the concupiscences of evil. Life 90.)

3941³. 'To reap thorns' (Jer.xii.13)=the evils and falsities which are of the love of self and of the world. E.304¹⁰. (=the evils of falsity. E.374⁵.)

9144. 'If fire catch in thorns' (Ex.xxii.6)=(anger from evil affection) which injects itself into falsities. Ex.

—⁵. That 'thorns'=the falsities of concupiscences. III.

—⁷. See THISTLE=tribulus, here. E.391²⁸. P.313³.

— 'A fire of thorns' (Ps.cxviii.12)=concupiscence of evil.

— 'To gather grapes of thorns' (Matt.vii.16)=the goods of faith and charity from the falsities of concupiscences.

—⁹. The falsities of concupiscences which are signified by 'thorns,' are the falsities confirmatory of the things of the world and its pleasures; for these falsities more than all others catch fire and blaze up, because they are concupiscences in the body, which are felt; and therefore also they close the internal man, so that it savours nothing which is of the salvation of the soul and of eternal life.

—¹⁰. 'The crown of thorns' which was placed on the Lord's head, represented of what quality the Divine truth was then in the Jewish Church, namely, that it was suffocated by the falsities of concupiscences. T.130³.

—¹¹. Hence it is evident what was signified by 'the thorny crown.'

M. 231. I descended by the ladder, and saw a level country covered with a dense growth with thorns and nettles intermingled.

[M.] 315⁶. By which both brains are continued into the spine . . .

D. Min. 4637. When what is holy and good falls down from the Lord . . . into a man and the delight of his life, it is then as it were seed hidden in the ground. If the delight is pride, or the love of self, it falls into evil ground, where there are thorns; and so also if it falls . . . into the desire for gain.

E. 237⁶. 'To obstruct the way with thorns' (Hos.ii.6) = to obstruct all the thoughts by falsities of evil . . .

403¹⁶. 'Thorns,' and 'bramble-bush' (Luke vi.44) = the evils opposed to these goods.

544³. They do not admit any truth, and therefore are called 'stubborn and thorny' (Ezek.ii.6).

560⁵. 'They shall be for thorns in your eyes' (Num. xxxiii.55) = that malignant falsities will inflict injury on the truths of the Church.

654⁵⁶. 'Thorns shall be in their tents' (Hos.ix.6) = the falsity of evil in worship.

714¹³. For the tail is a continuation of the spine, which is protended from the brains . . .

—¹⁸. The thorns shall come up in her palaces, the thistle-carduus-and the brier in her fortresses' (Is. xxxiv.13). . . The falsities and evils in which they are, are signified by 'the thorns,' 'the thistle,' and 'the brier.'

730⁶. 'The thorn of the brier' (Is.xxxii.13) = the falsity of evil.

799¹⁴. That the evils of falsity will destroy all their good, is signified by 'the thorn shall be in their tabernacles' (Hos.ix.6).

Thorn-thicket. Vepretum.

See BRAMBLE-vepres.

E. 223⁷. 'The lion from the thorn-thicket' (Jer.iv.7) = falsity from evil.

304¹². 'A briery and thorn-thicket' (Is.vii.24) = falsity and evil.

504²². 'A thorn-thicket and briery' (Is.x.17) = the evils and falsities of the doctrine of the Church.

Thought. Cogitatio.

Think. Cogitare.

Cogitative. Cogitativus.

Cogitatively. Cogitative.

See IDEA all through; and also under AFFECTION, BIRD, CONTRIVE, and REFLECT.

A. 33. If you remove the loves, or cupidities, thought at once ceases.

36. Faith supposed to be mere thought. 2228².

41. Every least of thought of an angelic Spirit is alive.

99⁹. For then all man's thoughts, and ideas of thoughts . . . are open . . . even to the Lord.

174. Their cogitative speech. 180, Ex.

228. The least of thought with man is more perceptible to the Angels than its greatest.

261. 'I will multiply thy conception' = all the thought. 264, Ex.

318. He was then left by himself, that he might think as in the world; for in the other life the thoughts of all can be manifestly perceived . . . 549.

322². Spirits think far more clearly and distinctly than they had thought (here). They involve more things in one idea of thought, than they did in a thousand when they thought (here).

362. For man's thought is such that while he is intent upon anything, he places that before anything else . . .

442. These doctrines were matters of much more profound thought than at this day . . .

443. Their thought is as clearly communicated as if they spoke aloud.

444. He then said that the spirit is thought. . . But how can there be thought without an organic substance from which to think? . . . If the soul or spirit were only thought, man would have no need for so much brain . . .

549. See AFFECTION, here.

586. 'Every figment of the thoughts of his heart was only evil' (Gen.vi.5) = that there was no perception of good and truth. Ex.

590. There is a kind of perpetual marriage of the thought and will. (Continued under IDEA.)

605^e. They indulged not so much in knowledges, as in profound thoughts . . . This was the wisdom of the ancients.

745. 'Bird,' in general, = thoughts-cogitata. (= thoughts-cogitationes. 778.)

823. The thoughts a man has harboured against others (there) lie open . . . for there is a perception of all thoughts. . . With the evil all their evil deeds and thoughts-cogitata-return, to the life. But not so with the good . . .

829^e. (These penalties cause them) to desist from thinking in that (lascivious) way. De Conj.127.

830. For whatever a Spirit thinks, they who are near instantly know and perceive.

904³. Man (supposes) that he thinks from himself; but he has not a single idea of thought . . . from himself; but he has what is evil and false through evil Spirits from Hell, and what is good and true through Angels from the Lord.

962. In the penalty of discernption as to the thoughts, the interior thoughts fight with the exterior ones, which is attended with interior torture.

978. They suppose that the internal man is thought . . . yet the evil have thought . . . from which it is evident that man's thought is not of the internal man, but of the external.

991. For man thinks from these scientifics.

— . Man's thought from sensuous scientifics. Sig.

1015². When he is in thought abstracted from the body, and is thinking as it were in his spirit.

1102³. When man thinks well about the Lord and the neighbour . . .

1108. (In vastation) some think very little. Des.

1118^e. Being celestial men, whatever they thought shone forth from their face and eyes . . . They could not put on an expression which did not agree with what they thought.

1124. They supposed themselves so subtle that no one would perceive what they thought.

1159. The correspondence of the tongue with man's thought.

1265. Many were inflowing into my thoughts, and holding them as it were bound. . . They were of those who lived before the Flood . . .

1266. If the Antediluvians came into the World of Spirits . . . they would take away from all the Spirits they met, except the good, the faculty of thinking. 1673², Ex.

1274². The Spirits of whom others think . . . are present in a moment.

1316. When this reigns with a man, there is the like in every one of his thoughts, nay, in the least of his thoughts.

1318. 'Nothing will be withheld from them of all they have thought to do' (Gen. xi. 7) = unless their state is changed. . . 'The thought to do' is nothing but the intention, that is, the end . . . And when the state is changed, so is the end; and, with the end, the thought. 1321².

1389. Souls wonder that there is such a communication of another's thoughts. Ex.

1395^e. Whatever they had thought against others, (there) stands forth to view.

1399^e. The things which inflow (from Heaven) into man's thoughts, are only the ultimate effects.

1435. Every scientific from which man thinks. Sig. (Continued under IDEA.)

1463. There are changes of state of both the thoughts and the affections: the (former) are Knowledges . . .

1487. The scientifics acquired in childhood are disposed by the Lord into order, in order to serve for use; first, that he may be able to think . . .

1495³. For in the thought . . . lie hidden all the arcana of analytical art and science . . . even with children, whose every thought and derivative word is most full of them.

1511. Spirits who are in falsities, inflow into the thought . . . Genii, into the will.

1594². The sole difference (between the life of a sensuous man and that of brutes is) that the man can think, and reason . . .

1637^e. Souls perceive whatever a man thinks.

1639. Without the interior memory . . . man can think nothing.

1640^e. Before a Spirit speaks, it is known from the thought alone what he intends to say; for the thought inflows more quickly than the speech.

1673². For there is a communication of all thoughts (there).

1702². By communication with the internal man, man can think about celestial and spiritual things, or look upwards, which beasts cannot do; and by communication with the exterior man, he can think about worldly and bodily things . . .

1707³. Through these (remains) the Lord inflows into the rational man, and through this into the exterior man, and thus it is granted to man to think, and to be man. 1906³.

1757. Human thought, after the decease of the body, becomes more distinct and clear, and the ideas of thought become discrete . . .

1762. Their thought was thus made manifest as it were in a form . . . by changes induced on the face. Des.

1820⁴. (In temptations, evil Spirits) hold the thought persistently in one thing, and thus fill it with phantasies.

1850^e. For such as a man is in general, such is he in the singulars of his thought and affection.

1878^e. As there is a communion (there) of the thoughts of all . . .

1880³. The Spirits and Angels with other men . . . merely perceive the thoughts and affections of those with whom they are.

1901². This intellectual truth . . . is the Spiritual itself which inflows through Heaven, by an internal way, with every man . . . It is like a kind of light which illuminates, and gives the faculty of knowing, thinking, and understanding.

1904³. (Thus) man cannot think as of himself from intellectual truth, but from rational and scientific truth . . .

1914². When anything contrary to the truth of conscience inflows into the thought . . . it grieves them . . . How much more the Lord, who had . . . thought from the affection of intellectual truth, which is above the Rational?

—³. He who thinks from intellectual truth is above Heaven; for the Angels of the Third Heaven do not think from it; but from the interior of the Rational. But in proportion as the Lord united the Human essence to the Divine, He thought from Divine good itself, that is, from Jehovah.

—⁴. The fathers of the Most Ancient Church, who had perception, thought from the interior Rational. The fathers of the Ancient Church, who had conscience, thought from the exterior or natural Rational. But all who are without conscience never think from the Rational . . . but from the sensuous and corporeal Natural.

—^e. A rational man is one who thinks the good and truth of faith . . . They who think what is evil and false are insane in thought.

1919. The Lord's thought from His perception. Sig.

— They who are in perception think from nothing else; but still perception is one thing, and thought another. Ex.

—². (So) thought is distinct from conscience, and yet it flows from it. Ex.

[A. 1919]³. The Lord's perception was immediately from Jehovah . . . but His thought was from intellectual truth and its affection. 2545^e.

1925. The thought of the interior man in the Lord. Sig. and Ex.

1926². In proportion as the Lord united Himself to Jehovah, His thought became more interior . . . This is the thought which is meant by the interior thought which was from the Lord's Internal, here signified by 'the Angel of Jehovah.'

1931². Ordinary Spirits perceive a man's thoughts better than the man himself; angelic Spirits, the still more interior things of the thoughts; and Angels, those things still more interior, namely, the causes and ends, of which the man knows but little. . . How much more the Lord.

1935. The Lord's interior thought was from the affection of intellectual truth . . . Such thought is never in any man, nor can be. With man there is an interior thought which inflows through his internal man into the interior Rational, from the Lord, with those who have conscience; as may be evident from the fact that they can observe the evil and falsity in their external man . . . This thought is much lower, and cannot be in any way compared with the Lord's . . . But they who have not conscience cannot have interior thought; and therefore there is no combat in them. Ex.

1937³. The heavenly proprium of man is formed in the conatus of his thought.

1953². There is a sight which is still more internal, which looks into these objects, and thus thinks.

1983³. They reduce their interiors into a state of persuasion . . . and thus compel . . . Spirits to think as they do.

2094³. When man is in truth, that is, in the internal sense, he can, as to thought, make one with those in Heaven.

2122. Most (from the Christian world) think nothing else than filthy, obscene, and profane things. 2125^e.

2129. In these conflicts . . . such Spirits are driven into a state in which they do not, as is usual, think in society or communion, but each for himself. From the thoughts thus at variance . . . a noise is heard as of many waters . . . —².

2144⁴. All the Lord's thought was from Divine perception; because He alone was a Divine and celestial man . . . 2287.

2157. (The thought of the celestial Angels des.)

2190^e. Myriads of myriads of his thoughts about goods and truths . . . are in his Holy (of worship).

2209^e. There must always be some appearances from sensuous things, upon which the thought must lean. Ex.

2228². Thought saves no one . . . All the thought which does not agree with the life perishes . . . Con-sociations in Heaven . . . are not according to thoughts which are not of the life. (Such) thoughts are simulatory . . . 2401², Ex.

2231². All the perception and thought would (then) be as the light from a flame.

2242². For man's thought goes no further than to the nearest things.

2243. Falsity from evil is all that a man thinks while he is in evil. Ex.

2245. The Lord's thought from the Divine. Sig. and Ex.

—, 'To look forth' = to think. Ex.

—². The Lord's thought was from the Human conjoined with the Divine . . . but the perception, from which was the thought, was from the Divine. 2249, Sig. and Ex.

2256². Whatever man has thought and done, remains.

2271. 'He added to speak to him' = thought. Ex.

2272. In temptations come new thoughts, contrary to the former ones, and to which the man can afterwards be bent. 2273^e, Ex. 2334.

2287. 'To speak' = to think.

2294. (The strong desire of Spirits to lead infants to think. Ex.)

2301. Infants of a celestial genius . . . think, etc. more softly.

2329⁶. For without an idea nothing can be thought.

2335². (Such) are judged according to their thoughts etc.; and (therefore) must be condemned; for . . . of himself man thinks nothing but evil . . .

2343⁶. For what Spirits merely think even, is apprehended, and diffuses from itself a sphere . . .

2363^e. All the thought then is according to the affection.

2367. How few things come to the thought here.

2401². It is not the thought which lives after death, except that which flows from the will.

2410. Evil (both hereditary and actual) adheres to man in every single thought.

2456. The Lord's thought about the last time. Sig.

2471. To the interior memory pertain the ideas of the speech of Spirits, which are of the interior sight, and all rational things, from the ideas of which, thought itself comes forth.

2474. The smallest particulars which the man has ever thought, etc. (are inscribed on the interior memory). 2483.

2478. I then knew no otherwise than . . . that I had thought what I had not thought.

2480. The Rational procured from this, is that from which they think . . .

—^e. Everyone thinks from affection . . .

2483. Then all the particulars of the thoughts . . . came forth as in clear day.

2488. I had imagined that no Spirit could know the things . . . in my thought; whereas the Spirits with man know and observe the smallest things of his . . . thoughts, much more clearly than the man himself. . . Let no man believe that his thoughts are hidden, and that he is not to render an account of his thoughts . . . for the deeds have their quality from the thoughts; and the thoughts from the ends.

2500². The Lord's instruction . . . was by . . . Divine thoughts, etc. from Himself. Ex.

2506. 'To say' = to think.

2511. The Lord's first thought about and from the doctrine of faith. Tr. 2545. 2551. 2552.

2515. Thought from perception. Sig. and Ex.

— There are thoughts from perception; thoughts from conscience; and thoughts from no conscience. Thoughts from perception exist solely with the celestial . . . This thought is the inmost which exists with man. Ex.

— Thoughts from conscience are lower, and exist with the spiritual. Ex.

—². Thoughts from no conscience exist with those who do not suffer themselves to be ruled by good and truth. Fully ex.

—^e. But the Lord's thought transcended all human understanding; for it was immediately from the Divine.

2520². This love directed the Lord's thoughts while He was still in the maternal human.

2553. The derivative thought. Sig. and Ex.

— All man's thoughts are terminated in natural things which are of his sensuous things. Ex.

2571². Hitherto the Lord's thought was about the doctrine of faith, but now about that of love and charity. Sig. and Ex.

— For when a man has become spiritual and celestial, he no longer thinks from truth, but from good.

2588⁷. Whatever is thought, is seen by the interior sight . . .

2593^e. The Ancients' mode of thinking, etc. was representative. Ex.

2596. In the other life all thoughts are communicated. 2748^e.

2619. As He had thought. Sig. and Ex.

— This thought was from the Divine Celestial through the Divine Spiritual.

VOL. VI.

—². With man . . . it is good from which he perceives; but truth through which he thinks. Ex.

2626. For Divine thought-cogitare-is to will.

2641. 'To see' is predicated of the things which are of thought.

2679. For it is implanted in them by the Lord that they think much about eternal life . . .

2682². For those being regenerated think much about doctrine and life, because they think much about eternal salvation . . .

2684. The state of thought (of those in desolation of truth). Sig. and Ex. 2688.

2689. (Those being reformed) are kept by the Lord in the affection of good, and in the thought of truth; and therefore they come into anxiety when deprived of these. Tr.

—⁴. Such as is the affection or love, such is the thought. Ex.

2694³. Unless the affection is broken, the thought remains in its own state; for thought has its belief and its life from affection.

2715. Evil in the will continually inflows into the thought, so that the good there is relatively obscured.

2731. Wives are affections of good . . . men are thoughts of truth.

2748^e. It was granted to perceive their thoughts (which) were horribly filthy and obscene.

2763³. By the knowledge of correspondences the Ancients could think with Spirits and Angels.

2770. Thought and reflection. Sig. and Ex.

2789. The Lord's thought and mental view from the Divine. Sig. and Ex. 2829.

2851². Only through thinks does anything of the light of Heaven enter (with those in evil and falsity) by means of which they can think and reason. 3167².

2871^e. If the life (of the love of self and of the world) were taken away from such, they would not have anything of thought and will left.

2873. When the Angels merely think about such freedom . . . they are seized with internal pain; and when evil Spirits merely think about (heavenly) freedom . . . they feel anguish.

2874. Freedom is to think and will from affection.

2876. It is an eternal law that everyone be in freedom as to . . . his affections and thoughts. 2877, Ex. 2882, Ex.

2883. Therefore man must . . . think truth [as] of himself. Ex.

2886. No one can think from himself; but from others, and these again from others, and so on. (See AFFECTION, here.) 4319, Ex.

2888^e. Men will believe that they think, etc. from themselves . . . yet nothing is further from the truth.

Q

[A.] 2992. When I was speaking about the viscera . . . the Angels led my thoughts . . . They did not think one whit about the viscera ; but solely about the spiritual things to which they correspond.

3020³. To the rational mind belongs also all the thinking faculty—cogitativum—which is perceptive of what is true and good, etc.

3217^e. When Angels who are discoursing about the Intellectual, inflow into their thoughts, horses are represented.

3219². They opined that the things which are of thought inflow from without, through the external senses . . .

—³. I was (thus) instructed that all things of thought inflow from within ; and not from without, although it appears so ; (for) it is contrary to order for the posterior to inflow into the prior . . .

3293^e. For man cannot think spiritually immediately after death, except from the things which are of his Natural.

3316². (This shows) the nature of the thought and perception of the Angels, and how remote these are from the thought and perception of man. If man were to think in like manner, (as for instance) at the Holy Supper, and instead of bread perceived love to the Lord, and instead of wine love towards the neighbour, he would be in like thought and perception with the Angels, who would then approach nearer to him, until at last they could consociate their thoughts ; but only so far as the man was at the same time in good.

3336². (The origin of man's thought. Fully quoted under AFFECTION.)

3337^e. Man's interior imagination, or thought, consists solely of forms and appearances of such things as have been imbibed by the sight of the mind, still more wonderfully varied, and, so to speak, modified.

3342. By wonderful variations of light and shade (Spirits and Angels) present to the life the things they are thinking, before the internal and at the same time the external sight of him to whom they are speaking, and insinuate them by suitable changes of the state of the affections. Ex.

3347. The Angels compared human thought and the derivative speech to the external form of man (which is full of innumerable forms within) . . . They also compared the faculty of thinking to the faculty of the viscera of acting according to the form of the fibres, and said that the faculty is not of the fibres, but of the life in them, as the faculty of thinking is not of the mind, but of the life from the Lord inflowing into it.

3367. Thought from the Divine. Sig. and Ex.

3469². In the Natural as in a plane are founded the thought and will of man.

3489. The Angels . . . attend to the ends . . . and to the derivative thoughts.

—². In the other life they think and speak solely according to their internals. Ex.

3498². While man is in the world . . . his Rational is distinct from his Natural, inasmuch that he can be withdrawn from external sensuous things . . . and in some measure from interior sensuous things . . . and be in his Rational, thus in spiritual thought.

3573³. (With the regenerate) whatever the man wills and thinks in his Rational, presents itself conspicuously in his Natural ; and this, in his face. (But it is now believed to be a matter of civil prudence to hide the thoughts. Ex.)

3599². All the thinking faculty—cogitativum—even with infants, is of truth adjoined to the Voluntary which is of good.

3603³. In his second age, man . . . begins to reflect upon (truths) from his own thought, and all that which he superadds from his own thought pleases him . . .

—⁵. Good with man (when regenerate) . . . is in every single thing he thinks . . .

—^e. The Involuntary which is from the Lord . . . manifests itself with the regenerate ; and in the meantime it has disposed . . . each and all things of their thought and will, although it did not appear.

3606. 'Esau said in his heart'=thought.

3610². For there is nothing of the Divine in their life except that they can think and speak.

3632^e. (For) speech flows from thought ; yet the words are not such in the thought. (They only correspond to it.)

3660². For the thoughts of Spirits and Angels are not intruded upon by cares of worldly, corporeal, and earthly things, as is the case with men.

3679. The thought of natural good concerning conjunction . . . Sig. and Ex.

—¹. 'To see'=to think ; for to think is nothing else than to see inwardly, or internal sight.

—². The thought of natural good is the thought of the rational or internal man in the natural or external man . . . for (the former) is that which thinks, and not (the latter). Ex. . . Therefore, unless the internal man thought in the external, it would not be possible to think at all. And yet thought appears to man as if it were in his external man ; for he thinks from those things which have entered through the senses . . . Ex.

—³. It is the thought which speaks through (the organs of speech); for speech is nothing but the thought speaking.

—⁴. As to thought, the case is this. So long as man lives in the body, he thinks from the Rational, in the Natural; but in one way when the Natural corresponds to the Rational, and in another when it does not correspond. When the Natural corresponds, the man is rational, and thinks spiritually; (otherwise) he cannot think spiritually. Fully ex.

—⁵. But Spirits and Angels do not think in the same way as man. Their thought is indeed terminated in the Natural; for they have with them all the natural memory and its affections, but they are not allowed to use it; but still it serves them as a plane . . . so that the ideas of their thought are terminated there. Hence it is that the ideas of their thought are interior . . . (Thus) their thought, also, is such as is the correspondence of their Natural with their Rational; and there are Spirits who are rational, and think spiritually; and those who are not rational, and do not think spiritually. Ex.

—⁶. (Thus) the thought of natural good is thought in the good of the natural . . . The Rational thinks in the good of the Natural when it regards good as the end. Ex.

3726⁴. Thoughts supposed to be abstract things.

3727. Man's thought, speech, and action, which are the ultimates of order, are nothing else than truths from good; for they are images or forms of good . . .

3735². When a man thinks about 'bread' . . . this thought which he has about bread, serves the Angels with him as an object for thinking about the good of love; for the Angels apprehend nothing of the thought of man about bread. (Another examp.)

3741². (So) thought inflows into the organic forms of the tongue, and produces speech.

3748². I asked him how he understood the fact that thought, which is spiritual, moves the whole face . . . and the organs of speech . . . 4044.

3849. For without affection, man cannot even think . . .

3862. (Thus) all thoughts which are of faith or truth are variegations of celestial and spiritual light.

3934². Thinking and willing good are impossible without doing good. Ex.

—³. Comparatively as man's will and derivative thought (are exhibited) in his face. Ex.

3938^e. Love is man's willing; and thence it is his thinking . . .

3954. When the sense of the letter ascends . . . into the sphere where the thought is cogitatur—from the Lord and about the Lord . . . it is so perceived by the Angels, to whom the internal sense is the Word, for the thinking of which the sense of the letter serves as a plane. . . The Angels cannot think about worldly, earthly, and corporeal things.

3957². For while man is in the body, corporeal and worldly things occupy his thoughts, which induce obscurity; but when he is divested of the body . . . it is with him as with those who are in interior thought by the abstraction of their mind from external sensuous things. Des.

—⁵. He who in the world has thought solely of such worldly things . . . is not fitted to be among those whose delight it is to think of heavenly things.

—⁶. When the externals . . . are taken away, the man is such as he has been inwardly; that is, he so thinks and wills. If his thoughts within have been deceits, machinations, aspiration for dignities, gains, reputation for their sake, hatreds, revenges, and the like, he then thinks such things . . . however he might have concealed his thoughts before men.

4042. (In the brain) is the source of the thoughts which are of the understanding, and of the affections which are of the will.

4046². (The Spirits of the dura mater) are those who had thought nothing about spiritual and heavenly things . . . —³.

4047. (The Spirits of the pia mater) are such as had not trusted much to their own thought, and had not determined themselves to any fixed thought about holy things; but had depended on the belief of others.

4067². In such (spiritual) society is every man as to his . . . thoughts and affections . . . All that he thinks and wills is thence, inasmuch that if the Societies of Spirits and Angels . . . were taken away, he would that moment have no thought and no will. 4073². 4096¹.

4077^e. Whereas man has not the least of thought, or will, which does not come from the Lord by influx through Spirits.

4104². Such is angelic thought; and, wonderful to say, such is the thought of the internal spiritual man while he lives in the body, although the external man is quite unaware of it; and therefore when a regenerated man dies, he comes into the like thought, and can think and speak with the Angels, without instruction, which would be impossible unless he had had such interior thought.

4111². The states of Spirits as to good and truth are according to the Societies in which they are; for all the thought inflows through others, and, proximately, through those with whom they are in Society; and therefore when they are removed . . . into another Society, the states of their thoughts and affections are changed . . .

4126. To speak good and think evil. Sig. and Ex.

— But in the other life all thought is manifest; for it is communicated by a certain sphere . . .

4154². He who thinks from scientifics (supposes) that the natural things from which he thinks are inmost things, whereas they are external ones.

4211³. For the conjunction of the Lord with man is according to the state of his thought (about Him), and the derivative affection. Ex.

[A.] 4214⁵. When such approach any heavenly Society . . . their thought is so obscured that they cannot even think. Ex.

4215². There is a correspondence of the thoughts and affections with the actions and gestures.

4227². (Such Spirits) obsess the thoughts and the will of men who are like them.

4245². The things which man thinks, and from which he thinks, affect him. If he thought from the goods of clarity, he would plainly see that the truths of faith are in the second place, and he would then also see the truths themselves as in the light. Ex.

4247². Such is the circle, that everything of knowledge is insinuated through the sight or hearing into the thought, thence into the will, and from the will through the thought into the act. . . From the memory, which is like an internal sight, there is a like circle, namely, from that sight through the thought into the will, and from the will through the thought into the act. . .

4249². For whatever man thinks and wills, that is, all his thought and all his affection, is either from Hell, or from Heaven. (Continued under AFFECTION.)

4280³. (For) the internal man itself thinks no otherwise (than according to the internal sense of the Word); for when the external man apprehends the Word according to the letter, the internal man does so according to the internal sense; although the man, while he lives in the body, is unaware of this.

4292⁴. The speech of man represents his thought. Ex.

4317⁵. Hereditary evil is in the will itself and thence in the thought.

4326. Those who relate to the general involuntary sense . . . can well perceive a man's thoughts-cogitata, but do not want to expose and utter them.

4327^e. Their thoughts have been communicated to me, which were abominable, being full of cruelties and butcheries.

4329. That their thought was general, that is, of a number together, I could apperceive from the things which inflowed thence into my thought. Fully ex.

—³. They drew conclusions as to the interiors of my thoughts and affections so dexterously, that I began to be afraid to think anything more; for they disclosed things which I did not know to be in me. . .

4364. (These confirmatory things) are added to the man's thoughts and affections, that is, to the things which he knows and loves. . .

—². He who has been regenerated . . . if he reflects upon his past life, will find that he has been led by means of many things of his thought, and by many things of his affection.

—³. For man can think not only of what he sees and feels, but also of what he does not see and feel. . .

—⁴. Yet there is something more interior (than the body) which thinks and wills.

4373^e. In this manner do angelic thoughts correspond with human ones.

4387^e. The internal sense . . . coincides . . . with the spiritual speech of the Angels' thought. Their speech is spiritual, because their thought is from the light of Heaven.

4403. Societies send Spirits to others, and through them perceive their thoughts-cogitata-and affections, and thus communicate.

4408. The objects of the world . . . enter through the eye, and store themselves in the memory . . . under a like visual form; for the things thence reproduced are seen inwardly; thence comes man's imagination . . . These objects, when they appear still more interiorly, present thought, and this also under some visual form, but a purer one, the ideas of which are called immaterial, and also intellectual.

4464^e. For in the other life they cannot hide what they have thought, because the thoughts lie plainly open there. . .

4480^e. For the Angels cannot think otherwise than spiritually on every subject. . . To think spiritually is to think about the things of the Lord's Kingdom. . .

4525². For man has been created . . . into the potency of being elevated by the Lord as to his thoughts and affections above the natural world, and thence of thinking about God. . .

4526^e. For truths make all of man's understanding; for all of his thought is employed in [deciding] that the thing is so or is not so, that is, that it is true, or not true.

4570². Those in the external Natural are called sensitive men; for they scarcely go further with their thought.

4627². They said they could apperceive all the ideas of my thought, and also of those around me. Ex. . . They added that they saw certain angelic Societies with me, and that their thoughts were represented by various colourings. Des.

4629. For what Spirits think, both in general and in particular, is manifestly perceived by others.

4632. When I thought about the rule of the soul in the body . . . (these) infernals thought of the control of the soul over the anus. . . So when I thought about conjugal love. . . (other) infernals thought about the filthy things of adultery. And when I thought about sincerity, (others) of them thought of wicked deeds from deceit.

4652. The thought of a man when speaking, is nothing but the speech of his spirit. Ex.

4653. For man's spirit is among Spirits in the other life, and thinks there. . .

4654. There were Spirits who inflowed very strongly into my thought. . .

4657^e. Good Spirits do not hide their thoughts-cogitata.

4658². The Scholastics do not go from thought to terms; but from terms to thoughts. . . Many of them do not even go to thoughts. . .

—³. For all things of human thought and the derivative speech are analytical.

—⁶. (Aristotle) said he had known that his spirit would live after death . . . because it can think. . .

4674². Every man as to his spirit is in some Society, either angelic or diabolical: his thought is there; but his speech and actions are among men.

4676². The spirit does not know what old age is; and yet it is the spirit that thinks in the body... The reason this thought of the spirit cannot be communicated to the body, and the man thus know that he lives after death, is that so long as his spirit remains in the body, he cannot think otherwise than from the principles which his natural man has become imbued with... (so that) the influx of that thought is not received.

4729. (For such) think from lower and sensuous things.

4742. All the thought of the Angels is effected by the variegation of the light of Heaven, as also is the thought of man, although he is not aware of it; because with man that light falls into material images or ideas, which, being in his natural man, are from the light of the world... But in the other life, when the sight of the eye... is in the light of Heaven, it becomes manifest that his thought is from it.

4746. 'They lifted up their eyes and saw'=further thought; for (this expression)=intention and thought, or intense thought.

4760². (They allege) that thought, which man has above the brutes, is a thing which he attains by coming to maturity later. —³.

4766². Does he not think of three Gods?

—⁴. It would follow that to think what is true is of the Church, but not to think what is good; and thus that the thought of the man of the Church may be in contradiction to itself; that is, to think what is evil, and at the same time to think what is true; and so by thinking evil be with the devil, and by thinking truth be with the Lord.

4799³. (Effect on the face, of thinking one thing and saying another.)

4814². The thoughts of the Angels derive nothing from time and space... Neither does man perceive time when in interior thought, but when in exterior, as may be evident from the state of a man when his exterior thought has been lulled, that is, when he is asleep.

4850². The changes of state of the thoughts are in those of the affections as singulars are in generals, and are, relatively, variations.

4857³. So long as man lives in the world, he thinks from the natural and worldly things which are there, and not from spiritual and heavenly things...

4884². That which man only thinks, and does not do; and still more that which he thinks and does not want to do, is no otherwise than outside the man, and is dissipated like chaff by the slightest wind... from which it may be known what faith is without works.

4901². Spirits and Angels have no thought from times, as have men... but their thought is from states of life. Ex. (Continued under IDEA.)

—³. Thought from the interior memory has not times and spaces adjoined to it; but states and their progressions instead. Hence it is that they correspond.

5000. 'She spake to Joseph day by day'=thought about that Thing.

— The reason 'to speak'=to think, is that thought is interior speech; and, when man thinks, he is then speaking to himself.

5044. With all in temptations there inflows truth from the Lord, which rules and governs the thoughts, and raises them up whenever they fall into doubts, or into despair.

5084⁵. Man is above beasts... in this: that he can think, [and this] not only about the causes of things, but also about the Divine...

5094². He who thinks and concludes from the interior Natural, is rational in proportion as he draws in through the Rational; whereas he who thinks and concludes from the exterior Natural, is sensuous in proportion as he draws in from sensuous things.

5096. This persuasion is such that it takes away all freedom of thinking anything else, consequently holds the thought itself in a bond...

—^e. (Such) can, in mental view—intuitions—and thought, range at large as it were through the whole Heaven...

5102. For the interiors of man, from which come the thoughts... are the affections; for these, being of his love, are of his life. It is known that the affections are presented visibly in the face with those who are in innocence, and, together with the affections, so also are the thoughts in general; for these are forms of the affections.

5110². Abstractedly from person, man cannot form a conception of these things, because what is natural is adjoined to every single thing of his thought; nevertheless, when we think that all which is in the Lord is Divine, and that the Divine is above all thought... (and abstract) that which is comprehensible, there remains Esse and Existere itself. (Continued under IDEA.)

—^e. It is from this that everyone is able to think of the Divine Itself as of a Man...

5119². This fallacy... cannot possibly be dispelled... even by the rational man, unless it can think abstractedly from what is sensuous.

[A.] 5121³. Genuine perception . . . leads the understanding to think as the case really is, with an internal assent . . . (which) is a dictate through Heaven from the Lord, inflowing into the interiors of the thought concerning such things as are above what is natural . . .

5126². From infancy to childhood, man . . . receives only earthly, corporeal, and worldly things through the senses of the body, and from these his ideas and thoughts are then formed; the communication with the interior man being as yet not open . . .

5130. He who receives faith is continually in remembrance of the Lord, and this even when he is thinking or speaking about something else . . . But what reigns universally is not perceived, except while the thought is directed to it. (Examp.)

—². (Thus is seen) what is meant when it is said that we are to think continually about the Lord, salvation, and the life after death. All who are in faith from charity do this; and hence it is that they do not think evilly about the neighbour, and have justice and equity in everything of their thought, speech, and action; for that which reigns universally inflows into every single thing, and leads and rules it . . .

5131³. When the faith of charity is the end, thought the cause, and discourse the effect, then, if there is correspondence, faith from charity inflows into the thought, and this into the discourse . . .

5135². When man begins to think, not, as before, from his parents and masters, but from himself, he as it were ruminates the things he had previously learned . . .

5141. When a man is in interior thought from affection, and withdraws his mind from sensuous things . . . he is in rational apperception . . . and is almost in his spirit. But when a man is in exterior thought, from causes which come forth in the world, his apperception is from the interior Natural . . .

5168². Therefore, when there is no subordination (of the exterior Natural), man can have no interior thought . . .

5172. There are certain upright Spirits who think not by meditation; and thus quickly, and as it were without premeditation, utter the things which occur to their thought. They have interior perception, which is not rendered so visible by meditations and thoughts as is the case with others. . . Such belong to the province of the thymus gland. Des.

5173^e. For to think and will is spiritual, and to act and be moved is natural . . . But that which in the will and derivative thought is that which produces, is not alike in its form with the action which is produced; for the action only represents that which the mind wills and thinks.

5180². The modest ones (of these Spirits of the receptacle and ducts of the chyle) are they who have desired to know men's thoughts—cogitata—in order to allure and bind them to themselves; for he who knows the thoughts—cogitata—of another, knows his secret and interior things, and this causes them to be conjoined . . . These desire to know only what is good in men . . . But the impudent (of these Spirits) try to find out the thoughts—cogitata—of others in order to profit or to inflict injury . . . and detain the mind of the other in the Thing they want to know, by not receding, and by adjoining also assent from affection, thus drawing out even the secret thoughts.

5182. Recent Spirits have to be initiated into gyres, in order that they may . . . speak and think together with others . . . In like manner in the Grand Man . . . the thought and speech of one must be in accord with that of others. It is a fundamental thing that the thought and speech should be in accord with everyone in a Society in themselves; otherwise a discordance as of a disagreeable grating noise is apperceived . . .

—^e. The second (introduction into gyres) is that the thought and speech may be in accord; the third is that (the Spirits) may agree together as to the thoughts and affections . . .

5185^e. (The Spirits of the pancreatic, hepatic, and cystic ducts) when in their natural state, think nothing. To think nothing is to think obscurely of many things at once, and not distinctly of anything.

5187². One kind of vexing there consists in forcing one to speak faster than he thinks . . . The slow are thus inaugurated into thinking and speaking more quickly. D. 1014. 1015. 1030. 1124a.

5189. (The Spirits of the isthmus of the brain are) such that each one speaks differently from the others, and yet they all think alike. Ex. D. 3822.

—^e. The thoughts from the ends are represented by the fibres from these beginnings (in the brain).

5222. 'Spirit,' here, = the interior affection and thought; these are the spirit of man . . . But at this day by 'the spirit' . . . only the thinking faculty—cogitativum—is understood, and this without any subject other than the body . . .

5227. Thought from the Sensuous which is subject to the intellectual part. Sig. and Ex.

5228. Perception from thought. Sig. and Ex.

5259. The thought of the Celestial of the Spiritual from the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

— . For that which is exterior never thinks from itself, but from what is interior . . . although while the interior or higher is thinking in the exterior or lower, it appears as if (the latter) were thinking from itself. Ex.

5272. That which the Natural thought from the Celestial of the Spiritual. Sig. and Ex.

5278. (For) the things of which a man is thinking are immediately under his view, and the things related thereto present themselves in order around, even to those not related which are the most remote, and are then in forgetfulness; the things which are opposite are separated thence and hang downwards, and present themselves underneath, and equilibrate those which are above. This ordination is effected through the good which inflows; and this is the case with all the thought of man. That it is so appears from thoughts in the other life; for thoughts are sometimes presented visibly there in the light of Heaven, and then such a form of their arrangement appears.

—². This appears manifestly from the thought of man: in proportion as it regards the words of one who is speaking, it regards not his meaning; and in proportion as it regards the particulars in the man's own memory, and remains therein, it does not perceive the qualities of Things; and, still more, in proportion as it regards itself in everything, it contracts the thoughts, and removes itself from the view of a Thing [as regarded] in the universal. Hence it is that in proportion as anyone loves himself more than others, he is less wise in the same proportion.

5288². Without this influx (from Heaven) man could not think at all; on the ceasing of the influx, everything of thought ceases.

5302. Some suppose . . . that man is man from the fact that he can think. But man is not man from this: but from the fact that he can think what is true and will what is good, and that at the time he is thinking what is true and willing what is good he can view the Divine and receive it perceptibly. In this is man distinguished from brute animals. . . If a man thinks what is false, and wills what is evil, it makes him . . . even worse than a brute animal; for by these very faculties he destroys what is human in himself . . .

5342². Then, because he begins to think from himself, and to act according thereto, he can no longer be kept in charity.

—³. Therefore, from that age . . . especially by his Own thoughts and the derivative confirmations is he imbued with truths.

5383. There are some (of these Spirits of the kidneys and ureters) who as soon as they approach apperceive another's thoughts—cogitata, etc. . . It is a wonderful thing in the other life . . . that as soon as any Spirit comes to another, and still more when he comes to a man, he at once knows his thoughts and affections . . .

5386^e. (These Spirits of the excretories) have not any extension of the thoughts . . .

5391². When my thoughts were led to infants (these chaste virgins of the subsidiary kidneys) felt . . . internal joy . . . but when anything was thought of in which there was nothing heavenly, they became anxious. Their anxiety comes chiefly from their being of such a nature that they keep their thoughts steadily in one Thing, and do not shake off anxious things by variety. . . They also keep the mind of another constantly in certain thoughts, whence such things rise up and show themselves as cohere in a series and . . . from which the man is to be purified. In this way also interior things lie in plainer view to the Angels . . .

5428³. Freedom itself . . . consists in . . . thinking (and willing) nothing from self; but from Heaven . . .

5477². It is (spiritual) light which enlightens the ideas and objects which are from the light of the world, and causes man to be able to think, conclude, and reflect. Ex.

5497. A child . . . cannot think from what is higher than the exterior Natural; for he composes his ideas from sensuous things. But, as he grows up, and from sensuous things forms conclusions to the causes, he thus begins to think from the interior Natural . . .

5508. 'To tell—indicare'=to think and reflect.

5511. If it is said that man thinks nothing from himself . . . but that if he thinks what is good, it is through Heaven from the Lord; and if what is evil, it is from Hell: this appears hard to him who wants to think from himself . . . when yet it is most true. 5846.

—³. If it is said that . . . the internal man (or soul) after death appears . . . with a like sensitive and thinking faculty—facultate cogitativa, this will seem foreign to the truth to those who have cherished the opinion that it is only thinking something . . .

5562. They who emerge from vastations, and serve for uses to which the bones [correspond], have not any determinate thought, but a general almost indeterminate thought, being like those who are called distraught . . .

5567. He induced a general sphere of ideas of thought.

5597. 'To ask'=to perceive the thought of another. . . For in Heaven there is a communication of all thoughts, so that no one need ask another what he is thinking. 5800.

—³. As the interior or rational mind of the man who is in good is in the Spiritual World, and his exterior or natural mind in the natural world, it cannot be but that both minds think, the interior one spiritually, and the exterior one naturally, and that what is spiritual falls into what is natural, and they act as a one by correspondence. (Continued under IDEA, at —4.)

5695². For the Angels have no desire to conceal from others what they are thinking; for they think nothing but what is good—bene—towards the neighbour, nor have they any hidden thought that they wish well to the neighbour for the sake of themselves.

5732. For in Heaven no one is commanded; but thought is communicated to another, and he acts willingly according to it. Communication of thought, together with desire which wills that something be done, is influx; and, on the part of the recipient, is perception.

5774². Every man when a child thinks . . . from sensuous things; as he advances in age, he thinks . . . from scientifics; and afterwards, from truths. This is the way to judgment. Further ex.

5800. 'My lord asked his servants' = the perception of their thought. Ex.

5855. I (had supposed) that no Spirit could perceive my thoughts. (Fully quoted under SWEDENBORG.) 6214.

5975. The interior sight is thought; and, in a Society there . . . what one is thinking another is thinking; thus thought conjoins. Moreover, when anyone thinks about another, he is presented; and in this way also it conjoins.

5985. A Subject is one in whom are concentrated the thoughts and speech of a number. (Fully quoted under SUBJECT—Spirit, and also at 5989^e.)

5986. No one in either Heaven or Hell, thinks, etc. from himself, but from others, and thus, at last, all and each from the general influx of life which is from the Lord. (Continued under SUBJECT—Spirit.) Every Spirit wills that he thinks and speaks from himself; but . . . they were told that everything of thought and of will inflows, because there is only one life . . . (which) is varied everywhere according to the form of each subject. Ex.

6004³. When scientifics are thus infilled, then, when anyone thinks from scientifics, the thought extends and diffuses itself far and wide, to many Societies in the Heavens at the same time. Ex.

6007. To be elevated towards interior things is to think interiorly, and, at last, like a Spirit, and an Angel; for the more interiorly thought goes, the more perfect it is, because it is nearer the influx of truth and good from the Lord.

6040^e. Moreover, in the other life, by thought about persons those are excited who are thought of; for all thought is communicated there.

6159. What reigns universally, reigns also singularly . . . whatever the dominant affection is, it is present in every single thing of the man's thought (and will); and, although it does not always appear to be present in the thought, still it is in it . . .

6194. I have sometimes thought and spoken without reflecting that Spirits are present; but they at once addressed me, and told me that they did not know it was not they who were thinking. The nearest Spirits believed it was themselves altogether; the more remote ones less so; and those still more remote, still less so.

6195. (When these Spirits were present) they so hindered my thoughts that I could think only confusedly and brokenly. Ex.

6200². When I have thought about a man (or a city) . . . that whole man (or city), as they existed in my thought and affection, appeared in a moment with the Spirits. Ex. (Continued under SPIRIT, at 6201.)

—^e. To be elevated from these Spirits, man must think about eternal life.

6204. The evil which enters into the thought does not at all injure the man . . . but it does when it enters the will . . . by being kept in the thought . . . 6308², Ex. and Sig.

6210. (When I have) thought inordinately about worldly things . . . I have noticed that I had relapsed into what is sensuous; and that in proportion as the thought was immersed in these things, I was removed from consort with the Angels. . . For when such thoughts occupy the whole mind, they bear the lower mind downwards, like weights. (Shown by an experience.)

6226. Few know that thought is sometimes in the interior, and sometimes in the exterior, Natural. Ex.

—^e. For the Angels do not think, like man, from the objects of the world, and of the body; but from those of Heaven.

6263. 'I had not thought to see thy faces' (Gen. xlviii. 11) = that he had not been in hope . . .

6273. That the thought—cogitare—of man is posterior (to will). Ex. For the will causes him to think in one way rather than in another.

6308. Man does not perceive (this) influx, because his thought is kept in freedom by an equilibration between these two influxes.

6309. (Interior and exterior thought a proof of there being an internal and an external man. Ex.)

6310². When man is in this (sensuous) lumen, his thought is nearly in the same lumen as is his external sight, and is almost in the body. Men who are in this lumen are to be called sensuous, for they do not think beyond the sensuous things of the body . . .

6315. The man who has been elevated from sensuous things by the good of faith, is alternately in sensuous and in interior lumen . . . When in the state of his sensuous life, he is averse to speak and think about God, etc., and if he does speak and think about them, he makes them of no account, unless at that moment he is elevated by the Lord . . . This man, when . . . in interior lumen, thinks from what is just and fair; and, if in a lumen still more interior, he thinks from spiritual truth and good.

6317. (These Spirits) were remitted into the state of thought in which they had been when in the body, and their thought, about Spirits, was communicated to me. Des.

6319. The influx of the Angels with man is according to correspondences; for the Angels think spiritually, and man perceives it naturally. Examps.

—². That thought is circumstanced quite differently from speech, is evident from the fact that a man thinks more things in a moment than he can utter in half an hour, because he thinks abstractedly from the words of language.

6321. As they hindered the influx, so did the life of the thought fluctuate, and finally was as it is with those who fall into a swoon.

6326. All the operations of the mind are variations of form . . . and the ideas of thought are nothing else; and these variations come forth according to the changes of state of the affections.

6338². Unless the thoughts were ordained universally and at the same time singularly by the affections . . . they could never flow rationally and analytically.

6368. Man's will and thought from the proprium is nothing but evil and the derivative falsity . . .

6380². Those of the external Church cannot elevate the thought higher than to the Divine Natural; whereas those of the internal Church elevate [it] above the Natural to the Internal; for everyone who is in faith in the Lord, has an idea of Him according to the faculty of elevating the thoughts.

6470. That all life is from the Lord, it has been granted to know from the fact that no Spirit thinks and speaks from himself, but from others, and these again from others, and so on . . . (thus) as no one thinks and speaks from himself, but from others, at last all [do so] from one, thus from the Lord . . .

6474. How all thoughts are ruled by the Lord, shown me.

—^e. That which inflowed from the Lord so led all the series of my thoughts into consequents . . . that I could not possibly wander into other thoughts . . .

6484. He belonged to the subtle evil Spirits, because he had indulged in thought more than in discourse and social intercourse. Des.

6564². (With the evil) the interiors are closed, there being an entrance solely as it were through chinks here and there, whence there remains to the man the faculty of thinking and willing, but contrary to what is true and good . . .

6571. 'Ye thought evil upon me' (Gen. 1.20) = that they intend nothing but evil. (Fully ex. under INTEND.)

6598. (The reason one man can understand what is honest, just, and good better than another) consists in the elevation of the thought to the things of Heaven; by this the thought is withdrawn from external sensuous things; for they who think solely from sensuous things cannot see one whit of what is honest, just, and good; and therefore they trust in others . . . whereas they who are able to think above sensuous things—if the things in the memory have been ordained—are, more than others, in the faculty of understanding and perceiving, and this according to the degree of the mental view from within.

6599. How the case is with those who think in what is sensuous, and with those who think above it; and the nature of the influx into these two. Ex.

—^c. How the case is with thought and its ideas. Thought diffuses itself into the surrounding Societies of Spirits and Angels, and the faculty of understanding and perceiving is according to the extension, that is, according to the influx thence; and, moreover, in one idea of thought there are innumerable things, and still more in one thought compounded of ideas.

6600. It has been manifestly shown me that the thought of man, and also that of Spirits, and of Angels, diffuses itself around into a number of Societies in the Spiritual World; but the thought of one in a different way from that of another. (Shown by experience.) According to the extension of the thoughts and affections into the Societies, is effected the faculty of understanding and perceiving with man, Spirit, and Angel. (See under EXTEND, at this and the succeeding references.)

—³. The statement that the thought and affection of man, Spirit, and Angel circumsure themselves into Societies, is made according to the appearance; the influx of the thoughts and affections being really from the Societies, and, in fact, through the Angels and Spirits with the man.

6601. I was kept for some time in a certain affection and the derivative thought, and it was shown how many Societies concurred in it: there were five Societies who . . . said what they were thinking; and also that they had apperceived that those thoughts were in me; and besides, that they also knew . . . the causes of the Things which were being thought, and also the ends. The rest of the Societies . . . to which the thought was extended, were not so manifested: they were more remote . . .

6603. But the thoughts and affections which penetrate into Societies do not there move the Societies to think and will in special as does the man, Spirit, or Angel from whom the thoughts and affections go forth ; but they enter into the universal sphere of the affection and derivative thought of those Societies ; so that the Societies know nothing about it. Ex. . . All thoughts and affections enter into the spheres of the Societies with which they are in agreement ; and hence it is that there are extensions in every direction in freedom, like the extensions of rays from objects in the world, which spread freely on every side to the sight of everyone who stands around, with variety according to the clearness or dullness of the sight, and the serenity or obscurity of the atmosphere . . .

[A.] 6604². For the extension of the affections and thoughts has its limits, and in the last Societies it vanishes, and goes off as the sight does into the universe. Within the limits of this general sphere, the thoughts and affections can be varied, and be sometimes nearer one Society and sometimes nearer another. When they are in the midst of one Society, the rest are to that one in the circumferences . . .

6605. Hence it is that every Spirit and Angel appears in a form exactly according to the communication of his thoughts and affections with the Societies ; in proportion as they are in good and truth, they are in a more beautiful human form ; but if the communication of the thoughts and affections is diffused into Societies not according to the heavenly order, the form is unbeautiful in the same degree ; and if the communication is with infernal Societies, the form is ugly and diabolical . . .

6606. I have observed that when I was speaking with angelic Spirits, the affections and thoughts appeared like a stream around, and that the subject of thought was in the midst, encompassed with that stream, and that the stream was extended thence in all directions ; from which it has been made manifest that the thoughts and affections extend themselves to Societies in all directions.

6607. When thoughts with affections diffuse themselves, they circulate almost according to the form of the circumvolutions of the cineritious substances in the human brain. Des. . . But the forms of Heaven are still more wonderful . . . and into such a form do the thoughts of the Angels flow . . .

6609. The thoughts and speech of the Societies within which was my thought, have been sometimes represented to me by clouds. Ex.

6612. (Thus) the more exteriorly a man thinks, the less extension he has ; and the more interiorly, the more extension. For they who think exteriorly, that is, in what is sensuous, communicate solely with the grosser Spirits ; whereas they who think interiorly, that is, from what is rational, have communication with Angels. Des.

numerable things inflow into the thought of the Spirits who are beneath, they are presented as only one thing ; the light and the resplendence inflow into their thought, and the flaming into their affection, and this flaming leads their ideas, and joins them together . . .

6621. The thoughts of those who, when reading the Word, have studied only the art of criticism . . . have been represented as closed lines . . . and as a texture thence. When such have been with me, all things which were being thought and written became confused, the thought being kept as it were in prison.

6626. With the Angel, Spirit, or man who lives in charity towards the neighbour and in love to the Lord, the very smallest things of thought relate to a man. Ex. (Continued under IDEA.)

6655². Those who are like the Angels, want, if possible, that their mind should be open, and that what they are thinking may be manifest to everybody . . . Whereas they who are in evil are afraid lest anything which they are thinking and willing should shine out . . .

6666². Nothing else occupies the thoughts of the infernals than doing evil.

6669². 'To tread the clay' = from evil to think falsity.

6788. Thought about the holy things of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

6814. I could speak with (the Spirits of Mercury) only by a kind of active thought.

— For the thought which is above the imagination requires for its objects Things abstracted from those which are material.

6839. That the Lord inflowed into his thought, in order that he might reflect upon it. Sig. and Ex.

6843. That he should not as yet think about the Divine from sensuous things. Sig. and Ex. 6844, Ex.

— 'To approach to Jehovah' = to think about the Divine.

6844³. For man is not aware . . . that thought is more and more interior, and also exterior.

6893. Thought itself makes presence ; for he who is being thought of appears as if present before the internal sight. In the other life this takes place actually ; for there, when anyone is intensely thought of, he is presented. Hence it is that friends meet there, and also enemies . . .

6901. 'To enter' = to communicate one's thought to another.

6915^e. For the thought of the spiritual is within scientifics, and but little above them.

6921. (The spirits of Mercury) are quicker than others in thinking, etc.

6943. Thought from the Law Divine. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. Thought from the Law Divine, is thought from truth from the Divine.

—². It appears as if the words of the speech were in the thought, but this is a fallacy, it is only the meaning of the speech which is there. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

7094. 'Pharaoh said'=contrary thought by those who infest.

7147². Infestations take place in this way: falsities and evils from the Hells, and truths and goods from Heaven . . . are injected into the thoughts; which happens because men and Spirits do not think from themselves; but all things inflow.

7158. 'They met Moses and Aaron'=thought about the Divine law and the derivative doctrine. Ex.

7191^e. (Thus) everything of thought, and of the derivative discourse, inflows through Heaven from the Lord . . .

7218². It is to be known that everything of thought inflows; but when it is the state of evening and night with Spirits, their thought is in a compulsory state; [for] they are then compelled to think about the falsities which are being injected . . . But when it is the state of morning and mid-day with them, their thought is in a free state; for they are then free to think about the things they love, thus about the truths and goods of faith and charity . . .

7222. 'Moses spake with Jehovah'=the Law from the Divine and the derivative thought.

7244. 'Moses said before Jehovah'=thought about the Law Divine with those who are in falsities.

7341. 'Pharaoh looked back, and came to his house'=thought and reflection from falsities. 'To look back'=thought and reflection. Ex.

7360. (In Mars) the affection of their speech is represented in their faces, and its thought in the eyes; for the thought and the speech . . . with them make a one: they regard it as wicked to think one thing and speak another.

7381². The ideas of interior thought with man . . . are terminated in material things, and, where they are terminated, there they appear to be; hence he perceives what he is thinking. Hence it is evident how the case is with the truth of faith . . . that it falls into the thought of man, and that it is called the external law. (Continued under IDEA.)

7437. 'Lo, he goes forth to the waters'=that from these evils they again think falsities. 'To go forth'=thought from evils to falsities. Ex.

—². As to thought from evils to falsities, it is to be known that they who are in evils, cannot do otherwise than think from them to falsities. Ex.

—³. And so those who are in a state of good cannot do otherwise than think from good to truths. Ex.

7454³. Believe not, then, that the things man thinks in secret . . . are hidden; for they are as manifest in Heaven as are the things which appear in the light of mid-day. III.

7480. The Spirits of Mars relate to . . . what is intermediate between the Intellectual and the Voluntary, thus to thought from affection; and the best of them to the affection of thought. Hence it is that their faces act as a one with their thought.

7498². For he who thinks of anyone sets him as present to himself; and . . . in the other life, he of whom anyone thinks from a longing to speak to him, is presented . . .

7568. For, in the Spiritual World, all approach is effected by a determination of the thought.

7693². (A sensuous man) thinks as it were on the surface, that is, in ultimates or extremes; and is quite unaware that there exists an interior thought according to the perception of what is true and good.

—^e. To look to Heaven is not to think about the things of Heaven, but to have them as the end . . . for wherever the love turns, the man's interiors turn; and thus also his thought.

7745². These Spirits withdraw their thoughts from others . . . If anything of their affection were perceived, their thought would be manifest; for the thought flows from the affection.

7747². For they who are sincere do not even wish to think anything except what others may know . . .

7802. The reason why (in Jupiter) Spirits speak with men, is that they think much about Heaven and the life after death . . . Speaking with Spirits and Angels was common in this Earth also in ancient times, for a like reason, namely, that they thought about Heaven and but little about the world; but this living communication with Heaven was closed in proportion as man . . . began to think about the world, and but little about Heaven . . .

7937. 'Ye shall say'=thought. Ex.

8067. 'A memorial between the eyes'=that which must be perpetually in the understanding, that is, in the thought.

— The things which man thoroughly believes and loves are perpetually in his thought and will; for he is thinking and willing them although in ideas and business about other Things . . . for they are present in his mind among other things which constitute the quality of his mind ; as is evident from the spiritual sphere which is around a Spirit . . .

[A.] 8124. He who is in charity . . . has charity in every single thing which he thinks and speaks . . .

8128°. Thought from perception is internal speech.

8160. 'The sons of Israel lifted up their eyes' = the Intellectual of the mind, and [also] thought.

8248. It was shown how the thoughts are presented by the face. Ex.

8343°. That everything of thought and will inflows ; what is good, from Heaven ; and what is evil, from Hell. Refs.

8383°. For when they become Spirits, they are driven to speak exactly as they think.

8406. 'The sons of Israel said unto them' = thought from anxiety.

8516°. (When they act from good) all things they think and do flow as it were spontaneously . . . It would be quite different if they thought and acted from truth ; for then they would think whether they should act in this way, or not . . .

8565. 'Moses said to them' = an answer by influx into the thought . . . For all answer from the Divine is effected by influx, and that into the thought.

8622°. Genii do not inflow into the thoughts, as infernal Spirits do . . . but into the affections . . .

8630°. The Spirits and Angels (of Jupiter) relate to the Imaginative of thought . . .

8701°. In the other life all are reduced to such a state . . . that what they will they also think . . . But here, a man can think . . . differently from what he wills, to the intent that he may be reformed. 8702°.

8733. As the Spirits of Jupiter relate to the Imaginative of thought, they speak little and think much ; and, when they speak, their speech is cogitative. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

8746. The internal man is regenerated by thinking the things which are of faith, and willing them. See 8745.

8834. 'Moses said unto Jehovah' = the thought of truth from the Divine. . . It is said the thought of truth from the Divine, and there is meant the thought with him who represents truth from the Divine ; (for) it is the truth with a man which thinks . . .

8865°. Such Spirits and Angels are with a man as is his universal Regnant . . . All the cheerfulness and content which a man has, even when he is thinking about other Things, is thence.

8885. 'Remember' = that which is perpetually in the thought. . . That which is perpetually in the thought is that which universally reigns there ; and that universally reigns with a man which is perpetually in his thought, even when he is meditating about other Things. . . The thought of man involves many things together ; for it is the form of many things which have entered successively ; the things which come to manifest perception are then in the middle, and are thus in the light of the internal sight, and all other things are then at the sides round about ; the things which are in the circuits are in obscurity, and are not manifested, except when such objects occur as they have been associated with. The things which are still more remote, and which are not in that plane, but verge downwards, are such things as the man has rejected, and to which he is averse. Such things are what are evil and false with the good, and what are good and true with the evil.

—². In the thought itself of man are the things which are perpetually there, that is, which universally reign there, which are his inmost things. From these, the man regards the things which are not perpetually there . . . as outside of himself . . . from which he can choose those which agree with the inmost things, and adjoin them to himself . . .

—⁴. With the evil, thought and will do indeed inmostly agree . . . but this agreement does not appear before men ; for from infancy they learn to speak otherwise than as they think . . . But in the other life the quality of the interior will and thought appears as in clear light.

—³. For man cannot desist from thinking evil, but from doing it ; but as soon as he receives evil from the thought into the will, it . . . enters into him . . . Sig.

8981°. They who from infancy have thought but little about eternal life . . . and yet have lived a good moral life, and have also believed the truths of doctrine of their Church . . . can be reformed only by the adjunction of spiritual good when they are in combat . . .

8985. 'If the servant by saying shall say' = thought then from implanted truth.

— For in Heaven they think about a subject apart from the person; for when a person also is there thought of, the Society which is in that Thing is excited, and thus the thought is determined thither, and is fixed; for in Heaven where there is thought there is presence; and presence would bend to itself the thoughts of those who are in the Society, and would thus disturb the influx from the Divine there. It is otherwise when they think abstractedly about a Thing; for then the thought diffuses itself in every direction according to the heavenly form . . . and this without the disturbance of any Society; for it insinuates itself into the general spheres of the Societies, and then does not touch or move anyone in a Society, and thus does not deflect anyone from the freedom of thinking according to the influx from the Divine. In a word, abstract thought can pass through the universal Heaven without stopping anywhere; whereas thought determined to a person or a place is fixed and stopped.

9012. 'When a man shall act against his companion from purpose' = previous thought from a depraved will. Ex.

9050⁴. 'Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy thought,' etc. (Matt. xxii. 37). . . 'The thought' = the things which proceed from the life of faith, thus from the soul, or an enlightened understanding.

9110. When man is in faith, and thence in spiritual life, and thinks, then the spiritual man descends, that is, thinks in the Natural . . .

9127¹. Those alone can understand this . . . who can think above the sensuous things of the body.

9202. When men merely think . . . from a sincere heart (it is heard in Heaven as a cry).

—^e. And when anyone thinks and speaks from another, the truths with him are disturbed, and yet he is not amended . . .

9222³. For (these blasphemies against the Word) lie hidden behind the ideas of active thought which comes forth into speech . . .

9278⁴. (The cause of a man's belief that the objects of the eye and ear produce thoughts.)

9283. 'The name of other gods ye shall not mention' = that we are not to think from the doctrine of what is false. Ex.

— For man has speaking thought, and thought not speaking. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

9331. Flying animals and winged insects = such things as are of the thoughts . . .

9333². For whatever a man, from his earliest infancy, thinks, wills, etc. adds itself to his life, and makes it . . . 9334².

9396². (The ancients and most ancients) thought in the spirit almost abstractedly from the body; whereas the men of the present day . . . think in the body almost abstractedly from the spirit . . .

9407². From the end, which is the love, flows the thought of man. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

—⁴. He who cannot think intellectually, that is, abstractedly from material things, cannot apprehend these things.

9550. For affection is the very life or soul of thought.

9572. For the internal man, while in the body, thinks in the natural, and sets forth his thoughts—cogitata—in the Corporeal.

9587. The Lord keeps man in the freedom of thinking . . .

9730. For he is called a sensuous man who thinks and desires according to the senses of the body and their appetites . . . He who considers further than this . . . is said to . . . think interiorly . . . 10236².

9828. Love, in Heaven, is the end of all the wills; and faith is the end of all the thoughts.

—^e. For what is natural . . . is not removed, unless the intellectual sight can be elevated into the light of Heaven, and the man thus think almost abstractedly from natural things: when this is done, spiritual things . . . enter.

9877. According to this heavenly form flow all the affections of love, and all the thoughts of faith; for according to that form they diffuse themselves into the angelic Societies, and make a communion. Hence it is that they who are in the good of love to the Lord, and in the derivative truths of faith, are in the freest state of willing and thinking; whereas they who are not in this good . . . are in a state of slavery; for they will and think from themselves, and not from the Lord, from whom is that form.

[A.] 9995². Hence man can with so much difficulty distinguish between thinking and willing; for he says, when he wills anything, that he thinks it; and, frequently, when he thinks anything, that he wills it; when yet they are as distinct as are truth and good; for the esse of thought is will, and the form of will is thought . . .

10169. For he who is in love truly conjugal, loves what the other thinks and wills; thus loves to think and also will as the other. 10173.

10182⁶. When yet the Cogitative of man from his Voluntary makes all the strength of the body . . .

10215^e. Such is the consociation of the Angels with man, for the reason that everything of his thought inflows from the Spiritual World, and thus that his thought, in its first origin, is spiritual, and becomes natural in the external man by influx.

10225⁵. The third state is called the state of intelligence, because the man then begins to think from himself . . .

10237². But the things which are thought in the internal man, do not come to manifest perception so long as man is in the world, because the ideas there are spiritual.

10265. For the Angels in the Inmost Heaven think immediately from the Lord.

10367⁴. For what a man wills he also thinks when he is left to himself.

10381. For the things which I think, I do not think from myself, but from Spirits by influx.

10454². For 'voice' = the interior voice, which is thought, Ex.

10604³. As there is a correspondence between spiritual thought and natural thought, and as the Angels are in spiritual thought, the Angels perceive spiritually that which man perceives naturally, especially when man thinks from the Word. Examp.

—^e. For man, as to his spirit, is in society with Spirits; and, as to his interior thought, which is spiritual, with the Angels of Heaven. Hence, too, it is, that man has the faculty of thinking.

10614². As the will is in the thought, and the thought in the speech.

10638². They then do not think from themselves . . . but from the Lord . . . These are they who understand the Word.

10685^e. The things introduced by the Lord into the internal of man, he is not aware of while he lives (here), because he then thinks in his external or natural man, and not perceptibly in his internal man until he comes into the other life.

10709^e. Cogitative speech. Ex.

10712. It is a familiar thing to them to think remotely from the nearest objects, thus not to see them except as in shade; for such as is the thought of man, such is his sight; for it is the interior sight which is that of the thought which sees in the exterior, and through it.

10731². The reason they so think is that they think from the life of the world, and not from the life of Heaven; (for) no one can think from what is unknown to him.

10736². It was perceived that he thought solely of the Father.

H. 2². Their thought wanders from one Divine to another; and in Heaven no one may think three and say one, because everyone there speaks from thought; for the speech there is cogitative, or thought speaking. . . For in Heaven there is a communication of all thoughts . . .

26. For the Lord inflows immediately into the will of man, and mediately through his will into his thought—cogitare. P. 33². —³. 44.

39^e. That which is disposed and provided by the Lord in (the human internal) does not inflow manifestly into the perception of any Angel, because it is above his thought.

74². They who first think from others, and make [the things they thus think] a matter of faith, and afterwards view them from their own understanding, can scarcely recede from them . . .

79. Those in the higher Heavens cannot think otherwise of the Divine (than under a human form). They are carried into this necessity of thinking by the Divine itself which inflows, and also from the form of Heaven, according to which their thoughts extend themselves around; for all the thought which the Angels have has extension into Heaven . . .

85. For he who thinks from nature and from its lumen alone, never thinks otherwise than from such an extense as is before his eyes . . . 170.

87^e. The most ancients thought from correspondence itself, like the Angels; and they therefore spoke with Angels. 115.

108^e. It is different with man (from what it is with animals) because he thinks from the Spiritual World . . .

114. For the Angels do not think from natural things, like man ; and therefore when man is in the knowledge of correspondences, he can be together with the Angels as to the thoughts of his mind . . .

115. Others succeeded (the most ancients) who did not think from correspondences themselves, but from the knowledge of correspondences . . .

—². Others succeeded who knew correspondences, but did not think from the knowledge of them . . .

130. Those think naturally who look to the world only, and attribute all things to nature ; and those think spiritually who look to Heaven, and attribute all things to the Divine.

166^e. This shows how the natural things which are in the thought of man become spiritual with the Angels who are with him.

169. The natural man may believe that he would have no thought if the ideas of time, space, and material things were taken away ; for upon these is founded all the thought which man has. But let him know that the thoughts are limited and confined in proportion as they partake of time, space, and what is material ; and that they are not limited, and are extended, in proportion as they do not partake of these things.

196. This may be illustrated by the thoughts of man, in that there are no spaces to them . . .

—^e. This is still more the case with the Angels, because their sight acts as one with their thought ; and their thought as one with their affection.

199. By this the Angels have wisdom ; for by it they have extension of the thoughts. Ex.

203². There are some who believe that the thoughts and affections do not actually extend themselves around them, but that they are within them, because they see the things which they think within themselves, and not as distant ; but they are much mistaken. (Ex. and shown by experiment.)

—^e. All thought and affection inflow according to the communication, and, as all thought and affection do so, so therefore does everything of life, because everything of the life of man consists in this : that he can think and be affected . . .

210. The thoughts and affections, and also the discourse, of the Angels of the Inmost Heaven, are never perceived in the Middle Heaven, because they so far transcend it. But (sometimes) there appears thence something flaming in the lower Heavens ; and those which are in the Middle Heaven appear as what is lucid in the ultimate Heaven, and sometimes as a cloud. Des.

236^e. He who attends may know that all thought is from affection . . . and that the ideas of thought are various forms into which the general affection has been distributed ; for no thought or idea whatever is possible without affection : their soul and life are thence.

239. The speech of the Angels is full of wisdom, because it proceeds from their interior thought, and their interior thought is wisdom . . . The ideas of their thought comprehend such things as man cannot apprehend . . . When I was remitted into the natural thought which is proper to man, I could not recollect what I had heard (there) ; for there were thousands of things which were not adapted to the ideas of natural thought, and thus not expressible, except by variegations of heavenly light. Moreover the ideas of thought of the Angels, from which are their words, are modifications of the light of Heaven . . .

240². The ideas of thought of the Angels, and the words of their speech, make a one . . .

— . All the things of their thought . . . when presented to view, appear like a thin wave . . . in which are innumerable things in their order . . . and which enter into the thought of another (when spoken to).

262. The writings in the Heavens flow naturally from their thoughts themselves. Ex.

266. All the thoughts and affections of the Angels flow according to the heavenly form . . .

—³. Moreover, the thoughts of the Angels are not bounded and confined by ideas from space and time, like human thoughts . . . Nor are the thoughts of the Angels brought down to earthly and material things ; nor are they interrupted by any cares for the necessities of life . . .

277. For infants have no internal thought ; for they do not as yet know what good and evil are, or truth and falsity, from which is thought.

292. When Spirits come to man they enter into all his memory, and thence into all his thought : evil Spirits, into those things of the memory and thought which are evil ; and good Spirits, into those things of the memory and thought which are good. The Spirits . . . believe that all things which are of the man's memory and thought are their own.

298. The Spirits with man . . . never inflow from their own memory and the derivative thought ; for if they were to inflow from their own thought, the man would know no otherwise than that the things which are theirs were his own. . . Yet in proportion as the man's affection agrees with that which inflows (through them), it is received by him in his thought ; for the interior thought of man is altogether according to his affection . . . (Thus) as thought is not introduced into man by Spirits, but only affection . . . man has choice, and thus can, in thought, receive good and reject evil . . . That which he receives in thought from affection is appropriated to him ; but that which he does not receive in thought from affection is not appropriated to him.

306^e. For all the thought of the Angels is spiritual, whereas the thought of man is natural. These thoughts do indeed appear diverse ; but still are one because they correspond. 307².

314. In the body, the spiritual mind thinks naturally ; but after it has been loosed from it, it no longer thinks naturally, but spiritually ; and, when it thinks spiritually, it thinks things which are incomprehensible to the natural man.

323. They could perceive the interiors of my thoughts . . .

355. Only the rational things which are derived from (the scientifics) serve for thought there. . . For the things in the natural memory do not come into the thought there . . .

[H.] 356². While (here) man thinks both spiritually and naturally; but does not apperceive those things which he thinks spiritually; but only those which he thinks naturally. But when he comes into the Spiritual World, he does not apperceive the things which he had thought naturally in the world; but those which he had thought spiritually.

433³. Some who are dying . . . think even in their cold body . . .

434. Man cannot think and will except in a subject which is a substance. . . As man cannot see without an organ . . . so with thought, which is internal sight.

450. Something is felt to be rolled off the face; and then spiritual thought is induced. This rolling off represents that he is coming from natural thought into spiritual thought.

460². The human form is in the smallest particulars of thought which is from heavenly love with the Angels.

463. All the things of thought and will are inscribed on the brain; and therefore on the whole body. Ex.

464². For the man . . . when he had thought from the external Sensuous, and not at the same time from the internal Sensuous, or Intellectual, thought naturally and not spiritually; but in the other life . . . he does not think naturally but spiritually. To think spiritually is to think intellectually or rationally.

474. The thought makes the man only in so far as it proceeds from the will.

499. Everyone has exterior and interior thoughts and intentions. Ex.

—². (Thus) there are two thoughts, one exterior and the other interior. Ex. . . From creation man is such that the interior thought acts as one with the exterior by correspondence; and it does so with those who are in good; but not with those who are in evil. Ex.

500. When will and thought are mentioned . . . by thought is meant all that by which the man confirms his affection; for the thought is nothing but the form of the will . . .

503. In the second state after death, the Spirit thinks from his affection itself . . . so that the thought makes a one with the will, insomuch that it scarcely appears that he thinks, but that he wills.

504. The man had thought in like manner in the world, when he had thought within himself; for he did not then think from the speech of his body; but only saw the things [thought of]; and he saw more things in a minute than he could utter in half an hour.

508⁷. No one there is allowed to think one thing and speak another.

512. They then will nothing but evil, and think nothing but falsity.

532. The thoughts tend according to the intentions . . . for the thought is the internal sight of man . . . and wherever it is bent and directed, thither it is turned, and there it abides. If the internal sight or thought is turned to the world . . . the thought becomes worldly; if it is turned to self and self-honour, it becomes corporeal; but if to Heaven, it becomes heavenly . . .

—². It is man's love which . . . determines the sight of the internal man, that is, the thought, to its objects . . .

579. Genii do not operate into the thoughts, but into the affections . . . They take care skilfully lest anything enter the thought . . .

N. 39. The man whose internal is in the light of Heaven, and his external in the light of the world, thinks both spiritually and naturally; but then his spiritual thought inflows into his natural thought, and is perceived there. But the man whose internal is with his external in the light of the world, does not think spiritually but materially; for he thinks from such things as are in the nature of the world. To think spiritually is to think of Things themselves in one's self; to see truths from the light of truth, and to perceive goods from the love of good; and also to see the qualities of Things, and to perceive their affections abstractedly from matter; whereas to think materially, is to think, see, and perceive those things together with matter, and in matter; thus relatively grossly and obscurely.

167. It is a sign that sins are remitted (when we shun evil thoughts attended with intention).

J. 18. While in the earthly body, man's spiritual mind thinks naturally. (Continued under IDEA.)

36. Man's spirit is formed from his thought also, in so far as it proceeds from his will. The memory and the derivative thought are only the court, through which introduction is effected.

58⁴. They could inspire him by communications of the thoughts, known in the Spiritual World, but unknown in the natural.

73². Thence inflows all thought about Divine things and against Divine things; with Divine things, from the Heavens; and against Divine things, from the Hells.

C. J. 39. There are two states of thought with man, external and internal. Man is in the external one in the natural world, and in the internal one in the Spiritual World. These states make a one with the good, but not with the evil . . .

40. The English derive this interior light from their freedom of thinking . . . T.807.

L. 183. This would be to keep the thought in the Lord, and the will in Hell.

47. The life from the breath of the lungs, which is properly meant by 'the spirit,' and 'soul,' acts as one with the thought of man from the understanding.

S. 612. Such think constantly from the proprium (when reading the Word).

67°. But still the thoughts of the (celestial and spiritual) Angels, and those of men, make a one 'by correspondences, as end, cause, and effect . . .

Life 47°. For the man who is in good not only does well from the will, but also thinks well from the understanding . . .

48. But the thought of the understanding derives its existere from the love of the will, which is the esse of the thought in the understanding; for that which anyone wills from love, he wills . . . to think . . .

W. 2. When yet thought is the first effect of life . . . Yet there is thought more and more interior, and also more and more exterior. Inmost thought, which is the perception of ends, is actually the first effect of life.

7. Man can comprehend this in natural thought, provided he admits into it something of spiritual light. 8.

11. The thought (in Heaven) proceeds according to the form of Heaven.

42. Thoughts, etc., are substances and forms . . . and are not exhalations . . . but are actually and really the subjects . . .

46. Such think from the eye, and cannot do so from the understanding. Thought from the eye closes the understanding; whereas thought from the understanding opens the eye. Such cannot think anything about Esse and Existere in itself . . .

66. Man alone is a recipient of the life of the three degrees (of both worlds). Hence it is that he . . . can think analytically and rationally . . . 247, Ex.

69°. Every man who has understanding can think about those things which are proper to nature.

70. For they enter into spiritual light, in which the objects of thought are truths. Ex.

71. The merely natural man thinks about spiritual and Divine things from space; but the spiritual man apart from space. Ex.

72. This is the fundamental thought about God. Ex. —2. Remit your thought into natural lumen, and these things will appear paradoxes.

74°. When thought does not conjoin itself with the affection proper to man, time does not appear, as in sleep.

130. When the Angels think interiorly about the Lord, they do not think about Him otherwise than as in themselves. Interior thought itself does not cause distance, but exterior thought, which acts as one with the sight of the eyes. The reason is that exterior thought is in space, but not interior thought . . .

1472. By clouds are meant spiritual clouds, which are thoughts. Ex.

1632. And Angels and Spirits think and speak spiritually; whereas men . . . think and speak naturally; and spiritual thought and speech have nothing in common with natural thought and speech.

202. There is such a difference between the affections and thoughts, and the derivative speech, of the Angels of the higher and lower Heavens, that they have nothing in common; and communication is effected solely through correspondences. . . The thoughts of the Angels do not fall into natural ideas; for they are spiritual. . . The thoughts of the Angels of the Third Heaven are thoughts of ends; the thoughts of the Angels of the Middle Heaven are thoughts of causes; and the thoughts of the Angels of the First Heaven are thoughts of effects. It is one thing to think from ends, and another to think about ends; it is one thing to think from causes, and another to think about causes; and it is one thing to think from effects, and another to think about effects. The Angels of the lower Heavens think about causes and ends; but the Angels of the higher Heavens think from causes and ends; and to think from these belongs to higher wisdom; but to think about these belongs to lower wisdom. To think from ends is of wisdom; to think from causes is of intelligence; and to think from effects is of knowledge.

255. Beasts have only the natural degrees, which, without the higher degrees, are in no faculty of thinking about any civil, moral, or spiritual Thing. And, as their natural degrees are not capable of being opened, and thus elevated into higher light, they cannot think in successive order, but only in simultaneous order, which is not thinking, but acting from knowledge corresponding to their love. And, as they cannot think analytically, and see lower thought from a certain higher one, therefore they cannot speak . . . A sensuous man differs from a beast only in this: that he can fill his memory with scientifics, and think and speak from them.

257. By means of his natural mind elevated to the light of Heaven, man can think and even speak with the Angels; but the thought and speech of the Angels then inflow into the natural thought and speech of the man, and not conversely.

—5. Thought is effected from the spiritual substances of the natural mind, and not from its natural substances.

2852. Spirits and Angels appear in the place where their thought is. Ex.

295. That there is such a difference between the thoughts of Angels and those of men, has been made known to me by the following experience. They were asked to think spiritually on some subject, and afterwards to tell me what they had thought. They did so; but when they wanted to tell it me they could not, and said that those things could not be uttered in words.

... Yet they had seemed to themselves to think in the spiritual state in the same way as man does in the natural state. (Thus) the Natural and the Spiritual differ according to degrees of height, and communicate solely by correspondences.

[W.] 304. The states (of the fibres and vessels) are sensations, thoughts, and affections . . .

361. Hence some can think and speak well, but cannot write well. This is common with the female sex. Ex.

382. Anyone may observe . . . from his thoughts . . . that the understanding corresponds to the lungs; (for) no one can think unless the breath concurs and accords, and therefore when he thinks tacitly he breathes tacitly; if he thinks deeply he breathes deeply; he draws in the breath and lets it out, contracts and expands the lungs, slowly or quickly, eagerly, gently, or intently, according to the thought, thus according to the influx of the affection from the love; and if he holds his breath entirely he cannot think, except in his spirit from its respiration, which [thought] is not manifestly apperceived. 412, Ex.

397. After death the will and understanding make a one. . . It is the same with man when he is thinking from his spirit, as is the case when he is alone . . .

404. viii. That the third conjunction (of the will and understanding) is through the affection of seeing truth, from which is thought. Ex. P. 28³.

— Man is in manifest thought when his spirit thinks in the body, which is especially the case when he is in company; but when he is in the affection of understanding, and through this comes into the perception of truth, he is in the thought of his spirit, which is meditation. This does indeed fall into the thought of the body, but into tacit thought; for it is above this thought, and views the things which are of thought from the memory as beneath itself; for from these it either concludes, or confirms.

— When love enters the understanding . . . it first produces the affection of truth; then the affection of understanding that which it knows; and finally the affection of seeing in the thought of the body that which it understands; for thought is nothing else than internal sight. Thought does indeed come forth first, because it is of the natural mind; but thought from the perception of truth which is from the affection of truth, comes forth last. This thought is the thought of wisdom; whereas the other thought is thought from the memory through the sight of the natural mind. 405³.

405⁴. The ramifications of the bronchia of the lungs correspond to the perceptions and thoughts from these affections.

410³. (Thus) the thought which the love acquires from the affection of seeing that which it knows and understands, is not of the understanding, but is of the love. Thoughts, perceptions, and the derivative knowledges do indeed inflow from the Spiritual World; but still they are not received by the understanding, but by the love according to its affections in the understanding. Ex.

412^e. Moreover, it is evident that thought produces respiration, and that the affection of love produces thought; for thought without affection is exactly like respiration without the heart. (Thus) the affection of love conjoins itself with the thought of the understanding . . . in like manner as the heart does in the lungs.

413². The cellular substance of the lungs, which consists of the bronchia continued down to the minutest follicles, which are the receptacles of the air in the respirations, are what the thoughts make a one with by correspondence.

415. As the thoughts act as one with the respiration by correspondence, it is evident from the twofold state of the lungs in respiration, that man is able to think, and from thought to speak and act, in one way when in company, and in another when not in company . . .

417². Man has a twofold respiration, one of the body and the other of the spirit; and therefore a hypocrite can speak wisely in company from thought from the memory; but when not in company, he does not think from the memory, but from his spirit, thus from his love. He also respire in like manner; for the thought and the respiration act correspondently. 418.

420. The respirations of the lungs correspond to the perceptions and thoughts of the understanding.

P. 29. When anyone there thinks of another from the affection of speaking with him, he is at once present . . . In like manner when anyone thinks about another from the affection of love . . . 50. 326.

—³. Such a circle of love to thoughts, and from thoughts to love from love, is in all things of the human mind.

33. The perceptions and thoughts of this love are as many as are the falsities which favour these evils.

49. Consider whether thought is in time and space. Suppose thought to go on for ten or twelve hours, may not this space of time seem but an hour or two? or may it not seem to be one or two days? It appears according to the state of the affection from which is the thought. Ex.

74. As beasts have not (rationality and freedom) they have not thought, but instead of thought, internal sight, which makes a one with their external sight by correspondence.

75². Through these two faculties, man can think within himself about the things which he perceives outside himself . . .; and he can also think above about the things which he is thinking beneath. For anyone can say, I have thought this, and I think this . . . Hence it is evident that man thinks also above his thought, and sees the latter as beneath himself. This man has from rationality and freedom; from rationality that he can think above; and from freedom that he wills from affection so to think; for, unless he had the freedom of so thinking, he would not have the will, and thence neither the thought. —^e.

78. That whatever man does from freedom according to his thought, is appropriated to him as his, and remains. Gen. art.

So. Nothing is appropriated to man which he only thinks, nor even that which he thinks to will, unless he at the same time wills it to such a degree that, when opportunity is given, he does it. Ex. and Sig.

—^e. 'The mouth' = the thought, because the thought speaks by the mouth. —.

— If man thinks and speaks from the affection of love, he then renders himself unclean.

103. That every man has an external and an internal of thought. Gen.art. 104.

105. The internal of thought is from the life's love and its affections and the derivative perceptions; the external of thought is from the things which are in the memory, and which serve the life's love for confirmations, and for means to the end. From infancy to early manhood, man is in the external of thought from the affection of knowing which then makes its internal . . . But afterwards . . . the affections and derivative perceptions (of his life's love) make the internal of his thought; and from the life's love comes the love of the means, the delights of which, and the knowledges thence excited from the memory, make the external of his thought.

106. That the external of man's thought is in itself such as is its internal. Gen.art. 109, Ex. 111.

111. As concupiscences together with astutenesses make the internal of thought with the evil; and the delights of concupiscences together with machinations make the external of thought with them . . . 112.

125. The inmost of man is his life's love; the ultimates are those things which are in the external of thought; and the intermediates are those which are in the internal of thought . . .

130². The state of the thought of man is such that from the internal of thought he sees a Thing in the external of his thought as in a mirror . . . (and therefore) he can turn it about . . . and form it until it appears beautiful to him.

136⁷. When the first understanding and the first will have been formed, then the internal of thought regards these as the externals of its thought . . .

—⁹. But this internal is not the internal of thought before treated of; but is the external of thought . . . The (real) internal of thought cannot be compelled by any fear; but it can be compelled by love . . .

139². Fear can never invade the internal of thought; this is always in freedom, because it is in its life's love; but it can invade the external of thought; and, when it invades this, the internal of thought is closed, and (then) the man can no longer . . . be reformed. Ex.

—⁷. The internal of thought with such is full of concupiscences of every kind.

145. The internal and external of thought . . . act separately when . . . and they act conjointly when . . .

—². The concupiscences which had beset the internal of thought are then cast out by the Lord, and in their place are implanted affections of good: this in the internal of thought. But as the delights of the concupiscences which beset the external of thought, cannot be cast out at the same time, a combat arises between the internal and the external of thought. Ex.

—³. As man is man from the internal of his thought, for this is the spirit itself of man, it is evident that man compels himself when he compels the external of his thought to consent . . .

150. By the internal and external man is meant the same as by the internal and the external of thought.

—^e. That things seen and heard appear to inflow into the thought, is a fallacy. Ex.

152². The spirit is examined in no other way than by man's attending to his thoughts, especially to the intentions, for the intentions are thoughts from the will.

168³. Exterior illustration is illustration of the thought from this interior illustration. Ex.

173. Thus from light in its origin there is light in its derivations, which are perceptions and thoughts about anything whatever.

193. That all the thoughts of man are from the affections of his life's love; and that there are no thoughts, and none possible, without them. Gen.art. 196, Ex. 198.

194. The interior affections adjoin to themselves consorts which are called perceptions; and the exterior affections, consorts which are called thoughts. Ex.

195. Therefore . . . every derivative perception and thought has its own pleasantness. Ex.

196. As it is man's mind which thinks, and thinks from the delight of his affection, and not his body . . . it follows that the spirit of man is nothing but affection and the derivative thought.

198^e. And the thought floats on in its delight, like a ship in a current, to which the captain does not attend.

199. It is evident that these delights rule the man's thoughts, and that the thoughts are nothing without them; but he supposes that they are only thoughts, when yet the thoughts are nothing but affections composed into forms by his life's love, so as to appear in light; for all affection is in heat, and thought in light. (Continued under AFFECTION.)

224³. In the Spiritual World there is a communication of the affections and of the derivative thoughts, from which it is that no one can speak otherwise than as he thinks.

227. Whatever man thinks, etc. from the will, is appropriated to him and remains. Ex.

278. In order that man may examine himself . . . there has been given to his understanding higher and lower thought, or interior and external thought, in order that from the higher or interior thought he may see what the will is doing in the lower and exterior thought . . .

279⁶. That the thoughts are mere changes and variations of the forms of the organic substances of the mind. Ex. —⁸.

281². Thence (the will's love) comes into the thoughts . . . Unless man were permitted to think according to his will's love . . . that love would remain shut in . . . But when man is allowed to think the evils of his life's love even to intention, they are cured by spiritual means. Ex. 283, Ex.

[P.] 285². Through these two faculties man . . . is able to think and speak . . .

287. That the Divine Providence is in the smallest particulars of man's thoughts and affections. Ex.

288. That no one can think from himself, but from the Lord. Ex.

289. That no one in Hell thinks from himself, but from others around him. Ex.

—². No one thinks from himself, but from others; nor do those others think from themselves; but all think from influx from Heaven, and Heaven from influx from the Lord. (Shown by experiment.) 290 (Shown by Swedenborg's own experience).

292. Although all that man thinks and wills . . . inflows from the Lord, still He is not the cause of man's thinking evil and falsity. Ex. 294⁵.

294². Although everything which man thinks inflows from others, still the fault is in him who receives it. Ex.

294⁶. How it is that the Lord alone can cause all to think in such different ways. Ex.

296⁵. If evils are in the thought only, the man is not yet in an infernal Society . . .

—¹⁰. The delights of concupiscences, of which man knows nothing, are emitted in droves and bundles into the interior thoughts . . . and thence into his exterior thoughts . . .

311. Such think interiorly, and they believe that others think so too . . . not knowing that anyone can think only exteriorly.

312³. One Spirit can infuse his thoughts and affections into another Spirit, and the latter not be aware that it is not of his own thought and affection. This is called there thinking from another, and thinking in another. Des.

314². Of thought they say that it is something modified in the air . . . not knowing that the thoughts are equally in substances purely organic . . .

321. It is from a law of the Divine Providence that man should think as of himself . . . but should acknowledge that it is of the Lord. Ex.

—². That he who believes that all things which he thinks and does are from himself, is not unlike a beast. Ex.

—³. Of those who await influx . . . a few sometimes receive some answer by a living perception in the thought, or by a tacit speech in it. Ex.

—⁴. But still man thinks as from himself, even if he does so from Hell, because the Lord gives to everyone that his thought, from whatever source, appears in him as his own . . .

—⁵. (Thus) man can think what is evil and false as from himself, and can also think that this or that is evil and false; consequently that it is only an appearance that it is from himself . . . The Angelic itself is to think from the Truth, and this is the Truth: that man does not think from himself, but that it is given him by the Lord to think, in all appearance as from himself. Ex.

R. 294. In the Spiritual World, man speaks as he thinks; otherwise the sound is harsh . . . But he can be silent, and thus not divulge his thoughts—cogitata. (A conversation there on this subject, with experiments.) T. III.

462². (In this kind of enchantment) they inspired thought conjoined with affection by means of a breathing—halitum—in the sound of the speech, in consequence of which the hearer could not think anything from himself.

692². The delight (of the love of self), when it increases, causes the man not to be able to think above himself, but below himself. Ex.

875². The derivations of love are called affections, and through these are produced perceptions and thus thoughts. . . Consequently, thought in its origin is the affection of that love; and it may be seen from the derivations viewed in their order, that the thought is nothing but the form of the affection; and this is not known because thoughts are in light, but affections in heat; and therefore we reflect upon the thoughts, but not upon the affections. . . That thought is nothing but the form of affection, may be illustrated by speech, in that this is nothing but the form of sound. Moreover, sound corresponds to affection, and speech to thought; and therefore the affection makes the sound, and the thought speaks. If sound is taken away from speech, there is nothing of speech left; and so if affection is taken away from thought, there is nothing of thought left.

914. For every man has exterior and interior thought: the interior thought is in the light of Heaven, and is called perception; and the exterior thought is in the light of the world. . . The delight of love and wisdom elevates the thought, so that it sees as in light that a thing is so, although it had not before heard of it.

943². Consoeciation through correspondences causes Angels and Spirits to be together with men in affections, but not in thoughts . . . and that which is not in the thought . . . is not known . . . The Lord alone knows the thoughts of men.

961². The light of Heaven, from which was their thought . . .

M. 36. A man is also his own thought . . . for he thinks from his love and according to it . . . from which it may be seen that love is the esse or essence of man's life, and that thought is the existere or coming forth of his life thence; and therefore speech and action, which flow forth from the thought, do not flow forth from the thought, but from the love through the thought. After death a man is not his own thought, but is his own affection and derivative thought . . .

169. That a wife is constantly thinking about the inclination of the man to her . . . Ex. 293³.

— The affection of love, with women, does not separate itself from the thoughts, as with men.

187². The internal cogitative sense.

233². In the cloud flew owls and bats which were appearances of their thoughts.

269². That man should think from God, although as from himself.

326³. (An experiment which showed that the spiritual man thinks things which are incomprehensible to the natural man, and which cannot be put into any but spiritual writing or speech. Fully quoted under IDEA, and SPIRITUAL.)

328². To think spiritually is to think apart from time and space . . .

375². (Thus) the thoughts . . . are violently imprisoned and suffocated; (and then) such things inflow as are either contrary to the Church, or imaginary in favour of it, which causes heat towards harlots . . .

500³. The light of Heaven inflowing compelled them to speak as they interiorly thought.

I. 8⁴. The life of the understanding is the truth of wisdom, the derivations of which are called thoughts . . .

12⁵. It is believed by many that the perceptions and thoughts of the mind, being spiritual, inflow naked, and not through organized forms. Ex.

14⁴. Unless the understanding could be perfected separately . . . man could not think, and, from thought, speak . . . T. 588².

15⁵. It is believed that a beast thinks from the understanding that which it does; but not a whit . . . That man thinks and speaks is solely because his understanding is separable from his will, and can be elevated into the light of Heaven; for the understanding thinks; and thought speaks. T. 335³.

T. 77³. All in Hell have the ideas of the thoughts immersed in the senses of the body, and cannot elevate their minds above them. Ex.

79⁵. They concluded that thought is nothing but a modification of the ether by the light of the sun. Ex.

137⁸. For the Spiritual World enters into the natural, and perceives the thoughts-cogitata-of men there; but not contrariwise . . .

147². The minds of all men who deny the holiness of the Word and the Divinity of the Lord, think in the lowest region.

173². For the heavenly aura, in which the thoughts of the Angels fly and undulate as sounds do in our air, resists (such an utterance).

360². When by themselves they think from Hell, although they are unaware of it.

371⁷. The conjunction of thought and speech is not alternate, but mutual. Ex.

380³. For with every man there is a consociate Spirit; for without him man could not think analytically, rationally, and spiritually. 454. 475.

475. The reason man does not know that he is in the midst of Spirits . . . is that the Spirits . . . think and speak spiritually; but the spirit of the man, naturally; and spiritual thought and speech can be neither understood nor perceived by a natural man, nor the reverse. But when man's spirit is in society with Spirits in their World, he is then in spiritual thought and speech with them . . .

510. The will is the man himself . . . but the thought is outside the man, unless it proceeds from his will: if it does this, the will and thought make a one, and together make the man.

532. Man examines the intentions of his will when he examines his thoughts . . .

565. A sensuous man thinks in the extremes.

—². Sensuous men reason sharply and skilfully, because their thought is near their speech, and almost in it . . .

574. Hence it is that man can think from the understanding, and speak from thought, which beasts cannot do.

577³. If life were to act alone, and man were not to co-operate . . . he could no more think than a stock.

593². From a single speech, the Angels perceive the quality of a man's thought.

—². (For) man can in a moment think and conclude what he cannot express by the lower thought in an hour.

607. (Thus, men and Spirits) are not conjoined as to the thoughts, but as to the affections.

658. That thought is imputed to no one, but will. Gen. art.

659. All the evils to which man inclines . . . inflow into the thoughts; in like manner goods with truths inflow into them from the Lord; and there they are balanced . . . (Thus) the thought is the purificatory and excretory of the evils resident in man from his parents; and therefore if the evils which a man thinks were imputed, reformation and regeneration could not be effected.

Ad. 924. This turning (into the higher mind) is called thought.

927. No thought is possible unless a change of state is induced on the substance . . .

947. Thoughts, which are the activities themselves of the understanding . . .

961. (Thus) all thoughts, and all ideas, which as parts constitute the thoughts themselves . . . are perpetual affections in forms . . .

[Ad. 13/1128. (How we should guard against the thought of profane and condemned things. From experience.)

D. 159². When I was as it were by myself in thought, the Spirits knew no otherwise than that they were the persons who thought. Ex.

199. On the operation of Spirits and Angels in connection with human thoughts.—Unless the Spirits through whom the . . . material ideas of man are ruled, thought together, and unless they were kept in the same thought as that in which the man is while he is thinking or speaking, the man could not possibly think; but the greatest obscurity would arise from a crowd of various thoughts with the Spirits . . . But as to the Angels . . . it seems that they can think together with man, because they are in a higher sphere than that their thoughts could inflow into human minds so as to distract them . . . For one idea of man's thought may be composed of almost an indefinite number of the ideas of the celestial Angels; and besides, the thoughts of the Angels are accordant and unanimous, and thus by no means distracting . . .

237. That there are myriads of affections and the like in one human thought. Ex.

254. That myriads of Spirits and Angels concur in one human thought, all of whom are disposed and directed by God Messiah. Ex.

315. That the thoughts of man, and his ideas, appear manifestly in the Heavens, and are manifestly seen to inflow into man, and to lead him to speak. Ex.

679. The word imagination may serve [to denote] exterior things; speculation, the more interior things; and thought, the inmost things.

986. On those who love to find out what others think. 1000. 1132, Des. 1137. 1571.

997. There are Spirits who give utterance to the thoughts of other Spirits . . .

1124. The Spirits who only speak could not emulate those who only think, because all their thought is in their speech . . .

1124a. There are those who both think and speak; but when the speech does not agree with the thought, that fact is clearly perceived. Des. 1169^e. 1486.

—². For nothing dissident between the thought and the speech can be tolerated . . . and therefore the first thing is to unite them by various methods of torture.

1205. That sometimes Societies contend about the thoughts of man . . .

1231. They seem to stand, and think. 1232.

1270. He kept the thoughts of other Spirits bound. . . . He could detain my interior thoughts as though fixed, and bend them.

1307. That evil Spirits can think so that their thoughts can scarcely come to the perception of man. Ex. 1308.

— (On man's interior thought.)

1309. But the interior or angelic thought is different (from this hidden thought of evil Spirits). Ex.

1482. No Spirit or Angel can think anything which all the rest who are near cannot understand and perceive. (Continued under SWEDENBORG.)

1483. After death (people) think almost as (here) . . . and all the surrounding Spirits perceive what they are thinking . . . But the Lord takes care of those who have been in faith, so that their interiors may not be exposed to evil Spirits . . .

1549. (The Spirits of Mars) constitute that in man which is called thought.

1811. (These Spirits) are seated in the mind, as if their thought were the interior thought of man . . .

1892. One single point of thought, which the man supposes to be most subtle, contains in itself the universal Heaven. Ex.

1910. That the thoughts and deeds of the man who is in faith are not his. Ex.

1911. When I had become accustomed to the fact that I think nothing from myself, it was as it were a delight to me; for I could thus reflect upon the things which were introduced into my thoughts . . .

1912. But the Spirits who inserted evil thoughts supposed that so I thought nothing.

1927. (Thus) it is given to the Angels to Know the interior thoughts of man; when yet man does not believe that an Angel knows his rude and most composite thoughts, which even Spirits know, and that better than the man.

1970. The least of thought and affection affects all the organic beginnings of the brain, which are prefixed to the fibrils, namely, the cortical substances; and (therefore) it affects all things of the fibres which originate from those beginnings . . . and thus the whole body. . . . Thus the universal brain, and the whole body, with so many innumerable varieties, constitute one single and most subtle movement of our thought, which we suppose to be of infinite subtlety, but which nevertheless consists of countless varieties of persuasion and affection in each least point of thought.

1971. Hence it is evident how rude, obscure, and most general is everything that we think . . .

2001. On the General which rules the thoughts of man.—There is a certain General which rules the thoughts of man, which keeps them within certain limits, so that they cannot wander beyond them; nay, which rules the singular and most singular things of thought. Ex. 2002. 2004.

2009. On the thought of man: how slow and obscure. Ex.

— Man can think in a minute what he cannot express in an hour. Ex.

2010. But this General, which appears to man so quick and instantaneous, is in itself so slow that the Angels of the interior Heaven can think more quickly and distinctly in one moment than a man can in many hours, and even that obscurely.

— Yet there is much difference in men as to the thoughts; with those in whom [the mind] has been closed, and in whom there is more of memory, there is proportionately less of thought; while with those in whom [the mind] is open, and there is more of the interior memory, there is proportionately more of thought, because more things are inserted into it by the Lord.

2019². Spirits see the thoughts—cogitata—of others . . .
—e. The thoughts of men are bound to corporeal things . . . not so those of a Spirit.

2020. I perceived around me innumerable Spirits who all contributed something to the thoughts and their series, which, however, were as usual in a series and in a connection. I then perceived . . . that it could not be otherwise than that one should rule all, and dispose them into a series . . . and that unless there were One, who is the Lord . . . nothing could ever be thought . . .

2057. From the interior Heaven they not only saw my thoughts, but also the things that I was about to think, or do . . .

2058. It was granted them to look into my thoughts and affections . . .

2099. That man and Spirits must necessarily think and speak the things the Lord permits. Ex.

2156. (Thus) man can never think anything which does not come into clear light after death . . .

2174. That the universals of thought are . . . diffused into the World of Spirits and into Heaven. Ex.

2211. How the representations and thoughts of the Angels are circumstanced relatively to those of man. Ex.

2254. That the World of Spirits is like what men are in their thoughts. Ex.

2322². If a single Spirit thinks otherwise than in order, those who are near him are disturbed . . .

2329. Whence come all the objects of thoughts. Ex.

2366. They perceive a Spirit as mere thought . . . But thought, which is internal sight, cannot exist without a subject . . . Moreover, thought cannot be included in place . . . for it wanders to the limits of the universe . . . 2369.

2371. That the thoughts of Spirits which are only persuasions are not perceived as those are which have been cupidities. Ex.

2382. Those who are afar hear and perceive more exquisitely the things which are thought . . . than those who are near. Ex. 2528, Ex.

2390. For Angels cannot inflow manifestly into the thought of man, except through subordinate Spirits; for such is the thought and speech of the Angels that it is incomprehensible to man . . .

2524. On the interior thought of Spirits. Gen.art. 2900.

2553. It would be contrary to order that the thoughts of man should inflow into the Heaven of Angels. Ex.

2554. The apparent influx of my thoughts into Heaven. Ex.

2557. That Spirits perceive very fully the thoughts of a man [who speaks with them]. 2845. 3351. 3529, Ex.

2711. This is not to be said in public, lest it should come into the thought of man.

2731. (Thus) all the thoughts of Angels, and thence of Spirits, come forth and are produced by the Lord alone . . .

2735. They supposed that they excited the objects of thoughts . . . but it was granted to tell them that nothing moves the thought unless there is an object. Ex.

2760. (Thus) the internal thoughts of man are now more lost and corrupt than formerly.

2769. As animals cannot think, they cannot elevate their minds towards Heaven.

2782. There is no thought in the beginnings, which are in the head, unless there is a certain correspondence of the purer fibres in the whole body.

2842. Certain evil Spirits denied that they think, etc. from others . . .

2868. That thought is perceived by Spirits like an exhalation, by which they are led. Ex.

2870. On the sweetness which the Angels experience in perceiving that they do not think from themselves.

2877^e. Such is his thought: only a kind of external cuticle.

2888. These (interior evil Spirits) do nothing except produce in the interior thought those things which do not come into the manifest thought of man. Ex.

2896. On the more subtle thought: its ideas. Ex. 2900, Ex.

2951². I was much surprised that a Spirit should perceive my thoughts . . .

2966^e. Thus there is a kind of chain, of the thoughts of one into another, which sets out from the Lord through the Heavens . . .

2998. They must not say anything but what they think, except from the last necessity.

3076. That sometimes those thought of are present in a moment.

3081. That one Spirit is led by another into almost like thoughts as he has himself. Ex.

3134. That Spirits speak those things which others are thinking interiorly.

3155². Then the Society from which or with which he thought was taken away; and then his interiors seemed to think, and that in a more innocent way. The thought which was taken away was placed over my head, in order that he might receive it there. (Thus) it was only the Society and its look which made the thought . . .

3162. So that I began to be afraid to think anything more.

3171. In the other life it is the thoughts—cogitata—which are thus punished. Ex.

3178. Whatever comes into the thought and not into the will, is not sin . . . But if anything comes into the thought, and into the will . . . this is sin.

3179. They who have thought differently from what they have acted . . . and have thus exercised their thoughts . . . are tormented there by discription by the thoughts, so that their interior thoughts combat with their exterior tacit ones.

[D.] 3230. That the thoughts are brought forth (there).

3233. The thought (of the Spirits of Mercury) was brought to me in such volumes that the Spirits above me undulated quickly . . .

3254. On the influx of men's thoughts into Heaven. Ex.

3332. A Spirit shown that he could not speak (except) according to the object presented to him through my thought. Ex.

3356. That the thoughts and speeches of Angels and angelic Spirits fall into parables. Ex.

3376. Thus (after the Flood) thought was separated from the will.

3402. When I was thinking (this Spirit) had such phantasies that he did not think at all about what I was thinking . . . But when I thought and spoke, he excited all the men or Spirits whom I had known; for he was not in the idea of my thought, but only in the idea of those who were remotely adjoined to my ideas . . . 3403.

3408. There are men who can speak about things of which they are not thinking. (Fully quoted under SPEAK.)

3423. On the metrical thought of Spirits. Ex.

3470^e. Thought is internal sight, and cannot exist without an organ. 3574.

3471. The organics of thought are in the brain, and thence flow the invisible fibres by which the thoughts are led forth . . .

3525². (The two angelic Spirits with man) act into the interiors of his thoughts, which do not come so much to the man's thought.

3575. Interior thought regards the common good of society, of the World of Spirits, and of Heaven . . . and therefore all the things of interior thought regard those things which are of mediate use.

3590. Men ought to think from Heaven, that is, from the knowledges of faith . . .

3615. Actual evil is also that which man acquires by thoughts without acts. Ex.

3624. On the reflections of thought. (Quoted under REFLECT.)

3627. When a man thinks of (a thing) the Spirits think it is really so. Examp. 3857, Ex.

3635. That the inflowing of external things into the thoughts is a fallacy. Ex. 4604, Ex.

3637. Man supposes that he thinks by words, when yet it is by ideas . . .

3638. That there is a more interior thought. Shown.

3640. The interior evil Spirits think as the insane do, knowing nothing of what they think. Such are the beginnings of the thoughts of the Spirits of the lower sphere.

3643. How it is that many may think diversely from many things. Ex.

3644. It is thought which conjoins, for to thought there is neither place nor distance.

3666. Spirits are greatly moved by the fact that the objects of man cause him to think about diverse things, without order . . .

3714. Whether the law of conscience constrains anyone [may be known] from the fact that he does not want to think this or that because it is evil . . .

3820. It is a prerogative of man over beasts that he can think . . .

3842. How (the deceitful) inflow into the subtle thought of man.

3876. Thought excites the affections . . .

4000. It was answered them by thought.

4041. The deceitful actuate their Subjects to speak, by thought alone, which the Subject follows . . .

4113. So long as evil is in the thought only, it does not recur so much . . .

4129. While the Lord rules the thoughts and speech of man through Angels, the evil Spirits cannot but think in like manner . . .

4139a. So also thought, which can range into the universe, although it is in man's brain . . . and, where the thought is, the Spirit is supposed to be; therefore this is an appearance; for place cannot be attributed to thought; but it is of the organic substance from which it comes; but, as thought affects, it is believed that the spirit itself must be there.

4166. Spirits are in thought. Man can think in a moment what he cannot utter in hours. In this thought are Spirits, not in obscure thought, as man is, but in distinct thought. Des.

4253^e. Hence Spirits know no otherwise than that they are those who think with a man.

4254. On the bonds of thought; of conscience. Ex.

4256. On the speech and thought of the Angels. Ex.

4257. How Spirits excite the thoughts of men; they speak as the man thinks, that is, as they speak so the man thinks . . .

4267. That the thought and speech of the Angels are only those of ends.

4272^e. I could have been in different thought . . . and still have been impelled by the same stream (of influx).

4287. That the thought is the image of the man. Ex.

4295. I thought of eating; but the Angels thought of Knowledges . . .

4309. On those who speak otherwise than as they think.

4310. No attention is paid there to what anyone speaks; but to what he thinks. . . There is a cogitative speech which is perceived, and which affects those who are present.

4633. With me there is (often) merely a disposition of the organs of thought, and the Spirits have spoken according to the disposition. So with Subjects: [the Spirits] merely think, and the Subject speaks according to the thought . . .

4337. The Spirits who are with a man . . . think no otherwise than as the man thinks ; but there is thence a sphere of thought and affection . . . in which the rest of the Spirits are . . .

4392. That we are to think from general principles, and thence view particulars . . .

4396. That those who have been worst in life, but have thought justly about the things which occurred, receive the truths of faith more easily than those who have lived morally, but have thought evil things. Ex.

4479. A man who has once esteemed adulteries and such things as nothing, and has thus introduced himself as to the thought into the company of such (Sirens), cannot escape being held captive by them to the end of life; for they bend the least of the thoughts in innumerable ways, and make them delightful. 4784, Ex.

4594. As soon as Sirens come to Spirits, they enter into their thoughts, and keep the thought completely obsessed. (This they do) from a habit acquired (here). . . . When they first enter into the thoughts, they follow the thought strongly; afterwards they lead it. 4596, Examp. 4601, Des.

4627^e. This lumen is presented when such things occur to the thought as have been completely seen, heard, and felt . . . —⁸.

4731. For the whole thought of one (Spirit) is communicated to another; and the affection of the thought makes the face.

4748. Charles xii. had an interior thought. Des. 4751, Des.

4818. How the thoughts conjoin. Ex.

4821. Tacit thought, when it is from what is good and true, is better heard as sonorous speech in Heaven, than thought speaking aloud.

4845. The thoughts of the Angels are according to the form of Heaven . . .

4848. For all the thought of man, Spirit, and Angel takes place according to the form of Heaven, which is incomprehensible, and known to the Lord alone. The magi had learned something about this form . . . and induced on the minds of others whatever they wanted.

4852. On the Sensuous and its thought.

4861. Those become Genii who have spoken little, but have loved to think, and that evilly about the neighbour . . .

4862. Thought is taken away from them, because (otherwise) they would communicate with Spirits . . . who think more . . .

5037. The Swedes think more inwardly in themselves than other nations, because they are in freedom more than in the times when they were under an absolute government . . . (And therefore they are the worst nation in Europe except the Italians and Russians. 5043.)

5122. (The celestial) never think about absent persons; but . . . they think from the objects which are before the sight . . .

5161. (Fred. Gyllenborg) could retard my thoughts . . .

5191. The more perfect the Angels are, the more perfectly they can think . . .

5312. Those in that gulf are all kept in thinking according to the sight . . .

5462. Those who think only about themselves . . .

5464. Evil Spirits place themselves behind, above and below, and there inject their thoughts—cogitata. They turn the thoughts of the other Spirit, thus also of a man, to himself . . .

—². Others . . . seek for what is of the love of self, and, when they find it, they infuse their thoughts there, and lead him wherever they will.

—⁸. Sirens know how to reduce the thoughts of another down to the Sensuous . . .

5573. He could lead the thoughts of all wherever he wanted . . . He did the same with my thoughts . . .

5574. Those become Genii who inhere in their own thoughts . . . They can be long in one thought . . . They at last become such that they think what they think, whatever another says . . . Thus they are in continuous thinking against another who speaks differently from themselves. Such become Genii, and lead any who are spiritual by their thought . . . for they are in the love of self more than others, and are affected with their own thoughts, and love them . . .

5576. Genii flee from one another, because the one cannot endure the sphere of the other's thought; for there is a perpetual collision. Hence they make themselves invisible; for, in the other life, he who does not think like another is invisible to him.

5577. Few of the English become Genii, because they depend upon the authority of others, without their Own thought . . . Provided they believe that the man is learned and sincere, and of their own nation, their thought appears lucid and interior. But many of the Dutch become Genii, because they think against others from what is their own, and do not divulge it. In the Spiritual World their thought appears more obscure and lower.

—^e. The thoughts are according to the form of Heaven.

5583. When the Angels see any Spirit walking below them, they at once perceive what he is thinking from the way in which he is walking . . .

5601. In the Heavens they are admonished by the external appearances, both without the house and within it, and on their garments and faces, if they have not thought well, as if anything of what is evil, lascivious, or insincere has crept in, and they have not rejected it. Des.

5608. Man's natural thought is the plane in which cease all things of angelic wisdom: it is like the foundation of a house: into this plane fall all things which the Angels think: hence such as is the plane, such also is their wisdom.

5610. The thoughts of the Angels are variously directed to the quarters . . . but they are not turned to themselves, but to men . . . and when they are turned to those things in my thought which are from the heavenly doctrine, they are in greater clearness than in any other case.

[D.] 5617. This plane is with an intelligent man whether he is thinking about such things, or about other things . . .

5645. Sometimes a man appears in the other life as to his spirit . . . but this happens with those only who think inwardly in themselves more deeply than others : his thought is then withdrawn from the sensuous things of the body . . . But those who think solely in the Sensuous, and do not elevate their thoughts above it, never appear.

5692. They who have exercised deceit . . . are invisible to others, because they think in themselves, and thus remove the interiors from the body.

5778. The evil Spirits who are at the occiput inflow the most into the thought of man . . . and indeed into his interior thought. But those who are at the sides, at the temples . . . also inflow into the thought, but into his sensuous and external thought.

5893. He obtained it by the force of thought.

5900. Those also are serpents who have lived solitary (here), and thus have thought about various things which happened in the world, and had not divulged their thoughts—cogitata—to anyone : those who had thought evilly about their country and the neighbour, act like serpents . . .

5904. On those who can avert the thoughts—cogitata . . . so that the other cannot remember . . .

5905. The sight of their eyes corresponds to thought . . .

5915. He had hatched his dogmas from his thought.
— They love to present and hear such things cogitatively.

5941. Those become (of the Celestial Kingdom, and Genii) who do not think about any Thing, but sometimes remain as if they were not thinking ; and, if they do not reflect upon it, they believe that they are thinking nothing . . .

6049. All who have not believed in the Lord . . . and have not lived according to the precepts of religion, in the other life think in the Material ; thus they cannot think spiritually, that is, abstractedly from space, time, and persons . . . Some who in the world had thought much, like Polhem and Wolff, because they had not lived a life of religion, cannot do otherwise than think in the Material . . .

6069. The Spiritual cannot be in any way thought naturally . . .

D. Min. 4553^a. Therefore they who have thought nothing but evil about men, cannot do otherwise than think evils about them (there).

4574. On Spirits who take away the life of thinking from others. Ex.

4581. They (thus) lead the exteriors of the memory and thought. Ex.

4643. They had filled their thought with such (impure ideas).

4651. He took away all the surrounding influx, the result being no thought.

4667. The thoughts, etc. are only forms so appearing from the affections . . .

4715. Inwardly they think evil about all . . .

4726. They induce a torpor on others, so that they cannot think ; for thought belongs to wakefulness and makes it.

4754. Their fascination consists in this : that they inhere in the thought . . .

4761. When these think, there is heard a hissing as of serpents.

4772. For such things do not take place there by open speech ; but by . . . thoughts.

4776. With Spirits there is a communication of all the thoughts ; the art of magic consists especially in this . . .

E. 96². The Divine Itself does not fall into the thought ; and what does not fall into the thought, does not fall into the faith . . .

107. They who separate charity from faith . . . do not think within themselves, but outside themselves ; (that is,) solely from the memory . . . and Heaven cannot inflow into thought which is outside the man.

152⁶. 'To shut the eyes lest they see evil' = not to admit evil into the thought.

177. They who think from Own intelligence think from the world. Ex.

193. Those things remain in the spirit of man which he has thought from himself . . . There are two states of man ; one when he thinks from his own spirit, and the other when he thinks from the memory of his body . . . —², Ex. and Examp.

229². Everything of life which is in thought, is from affection. Ex. 242⁶.

248². Thinking well and thinking evilly about the Lord and the neighbour. Ex.

282^a. It is the like with the thought, which is man's internal or spiritual sight.

388². So the sight of the spirit, which is thought from affection, has extension into the Spiritual World . . .

406². For the thought of men is natural ; and natural thought differs from spiritual thought in being bound to places and persons . . .

517². There are two states of man's thoughts ; one, when he is in thought about truths from the Lord ; and the other when he is so from himself. Ex.

538. (Thus) an atmosphere which is as it were aqueous corresponds to natural thought and perception ; one which is thinly aqueous, to the spiritual natural thought and perception in which are the Angels of the Ultimate

Heaven ; and one which is densely aqueous, verging to either black or red, to the natural thought in which there is nothing spiritual, (which) exists in the Hells where falsities reign.

543². See SENSUOUS, here.

—³. By the general opening of the spiritual man, man has the faculty of thinking, and of speaking rationally from thought : this is the general effect of the influx of Heaven with every man. (Thus) man's thoughts and affections may be spiritual, natural, or sensuous ; and spiritual thoughts and affections exist with those who think from God about God . . . but only natural thoughts and affections exist with those who do not think from God about God ; but think only from themselves or the world ; (that is) who think from Hell ; for he who does not think from God, thinks from Hell : no one can think from both at the same time. Those who deny God . . . think only falsities when they think about spiritual things . . . and if they think any truths, whether spiritual, moral, or civil, it is only from the knowledge of such things as are in the memory . . . The thought of the sensuous man is what is called material thought . . .

569¹⁰. One limit of the natural man is the faculty of knowledge—scientificum et cognitivum ; and the other is the faculty of mental view and thought—intuitivum et cogitativum, and the spiritual man inflows into these limits. Sig.

580. Sensuous thoughts and the derivative reasonings. Sig. and Ex.

—². That nothing which enters the thought and not also the will defiles the man. Sig. and Ex. 622⁵. 867.

—³. Man cannot be purified from evils and falsities unless the unclean things which are in him emerge into the thought, and are there seen, discriminated, and rejected.

600⁸. 'If thy right eye give thee offence, pluck it out' = that if one should think what is evil it must be rejected from the thought.

625⁵. After death the interior mind is opened, and when the man becomes an Angel he thinks and speaks from that mind . . . But in the world man is quite ignorant of what he thinks in that mind ; for the thought of that mind then inflows into the natural mind, and is there limited, bounded, and presented to be seen and perceived.

654². For so long as man lives (here) he thinks naturally . . . But his spiritual thought, which is conjoined with the affection of truth, or of falsity, does not appear until man has put off the natural body . . . He then thinks spiritually . . . This takes place with every man, whether merely natural or spiritual ; for even with a merely natural man the thought after death is spiritual, but gross, and devoid of the understanding of truth and the affection of good.

662². While (here) man does not know the state of his interior thought and affection, but only the state of his exterior thought and affection, which falls immediately into speech. But when he comes into the Spiritual

World, his exterior thought and affection are lulled, and his interior thought and affection are opened . . .

670. The love draws to its own side . . . the thoughts of the spirit ; and therefore when such are thinking by themselves they deny these things. (This is when they are in their spiritual natural thought. 671².)

674³. In the Spiritual World there is a communication of all the affections and sometimes of the thoughts ; and within each Society there is a general communication . . . 675³.

724³⁵. For the idea of person limits thought and its extension into Heaven in every direction ; for all thought which proceeds from the affection of truth goes through Heaven on all sides, and has no termination except as light has in shade ; but when person is at the same time thought of, the idea is terminated where the person is.

757². For a man who lives (here) can think about spiritual things no otherwise than as the Angels and Spirits with him think ; for spiritual things are above the natural thought of man, and the things which are above depend upon influx . . .

763². They believe . . . that they think and reason spiritually, because they do so acutely and astutely ; but no one thinks and reasons spiritually except the man who is in illustration from the Lord. Ex.

781⁴. When man's thought is not elevated above (earthly and material things), he thinks materially about spiritual things ; and material thought, without spiritual light, derives everything belonging to it from the loves of the natural man . . .

—⁵. It is a fallacy that cogitative faith saves. Ex. 789⁷, Ex. —⁸.

803². Let him learn . . . that lascivious and obscene thoughts are adulteries.

—³. When a man begins to think for himself.

—⁴. Man must . . . be averse to thoughts with intention, about evils.

805⁴. Unless the Lord is approached, no one can think with the Angels ; because all angelic thought about God is thought of God Man . . .

—³. For there are two memories in man, and thence two thoughts, with both the evil and the good . . . Every man thinks from the interior memory when he is left to himself and is led by his love : this thought is the thought of his spirit ; but he thinks from the exterior memory when speaking before the world. (Continued under MEMORY.)

837. Therefore, when man becomes a Spirit, he thinks . . . from his affection.

—⁴. But he who is wise may know his affections from his thoughts . . . For thought is nothing else than the affection made visible in various forms by the influx of light; and therefore if you take away the affection, the thought at once perishes . . .

[E. 837]². The affections and derivative thoughts pour themselves into all things of the body. Ex.

855. But all in the Spiritual Kingdom speak from thought . . .

865. All man's affection and derivative thought is not only within him, and makes his life, but is also without him, and makes the sphere of his life. Hence it is that Heaven is distinguished into Societies according to the varieties of affections and the derivative thoughts; and therefore unless the affections and the derivative thoughts are spiritual . . . they cannot be admitted into any Society of Heaven. Ex.

866⁶. The will is the man; but the thought, before consent which is of the will, is . . . outside of man; for the things which inflow into the thought are like the objects which inflow into the sight . . . 901.

867². It is unavoidable that man should think what is false and evil. Ex.

889⁴. There is not a single thought of a Spirit or a man which does not communicate with some Society by his sphere . . . and therefore when the quality of Spirits is being examined, the direction in which their thoughts spread out is investigated.

— So the understanding takes the quality of its thought from the truths which are its objects. Ex.

901². That thought alone does not make man's life. Ex.

902⁴. They said they had become Angels of the Third Heaven because they had regarded filthy thoughts as wicked . . .

920². Therefore, when man thinks from love and its delight, he thinks from himself and his own life.

954². When Heaven is open, man thinks no longer from himself, but from the Lord through Heaven . . . Man's interior thought, which is the thought of his spirit, is either from Hell, or from Heaven; it is from Hell before evils have been removed, and from Heaven when they have been removed; when it is from Hell, the man sees no otherwise than that nature is God . . . but when man thinks from Heaven . . . he sees from the light in Heaven that there is a God, and that God is one. 955⁴.

1012. The state of the Church manifested as to all things of thought. Sig. and Ex.

— 'Air'=thought, because the respiration, which is effected by the air, corresponds to the thought. Ex.

—². The reason the last vial was poured into the air, is that all things of man cease in his thought; for such as a man is as to . . . his spiritual, moral, and civil life, such is he as to his thought. Shown.

1032². When man thinks in this elevation, he thinks truth from the Lord, and does good from Him.

1080². The sight of man's thought, which is called the understanding, corresponds to the sight of his eyes . . .

— Active thought, which is of the understanding, corresponds to the speech of the mouth . . .

1092³. All the thoughts of man spread themselves out into the Spiritual World in every direction . . . hence the thoughts of man cannot but spread themselves into the Societies; spiritual thoughts . . . into the heavenly Societies; and merely natural thoughts . . . into the infernal Societies. —⁴, Ex.

1093². (Thus) the thoughts of man are extensions into Societies. Ex. . . It is the man's love which determines his thoughts into the Societies . . .

—³. Man's love is like fire, and his thoughts are like the rays of light from it; if the love is good, the thoughts are truths; if evil, the thoughts are falsities. The thoughts from a good love . . . tend towards Heaven; but the thoughts from an evil love . . . towards Hell . . .

—⁴. In a word, not the least of thought can come forth, unless it finds reception in some Society; not in the individuals of the Society, but in the affection of love in which that Society is; hence the Angels do not perceive the influx at all . . .

—⁵. Men and Angels are unaware of their co-sociation, because the thought of man is natural, and the thought of an Angel is spiritual; and these make one only by correspondences. As man is inaugurated into Societies through his thoughts . . . therefore when he comes into the Spiritual World, his quality is known from the mere extension of his thoughts into the Societies . . . Man is also reformed by the admissions of his thoughts into the Societies of Heaven, and is condemned by the immersions of his thoughts into the Societies of Hell.

1094². At his birth, man is not in any Society . . . for he is devoid of thought . . .

1096². The first and primary thought which opens Heaven to man is thought about God. Ex. . . But there is a thought of light, and a thought of love; thought of light alone is thought that there is a God, which appears like acknowledgment, but is not. By the thought of light, man has presence in Heaven, but not conjunction with it. Ex. 1098³, Ex.

—^e. So thought against God primarily closes Heaven.

1100²³. Thought not of light about Divine and heavenly things. Ex.

1115⁵. To think of God as a Man has been implanted in every Spirit. Ex. (And in every man. —^e.)

1163^e. Thoughts do not turn the interiors of the mind, except in so far as they derive from the will.

1173³. To inflow into the affection . . . and through that into the thought . . . is first to inspire a soul, and through it to form all other things.

1175⁴. Why man is led by the Lord by means of affections, and not by means of thoughts. Ex.

J. (Post.) 119. The African nation think interiorly. . . . Europeans think only exteriorly . . .

230. They then can think only in accordance with their evils.

264. Leibnitz and thought.

D. Love xv. The external and internal thought of man. Ex.

—². (Here) they had never thought sanely when by themselves.

—³. But all who have loved uses . . . think sanely in their spirits. Ex.

xvi³. Thought is nothing by itself. Ex. xviii⁴.

D. Wis. v. The sight of the understanding is thought.

—^c. Their variations of form are thoughts.

vi⁶. All thought is of the understanding; and all speech is of thought. Man cannot think unless the pulmonary breath concurs and accords; and therefore when he thinks tacitly he breathes tacitly; and so on.

vii. 3. Spirits who, by their strong Persuasive, could take away all the faculty of thinking . . . and breathing. Ex.

5³. Hence it is that the thoughts of the spiritual are quite different from the thoughts of the natural. Ex.

x. There is a reciprocal conjunction of affection and thought. Ex. —².

— . Affection is the life of thought; and such as is the affection, such is the thought. Ex.

i. The will by its influx into the understanding produces . . . finally, thoughts. 5.

5. The correspondence of the variations of the tone which derive much from the understanding, is with thought and its variations.

7. The idea that thought makes all the life of man.

xi. They who think only naturally and not at the same time spiritually . . . cannot think otherwise than that the Lord and the neighbour are to be loved as to their persons . . .

De Conj. 55. On those who live modestly and chastely in the external form, but think lasciviously. Gen.art.

C. 123. This is so with every man while he is in general thought . . . But (the light disappears) when he lets the subject come under the view of his lower thought, and thinks whether it is so or not. Into this thought there inflows light from man or the world; but into the general thought there inflows light from Heaven: this light constantly inflows into the Intellectual of man, provided he does not let himself down into his own light . . . There is a general perception of truth with all . . .

Thousand. Chilias.

R. 287. 'The number of them was . . . thousands of thousands' (Rev.v.11)=all in . . . goods. . . For 'a thousand' is predicated of goods, because it is a smaller number than 'a myriad,' which is predicated of truths; and truths are manifold, but goods are simple. Ill. E.316²³. 336³. —⁴, Ill.

E. 336. 'Thousands'=innumerable things, and are predicated of good.

—². The reason 'thousands'=innumerable things, is that 'ten'=many things . . .

— . But when innumerable things which are infinitely many are to be expressed, it is said 'thousands of thousands.'

—⁶. 'A thousand shall fall at thy side' (Ps.xci.7) =the destruction of these evils.

—⁹. 'A thousand of thousands ministered unto Him' (Dan.vii.10) relates to the Divine good.

700⁸. 'The myriads of the thousands of Israel' (Num. x.36)=the implanted truths from good of which is the Church.

Thousand. Mille.

Thousand, A. Milleni.

A. 2575. 'A thousand of silver' (Gen.xx.16)=an infinite abundance of rational truth. . . 'A thousand'=much, and countless; here, infinite or infinite abundance, because predicated of the Lord. —², Ill.

—³. 'A thousand years'=what is without time, thus eternity. Ill.

—⁴. As a thousand is a definite number, it appears in the propheticals . . . that a thousand means a thousand, when yet it means many or countless without any fixed number.

3186. 'Be thou for a thousand of myriads' (Gen. xxiv.60)=fructification to infinity.

—². 'A thousand'=much, and also what is infinite.

3325⁶. 'Thousands'=things innumerable, or all these things.

6784². A thousand flee at the presence of one who is in truth from good.

8712. 'Princes of thousands' (Ex.xviii.21)=the primary things which are in the first degree; for 'thousand'=many people, or, in the abstract, many things . . .

8715². Here (Rev.xx.) by 'a thousand' are not signified a thousand, but much without any number. Ill.

8879. 'Showing mercy to thousands—millenos' (Ex. xx.6)=good and truth for them in perpetuity. 'A thousand'=for the most part; and, when said of the Divine mercy, in perpetuity.

9336³. Thousands and thousands of arcana.

9716². 'A thousand,' when predicated of the Divine, =what is infinite.

10620. 'Showing goodness to thousands' (Ex.xxxiv. 7)=to eternity.

H. 137². A thousand enemies cannot endure one ray of the light of Heaven.

593. Many thousands enter Heaven and Hell every day.

W. 182. A thousand times exceeds . . .

R. 842. 'Bound him a thousand years' (Rev.xx.2)= . . . no communication with them for a while, or for some time. (Fully quoted under NUMBER.) 844. 850.

849. 'They lived and reigned with Christ a thousand years' (ver.4)=who are already in conjunction with the Lord, and have been for some time in His Kingdom. . . 'A thousand years'=for some time. 855.

856. 'When the thousand years have been consummated' (ver.7)=after those who had hitherto been kept concealed and guarded in the Lower Earth have been taken up into Heaven by the Lord. Ex.

M. 415⁵. 600 out of a thousand in favour of nature, and the rest in favour of God . . .

D. 674. On the thousand years. Ex. 5372^e.

E. 357¹⁸. 'A thousand vines for a thousand of silver' (Is.vii.23)=truths from good in abundance (which are) most highly esteemed, because they are genuine. 'A thousand'=many things, thus in abundance.

430². See NUMBER, here.

548². 'Ten,' 'a hundred,' and 'a thousand'=much, and all.

652¹⁹. 'Our flocks are thousands' (Ps.cxliv.13)=goods.

Thread. See STAMEN.

Thread. Filum.

A. 1748. 'From a string to a shoe latchet.' (See LATCHET, here.)

4875. It was made of twisted threads, by which are signified the determinations of such truth.

7601³. The truth of the Natural is represented as a contexture of fine threads of flax, which appear like threads of silk; bright, beautifully transparent, and soft . . . if the truth thus represented is from good; but these threads, which are like those of flax, do not appear transparent, bright, or soft, but hard and brittle, but still white, if the truth so represented is not from good.

9468⁸. The significative of tying a scarlet thread as a reminder.

9897. 'With a thread of hyacinthine' (Ex.xxviii.28)=through the celestial love of truth. (=the truth of celestial love. 9933.)

10163. (In the Second Earth) they gather from herbs such things as they spin into threads, and they then lay the threads flat in a double and triple order (and make a fabric by sticking them together).

10164. They make the threads in this way. Des.

M. 42³. His stockings were of bright linen, with threads of silver interwoven.

I. 12³. If you squeeze out the juices, the fibres become dead threads.

T. 504⁶. (The necessity of there being heat in the fibres of a tree.)

D. 3379. This was represented by the way in which vanished a long blue thread, broken at intervals.

4735. There was seen a thread with a spider's web, which stretched up into the interior Heaven . . . 4889.

4828. They draw a thread from their magic circles, and direct the threads towards the head of another, and then fascinate them.

4893. They were seen to be let down as by threads, as these caterpillars are wont to be from trees.

E. 576⁴. 'A thread of hyacinthine' (Num.xv.38)=the recollection of the precepts of Jehovah (by those who) are in the celestial love of truth.

627⁴. 'A line of flax' (Ezek.xl.3)=truth.

Thread. Linum.

E. 654⁵⁰. 'The thread of silks' (Is.xix.9)=spiritual truth.

Threats. Minae.

See under IMMINENT.

A. 4281^e. By external means, which were threats, etc., the Israelites were driven . . .

8542. (In Jupiter) they first admonish, and then use threats . . .

H. 553. The infernals are forms . . . of threats against those who do not reverence them.

P. 136. That no one is reformed by threats . . . because they compel. Gen.art.

B. 117. Total damnation threatened=imminuit.

E. 833. Threats of eternal death against those who do not believe (in 'the beast').

Three. Tres.

Third. Tertius.

Thrice. Ter.

Ternary. Ternarius

Tertian. Tertianus.

See under TRINE, TRIPARTITE, and TRIPLE.

A. 9. The third (state of regeneration) is a state of repentance. Ex.

93². That this state is attained on the third day, which=the same as 'the seventh.' Ill.

482. The ternary number = something holy or inviolable as to states.

720. The 'third day' is received in the Word for the seventh, and involves almost the same, on account of the Lord's resurrection on the third day . . .

900. 'Three,' and 'seven'=holy things. . . They also = what is inviolable, because they are predicated of the Last Judgment, which was to come on the third or the seventh day . . . 901², Ill.

901^e. 'The third part,' like 'three,'=what is holy. The like is involved by the third part as by 'three'; and also by the third part of the third part, as here, for three is the third part of the third part of 27.

1709. 'Three'=what is holy. 2109.

1825. 'Three years old=triennis' (Gen.xv.9) = all things of the Church as to times and states; for 'three,' in the Word, = a full time of the Church, from its origin to its end, thus all its state; and therefore the last time of the Church is signified by 'the third day,' 'the third week,' 'the third month,' 'the third year,' and 'the third age.'

—. As the state of the Church is signified by the ternary number, so also is that of everyone who is a Church. Ill.

2075³. 'Three'=almost the same as 'seven.'

2156. 'The three men' (Gen.xviii.) = the Divine Itself, the Divine Human, and the Holy proceeding; thus the Lord. 2329². —³.

2176. 'Three measures of meal of fine flour' (ver.6)=the Celestial of His love . . . 'Three'=holy things. 2177^e.

2180°. 'Three tenths.' Ill.

2329°. Such do not diffuse their ideas among Three . . . Many, when examined there as to what idea they had of the one God: whether three Uncreates; three Infinites; three Eternals; three Omnipotents; three Lords, have been manifestly perceived to have the idea of three Gods . . .

—°. When the Jews perceive that the ideas of Christians are divided among Three . . .

—°. Only those in the faith of charity can conjoin the Three separated in idea.

2405°. 'The third day' (Hos.vi.2)=the judgment, or the advent of the Lord; thus the approach of His Kingdom.

—°. Hence the Lord's resurrection on the third morning.

2788. 'On the third day' (Gen.xxii.4) = what is complete, and the beginning of sanctification. . . When 'third' is added, it=the end of that state, and the beginning at the same time of the following state. Here, because it treats of the Lord's sanctification, 'the third day'=what is complete, and at the same time the beginning of sanctification; (for) when the Lord had fulfilled all things, He rose again on the third day; for the things which were done or which were to be done, by the Lord . . . were in the representatives of the Church as if already done . . . Hence the ternary number was representative, not only in the Ancient and Jewish Churches, but also among various nations.

—°. 'The third day' (Hos.vi.2)=the Lord's advent and resurrection. So Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.

—°. 'Three days,' and 'the third day'=the same; as also 'three' and 'the third.' Fully ill.

—°. 'A third part,' however,=some; and what is not yet complete; but 'a third' and 'a trine,' what is complete; and this, of evil for the evil, and of good for the good.

2906°. 'In three years' (Is.xvi.14)=the end of the former Church. 'Three'=what is complete, and a beginning.

3767. 'Three droves of the flock' (Gen.xxix.2)=the holy things of Churches and of doctrinal things. 'Three'=what is holy.

4010. 'Three days' journey between' (Gen.xxx.36)=that their state was completely separated. . . 'Three'=what is ultimate, and complete, or the end.

4038°. With man there are three things in general: the Corporeal, the Natural, and the Rational . . .

4119. 'It was told Laban on the third day' (Gen.xxxi.22)=the end; for 'the third day'=what is ultimate, and complete, thus the end, and also the beginning . . .

4495. 'On the third day' (Gen.xxxiv.25) = what is continuous even to the end; for 'the third day'=what is complete from beginning to end, thus also what is continuous.

4766°. Is the Church anything where . . . Three are equally worshipped? For, although the three are called one, still the thought . . . makes three . . .

4901. 'In about three months' (Gen.xxxviii.24)=a new state; for 'three'=what is complete, and thence what is last and at the same time first . . .

5114. 'Three shoots' (Gen.xl.10)=derivations even to the last. 'Three'=what is complete and continuous even to the end . . . from first to last. 5122.

5122. 'Three'=a whole period and its continuity from beginning to end. Thus 'the three shoots are three days'=the state of the rebirth of this Sensuous from its first to its last. Ex.

5144. 'Lo three baskets' (ver.16)=the successives of the voluntary things; for 'three'=what is complete and continuous even to the end, thus what is successive. 5152. 5153.

5159. 'It came to pass on the third day' (ver.20)=in what is last; for 'the third day'=the last of a state; for 'the third'=what is complete, thus what is last. By the last state is meant the time when the prior state ceases and the new one begins . . .

5335. 'Three'=what is full.

5457. 'Three days' (Gen.xlii.17)=to what is full; for 'three days'=from beginning to end; thus what is full; for it is a new state which is here described. The former entire state is signified by 'three days,' and its last, and thus what is new, by 'on the third day.' 5458.

6073°. That Peter denied the Lord three times=that (the last state of the Church when there was no longer any charity) was then complete.

6385°. 'The third part' (Rev.viii.9)=something not yet complete.

6904. 'Let us go a way of three days' (Ex.iii.18)=a state quite removed from falsities; for 'three days'=a full state. 7457.

7715. '(Thick darkness) for three days' (Ex.x.22)=a full state; (by which) is meant an entire state from beginning to end . . .

8150. 'Tertian leaders' (Ex.xiv.7)=generals under which are particulars; for 'three,' from which is derived 'tertian,'=what is complete and entire.

8347. 'They went three days in the wilderness and found no waters' (Ex.xv.22)=that truths were deficient, and at last wholly so.

8750. 'In the third month' (Ex.xix.1)=fullness of state. . . 'Three,' and 'third'=what is complete.

8790. 'For the third day' (ver.11)=plenary preparation. . . For 'the third day'=a full state.

8811. 'In the third day' (ver.16)=at the end of the purification.

8877. 'Upon the thirds and upon the fourths' (Ex.

xx.5)=in a long series and conjunction; for 'three'=what is full from beginning to end; thus that which is in a long series.

[A.] 9198¹. 'Three years and six months' (Luke iv. 25)=to what is full.

9286. 'Three times in the year' (Ex.xxiii.14)=a full state even to the end; for 'three'=what is full from beginning to end.

9297. 'Three times in the year' (ver.17)=what is complete and continuous.

9407². The three things in speech.

9488. 'Three'=what is full.

9556. 'Three reeds of the candlestick (on each side of it)' (Ex.xxv.32)=what is full as to good and truth.

9557. 'Three almond-shaped bowls' (ver.33)=what is full as to the scientifics from good.

9565. Three times repeated = everything; in the internal sense, plenary conjunction; for 'three'=what is plenary.

9718. 'The height three cubits' (Ex.xxvii.1)=what is full as to degrees.

9761. 'Their pillars three, and their bases three' (ver.14)=the goods and derivative truths which support fully; for 'three'=what is full.

9825. Why the Spiritual Kingdom is distinguished into three degrees. . . In order that anything may be perfect, it must be distinguished into three degrees. . . There are three Heavens, and consequently three degrees of goods and truths there. Moreover, each Heaven is distinguished into three degrees . . . and also the interiors of man; and each one of these is also distinguished into three degrees . . . The reason is that everywhere there must be end, cause, and effect . . . for a Thing to be perfect. Hence it is that 'three,' in the Word,=what is complete from beginning to end. This is why the garments of holiness were the ephod, the robe, and the tunic . . .

9864. 'Three'=perfection.

10114². 'The third day'=a new state.

10127. The ternary number also=an entire period from beginning to end, and thence what is full; but with this difference, that 'seven' is mentioned where it treats of holy things; and 'three,' where it treats of anything whatever. E.20.

10262⁵. See SIX, here.

10624. 'Upon the thirds and upon the fourths' (Ex. xxxiv.7)=the damnation of falsities and of the derivative evils. . . 'Three' is predicated of truths, or of falsities. . . The numbers 'three,' 'six,' and 'twelve' belong to the spiritual class. . . By 'three' is also signified all truth in the complex.

H. 2^e. He who thinks three, and says one, is at once detected.

S. 27²⁹. In every Divine work there is a first, a middle, and a last . . . These three may be called end, cause, and effect; also Esse, Fieri, and Existere . . . It is from this that by 'three,' in the Word, is meant what is complete and perfect, and also all together. Ill.

F. 56^e. 'The third part'=all.

R. 153. On the third day after the heart has ceased to beat . . . they enter the Spiritual World. T.138.

245. 'Three'=all as to truth. 315. 348.

322. 'Three,' and 'six' are said of truths, and = them.

400. 'The third part' (Rev.viii.7)=all as to truth; for 'three'=all, full, and altogether; hence 'a third,' which is a third part,=the like. E.506, Ex. and Ill.

404. 'The third part' (ver.8)=all. E.512.

405. 'The third part' (ver.9)=all these. (=everything. E.513. 514.)

409. 'The third part' (ver.10)=all things. 410. E.518. 520.

413. 'The third part' (ver.12)=all. E.525. 526. 527.

446. 'The third part' (Rev.ix.15)=all. E.572.

453. 'The third part' (ver.18)=all who are in these falsities. E.579.

489^e. '1260'=the same as 'three and a half.' 491. E.636.

505. 'Three days and a half' (Rev.xi.9)=to the end and the beginning, that is, to the end of the Church which still is, and to the beginning of the New one; (for) 'three'=what is complete even to the end; and 'a half'=a beginning. The like is signified by 'three days and a half' as by 'a week.' Ex. E.658, Ex. R.510. E.664. 761.

—². That 'three'=what is complete, thus to the end. Ill.

—^e. 'Seven' is said of holy Things; but 'three,' of things not holy.

518. 'The third woe' (ver.14)=the final lamentation. E.680.

531. I lay in bed (ill) three days and a half.

541. 'The third part' (Rev.xii.4)=all. E.718.

702. 'Three unclean Spirits' (Rev.xvi.13). . . 'Three'=all; here, therefore, merely. E.1000.

712. 'Made into three parts' (ver.19)=completely destroyed. (=to be dissipated. E.1019.)

875^e. The third thing is use. Ex.

—⁷. Hence it is that 'three,' in the Word,=what is complete, and altogether.

901. 'On the east three gates . . .' (Rev.xxi.13). . . 'Three'=all.

M. 17. Three tiers on the orchestras there.

25. Ten persons prepared to be in Heaven for three days.

52. In the Spiritual World the third principle, which is the Natural, is lacking.

T. 184. (Tricks to show that three are one, and one three.)

712. The three essentials of the Church: God, charity, and faith. . . Hence it is that there are three things in man as to his internal; namely, the soul or mind, the will, and the understanding. These three are receptacles of those three universals . . .

—². So there are three things in man as to his external . . . the body, the heart, and the lungs . . .

713. There are three things opposite to these universals: the devil, evil, and falsity. Ex.

714^e. Take whatever you like, whether animal, plant, or stone: these three universals, in some relation, are inscribed on them.

D. 4442. I was let into the sublime idea that these Three are one, which idea cannot be described, being possible only in the other life . . .

E. 9². 'Three,' or 'three times'=what is complete to the end.

72⁵. 'The third part' the most part.

242¹⁰. 'The third part' (Zech.xiii.8)=some in the Church.

285. 'Holy,' named thrice,=what is most holy; because 'three,' in the Word,=what is full, complete, and continuous. 315²².

316¹⁵. 'Three' (Dan.vii.8,24)=what is plenary; thus that truths had been completely destroyed.

374². 'Three' is predicated of truths . . . and it then =what is full, thus also what is genuine. Hence 'three measures of barley' (Rev.vi.6)=the genuine truth of the Church.

384². 'The third part,' in the Word,=all truth.

403²⁰. 'Three years' (Luke xiii.7)=a whole period or time, from beginning to end.

411¹⁶. 'Where two or three are gathered together . . .' (Matt.xviii.20). 'Two' is predicated of good, and 'three,' of truth; consequently, 'two and three,' of all who are in truths from good.

—'. 'Three' is predicated of truths, because it=all truths in the complex.

430². 'Three'=what is full, and is said of truths.

435³. There are three things which fully constitute and form every universal essential: the good of love, the truth from this good, and the derivative good of life. Rep.

—⁴. There are three senses in the Word because there are three Heavens.

526⁶. The three hours ('from the sixth hour to the ninth hour' when the Lord was crucified)=what is full, and altogether.

531. As 'woe' is said three times, it=grievous lamentation; for 'three'=what is complete to the end.

532². That 'three,' in the Word,=what is full and complete, and thence an entire period, greater or less, from beginning to end. Ill. —⁶.

—⁶. 'Three,' in the Word, is predicated of truths . . . because 'three'=fulness; and spiritual fullness is formed through truths. Ill.

—⁹. 'The third part shall be left therein; yet I will lead the third part through the fire . . . and will prove them' (Zech.xiii.8,9)=that something of truth would remain, but scarcely any genuine truth. 'The third part'=the residual truths.

—¹². 'The third and fourth generation,' or 'the sons, the thirds, and the fourths' (Num.xiv.18; Dent.

v.9)=all who are in falsities from evil; 'the third generation'=those who are in falsities of evil . . . for 'three,' in the opposite sense,=falsities.

655¹⁰. 'The third day He shall rise again' (Matt.xx.19)=the plenary glorification of the Lord's Human.

706⁶. 'Three days and three nights' (Luke x.30)=to the full.

725⁵. 'Three times in a year' (Ex.xxiii.17)=constantly.

820⁶. That Peter was asked three times (John xxi.)=the full time, from the beginning of the Church to its end . . .

847. 'Three' is predicated of truths, and in the opposite of falsities.

1224⁴. There are three Heavens, and three Hells . . . I have seen three kinds of (infernals): the fiery, the black, and the pallid.

Can. God vi.3. There are three things which follow in order: love, wisdom, and use.

Trinity i.7. There are three who bear witness in Heaven . . . viii.4.

Coro. 17^e. From (the fact that the Angels of the three Heavens dwell in the regions of these three atmospheres) it may be noticed whence it is that 'three,' in the Word,=what is complete.

Inv. 49. Three coats of the brain . . . and three coats around the whole body . . .

53. This Union of Three is not possible otherwise than as it is in every man: soul, body, and proceeding. These three make one man.

Thresh. Triturare.

Trituration. Trituratio.

Mortar, A. Trituratorium.

Trituratory. Trituratorius.

A. 824. By their phantasies they make as it were mortars, like those used for herbs, and pestles—instrumenta trituratoria—, with which they triturate and torture whomsoever they can. 5057. D.2615. De Conj. 109. D.2638.

1763. The speech of certain Spirits terminated in what is fourfold, as it were to the tone and sound of those threshing.

7729⁶. 'Arise and thresh, daughter of Zion' (Micah iv.13). Ex. (=the dissipation of evil with those of the Church. 'To thresh'=to dissipate. E.316¹².)

D. 1009. See PANCREAS, here.

3218. On a tritulatory undulation.

E. 405⁴⁸. See THRESHING-SLEDGE, here.

Threshing-floor. Area.

A. 6377⁴. The good of love is 'the threshing-floor' (Hos.ix.2) from the grain and the derivative bread there. E.376¹⁷.

6537. 'They came to the threshing-floor Atad' (Gen. i.10)=the first state; for 'a threshing-floor'=where there is the good of truth; for there is grain in a threshing-floor, and by grain is signified the good which is from truth, and also the truth of good.

H. 489^d. Flower beds.

M. 380^e. The court of his gymnasium.

D. 4150. Not a face, but only the broad area of one . . .

4155. In safety, or within the area.

E. 374^d. 'The threshing-floor' (Matt.iii.12)=where the separation is effected.

543^g. 'The threshing-floor' (Joel ii.24)=the doctrine of the Church.

695²³. 'Upon all the corn floors' (Hos.ix.1)=all things of the Word and of doctrine from the Word; for 'corn,' from which is bread,=all that which spiritually nourishes, and 'threshing-floor'=where it is collected together, thus the Word. 'The threshing-floor and the press shall not feed them'=that they will not draw from the Word the goods of charity and of love, thus not anything which will nourish the soul; for 'the threshing-floor,' here,=the Word as to the goods of charity; and 'the press,' as to the goods of love: by 'the press,' here, is meant oil . . .

799²¹. 'The produce of the threshing-floor' (Deut.xvi.13)=all the good of the Church; the same as 'bread,' and 'corn.'

Threshing-sledge. Tribula.

E. 405⁴⁸. Those who are of the external Church are compared to 'a new threshing-sledge having sharp teeth' (Is.xli.15), because a threshing-sledge beats out wheat, barley, and other grain from the ears, and these =the goods and truths of the Church; here, therefore, that which crushes and breaks up evils and falsities . . .

Threshold. Limen.

A. 34. Therefore they cannot approach the first threshold of the court of the Heavens. 1820.

1397. He got into a Society which is in the first threshold of Heaven, but could not breathe.

3833^e. Such do not see the first threshold of wisdom.

6405³. Such are in the Lord's Kingdom, but on the threshold.

6884. The sense of the letter is turned into the spiritual sense at the first threshold of Heaven.

9435. Moses was admitted no further than to the first threshold of Heaven . . .

10177⁵. A holy external without an internal penetrates only to the first threshold of Heaven, and is there dissipated.

H. 83. Hence he who is not in the idea of the Divine from which is Heaven, cannot be elevated to the first threshold of Heaven . . .

400². When such come to the first threshold of the Ultimate Heaven, they begin to be tortured. 525².

W. 202. The Angels of the lowest Heaven cannot ascend to the first threshold of the perfections of the Angels of the Middle Heaven; nor these to the first threshold of the perfections of the Angels of the Highest Heaven. Ex.

T. 347². If Truths do not become of the will, they are only in the threshold to man . . .

E. 650⁸⁷. 'The drought in the threshold' (Zeph.ii.14)=the total destruction of truth.

T. 44. A bird (puts food) into the throats (of her young).

D. 4035a. They spoke with me as if in the throat or windpipe.

4357. Hypocrites have no face, but a yawning throat . . .

4500. Her gullet=guttura=was forced asunder . . .

E. 556⁹. All things which pertain to the mouth, as the throat, etc.=such things as belong to the perception and understanding of truth, because they correspond to them.

659¹¹. 'Their throat is an open sepulchre' (Ps.v.9)=that there is Hell within.

Throne. Thronus.

See SEAT=solium.

A. 1042³. 'The throne' (Ezek.i.)=Heaven.

2162². 'The heavens are My throne' (Is.lxvi.1). 'The heavens'=celestial and spiritual things . . . thus all things which are of internal worship, and of the internal sense: these are . . . called 'the Lord's throne.'

3857⁶. The promise to the disciples that they should sit on twelve thrones. Ex. 8705². E.431⁶, Ex.

4809³. 'Then shall He sit upon the throne of His glory' (Matt.xxv.31)=Judgment; for 'throne' is predicated of the Lord's royalty, (which) is Divine truth; and from and according to this is Judgment. 5313³.

5044⁸. 'The throne of David' (Jer.xvii.25)=the Heaven of the Lord. 5313⁴. 10360⁶.

5313³. 'Seat,' or 'throne,' in the opposite sense, =the kingdom of what is false. Ill.

6524³. 'Thrones' (Rev.iv.4)=the truths of intelligence from the good of wisdom.

6832⁴. 'Throne'=Heaven; properly, the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord which forms Heaven. Ill.

7375. They want to climb into the throne of God.

7779. 'Pharaoh's firstborn who sits upon his throne' (Ex.xi.5)=the falsified truths of faith which are in the first place. Ex. . . 'Throne'=the kingdom of truth; in the opposite, the kingdom of falsity.

8215³. 'The thrones cast down' (Dan.vii.9)=falsities. 'His throne'=Heaven and the Church. E.336⁹.

8625. 'His hand is against the throne of Jah' (Ex.xvii.16)=that they want to inflict violence on the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. . . The reason 'the throne of Jah' = the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, is that 'throne' is predicated of the Lord's royalty, (which) corresponds to His Spiritual Kingdom.

9166¹. As Heaven is the Lord as to Divine truth, it is said, 'Thou shalt not swear by Heaven, because it is God's throne' (Matt.v.34); for 'the throne of God' = the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord. 9714².

9407¹⁰. 'The throne upon which was the appearance of a Man' (Ezek.i.26; x.1) = the Divine truth from the Lord's Divine good. ('The throne' = Heaven; and 'the Man upon it' = the Lord Himself. E.595¹.)

9408. Hence Heaven is called 'the throne of God,' because by . . . 'a throne' is signified truth Divine from the Lord as received in the Middle Heaven. H.8^e. 24.

9429². 'To sit upon the throne of glory' (Matt.xxv.) = to judge from the Divine truth which is from Him.

9470³. Plenary vastation, is signified by 'the thrones being cast down' (Dan.vii.).

9509^e. By 'the throne' upon which the Lord was seen, is signified Heaven.

9741⁶. 'This is the place of My throne . . .' (Ezek. xliii.7). Here the temple with its court is called 'the place of the throne of Jehovah . . . because the temple with its court represented Heaven. 'The throne of Jehovah' = the Spiritual Heaven.

9857². 'He shall sit upon the throne in Truth' (Is. xvi.5) = the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord, and thence the Spiritual Kingdom.

9917². 'I saw the Lord sitting upon a throne, high and lifted up' (Is. vi.1) = Heaven; in special, the Spiritual Heaven. (=the Lord as to Divine truth in the higher Heavens. E.220⁵.) 285².

R. 14. 'The seven Spirits who are before His throne' (Rev.i.4) = from the universal Heaven, where the Lord is in His Divine truth . . .

— That 'the throne of the Lord' = Heaven. Ill.

—^e. 'I will give to sit with Me in My throne' (Rev. iii.21) = in Heaven; in special, where His Divine truth reigns. 221. E.253, Ex.

110. 'Where Satan's throne is' (Rev.ii.13) = their life in thick darkness. (=where all falsities reign. E.134.)

222. 'Even as I sit with My Father in His throne' (Rev.iii.21) = as He and the Father are one, and are Heaven. (=comparatively as the Divine [good] is united to the Divine truth in Heaven. E.254.)

229. 'Lo a throne set' (Rev.iv.2) = Judgment in a representative form. 'And upon the throne One sitting' = the Lord. (=the Lord in respect to the Last Judgment. E.267.)

— That 'a throne' = Judgment also. Ill. 233.

239. 'In the midst of the throne, and round about the throne, four animals' (ver.6) = the Lord's Word from primes in ultimates, and its guards. Ex. (=the Lord's Providence and guard that the interior Heavens be not approached except by the good of love and of charity, in order that the lower things, which depend thereon, may be in order. E.277.)

268. 'In the midst of the throne' (Rev.v.6) = from the inmosts and thence in all things of Heaven. (=in the whole Heaven. E.313.)

286. 'The voice of the Angels around the throne' (ver.11) = the confession and Glorification of the Lord by the Angels of the lower Heavens. E.335.

380. 'Therefore they are before the throne of God' (Rev.vii.15) = that they are in the Lord's presence. (=that hence they are conjoined with the Lord. E.477.)

383. 'The Lamb who is in the midst of the throne' (ver.17) = the Lord as to His Divine Human in the Inmost Heaven and thus in all things of Heaven. (=the Lord in the whole Heaven. E.482.)

545. 'He was caught up to God and His throne' (Rev. xii.5) = the protection of the Doctrine . . . by the Lord, and its guardianship by the Angels of Heaven. . . 'The throne' = the angelic Heaven. E.728.

575. 'The dragon gave him his throne' (Rev.xiii.2) = that this heresy prevails through its reception by the laity. (=that they strengthen their doctrinals by reasonings from falsities. E.783.)

—^e. 'Throne' = government.

617. 'They sang as it were a new song before the throne' (Rev.xiv.3) = the celebration . . . of the Lord before Him. E.858.

625. 'They are without spot before the throne of God' (ver.5) = that they are in truths from good from the Lord. 'The throne of God' = the Lord and Heaven. (=that in the sight of the Angels they are without falsities from evil. E.867.)

694. 'Poured his vial upon the throne of the beast' (Rev.xvi.10) = influx into their faith. . . 'Throne' = kingdom. . . That 'throne' is said of the government of evil and falsity. Ill. (=the state of the Church manifested as to the doctrine of faith. E.988.)

709. 'Throne' = Heaven, and also Judgment.

808. 'Throne' = Heaven and the Kingdom there, and also Judgment.

845. 'I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and Judgment was given unto them' (Rev.xx.4) = that the truths of the Word, according to which all are judged, were opened . . . (=that Judgment belongs to the Lord alone. E.270².)

865. 'I saw a throne white and great, and He that sat upon it' (ver.11) = the universal Judgment effected by the Lord . . . from Divine truths and Divine good. —².

886². That 'the throne' = Judgment in a representative form. Refs.

932. 'Going out of the throne of God and of the Lamb' (Rev.xxii.1) = out of Heaven from the Lord; for 'the throne' = the Lord as to Judgment, and as to government, and as to Heaven.

937. 'The throne of God and of the Lamb shall be in it' (ver.3) = that the Lord Himself will reign in the New Church; for 'the throne,' here, = the Kingdom; and the Lord's Kingdom is where He alone is worshipped.

E. 25. 'Before His throne' (Rev.i.4) = presence and providence. . . 'The throne of God' = the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord; thus Heaven, which is the receptacle.

[E.] 31⁶. It was therefore a custom for a king . . . to sit upon a throne of silver . . .

134. 'Thrones,' in the Word, = Judgment from Divine truths; and, in the supreme sense, the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, where the Divine truth is received more than the Divine good. 205⁴.

208⁹. 'To come and set everyone his throne at the door of the gates of Jerusalem' (Jer.i.15) = to destroy by falsities the truths which introduce into the Church.

253². 'Throne,' in the Word, when predicated of the Lord, = in general, Heaven; in special, the Spiritual Heaven; and, abstractedly, the Divine truth proceeding from the Lord, because this makes Heaven. Hence, also, 'throne' is predicated of Judgment, because all Judgment is effected from truths. Ill. 289. 687⁴.

—⁶. Therefore, in the opposite sense, 'throne' = Hell as to all falsity. Ill.

258. 'A throne,' in the midst of Heaven, (Rev.iv.) = Judgment.

289. 'Throne,' therefore, here = all things of Heaven and the Church.

297⁴. As 'throne' = Heaven, and as 'He who sat upon the throne' = the Lord as to His Divine in Heaven, it is said, 'To him that overcometh I will grant to sit with Me in My throne.'

—'. 'The throne of God and the Lamb' = Heaven and the Lord there as to Divine good and as to Divine truth. 460. —³.

401⁸. 'His throne as the sun before Me' (Ps.lxxxix.36) = the Lord's Heaven and Church which are in celestial good: 'the throne steadfast as the moon to eternity' = the Heaven and Church which are in spiritual good, which is Divine truth. 594⁹.

430¹². Solomon made a throne of ivory with six steps, and twelve lions standing upon the steps (1 Kings x.18-20). Solomon's 'throne' = Judgment, which is effected by truths from good, and it represented Divine truth from Divine good; 'the twelve lions' = all the truths of Heaven and the Church in their power.

444⁶. 'The throne of the house of Israel' (Jer.xxxiii.17) = the Church where Divine truth reigns.

456. 'Throne,' when predicated of the Lord, = Heaven and the Church (which are the Lord's Kingdom).

462. 'To stand around the throne' (Rev.vii.11) = conjunction with the Lord. Ex.

493. 'Before the throne' (Rev.viii.3) = conjunction with Heaven.

684²⁰. 'Throne' (Ps.lxxxix.4) = Heaven and the Church.

687. 'To sit upon thrones' (Rev.xi.16) = to be in the work of judging; for 'thrones' = the Heavens; and 'to sit upon thrones' = to judge; and as the Angels do not judge, but the Lord alone . . . these words = that the higher Heavens are in light and power from the Lord to separate the evil from the good . . .

—¹³. 'All the princes of the sea shall come down from their thrones' (Ezek.xxvi.16) = that the Knowledges of truth will reign no more with the men of that Church; for all the kingdom belongs to the Divine truth. 'To descend from the thrones' = from the government. To sit upon 'thrones' = to be in the truths of Heaven.

710¹⁵. 'The throne' which he shall have (Ps.cxxxii.11) = Heaven.

741¹². 'Throne' (Ps.xciii.2) = Heaven and the Church as to the reception of Divine truth.

946. 'The throne of David' (Is.ix.7) = the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom.

988². The reason the doctrine of faith is meant by 'the throne of the beast,' is that 'throne,' in the supreme sense, = Heaven and the Church as to Divine truth; and Divine truth in the Christian Church is called faith.

1013. 'Throne' (Rev.xvi.17) = where the Lord is as to Judgment.

1034³. Therefore the Heaven, where Divine truth reigns, is called His 'throne.'

1207. 'They adored God who sitteth upon the throne' (Rev.xix.4) = the adoration of the Lord, who has all power in the Heavens and on earth. . . 'The throne,' where predicated of the Lord, = the universal Heaven, and also all power there; and power on earth cannot be separated.

1209. 'A voice came out of the throne' (ver.5) = the unanimity of the universal Heaven; for 'the throne' = the whole Heaven, from the fact that the Lord is upon it; and the Lord is Heaven itself.

5107. A pain was felt in the great toe of the left foot; the reason of which was that this great toe corresponds to those who speak from faith from the Word, and who are continually disputing about doctrinal things. These induce a pain in this great toe; and therefore this great toe communicates with the genitals, for these correspond to the Word.

E. 298¹⁴. 'The thumb' (Ex.xxix.20)=what is full.

A. 1763³. Small Spirits who speak with a sound like a great multitude, as it were thundering. 5564. 9232, Ex. 9234, Ex. H.244^e. D.3241. 3242a.

4326. A thundering muttering heard (from the Spirits who relate to the general involuntary sense).

7573. 'Voices' which are those of 'thunders'=the Divine truths which illustrate and perfect those who are in Heaven, and terrify and devastate those who are in Hell; and, as they devastate the latter, they=the recession and separation of their communication with those who are in good and truth; for in this way they are devastated.

— . On high mountains, thunders are not heard, except as a gentle and tacit sound, whereas below they are heard as a terrible noise; and so Divine truth is gentle and mild in Heaven; but in Hell is terrible. 8823.

[A. 7573]². That voices which are thunders, = Divine truths, which illustrate and perfect those in Heaven, and which terrify and devastate those in Hell. Ill. 7592. 8813. 8914.

S. 18⁴. 'The voice of Jehovah upon the waters, the God of glory thundereth' (Ps. xxix. 3). . . 'The voice of Jehovah,' which, here, is 'thunder' = the Divine truth or the Word in its power.

R. 236. 'Out of the throne . . . thunders' (Rev. iv. 5) = perception from the Lord. 'Thunders,' from their crash affecting the ears, = perception. Ill. (= the understanding of Divine truth. E. 273.)

—². As James and John represented charity and its works, and from these comes all the perception of truth and good, they were called 'Boanerges,' that is, 'sons of thunder' (Mark iii. 17).

296. 'With a voice of thunder' (Rev. vi. 1) = the perception of Divine truth. 'A voice of thunder' is here mentioned, because by this animal is meant the lion, by which is signified the Divine truth of the Word as to power. (= manifestation from the Inmost Heaven. E. 353, Ex.)

396. 'Thunders' (Rev. viii. 5) = perceptions. ('Thunders and lightnings' = conflicts and disturbances of the affections and derivative thoughts concerning good and evil, and truth and falsity. E. 498.)

47⁴. Thunder and lightning were heard and seen from above; and an Angel appeared . . .

472. 'Seven thunders uttered their voices' (Rev. x. 3) = that the Lord disclosed, through the universal Heaven, what was in the little book. (= instruction from Heaven and perception concerning the last state of the Church. E. 602.)

—³. The reason it is said that 'seven thunders uttered their voices' is that the speech of the Lord passing down through the Heavens to the lower parts is heard as thunder; and because He speaks simultaneously through the whole Heaven, thus fully, it is said 'seven thunders'; and therefore also by 'thunder' is signified instruction and the perception of truth; here, also, disclosure and manifestation.

— That a voice from Heaven, when from the Lord, is heard as thunder. Ill.

531⁸. There was heard as it were thunder, and a voice speaking from Heaven . . .

615. 'As the voice of a great thunder' (Rev. xiv. 2) = the Lord speaking through the New Heaven from Divine love. (= a Glorification of the Lord from His Celestial Kingdom. E. 855.)

811. 'The voice of mighty thunders' (Rev. xix. 6) = the joy of the Angels of the Highest Heaven. Their voice or discourse is heard as thunder. (= a Glorification from the goods of love. E. 1216.)

M. 316⁵. It then thundered, which was a gentle murmur from the angelic Heaven flowing down and increasing.

415. I heard as it were thunder rolling . . . which was a correspondence of the collision of their arguments.

E. 9. 'Sons of thunder' = those who receive the truths of Heaven from the affection of love. (= truths from celestial good. S21⁴, Ex.)

220¹². 'Lightnings, voices, and thunderings,' in the Word, = Divine truths from Heaven.

273². Thus 'lightnings' and 'thunders,' in the Word = Divine truth as to enlightenment, and as to understanding. Ill.

405²¹. 'At the voice of Thy thunder they hasten away' (Ps. civ. 7) = that evils are dispersed through goods from Heaven.

702. In a restricted sense . . . 'thunders' = conclusions of falsity from evil.

S21⁴. Thunders, as heard in the Spiritual World, come forth from the truths which are from celestial good, when these descend from the higher Heavens into the lower parts; the light itself of truth from good then appears as lightning, and the good itself as thunder, and the derivative truths as the variations of the sound . . . The reason good is there heard as thunder, is that good . . . does not speak, but only sounds. 1216.

1014. 'There were voices, lightnings, and thunders' (Rev. xvi. 18) = reasonings, darkenings of the understanding, and conclusions of falsities from evils. . . 'Thunders' = the rejection of truth and good.

1216. Therefore the sound of the celestial Angels is heard as the sound of thunders.

R. 463. They gave them precious things, as . . . thyine wood for tablets.

774. 'All thyine wood' (Rev. xviii. 12) = natural goods.

—³. The reason 'thyine wood' = natural good, is that 'wood' = good; and thyine wood takes its name from 'two,' which also = good. The reason it is natural good, is that wood is not a costly material . . . (= all good conjoined with truth in the natural man. For the word 'thyine,' in the Greek, is derived from 'two,' which = this conjunction. That 'thyine wood' = good conjoined with truth, is evident from what precedes and follows. . . Thus 'thyine wood' = good conjoined with truth in the natural man, which originates from the above-named goods and truths. . . But as these = goods and truths profaned . . . 'thyine wood' here = such good profaned, which is evil conjoined with falsity. E. 1145.)

482. All times in the Word=states. 2199. 2788. 3998. 4283². 4901. E.664.

488³. The Angels . . . do not know what time (as measured in the Word) is; for they have no sun and moon to distinguish times, and therefore do not know what a day and a year is, but what a state is and its changes. Therefore, before the Angels, whatever is of matter, space, and time disappears. Ill.

—^e. When the notion of time is removed, there remains the notion of the state of the Things which existed at that time.

493. 'Days,' and 'years'=times and states. . . In the world there must necessarily be times and measures, to which numbers are applied, because they are in the ultimates of nature.

618. The internal sense has no relation to times; and this is favoured by the Original Language, in which one and the same word is applicable to any time whatever . . .

893². 'A day,' and 'a year,' in the internal sense,=nothing but time; and, as they=time, they=state. Ill.

2906². 'A year' = an entire time of the state of the Church . . . Ill.

3056. 'About the time of evening' (Gen. xxiv. 11) = the state then more obscure.

3057. 'About the time that the drawers (of water) go out' (id.) = a state of instruction.

3223. All ideas of time and of space, which are of so much account in the natural man that it cannot think without them, are of the light of the world.

3356. Even man is not in time in so far as he is in a state of the affections . . . 3827, Sig.

3404². Man cannot comprehend . . . what the Divine was before time . . . and so long as there is in his thought anything of an idea from time, he must needs fall into errors . . . But to the Angels, who are not in the idea of time, but in that of state, it is given to perceive this most clearly; for the eternal with them is not that of time, but that of state, without the idea of time. 8325².

3469². A considerable lapse of time (necessary for regeneration).

3786. 'It is not time for the flocks—pecudes—to be gathered together' (Gen. xxix. 7) = that the goods and truths . . . could not as yet be collected into one. 'Time' = state in general.

3827. When man is in a state of love . . . he is in the angelic state, thus is as if not in time, provided there is no impatience in his affection; for impatience is a corporeal affection, and in proportion as man is in it, he is in time.

—^e. That time appears to be something, is caused by reflection upon the things which are not of the love, and which are therefore tedious.

4814. 'It came to pass at that time' (Gen. xxxviii. 1) = the state of the things which follow.

—². For the thoughts of the Angels do not derive anything from time or space, because they are in Heaven; for when they left the world, they left also the notion of time and space, and put on notions of states, namely, those of good and truth. Therefore, when man is reading the Word, and from it thinks of time and of the things which belong to time, the Angels with him do not perceive anything of time, but in place of it the things which are of state: moreover, they correspond. Even man, in his interior thought, does not perceive time, but in his exterior thought, as may be evident from the state of man when his exterior thought has been lulled, that is, when he is asleep.

—³. Time corresponds to the state of existere, (that is, to a state of truth). 8325².

—³. That times and spaces (there) are states of life. Shown from experience.

4901². That times = states, is because there are no times in the other life. The progression of the life of Spirits and Angels does appear as if in time; but they have no thought from times . . . The reason is that the progressions of their life are not distinguished into ages . . . and because there are no days and years there, because their Sun . . . never sets. Hence it is that no notion of time enters their thoughts; but a notion of state and its progressions . . .

—³. Whereas thought from the interior memory has not times and spaces adjoined to it; but states . . .

4916. 'It came to pass in the time' (ver. 27) = the following state.

4994. That this good was prior in time, but not in state. Sig.

5097. For all the times of the day, like all the times of the year, = various states according to the variations of the light of Heaven. Ex.

5216^e. For in the Spiritual World, and consequently in the spiritual sense, there is no notion of time, but in place of it that of state which corresponds.

5253. There are three things which perish from the sense of the letter while it is becoming the internal sense: that which is of time, that which is of space, and that which is of person. The reason is that in the Spiritual World there is neither time nor space; these two are proper to nature: and therefore it is said of those who die that they pass out of time, and leave behind all that is of time.

5284. For haste implies time; and in the Spiritual World there is no time; but state instead. 5605³.

6100. Separation as to time. Sig. and Ex.

6110^o. In the Spiritual World the alternations are not distinguished into stated times . . . for in place of times in the natural world there are states in the Spiritual World.

6443^o. For there is need of a space of time (there) in order that the obscurity induced by falsities may be dissipated.

6983. This expression = time, in fact, past time; and time, when predicated of the Divine, does not = time, but eternity.

7381³. For the natural world is distinguished from the Spiritual World by time and space. The reason there are time and space in the natural world, and, in the Spiritual World, state instead of them, is that (here) the sun, by its apparent revolutions, appears to make days and years, and to distinguish the days into four times: night, morning, midday, and evening; and the year also into four times: winter, spring, summer, and autumn . . . Hence come the ideas of time, and of its variations.

8070. 'Thou shalt keep this statute at the set time from year to year' (Ex. xiii. 10) = that this law of order should be in this state constantly.

8426^o. In the other life, there are alternations of states, as (here) of times.

8615. For the times of the day from the rising of the sun to its setting, and to its rising again, = changes of state which those in the other life undergo. 8687.

8716. 'In all time' (Ex. xviii. 22) = in perpetuity. 8728.

8717^o. To those who receive His mercy in time . . . He gives in time . . . to be more content . . .

8750^o. In the other life all things are measured by progressions of state and their successive changes from beginning to end, as in the world by times; because in Heaven there are not times, but in place of them states. The reason is that the Sun . . . remains constantly in its place . . .

— It is from this that there is a correspondence of the states there with the times (here); namely, of a state of the good of love with morning; of a state of the truth of faith with midday; and of an obscure state with evening and night.

10200. In the Heavens, states of love and of light succeed one another continually, as on earth do morning, midday, evening, and twilight, and as do spring, summer, autumn, and winter . . . This is the origin of the times of the day and of the year; for the things which come forth in the world are images of the things which are in the Heavens; for the reason that the whole of the Natural comes forth from the Spiritual, that is, from the Divine in the Heavens.

10605. For all times = states; for the reason that in Heaven time is not thought of, but only changes of state as to the affections and the derivative thoughts; and the changes of state there are circumstanced as are the times of the day, which are morning, midday, evening, and night. . . One may wonder that there are not times in Heaven, seeing that they live together as do men in the world . . . but the reason is that the Sun there . . . does not make diurnal alternations . . . but is varied according to the states of love and faith with the Angels, which produce alternations like the states of heat, light, and shade every day on Earth. Ex.

10771. (The times in the Fifth Earth relatively to those on this Earth.)

H. 162. On time in Heaven. Chapter.

— Although all things in Heaven have succession and progression as in the world, still the Angels have no idea of time and space, inasmuch that they do not at all know what time and space are.

163. The reason the Angels do not know what time is, although all things progress with them in succession as (here), inasmuch that there is no difference, is that in Heaven there are no years and days, but changes of state.

164. The reason there are times (here), is that in appearance the sun advances successively . . . and makes the times called the seasons . . . and the times called the times of the day . . . It is different with the Sun of Heaven . . . and hence it is that the Angels cannot have any idea of time, but of state in its stead.

165. As the Angels have no idea from time . . . neither have they any idea about time, nor about the things which are of time . . . They do not know what a year, month, week, day, etc. are. When the Angels hear these things from man . . . they perceive states. . . Hence it is that times, in the Word, = states; and those things which are proper to time, such as those named above, = the spiritual things which correspond to them. 166.

168³. In what ignorance the Angels are about time. (From experience.)

—³. It is known in the world that in Heaven there is no time . . . for people say of those who die . . . that they pass out of time, by which they mean, out of the world. Some also know that times, in their origin, are states, from the fact that they are altogether according to the states of the affections in which they are . . . and therefore the learned inquire what time and space are; and they know that time is for the natural man.

L. 4. 'That time' = the Lord's advent. III.

W. 73. That the Divine is in all time apart from time. Gen.art.

— Time is measured by days, weeks, etc. . . Nature derives this measurement from the apparent revolution of the sun . . . In the Spiritual World the progressions of life appear to be in like manner in time; for they live together as do men (here), which would not be possible without the appearance of time. But time there is not distinguished into times as (here); for their Sun is constantly in the east . . . and therefore they have no days, weeks, etc.; but in place of these there are states of life, by which a distinction is made which cannot be called a distinction into times, but into states. Hence it is that the Angels do not know what time is, and that, when it is mentioned, they perceive state in its place; and when state determines time, time is only an appearance; for delight of state causes time to appear short, and undelight of state causes time to appear long. From these things it is evident that time there is nothing but the quality of the state. It is from this that 'hours,' 'days,' etc., in the Word, = states, and their progressions in series and in the complex; and, when times are predicated of the Church, 'morning'=its first state (and so on). 104.

[W.] 74. From these things it may be evident that time makes a one with thought from affection . . . In the Spiritual World, distances in progressions through space make one with the progressions of times; for the ways there are actually shortened according to the desires . . . Hence comes the saying spaces of time. Moreover, in cases where thought does not conjoin itself with the affection . . . as in sleep, time does not appear.

75. Now as times, which are proper to nature, are, in the Spiritual World mere states . . . and as in God these are not progressive, because He is infinite . . . it follows that the Divine, in all time, is apart from time.

161. As times (in the natural world) are stated and constant, they are proper to nature; for the time of a day is constantly twenty-four hours; and the time of a year is constantly three hundred and sixty-five days and a quarter. The very states of light and shade, and of heat and light, which vary them, also return constantly . . . Moreover, the states of the year vary constantly the states of the days. All these states, not being states of life . . . are also dead . . .

P. 49. See THOUGHT, here.

—^e. From this it is evident that time is only an appearance according to the state of the affection from which is the thought. It is the like with the distance of space in thought, whether you are walking or travelling about.

R. 476. 'That there should be time no longer' (Rev. x.6)=that there should not be any state of the Church, that is, no Church, unless one God is acknowledged, and that the Lord is He. Ex. 471. (=that there shall be no longer any understanding of Divine truth, and thence any state of the Church; for 'time,' here, = the state of man as to the understanding of the Word, and the derivative state of the Church. E.610.)

—². The reason state is signified by time, is that in the Spiritual World times are not measured by days, weeks, etc., but by states, which are progressions of their life, by which they remember past things. Ill.

—². For the times (in Heaven) are not measurable, and distinguished into days, and these into hours . . .

283⁷. 'The time of loves' (Ezek.xvi.8)=the state when it could be reformed.

295⁵. 'The time of Jehovah's good pleasure' (Ps.lxix.13)=acceptance from love. 'Time,' when said of men, =the existing state; but what is perpetually existing when said of Jehovah, thus His love, because this is perpetual. —⁶.

386²². 'The time of evil' (Ps.xxxvii.19)=a state of temptations.

396. 'That they should rest yet a little time' (Rev. vi.11)=some further duration in that state. 'Time'=state.

514¹⁴. 'The time of the end' (Dan.xi.40)=the last time of the Church, when there is no truth because no good.

571. But the times (there) although they succeed each other as times do (here), are distinguished by the states of life.

—e. The reason times = states, is that in the Spiritual World there are no stated times of the day . . . nor of the year . . . but instead there are changes of state as to love and faith ; and from these no notion is possible of the intervals into which our times are distinguished ; although times have progression there as in the natural world. As the Sun . . . is continually in its rising . . . and there are merely changes of state in Angels and Spirits according to their reception of the good of love and truth of faith, therefore times correspond to changes of state, and = them. Therefore Angels and Spirits think without an idea of time, which man cannot do.

610. That 'time'=state, is because times in the Spiritual World are determined and distinguished no otherwise than by particular and general states of life. The reason is that the Sun there is constantly in the east . . . Fully ex. and ill.

—4. 'A time, and times, and half a time' (Dan.vii. 25)=a full state of vastation. —5.

629¹⁶. 'My time is as nothing before Thee' (Ps.xxxix. 5)=that the state of one's life is of no avail.

632³. 'Until the times of the nations shall be fulfilled' (Luke xxi.24)=until evil has been consummated.

633. Times=such states as are designated by the numbers which determine the times.

636^e. By 'ages,' 'years,' etc. are meant only times ; and by times in general and in particular, that is, by the greater and the lesser times, states are equally signified.

654³⁸. 'The time of the nations' (Ezek.xxx.3)=the state of the Church from evils.

747. These are the states from which Angels and Spirits number their times ; thus which are in the place of times in the world, which are years, months, etc.

761. The reason it is said 'a time, and times, and half a time,' is that 'time,' in the singular, =a state of good ; 'times,' in the plural, a state of truth, both as to their implantation ; and 'half a time,' what is holy of the Church. Ex.

850¹⁷. The Lord's advent is signified by 'the time to pity her' (Ps.cii.13).

863². 'He hath proclaimed against me an appointed time' (Lam.i.15)=the last state of the Church. (= when all things of the Church both good and true with that nation have been devastated : this time was when the Lord came into the world ; and is meant by 'the fulness of times.' 922².)

1130³. The thought of the natural man cannot be separated from the idea of time ; this inheres from nature, in which he is. Thus neither can it be separated from the idea of origin, because origin is to him a beginning in time. The appearance of the sun's progression has impressed this idea on the natural man. But the thought of the spiritual man is abstracted from the idea of time, because it is elevated above nature, and instead of it there is the idea of state of life ; and instead of the duration of time there is the state of thought from affection, which makes life. For the Sun there does not rise or set . . .

—e. Thus it is impossible to think that nature is from eternity, or that it is in time from itself ; but it is possible to think that God is from eternity, and that nature together with time is from God. 1131².

1219⁴. As are spaces, so are times ; for progressions through spaces are also progressions through times. Times also are appearances of states, because the Sun of Heaven . . . does not make days and years . . . And, as the times vary according to the states of their affections and the derivative thoughts—for they are short in the delights of the affections, and long in the undelightful things of them—therefore the Angels cannot have the idea of time from the appearance ; but the idea of states from its origin.

Inv. 10. 'The fulness of time'=consummation, because 'time'=the state of the Church. The like is signified by 'time, and times, and half a time.' Times, in the world, are spring, summer, and autumn ; and their fulness is winter. Times as to light are morning, midday, and evening ; and their fulness is night. This is meant by the Lord coming 'in the fulness of time,' or of 'times' ; that is, when there will not be left any truth of faith and good of charity.

Tongue, Language. Lingua.

See under HEBREW LANGUAGE, SPEAK, and WORD.

A. 1159. 'Everyone according to his tongue' (Gen.x.5) = according to the opinion of each. . . That 'tongue,' or 'language,' = opinion, thus principles and persuasions, is because such is the correspondence of the tongue with the intellectual part of man, or with his thought . . . Such, moreover, is the influx not only of the man's thoughts into the movements of the tongue in speaking; but such also is the influx of Heaven [into them].

1178^e. 'Tongue' (Ps.cxl.11) = lying.

1216. 'According to their tongues' (Gen.x.20) = according to their opinions.

1251. 'According to their tongues' (ver.31) = according to their differences as to faith.

1637. Spirits always speak with man in his vernacular; which they speak as skilfully as if they had been brought up in the same language. . . They know no otherwise than the language in which they speak with a man is their own. . . The case is the same with other languages in which the man is skilled; but beyond these languages, Spirits cannot utter a syllable of any other language, unless it is given them to do so immediately by the Lord. Infants, also, who had deceased before they had been taught any language, speak in the same way. The reason is that the language with which Spirits are familiar is not a language of words, but is a language of ideas of thought; which language is the universal one of all languages . . . 1876. 2472. 5857. D.2137.

[A.] 2472°. Into this language comes every man immediately after death, because he comes into the interior memory.

2480. As men after death are in the interior memory, therefore those who have been proficient in languages cannot recall a syllable of them . . . But whatever they have imbibed by means of languages . . . they bring forth into use, because it has formed their Rational. . . He who has imbibed falsities by means of languages . . . and has confirmed himself in them, reasons from nothing but the falsities; but he who has imbibed and confirmed truths, speaks from the truths.

3741°. Thought inflows into the organic forms of the tongue, and produces speech.

4387°. Understands the meaning the same when he hears a foreign language.

—°. The internal sense coincides with the universal language.

4791. On the correspondence of the tongue with the Grand Man. Gen.art. D.1358.

—°. The tongue affords entrance to the lungs, and also to the stomach, and thus represents the entrance-hall to spiritual and celestial things; to spiritual, because it ministers to the lungs . . . to celestial, because it ministers to the stomach, which furnishes nourishment to the blood and heart. . . Therefore the tongue corresponds in general to the affection of truth, or to those in the Grand Man who are in the affection of truth, and are afterwards in the affection of good from truth. They, therefore, who love the Word, and desire thence Knowledges of truth and good, belong to this province; but with the difference that there are some who belong to the tongue itself; some to the larynx and trachea; some to the throat; some to the gums; and some to the lips. (From experience.) There are some who correspond to the interiors of the tongue and lips; and others to the exteriors. The operation of those who receive with affection exterior truths only . . . I felt in the exteriors of the tongue.

4795. This is why the tongue is assigned a double office . . . For, in so far as it aids in nourishment, it corresponds to the affection of knowing, understanding, and being wise as to truths; and so far as it aids in speech, it corresponds to the affection of thinking and producing truths.

4801°. He was continually endeavouring to do violence to those who were in the province of the tongue.

5075°. As man is in company with Angels and Spirits, he is with them also in the universal language, and thus in the origins of words. Hence there are imparted to words many meanings which in the external form appear not congruous, although in the internal form they are entirely so. Examps.

5643°. Just as one turns the language of another into his own . . . in an instant. So is the sense of natural thought turned into spiritual; for spiritual language or speech is proper to Angels; and natural to men. Ex.

6013°. The tongue has been formed to all the sense of the soluble and fluid parts in liquids. 6057.

6199. When this Spirit spoke with me in my mother tongue, he believed that he was speaking from his own, and said that that language was his; but it was shown that the language proper to Spirits is quite different; and that it is the universal language of all; and that the ideas inflow from it into my vernacular . . .

6516°. The writings in the Spiritual World . . . are in accord with their universal language . . .

6985. 'I am heavy in mouth and heavy in tongue' (Ex.iv.10)=that a voice and speech from the Divine is neither heard nor perceived. . . 'Tongue'=speech, because the tongue is the organ of speech.

6987°. It is from the correspondence of the speech of thought with that of the mouth, that man, when he comes among Spirits after death, knows how to speak in the universal language. (Continued under SPEAK.)

7236°. So from twenty-three letters . . . the words of all languages can be produced . . . even if there were thousands of languages.

7359°. While they were speaking with me, my tongue also moved a little. (Ex. under SPEAK.) H.248°.

7784. 'A dog shall not move his tongue' (Ex.xi.7)=not the least of condemnation and lamentation.

8628. They who place wisdom in things of mere memory, as in languages. Des.

10752°. Spirits and Angels can speak with the men of any language; for their thought falls into the ideas of the men, and thus into the words of their speech.

H. 96°. Those in the Grand Man who are in the mouth and tongue are in discourse from understanding and perception.

236. All in the universal Heaven have one language . . . Language is not learned there, but is implanted in everyone; for it flows from their very affection and thought: the sound of the speech corresponds to their affection; and the articulations of the sound, which are words, correspond to the ideas of thought which are from the affection; and, as the language corresponds to these, it also is spiritual; for it is affection sounding, and thought speaking.

237. The angelic language has nothing in common with human languages, except with some words, which sound from an affection; but not with the words themselves, but with their sound. . . It is impossible for the Angels to utter a single word of a human language: this has been tried, but they could not do it; for they cannot utter anything except what completely agrees with their affection. . . The first language of men in our Earth was in agreement [with the angelic language], because they had it from Heaven; and the Hebrew language is in agreement in some things. See D.Min. 4812.

241. For the vowels do not belong to language . . .

246. The Angels who speak with man do not speak in their own language, but in the language of the man, and also in the other languages in which the man is skilled, but not in languages unknown by the man. The reason is that when the Angels are speaking with a man they turn themselves to him, and conjoin themselves with him, and the conjunction of an Angel with a man causes both to be in like thought; and, as man's thought coheres with his memory, and as the speech flows thence, therefore both are in the same language. Moreover, an Angel, or Spirit, when he comes to a man, and by conversion to him is conjoined with him, comes into all his memory . . . and thus into his languages. (Continued under SPEAK.) W.257².

255. When Angels and Spirits turn themselves to a man, they know no otherwise than that the man's language is theirs, and that they have no other. The reason is that they are then in the man's language, and not in their own . . . But as soon as they turn themselves away from the man, they are in their own angelic and spiritual language, and know nothing about the man's language.

— When I have been in company with the Angels, and in a like state with them, I, too, have spoken with them in their language, and have known nothing of my own . . . But as soon as I was not in company with them, I was in my own language.

464³. Hence it is that in so far as a man has become rational through languages and knowledges, he is rational after death; and not at all in the proportion in which he has been skilled in languages and knowledges. I have spoken with many who had been believed to be learned because they were acquainted with ancient languages, as Hebrew, Greek, and Latin; and who had not cultivated their rational faculty by the things written in them; and some of them seemed as simple as those who had known nothing of these languages; and some stupid; but still the conceit remained with them that they were wiser than others.

S. 44³. 'Thummim,' in the angelic language, means 'a shining forth.'

W. 41. Taste is only an affection of the substance and form of the tongue.

306. As spiritual ideas are apart from space, they do not fall into any words of natural language.

P. 230. The naming (there) is done in the spiritual language, which is such that it can give a name to every Thing; for each letter means one Thing; and a number of letters joined into one word, which makes the name of a person, involve the entire state of the Thing.

R. 29². For there is a universal language in which are all Angels and Spirits, and which has nothing in common with any language of men . . . After death, every man comes into this language, for it is implanted in every man from creation . . . It has often been granted me to hear this language, and also to speak it; and I have compared it with the languages in the world, and have found that it does not make a one with any natural language in any least thing. It differs from these in its primitive [principle], which is that each letter of every word has some meaning, in both speech and writing. T.19².

'To gnaw their tongues'=not to be willing to hear truths; for 'the tongue'=the confession of truth, because the tongue serves thought for speech, and, spiritually, for confession. 'To gnaw the tongue'=to withhold the thought from hearing truths. . . In the Spiritual World, when anyone is speaking the truths of faith, the Spirits who cannot endure to hear them, hold their tongues in their teeth, and also bite their lips; and also induce others to press their tongues and lips with their teeth, and this even to distress. . . M. 326⁴. Every Spirit and Angel, when speaking with [M. 326]. The difference between the Spiritual and the Natural as to languages. Shown by experiment.

— By this experiment . . . it was made very evident, that all in the Spiritual World have the spiritual language, which has nothing in common with any language of the natural world, and that after death every man comes into that language from himself. (And also) that the very sound of the spiritual language differs so much from the sound of a natural language, that a spiritual sound, however loud, could not be heard at all by a natural man ; nor a natural sound by a spiritual man.

Ad. 3/678. When I have spoken with the Angels in different languages in which I am skilled, they did not know what language it was, unless I thought (about it).

D. 1305. If Spirits were to inflow into diverse persons of different languages, all would perceive in their own language, or idiom, the meaning of the Spirit who spoke.

1360. They who hate truth . . . are the contraries of those who constitute the province of the tongue . . .

2137. That all languages derive their origin from the Speech of Spirits.

2142a. But the angelic language is still more interior . . .

3157. These Spirits said that they were speaking with me in their own language . . .

3974. On the operation of Spirits into the tongue.

4147. I wanted to gnaw my tongue when they were thinking against interior things.

4614. On the Spirits who inflict pain on the tongue, and render it rigid.

4931². Some (of these evil Spirits) learn the spiritual language, whereby they conjoin themselves with certain Angels, and thus perpetrate crimes ; but they have not a spiritual language such as that which those in Heaven have ; but it is an artificial one ; and they do not speak in spiritual ideas by means of it, but in natural ideas, which is altogether forbidden. Some devise for themselves another language, and thereby so associate themselves that others do not perceive what they are speaking about together.

5561. The Word and other books there in the universal language. 5604.

5668. Infants there learn to speak the angelic language within a month.

5787². The reason men speak not according to the nature of the Thing, but by various and diverse languages, is that man is not born into the nature of the Thing, but into ignorance of all things.

6090. (Some words of the spiritual language. Quoted under SPEAK.) See also 6063.

D. Min. 4568. Antony had an influx into the interiors of the tongue, namely, into the muscular fibres.

4598. On the language of angelic Spirits.

4741. With those who learn languages without any use, inasmuch that they do not thereby cultivate their Rational, such things are like scales upon scales . . . which thicken the outer skin, and take away the feeling from the interior things . . . After death such are rejected, because they are of no use.

E. 175⁸. 'Nations and tongues' (Is. lxvi. 18) = all who are in the goods of love and the derivative truths.

331⁹. 'All languages' (Dan. vii. 14) = all, of whatever doctrine or religion.

412⁸. 'The strife of tongues' (Ps. xxxi. 20) = evils of falsity and falsities of evil. (= the falsity of religion from which they reason against truths. 455¹⁰.)

—³³. 'Their tongue' (Is. iii. 8) = thought, because the tongue utters what man thinks.

427⁸. 'Tongues' = those who are in life according to doctrine.

433²⁶. 'The languages of the nations' (Zech. viii. 23) = religious things. 675¹³.

—³³. 'Their tongue is against Jehovah' (Is. iii. 8) = their doctrine.

455. 'Peoples and tongues' (Rev. vii. 9) = all who are in falsities from ignorance, and from various religions. . . . 'Tongues' = their confessions from religion ; for 'tongues' mean speech ; and speech = confession and religion, because the tongue utters and confesses the things which are of religion.

—². 'Tongue' (as distinguished from 'lip,' and 'mouth') = confession.

—³. That 'tongues' = confessions from religion and according to the dogmas of religion. Fully ill.

—⁷. 'The tongue' (of the rich man) = the thirst and cupidity of perverting the truths which are in the Word.

—⁸. 'The tongue' = both the perception of truth and the affection of good ; the perception of truth from its speaking ; and the affection of good from its power of tasting . . . 584⁴.

—⁸. 'To lap with the tongue' (Judg.vii.5)=to eagerly strive for and to pursue from desire.

—¹⁷. 'The tongue'=the falsities of religion; and therefore it is said, 'Their tongue is a sharp sword' (Ps.lvii.4). (=crafty reasonings from falsities. 556².)

—²². The apostles and others speaking with new tongues after the Lord's resurrection (Mark xvi.17; Acts ii.3,4) signified the confession of the Lord and of the truths of the new Church. 706¹⁴.

—^e. (Thus) 'tongues'=confessions from the truths of the Church; and, in the opposite, confessions from the falsities of any religion.

768²³. 'To elongate the tongue' (Is.lvii.4)=the delight of teaching and propagating these things.

923⁵. 'The tongue' of Jehovah=the Divine truth.

990. 'To gnaw their tongues'=to be unwilling to perceive and know genuine goods and truths, because 'the tongue'=the perception of truth; and 'to gnaw the tongue'=to repress it.

— For 'the tongue' has various significations, because it is an organ of both speech and taste: as an organ of speech it=confession, thought, and religion; and as an organ of taste it=the natural perception of good and truth, while the smell=the spiritual perception of them.

4424³. 'There shall be gnashing of teeth' (Matt. viii.12)=their state as to falsities; for 'the teeth,' in the Word,=the lowest natural things; in the genuine sense, the truths of them; and, in the opposite sense, the falsities. The teeth also correspond to them. And therefore 'the gnashing of teeth'=the collision of falsities with truths. They who are in mere natural things, and who are in them from the fallacies of the senses, and who believe nothing which they do not see by them, are said to be in the gnashing of teeth, and in the other life appear to themselves to be in it when they are forming conclusions about the truths of faith from their fallacies. . . The like is signified by 'the gnashing of teeth,' elsewhere. Ill. 9052³.

5565. There are Spirits who relate to bones still harder, as the teeth. Des.

5568. Spirits who gnash with their teeth. They are from the Hells where are those who have not only led an evil life, but have also confirmed themselves against the Divine. They gnash with their teeth when they speak, which is horrible to hear.

5714^o. He caused pain in the interior of the teeth.

5720. Hypocrites with me caused pain in the teeth.

6380. 'He shall be white in the teeth from milk' (Gen.xlix.12)=that the Divine Natural is nothing but the good of truth. . . 'The teeth,' in the genuine sense,=the Natural; for the things in man which are hard, as the teeth, bones, and cartilages, correspond to the truths and goods which are of the lowest Natural. (=His Divine Natural. 9052².)

9049⁷. 'A tooth for a tooth' is said, because by 'a tooth' is signified the exterior truth of faith.

—². That 'the teeth'=natural truth, which is of the exterior understanding; and, in the opposite sense, the falsity which destroys this truth. Ill.

9062. 'If he shall knock out the tooth of his manservant or the tooth of his maid-servant' (Ex.xxi.27)=if he shall destroy truth or the affection of it in the Sensuous. 'A tooth'=the exterior Intellectual, and thence truth in the Natural; here, truth in the ultimate of the Natural, that is, in the Sensuous.

9063. 'He shall let him go free for his tooth' (id.)=that he can no longer serve the internal man. 'A tooth'=what is sensuous.

10283¹². Therefore it is said that the flesh being yet between their teeth. . . they were smitten (Num.xi. 33); for 'the teeth'=the corporeal proprium, which is the lowest of man.

See under ANGUISH, PENALTY, PUNISHMENT, and TORTURE.

A. 322. Spirits have a most exquisite sense of touch: hence the pains and torments in Hell.

391. They are delighted in tormenting one another.

695. The life of evil is there turned into direful torments, which are so great that they cannot be described; for the greatest delight of their life consists in the fact that they can punish, torture, and torment one another; and this by arts quite unknown in the world, by which they know how to induce exquisite feelings . . . and also direful and horrible phantasies, besides terrors and horrors, and many like things. The diabolical crew perceive so much pleasure in this, that if they could augment the pains and torments to infinity they would not even then rest satisfied . . . But the Lord softens the torments. 1322². 1680. 1969. 2057³.

696. Hence everyone brings the penalty and torment upon himself. . . The Lord never leads into torment; but, as the evil Spirit himself rushes into it, the Lord turns all the torment to good. . . When the infernals are in some use they are not so much in torment.

697. The torments of the evil Spirits who are with man are not communicated to him, because he is in a state of preparation for eternal life.

5057. The delight of the Israelites in tormenting men. D.2615.

5071. Infernal fire is not the torment of conscience . . . for concupiscences are the spiritual fires which . . . torment in the other life.

— The vital fire with the evil is such that when they are in the vehemence of concupiscences, they are in a kind of fire, from which they are in the ardour and fury of tormenting others.

5389. Evil Spirits fear these wandering Spirits; for they torment them with a certain kind of torture.

5722. When they come into the deep, they are tormented to such a degree that they cannot but desist from infesting others.

5798⁷. When evil Spirits approach the light of Heaven they begin to be tormented. This they attribute to Heaven, consequently to the Lord, when yet it is they themselves who induce the torment on themselves; for evil is tortured when it approaches good.

5852^e. When the evil Spirits who are with man are in the World of Spirits, they are not in any infernal torment . . .

6110⁶. Night, in Hell, is their state of torment.

7042². At the entrance into Heaven . . . they begin to be distressed and tormented.

7699. 'That He may take away from me this death' = that this falsity may not torment. . . The infernals deprecate this falsity . . . for it causes them an infernal darkness which torments them.

7768. The reason they shun those of the Spiritual

Church, is that the good and truth which inflow torment them.

7964^e. For in the presence of the good they are tormented.

8232. The evils and falsities themselves in which they are (when in Hell) torment them; but their torment does not come from the fact that they suffer because they have done evil; but from the fact that they cannot do evil, because this is the delight of their life; for when they do evil to others they are punished and tormented by those to whom they do it.

8265. For at the presence of the Divine they are distressed, tormented, and as it were lifeless.

8481. The two things which make Hell are evil and falsity, consequently . . . there are two things in Hell which make the torment there; and the torment from falsity is compared to 'a worm,' and the torment from evil to 'fire.' Ill.

8700⁵. Those who are in Hell and who are tormented there, impute their torments to the Divine, saying that the Divine could take them away if it would, because it is omnipotent . . . But to take them away is impossible, being contrary to order; for if they were taken away, the evil would rise up against the good, would subjugate the Angels, and would destroy Heaven . . .

8875. When the Lord protects His own in Heaven, those who are in evil are indignant and angry against the good, and rush into the sphere where the Divine truth and Divine good are, (which) then operates upon them, and causes them to feel torments such as are in Hell. Hence it is that they attribute anger, etc. to the Divine.

8882. Therefore these (profaners) are sent into the most frightful Hell of all, where they are direfully tormented.

8945⁴. When those are elevated into Heaven (who are not yet prepared), they feel a torment almost infernal . . .

R. 153¹⁰. (In that cavern) he is miserably tormented on a bed of damned dust, until the overseer sees signs of penitence.

427. 'To be tormented five months' (Rev.ix.5)=to induce stupor for a short time. (=to be darkened as to the understanding, and to be drawn away from seeing truth. E.548, Ex.)

428. 'Their torment was as the torment of a scorpion when he striketh a man' (id.)=that this is done by their Persuasive. (=that the darkening and drawing away from seeing the truth is caused by the persuasion by which the mind is infatuated. E.549.)

509. 'These two prophets tormented those who dwell upon the earth' (Rev.xi.10)=that these two essentials . . . go contrary to the two essentials received in the Church of the Reformed . . . and therefore these two essentials of the New Church are held in contempt, dislike, and aversion. (=anxiety of heart in the devastated Church on account of these. E.662, Ex.)

636. 'They shall be tormented with fire and brimstone before the holy Angels and the Lamb, and the smoke of their torment ascendeth for ever and ever' (Rev.xiv.10)=the love of self and of the world and the derivative cupidities, and, from these, the conceit of self-intelligence; and torment in Hell from these. (=that their Hell is from the love of evil and falsity direful according to the falsification and consequent destruction of Divine good and Divine truth, thus the Word; and the dense falsity which encompasses them and continually flows forth from their loves. E.888,889, Ex.)

— . For all the torment in Hell is from these three things.

676⁴. The goods and truths are taken away from them by an influx from Heaven . . . by which they are tortured and tormented, like a serpent before a fire, or thrown on an ant-hill; and they therefore reject goods and truths . . . because they have felt as it were infernal torment from them. Sig.

763. 'To give her torment' (Rev.xviii.7)=internal suffering, from being cast down from dominion, and the mockery attending it: their torment after death is nothing else. (=infernal penalty. E.1119.)

—². These are the retributions and penalties which are meant in the Word by 'torments in Hell.'

784². No one has torment in the World of Spirits; but an evil Spirit first comes into torment when, after preparation, he is in Hell.

864². 'To be tormented day and night' (Rev.xx.10)=to be interiorly infested constantly.

—^e. For everyone in Hell is tormented by his own love and its concupiscences; for these make the life of everyone there; and the life is tormented; and therefore there are degrees of torment there according to the degrees of the love of evil and the derivative falsity.

M. 10^e. (Thus) they who are in evils and the derivative falsities have formed in themselves an effigy of Hell, and in Heaven this is tormented by the influx and the violence of the activity of one opposite into another . . .

263³. The devil said, Those of us who torment others because they deny our pre-eminence, sink down; for we are allowed to glory, but not to do evil to anyone.

461⁸. They said, The prohibition and withholding of our delights in Hell, is what is called the torment of Hell; it is an interior suffering.

T. 74⁴. God separates (Heaven and Hell) by a gulf, lest Heaven should inflict torment on Hell; for those in Hell are tormented in proportion as Heaven inflows.

691². Therefore when the Lord presents Himself more present in Heaven, the wicked below Heaven begin to lament, to be tormented, and to become lifeless . . .

D. 189. On the extreme cupidity of evil Genii and Spirits in vastating and tormenting man.

376. That diabolical Spirits, by their phantasies, inflict not only upon themselves, but also on men, the most acute torments and tortures.

2486. That the actual and proper evils of man are what torment him in the other life. Ex.

2719^e. This is why their infernal torments are more grievous than the infernal penalties of all other sins.

3391. The evil Spirits then began to torment him. Des. . . But such are kept in a state in which they do not feel the torment . . . 3392. 3397.

3528^e. All the evil Spirits could be easily driven away, but they would then come into such torments . . . that they would endure more torments than would conduce to their amendment.

[D.] 4127. How the evil are infested and tormented in the interior sphere.

4203. If they come together, those who are encompassed with a sphere of falsity and evil are severely tormented.

4334. That evil Spirits strive with all their might to lead others to their own Hell, and thus to torment themselves . . . for the more that go there, the greater is the number of those who torment them.

4370. On evil Spirits who desire to torment infants.

4375. That the evil esteem no one as a friend: they want to torment all. Ex.

4381. How they torment one another in Hell by phantasies.

4471. In Hell they torment each other in various ways, according to all their magic.

4494. When (the woman he had killed) kissed him, he was tormented with infernal torment.

4580^e. They torment each other, by turns, until their wickedness is subdued, which is not done until after many ages.

4768. See CHARLES XII., here.

5096. A devil who was as it were dead with torment.

5223. In Hell . . . they torment each other either by open force, or by magic arts, or by phantasies.

5830. At any discourse in which was the light of truth, they were very much tormented . . .

6030^e. Such things are taken away there by direful torments. Des.

D. Min. 4698. During a whole night, while asleep, I was tormented in Hell, in order that I might know the nature of the state there; for they fell upon me, because they could then torment my spirit . . . It was a continuous torment; one torment after another. They are placed upon tables, and miserably torn, and the cupidity of exercising command is excited, and . . . they are tormented until it abates; and so by one devil after another, as [they are passed] from one place in Hell to another, upon the tables. When the desire abates, some respite is given, so that they can be in some of their cupidity. Thus is the head of the serpent trodden down.

E. 411. As soon as they are in the caverns and rocks, the anguish and torments they underwent from the influx of the light of Heaven cease . . . —².

413². They are then (during the Last Judgment) in terrors, pains, and torments . . . As they cannot endure such an influx and presence of the Divine love, they begin to tremble, to be in anguish, and to be tormented. Ex. . . Hence they feel such a trembling, anguish, and torment that . . . they flee away and cast themselves into the Hells . . . Sig.

711. 'Pained to be delivered' (Rev. xii. 2) = the resistance of such.

890^e. For everyone is in suffering of heart when he is withheld from his reigning love: this is the general torment of Hell, from which come forth innumerable others.

1133. 'For fear of her torment' (Rev. xviii. 10) = dread on account of infernal penalties. 1163.

De Conj. 60. On the torment of the infernals from the influx of conjugal love. Gen. art.

Tactile. Tactilis.

A. 198. 'Ye shall not touch it' (Gen.iii.3)=that they should not think about the good and truth of faith as being from self, nor from what is sensuous and scientific. 202.

322. Spirits have a most exquisite touch . . . and all the sensations relate to the touch; for they are only differences and varieties of touch. 1880. 3528. 10130⁶. M.210. D.1718.

1883. The touch is more exquisite than is possible in the wakefulness of the body. —^e.

—^e. Angels and Spirits have also been touched by me.

3402. 'He that toucheth this man and his woman dying he shall die' (Gen.xxvi.11)=that Divine truth and good are not to be approached in faith on account of eternal condemnation if they should be profaned.

4277. 'He touched the hollow of his thigh' (Gen. xxxii.25). Ex. 4280. 4305. (=to destroy the good of these loves. 4317.)

4404^e. The sense of touch in general corresponds to the affection of good.

4622³. Spirits have especially a much more exquisite sense of touch . . .

5077³. Touch is subject to the will part.

5078⁴. He feels (his spiritual body there) with the touch; not with the sense of touch which he had enjoyed (here); but with the sense of touch which he enjoys there, which is that from which his sense of touch (here) had come forth.

6057. The touch, which is around the universal body, is formed to the sense of the changes of state in the air, namely, to the sense of its cold and heat; and also to the sense of liquids; and to the sense of weights.

6402^e. See SKIN, here.

6911. Which will touch them directly. Sig. . . For that which touches anyone directly is within him; but that which does not touch him directly is without; for it strikes him obliquely . . .

7046. 'She made it touch his feet' (Ex.iv.25)=that the then quality of the Natural was shown; for 'to make to touch'=to show; for a thing is shown by the touch.

8797. 'To touch'=to penetrate that far; here, to infuse themselves. 8798.

9996. The sensuous delight which is the ultimate of the Voluntary is drawn in through the two senses of taste and touch.

10023⁹. In the other life, those who touch one another communicate to each other the state of their life. If this is done with the hands, the whole of the life is communicated. Ex.

[A.] 10130. 'Everyone that toucheth the altar will be sanctified' (Ex.xxix.37)=everyone who receives the Divine of the Lord; for 'to touch'=communication, transference, and reception. Ex. 10277. E.391⁶.

—². In the other life it is manifest how the interiors communicate and transfer themselves into others by the touch; and how the others receive them according to their love. Ex.

—⁷. That 'to touch'=communication, transference, and reception. Ill. 10199.

10283. 'To touch' (as distinguished from 'to pour') is predicated of dry and corporeal things.

H. 402^o. Conjugal delight . . . is a purer and more exquisite delight of touch.

462^o. Men are obese and stupid in respect to spiritual truths in proportion as they indulge the taste, and the tactile blandishments of the body. (Fully quoted under TASTE.)

W. 41. The subject of the touch is the skin . . . The very substance and form of the skin causes it to feel the things applied to it. The sense of touch is not in the things which are applied, but is in the substance and form of the skin: that sense is only an affection of the skin . . .

220^o. To touch with the hand = to communicate.

3923³. 'Fairs,' and 'tradings' (Ezek.xxvii.19)=the acquisitions of truth and good. 3941⁷.

4096³. If such things are told him as relate to his business in the world . . . he perceives it interiorly.

4453. 'Go ye about in trading in the land' (Gen. xxxiv.10)=dogmas from what is general; for 'to trade'=to procure Knowledges for one's self, and also to communicate them. Ex. and Ill. 4481.

4630^e. Those who are subtle in their transactions . . .

4756. 'Traders' (Gen.xxxvii.28)= . . . those who have the Knowledges of good and truth; for these are riches and merchandise in the spiritual sense. Hence 'to trade'=to acquire and to communicate these Knowledges.

5573. Dutch Spirits seen who had been traders: their delight was in the trading itself. Ex. C.J.48. T.801. D.3500.

10042¹⁰. 'Traders' (Ezek.xxvii.21)=those who have the Knowledges of good and truth, and communicate them. 10199⁶.

H. 360². Consequently, the exercises of charity and the increasing of its life are possible in so far as man is in business . . .

—³. Many of those who had been employed in trading and commerce . . . are in Heaven; but fewer of those who had been in stations of honour . . . Ex.

528². In order that man may receive the life of Heaven, he must by all means live in the world, and in its offices and business . . .

535. It has been granted to speak with some who had removed themselves from the business of the world in order to live piously . . . Most of them had contracted a sad life, and could not be consociated with the Angels.

— The life of charity, which is to act justly and sincerely in every function, business, and work, from a heavenly origin, is the life which leads to Heaven.

563. It was found that those who (here) had not looked to uses, could not attend to the business on hand . . .

C. J. 48^e. Trade is their love as the end, and money is the mediate subservient love; and this love is spiritual. But where money is the love as the end, and trade the mediate subservient love, the love is natural, and originates in avarice. The Dutch take precedence of others in the above-mentioned spiritual love, which, regarded in itself, is the common good . . . T.801.

49². If (they reject these truths) their trading is taken away . . . and they are led to those with whom trading flourishes . . .

81. (The Jews) trade in that World as in the former one, especially in precious stones . . . T.843.

92. He cannot extricate himself from the falsities (of the religion of his parents) on account of his business in the world.

Life. 39². (Comparison with) a trader. If he has engaged in trading from the love of it, he imbibes with pleasure all things which, as means, enter into and compose that love. These also are truths, while trading is the good thereof.

72. A trader in like manner: if he is in the good of love towards the neighbour, everything of his trading is a good work . . .

F. 25. By application to some business, he acquires the things which relate to his business. This then becomes his use, with which he is affected. Thus begins the affection of use, which produces the affection of the means, through which he comes to his business, which is his use. This progression exists with everyone in the world, because everyone has some business, to which he proceeds, from the use which is the end, through the means, to the use itself, which is the effect. But, as this use, together with its means, is for life in the world, its affection is natural.

30. There are many who have no internal acknowledgment of truth, and yet have the faith of charity . . . They have been kept from thinking about truths by cares and business in the world . . .

P. 109. Such are traders who at heart are insincere and fraudulent, while they act sincerely for the sake of gain.

208^e. If they have been traders, such act as thieves (there).

217⁴. There are also tradings (in Heaven) and the derivative wealth, because there are societies and communities. M.207².

220^e. Trading is such a good when it is loved as the end, and money is the mediate love; provided the trader shuns and is averse to frauds and dishonest arts as sins. But when . . . trading is the mediate love, it is avarice, which is the root of evils. See Luke xii. 15; and the parable, verses 16 to 21.

296¹⁰. The ends which are uses are just as many as are the particulars of one's business and function.

R. 164. 'To trade,' and 'to gain' (Matt. xxv. 16, 17) = to acquire truths and goods. (= to acquire intelligence by making use of one's faculties. 194³.) E. 193¹⁰.

M. 6⁴. They desired to return . . . some to their trade . . .

77². Asked what was our business there. 79⁸.

249. The fourth of the internal causes of cold [in marriage] is a want of determination to some study or business. Ex.

T. 354³. Man, on account of his business in the world, cannot procure the Truths of faith, except a few; but still, if he approaches the Lord, and worships Him alone, he comes into the power of Knowing all Truths.

422. That charity itself is to act justly and faithfully in the office, business, and work in which one is . . . Gen.art.

—e. The trader, if he acts from sincerity, and not from fraud, consults the good of the neighbour with whom he has business.

801. That the love of trading, when it is the end, is spiritual, is from its use, because it is of service to the common good, with which the man's own proper good does indeed cohere, and is more apparent than the common good, because the man thinks from his natural man; but still, when trading is the end, it is also that love, and everyone is regarded in Heaven according to the love which is the end. . . The Dutch are in this spiritual love more than others; whereas the Jews are in this love inverted, and therefore their love of trading is merely natural, and has in it nothing from the common good, but solely from their own individual good.

D. 658^e. Traders (who had been thievish) seen.

2234. That the universe is governed by the Lord without any trouble.

3506. To trade is not evil in the case of those who make swords, gunpowder, etc. who may still be good. Ex.

3513. In business the Dutch go in fixed and well-tried ways.

3519^e. Their life of business was represented as a life of wintry light.

3523. They objected that those who are traders must not care about such things (as love to the neighbour). But it was replied that there are rich traders in Heaven . . . who spoke with them through me, (and) who have the common good as their end . . . (See C.J. 49², above.)

5826. See DUTCH, here.

E. 281². 'He carried it into a land of traffic' (Ezek. xvii. 4) = the derivative primary Knowledge to which he applied knowledges. 'A land of traffic' = the natural man who has knowledges.

314⁶. 'Traders' = those who communicate and teach Knowledges.

355¹². 'The tradings of Tyre' = . . . spiritual tradings, which are effected through the Knowledges of truth and good. 514². 717¹⁰.

375³⁵. 'To trade'=to procure for one's self and to communicate to others. 376¹⁹. 750¹⁸.

538¹⁰. 'Tradings,' and 'merchandise' (Ezek.xxvii.) =the acquisitions and communications of falsities. (=the acquiring of intelligence through Knowledges. 576³.)

548⁴. Their 'trading' (Luke xix.) =the acquisition and procuring of heavenly intelligence. 675⁷.

654²⁵. Pathros is called 'the land of their traffic' (Ezek.xxix.14)=from the Knowledges which they will procure for themselves; for 'to trade'=to acquire and communicate Knowledges.

—7¹. 'The land of trading' (Ezek.xvi.29)=whence all falsities are procured.

840¹¹. That 'trading'=the acquisition and possession of Truths. III.

1044³. 'A trader seeking beautiful pearls' (Matt.xiii. 45)=those who procure for themselves goods and truths, through which are Heaven and the Church.

D. Love vi². The traders who are in the Angel-man are those who love trading, and wealth for its sake, and at the same time look to God; but the traders who are in the Devil-man are those who love wealth, and trading for its sake only. With the latter there is avarice, which is a root of all evils. . . Such men are useful in a kingdom; but [only] when they die, when their wealth passes into the public use of traders. . . In a word, the acquiring of wealth by trading for the sake of wealth only, is Jewish trading; but the acquiring of wealth by trading for the sake of trading, is Dutch trading. Opulence is not harmful to the latter, but it is to the former.

C. 167. Charity in the man of business. If he looks to the Lord and shuns evils as sins, and transacts his business sincerely, justly, and faithfully, he becomes a charity. He acts as from his own prudence, and yet trusts in the Divine Providence. He is therefore not despondent in misfortune, nor elated with success. He thinks of the morrow, and yet he does not think of it. Ex. Even his prudence he ascribes to the Divine Providence. He loves business as the principal thing of his vocation, and money as its instrumental. . . Thus he loves his work, which in itself is a good of use, and not the means above it. He does not indeed so distinguish between them; but yet they are thus distinguished when he looks to the Lord and shuns evils as sins. For he shuns avarice. . . He loves the common good while loving his own good. . . Not that he gives to it of his own beyond what is due; but because the public good is also the good of his fellow-citizens. . . whom, from the charity a form of which he is, he loves.

Tradition. Traditio.

A. 259°. How 'the serpent' destroyed (these lowest things) with the Jews by traditions, etc.

2722⁶. By traditions, etc. the Ancients knew what these things signified.

3727⁶. The gentiles had these things by traditions.

4926⁵. 'The waters of the lower fish-pool'=the traditions by which they made infractions in the truths of the Word.

C. J. 5. Faith separated. . . from which mere traditions issue.

I. 1. There are three opinions and traditions (about influx).

E. 403²¹. The Jews falsified truths by application to themselves, which was the source of their traditions.

540⁶. From the sense of the letter they framed their false doctrinals, which were traditions.

659⁶. These dead Knowledges are called in the Word 'traditions.'

717¹⁷. The last time of the Church was when (with the Jews) everything of the Church was made to rest upon the traditions by which they falsified the Word; and the truths of the Word become traditions when there is no life of charity. They become falsities when faith is separated from charity.

893⁴. In this man, who was a Jew (there were) Knowledges of evil and falsity, because they were traditions.

5 M. 8. Historical faith, which is in itself a tradition from others.

De Conj. 85. As the Jews had falsified all things of the Word by their traditions, they are called by the Lord 'an adulterous generation.'

Tragic. Tragicus.

M. 297. Marriages would thus be turned into tragic scenes.

T. 148°. Then their comedy becomes what is tragical.

649°. From the transcription of the imputation of the former Church upon that of the New, tragical things would arise. . .

Train. Pendula.

D. 1386°. Lifted up like the train of a woman, which [in Swedish] is called släp.

Trample. Conculcare, Proculcare.

See under TREAD.

A. 250. 'He shall trample on thy head' (Gen.iii.15). . . 'To trample on-proculcare'=depression. 258.

2162¹⁶. When the goods and truths of faith are perverted by natural lumen, it is described by 'the feet and hoofs of a beast. . . by which foods are trampled on-proculcantur.' III.

3614⁴. 'To tread,' and 'trample, in anger' (Is.lxiii. 3)=victories over evils. . . 'To trample,' in the Word, is predicated of evil. T.116. E.922⁵.

3727⁸. 'To tread down the streets' (Ezek.xxvi.11)=to destroy the Knowledges of truth.

9391¹⁶. Since they disperse the truths still remaining and scattered. . . it is said that 'they trample on the pieces of silver' (Ps.xxx.4).

—17. 'To trample on'=to cast down.

R. 489. 'The holy city they shall trample on forty-two months' (Rev.xi.2)=that it had dispersed all the truth of the Word until not any remains. (=that they will destroy all the doctrine of good and truth from the Word. E.632.)

E. 304²². 'A nation trodden down' (Is.xviii.2)=those outside the Church . . . 331⁶.

388³. 'They have trodden down My field' (Jer.xii.10) = the vastation of the Church.

627¹³. 'To trample on' . . . =to destroy, which is done by those who are natural and sensuous . . .

632. 'To trample down' =to completely destroy.

—². Moreover, in the Spiritual World, those who deny and despise the truths of Heaven and the Church appear to trample them with the soles of their feet; and this because the external Sensuous of man corresponds to the soles . . . 'To trample' is predicated of such in the following passages. Fully ill.

659²⁰. 'A carcase trodden on' (Is.xiv.19)=an infernal Spirit with whom everything is spiritually dead from the complete destruction of good.

811. 'Jerusalem shall be trampled down' (Luke xxi. 24)=the complete destruction and perversion of the doctrine of the Church.

1044⁴. 'Lest they trample on them with their feet' (Matt.vii.6)=to wholly reject as filth.

Tranquillity. Tranquillitas.

A. 59. The Lord gives man food . . . which is states of tranquillity and peace . . . at intervals. Sig.

85^e. He thus enjoys . . . also external tranquillity and delight. Sig.

91. As he becomes celestial . . . tranquillity ensues. This tranquillity is signified by 'rain,' and 'mist.' . . This tranquillity which is of peace produces what are called 'the shrub,' and 'the herb' . . . 93.

92. See PEACE, here. 1275. 2183². 3696. 6469. 8722.

141^e. The Angels are in such a proprium, and at the same time in the greatest peace and tranquillity.

3552. 'To sit' involves something of tranquillity.

3696. 'He lay in that place'=the tranquillity of the state.

— . Peace in externals is called tranquillity.

— . Every man is in a state of tranquillity in the beginning of his life, or in infancy; but in proportion as he advances in life . . . he removes himself from that state, because he gives himself up to worldly cares and the derivative anxieties . . .

—². So with the new life . . . in the beginning he is in a state of tranquillity; but, as he passes into the new life, he passes into an untranquil state. Ex.

4048. A Spirit seen who was in a state of tranquillity. Des. . . They relate to the longitudinal sinus.

4213. 'They passed the night (together)'=tranquillity . . . For they who have been conjoined as to good and truth are in tranquillity, and in peace.

4330³. The further they removed from internal sensuous things . . . the more tranquil and quiet it became with them . . . The reason was that when the external sensuous are in their fallacies . . . they have what is tranquil; but when such things are taken away from them . . . they have what is untranquil.

4393. 'Jacob came to Shalem, a city of Shechem'=the interior truths of faith, which are those of tranquillity.

—^e. So long as they are in exterior truths, and especially when they are coming from exterior into interior ones, the state is untranquil; for then there are combats of temptations. This is here represented by Jacob, in that after having been in fear and anxiety on account of Esau, he has now come into a state of tranquillity.

4394. When man is, in faith and life, in interior truths, he is in . . . a state of tranquillity; and then looks at exterior things as one who looks from a high hill upon the sea in tumult.

5173. Spirits, after being troubled, are let into a tranquil and delightful state.

5221². There is no tranquillity until the time when truths from good are replaced in their order.

5963. Perception given that they are in tranquillity. Sig. and Ex.

6313. Their wise men said, that when the mind is withdrawn from sensuous things, it comes . . . into a tranquil state.

6373. See SHILOH, here.

6408. The blessedness of the affections (is felt only) as a tranquil state arising from contentment of mind.

8113. The Spirits of Jupiter wish to inspire the inhabitants of their Earth with tranquillity and delight of heart.

8115. The Spirits of our Earth do not love tranquillity as do those of Jupiter.

8370^e. Orderly arrangement is effected in tranquillity.

8455. This is not peace; but is the delight and tranquillity of cupidities.

M. 6^e. The mind hereby tranquillises itself.

T. 71^e. And [all] became tranquil and serene.

D. 262. Tranquil spheres. Ex.

418. The prior atmosphere acts tranquilly. 1176^e. 2089.

3029. All things were in a state of tranquillity.

3030. I spoke with some in that tranquillity, tranquilly.

3604. Suddenly, all became tranquil.

3605. There was a quietude among the Spirits, as if they did not know where I was.

4382. They were from Societies where there is tranquillity; for I perceived a tranquillity of mind . . .

5105^e. Such disturb all tranquillity of mind with others.

5941. This is their [state of] tranquillity.

5946⁵. There was a tranquillity there, because they were in order.

E. 365⁴⁰. 'In tranquil quiet' (Is.xxxii.18)=in the delights of good and the pleasantnesses of truth.

410. When the Divine inflows moderately, there is everywhere a tranquillity and serenity.

—²⁴. 'There was a great calm' (Mark iv.39). Ex.

514²¹. As the Lord is then present in the good of love, there is effected tranquillity of mind.

653⁴. 'Tranquillity of quiet' (Ezek.xvi.49)=security, and no anxiety on account of any evil.

Transcend. Transcendere.

A. 1071. For spiritual and celestial things infinitely transcend human apprehension.

2077². Love like the Lord's transcends all human understanding.

2540⁶. Because they transcend man's apprehension.

2553. Man cannot apprehend any doctrinal which is purely spiritual and celestial, that is, Divine, because it infinitely transcends his apprehension, and thus his faith. 2568³.

3404. The appearances of truth in which the Angels are, immensely transcend the understanding of man.

3596. As these subjects transcend the apprehension of the natural man . . .

4026. For goods and truths Divine . . . transcend and become infinite.

4211². For man can have no idea whatever of the Lord's Supreme Divine, because it so transcends his idea as to utterly perish.

6827. As the inmost or supreme sense of the Word transcends the human understanding . . .

7268⁸. One who utters adaptedly to the understanding the Divine truth which proceeds from the Lord immediately, and which transcends all understanding. Sig.

8644³. The Infinite is such that it transcends all finite understanding . . .

8920². See THIRD HEAVEN, here. H.210.

8922. For truth in a form not accommodated, such as is in Heaven, transcends the understanding; and that which transcends the understanding is not received.

9349². I know that this transcends belief.

9877⁶. This form transcends all intelligence.

H. 265. The wisdom of the Angels so far transcends human wisdom that they cannot be compared; and that which transcends appears as if it were not anything. 267².

W. 37⁶. Divine love cannot transcend these laws.

156. I know that these things transcend the ideas of thoughts which are in natural light; but they do not transcend those which are in spiritual light . . . and they do not quite transcend them even in natural light . . .

179. For the love and wisdom of the higher Angels . . . transcends the perception (of the lower ones).

221². Both (the Lord's) Humans are Divine, and therefore infinitely transcend the finite humans of Angels and men.

368². So much of the understanding as transcends, that is, which is not of the love . . . is an appearance.

425². They who believe that spiritual or theological things transcend the understanding . . . P.149.

Transfiguration. Transformatio.

A. 32^e. That it is the Lord from whom is all love, was represented by . . . 'the sun,' when He was transfigured.

1530. (The word manifested used instead of 'transfigured'.)

2576¹⁹. The Holy itself of His Divine Human was 'the vesture which appeared as the light' . . . when He was transfigured.

2758. The transformations of insects a representative of the Lord's Kingdom.

3212^e. What the Lord's form then was, appeared (at the transfiguration). . . This was His Divine Human. 4692^e. 5110^e. 5585². 5922⁵.

4677³. When the Lord was transfigured . . . the Divine good appeared as the sun, and the Divine truth was presented by the vestments which appeared as the light (Matt. xvii. 2). 5319.

6752⁹. As Moses represented the Lord as to the historical Word, and Elijah as to the prophetic, therefore, when the Lord was transfigured, 'Moses and Elijah were seen speaking with Him.' No others could speak with the Lord, when His Divine appeared in the world, than those who represented the Word; for speech with the Lord is through the Word. E. 1070³.

L. 35⁶. The quality of His glorified Human was shown to Peter, James, and John when He was transfigured before them . . .

S. 48. That the Word in its glory was represented by the Lord when he was transfigured. Ex.

98. His quality as the Word in ultimates He showed to the disciples when He was transfigured.

R. 24^e. In this transfiguration the Lord caused Himself to be seen as the Word; and therefore 'a cloud' overshadowed them, and a voice was heard out of the cloud, that He is the Son of God. A voice out of the cloud is a voice out of the Word.

T. 8. Such is the transformation of natural faith into spiritual faith.

104^e. The state of glorification is also a state of union: He was in this state when He was transfigured . . . and also when He did miracles.

687³. An image of regeneration is presented in the wonderful transformation of caterpillars into chrysalises and butterflies, and of other insects which are distinguished with wings. D. 3472.

777⁶. That the apostles did not see the Lord in the glorified Human before His resurrection with the eyes of the body, but in spirit, is evident from His transfiguration . . . for it is said that 'they were heavy with sleep' (Luke ix. 32).

E. 405²⁵. When He was transfigured, He appeared in Divine truth from Divine good. Ex.

594². In this transfiguration the Lord represented Divine truth, which is the Word. Ex.

S21⁵. The reason the Lord took Peter, James, and John when He was transfigured. Ex. . . For, when He was transfigured before them, He represented Divine truth, which is the Word.

1070³. When the Lord was transfigured, He represented the Word; 'His face that shone as the Sun' represented its Divine good; and 'His garments which were white as the light,' and 'as white as snow,' its Divine truth.

Ath. 146. It was His Human which was transfigured, and seen in glory; and this was 'the Son of God.'

De Conj. 125. The Conjugal is represented in . . . the transformation of caterpillars into . . . flying things . . .

Transfuse. Transfundere.

I. 11⁶. The horrible fallacy that God has transfused and transcribed Himself into men. T. 470⁵.

Coro. 38. The phantasy that God has transfused His Divinity into men.

Transgress. Praevanicare.

Transgression. Praevanatio.

Transgressor. Praevanicator.

A. 3542³. 'Transgressions' (Lam. i. 14) = falsities.

4165. 'What is my trespass? what is my sin?' (Gen. xxxi. 36) = that it was not of evil.

4992². When a husband is conjoined from lust only, he believes himself to have transgressed . . .

—^e. When one is in (what is spiritual) he knows that he transgresses if he benefits a friend who is evil.

6563. 'Forgive . . . the transgression of thy brethren, and their sin' (Gen. i. 17) = supplication and repentance. . . . Mention is made of both transgression and sin on account of the marriage of truth and good in the Word; for 'transgression' = evil contrary to truth, which is lesser; and 'sin' = evil contrary to good, which is greater. III.

9156. 'Upon every word of transgression' (Ex. xxii. 9) = whatever injury and whatever loss; for 'transgression' = everything that is contrary to the truth of faith, thus that which injures and extinguishes it, consequently whatever injury or loss there is of it.

—^e. In the Word, evils are now called 'sins,' now 'iniquities,' and now 'transgressions' . . . Those are called 'transgressions' which take place contrary to the truths of faith . . . These, and 'iniquities' issue from a perverted understanding. III.

—³. As 'transgressions' are things which are contrary to the truths of faith, they are also 'transgressions-transgressiones,' and 'revolts-defectiones.' III.

—^e. That 'transgression' = evil contrary to the truths of faith, is manifestly evident from these words.

9309. 'He will not bear your transgression' (Ex. xxiii. 21) = because these things oppose truths from good; for 'transgression' = the things which are contrary to the truths of faith; thus which are opposed to truths from good, which are the truths of faith.

[A.] 10218². Therefore to number the sons of Israel was a transgression such as there is with those who claim to themselves the truths of faith and the goods of love, and the ordination and disposition of them.

10420. For all corruption and deviation from duty in worship, is a recession and turning away from the Divine.

10621. 'Bearing iniquity, transgression, and sin' (Ex. xxxiv. 7) = the removal of evil and its falsity so that they do not appear.

A. 9. The third is a state of repentance, in which man, from the internal man . . . produces goods, such as the works of charity, but which are as yet inanimate, because he supposes them to be from himself. These are called . . . 'the tree of fruit.' 29.

55⁴. At last, when faith has been conjoined with love, it becomes 'a tree' (Matt. xiii. 32); and then 'the birds' . . . which are truths, make their nests in its 'branches,' which = scientifics.

56^e. As the spiritual man is here treated of, his spiritual foods . . . are described by 'the herb yielding seed,' and 'the tree in which is fruit,' which, in general, are called 'the tree producing seed.'

[A.] 57. 'The tree in which is fruit'=the good of faith; and 'fruit' is what the Lord gives to the celestial man; but 'seed from which is fruit' is what He gives to the spiritual man; and therefore it is said, 'the tree producing seed shall be to you for food.'

59. In time of combat . . . the Lord gives him food which is compared to . . . 'the tree in which is fruit,' which is [states] of tranquillity and peace, with their delights and happinesses.

77. 'Trees pleasant to the sight' (Gen.ii.9)=perceptions of truth; and 'trees good for food'=perceptions of good. Love is signified by 'the tree of lives'; faith, by 'the tree of knowledge.' 102.

102. 'The tree of lives'=love and the derivative faith; 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil'=faith which is from what is sensuous, that is, memory-knowledge-scientia. 105.

103. The reason 'trees' here=perceptions, is that the celestial man is treated of.

105. As the will is 'the midst of the garden' where is the tree of lives, and as man has no will, but cupidity, therefore 'the tree of lives'=the mercy of the Lord, from whom are all love and faith, consequently all 'life.'

125. 'To eat of every tree' (ver.16)=to know-nosse et scire-from perception what good and truth are; for 'a tree'=perception.

126. 'But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it; for in the day that thou eatest thereof dying thou wilt die' (ver.17). The preceding words and these=that it is allowable to acquire knowledge of what is true and good by all perception from the Lord; but not from self and the world, that is, to search into the mysteries of faith by means of sensuous and scientific things,* whereby what is celestial of faith dies.

130^e. 'The trees of Eden' (Ezek.xxxi.16)=scientifics and Knowledges from the Word. (=the knowledges of the Knowledges of faith. 2049^e). (=perceptions. 2588¹⁵.)

198. 'The fruit of the tree of the garden' (Gen.iii.2,3)=the good and truth revealed to them from the Most Ancient Church; 'the fruit of the tree which is in the midst of the garden, of which they might not eat,'=the good and truth of faith, which they were not to learn from themselves. 'Not to touch it'=that they were not to think about the good and truth of faith from themselves, or from what is sensuous and Scientific things, or scientifics, in the Writings, are things which are exclusively in the natural memory. They may be either true or false, general or particular, spiritual or natural. Anything, however spiritual and Divine in itself it may be, can be made into a mere scientific by being inserted and retained in the natural memory exclusively; for in this case it is only known, and is neither lived nor spiritually seen.

Note, also, that the word knowledge (which means much the same as scientific), in this Concordance, when printed with a small initial K, stands for the Latin word scientia; whereas when Knowledge has a capital K, it stands for the Latin word cognitio.

scientific. That they would thereby 'die'=that thus faith, or all wisdom and intelligence, would perish.

199. 'The fruit of the tree of which they might eat' (Gen.iii.2)=the good and truth of faith revealed to them from the Most Ancient Church, or, the Knowledges of faith. (For) it is 'the fruit of the tree of the garden' of which it is said they might eat; and not 'of every tree of the garden,' as said before, where the celestial man, or the Most Ancient Church, is treated of. 'The tree of the garden,' there,=perception, which is that of good and truth.

200. The reason the tree of knowledge is here said to be 'in the midst of the garden'; whereas before the tree of lives is said to be (there), is that 'the midst of the garden'=what is inmost; and the inmost of the celestial man . . . was the tree of lives—which=love and the derivative faith—whereas the inmost of this . . . celestial spiritual man was faith . . . These people did not know truth from good . . . but they knew good from truth, that is, they knew the things of love from those which belong to the Knowledges of faith; and with the most of them there was scarcely anything but the knowing.

202. The Most Ancient Church . . . was such that they not only could not eat of the tree of knowledge, that is, learn what is of faith from sensuous and scientific things, but it was not allowable for them even to touch that tree, that is, to think about anything belonging to faith from sensuous and scientific things, lest they should fall down from celestial to spiritual life, and so on downward. Such also is the life of the celestial Angels. Ex.

204. That 'their eyes would be opened if they ate of the fruit of the tree'=that if, from what is sensuous and scientific, that is, from themselves, they searched into the things of faith, they would plainly see that the case was not so . . .

218. 'The midst of the tree of the garden,' in which they hid themselves, (ver.8)=natural good. . . 'The tree'=perception; but, as there was little of perception, it is said 'tree,' in the singular, as if only one tree were left.

298. That he should not 'put forth his hand and take of the tree of lives' (ver.22)=that he must not be instructed in the mysteries of faith, for thus he could never be saved to eternity, which is 'to live for ever.'

306. 'To keep the way of the tree of lives' (ver.24)=that he might not profane holy things.

2163. 'Lie down under the tree' (Gen.xviii.4)=at the perception of His state in which He was.

— That 'trees'=perceptions, came from this: that the celestial man was compared to Paradise; and hence the perceptions of heavenly things with him were compared to the trees there.

2186. 'He stood before them under the tree' (ver.8) =perception thence. . . =that the Lord drew near to Divine perception. Ex.

2187². 'The tree of life' (Rev.ii.7)=the Celestial itself; and, in the supreme sense, the Lord Himself, because all the Celestial, that is, all love and charity, are from Him. Thus 'to eat of the tree of life' is the same as to eat the Lord; and (this) is to be endowed with love and charity, thus with the things which are of celestial or heavenly life.

—^e. But when predicated of the Spiritual Church, 'trees'=Knowledges, for the reason that the man of the Spiritual Church has no other perceptions than those which come through Knowledges from doctrine or from the Word; for these become of his belief, thus of his conscience from which is his perception.

'in the field'; and it then follows 'that was in all the border thereof,' by which is signified exterior Knowledges. 2973.

7647. '(The locust) shall eat every tree that groweth for you out of the field' (Ex.x.5)=the consequent consumption of all the Knowledges possessed by them from the Church. . . 'A tree'=perceptions, and also Knowledges, of truth and good. 7690. 7692.

7966^e. This is represented (there) as a tree with leaves and fruits. The leaves are truths; the fruits are the goods of truth; the seeds are the goods themselves from which are all the rest.

[A.] 8326. For when a tree is planted it grows into branches, leaves, and fruits, and from the seeds of the fruits it grows into new trees, and so on. The like is the case with regeneration . . . and therefore, in the Word, man is compared to 'a tree'; and a regenerated man to 'a garden'; the truths of faith, with him, to 'leaves'; the goods of charity to 'fruits'; and 'the seeds' from which are new trees = the truths which are from good, or, what is the same, the faith which is from charity.

8369. 'The fruit of a tree of honour' (Lev.xxiii.40) = celestial good. See 9296⁶. E.458⁴.

9011². For 'trees' = perceptions of good and truth, and also Knowledges of them. 9212⁶.

—². The reason 'trees,' according to their species, = such things, derives its cause from the representatives in the other life; for such things appear there according to the wisdom and intelligence of the Angels.

—⁰. That the Ancient Church held worship in groves and gardens under trees according to their significations. Refs.

H. 111. Trees, according to their species, correspond to perceptions and Knowledges of good and truth, from which are intelligence and wisdom; and therefore the Ancients . . . held their holy worship in groves; and hence it is that 'trees' are so frequently mentioned in the Word; and Heaven, the Church, and man are compared to them; as to a vine, an olive, a cedar, and others.

176. The trees in the gardens of Heaven are planted in most beautiful order. Des. . . And there are species of trees and flowers there which are never seen and are not possible in the world. And on the trees there are fruits according to the good of love in which the intelligent ones are. They see such things, because . . . fruit-bearing trees, etc. correspond to intelligence and wisdom.

489¹. See GARDEN, here.

J. 46². 'The tree of knowledge' (in Gen.) = the Scientific which destroyed that Church.

S. 66. A tree with its trunk, branches, leaves, and fruits stands upon its roots, and from the soil, through its root, it draws forth a grosser sap for its trunk, branches, and leaves; a purer one for the flesh of its fruits; and a purest one for the seeds within the fruits. E.1084⁴.

96a. The Word is like a garden . . . in the midst of which are trees of life . . . but around it are trees of the forest. The man who is in Divine truths from doctrine, is in the midst where are the trees of life . . . but the man who is in truths not from doctrine, but from the sense of the letter alone, is in the circuit, and sees only the forest things.

97². 'The way of the tree of life' (Gen.iii.24) = entrance to the Lord, which men have by means of the Word.

Life 46. The faith of an evil man . . . is like a tree which is luxuriant in leaves, but gives no fruit, which the gardener cuts down. Moreover, 'a tree' = man; the leaves and blossoms, his truths of faith; and the fruits, his good of love.

F. 16. These things may be illustrated by comparison with a tree. In its first origin, a tree is a seed, in which is the conatus to produce fruit. This conatus, when excited by heat, produces first a root, and from this a stem with branches and leaves, and finally fruits . . . This is the application: the tree is man; the conatus of producing means is, in man, from the will in the understanding; the stem with its branches and leaves, are, in man, the instrumental means, and are called the truths of faith; the fruits, which in the tree are the ultimate effects of the conatus of fruit-bearing, in man are uses: in these his will comes forth—existit.

17. It is therefore a fallacy that faith produces good as a tree does fruit. The tree is not faith; but the tree is man. R.417⁴.

31. The man is then like a tree which bears fruit, and puts seeds in the fruit, from which come new trees, and at last a garden.

32. This takes place as with a tree, which does not receive the vegetative life until the heat from the sun inflows, and conjoins itself with light.

W. 346^e. The perfect subjects of the vegetable kingdom are trees of fruit; the less perfect are trees of wine, and shrubs . . .

P. 3². (The Divine love and wisdom as seen in a tree.)

107. Heavenly love with its affections, perceptions, etc. compared to a noble tree. Ex.

241. The end of that Church is described by the eating from the tree of knowledge.

—^e. By 'the tree of life' is meant the Lord as to His Divine Providence; and by 'the tree of knowledge' is meant man as to his Own prudence. 313².

275. The Knowledge of evil after the fall is meant by the eating from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil.

297². The light of winter flowing into cold trees.

313². By the eating from the tree of knowledge is signified the appropriation of good and truth, as if these were not from the Lord, but from man; and, as good and truth are the Divine things themselves with man . . . therefore, if man claims these as his own, he must believe that he is 'as God' . . .

332². There is a correspondence of the life of man with the vegetation of a tree. . . Man's infancy is like the tender shoot of a tree sprouting from the seed out of the ground; his childhood and youth are like that shoot growing into a stem with its little branches; the natural truths with which everyone is first imbued are like the leaves with which the branches are covered . . . the things connected with the initiation of man into the marriage of good and truth . . . are like the blossoms which the tree produces in the spring time; spiritual truths are the petals of these flowers; the earliest productions of the spiritual marriage are like the beginnings of the fruit; spiritual goods, which are the goods of charity are like the fruit . . . the procreations of wisdom from love are like the seeds, by which procreations the man becomes like a garden. Man is also described in the Word by 'a tree'; and his wisdom from love, by 'a garden.'

—⁴. Man is indeed a bad tree from the seed; but still there may be a grafting or a budding with shoots taken from the tree of life, whereby the sap drawn from the old root is turned into sap making good fruit.

— The vegetation and regeneration of trees.

R. 89. 'I will give to eat of the tree of life' (Rev. ii.7)=the appropriation of the good of love and of charity from the Lord. 'The tree of life'=the Lord as to the good of love . . . for nothing else is signified by 'the tree of life' in the garden of Eden. (=that he shall be infilled with the good of love and the derivative heavenly joy. E.109.) (=to appropriate heavenly life. E.617¹⁵.)

—². 'A tree' is mentioned in many places; and by it is meant a man of the Church; and, in the universal sense, the Church itself; and by its 'fruit,' the good of life. The reason is that the Lord is the tree of life, from whom is all good in the man of the Church, and in the Church.

122. (Those in good without truths) appear like trees stripped of their leaves, on which hang dry apples left from autumn.

343. 'That the wind should not blow . . . on any tree' (Rev.vii.2)=the influx into the lower parts where the good were conjoined with the evil, withheld by the Lord. (=that the good be not injured . . . with whom there is any perception. E.419,420.)

400. 'The third part of the trees was burnt up' (Rev.viii.7)=that all the affection and perception of truth, which make the man of the Church, perished. . . By 'a tree' is signified man; and, as man is man from the affection which is of the will, and from the perception which is of the understanding, therefore these also are signified by 'a tree.' There is also a correspondence between a man and a tree; and therefore in Heaven there appear paradises of trees, which correspond to the affections and derivative perceptions of the Angels: and in some places in Hell also there are trees, which bear bad fruits, according to the correspondence with the concupiscences and the derivative thoughts of those who are there. (=that the perceptions and the Knowledges of truth and good perished through cupidities originating from evil loves. E.506.)

—². That 'trees' in general=men as to their affections and the derivative perceptions. Ill.

426. 'That they should not hurt . . . any tree' (Rev.ix.4)=the Divine Providence of the Lord that they should not be able to take away . . . any affection and perception of truth and good . . . (=that they should do no harm to any Knowledges of truth and good in the Word. E.545.)

875⁴. A garden seen, in which were olive-trees, vines, fig-trees, laurels, and palm-trees, set in order according to the correspondence.

933. 'In the midst of the street of it and of the river, on this side and on that, was the tree of life, bearing twelve fruits' (Rev.xxii.2)=that in the inmosts of the Truths of doctrine and of the derivative life in the Church, is the Lord in His Divine love, from whom flow forth all the goods which man does apparently as from himself. . . 'The tree of life'=the Lord as to the Divine love

936. For by all the parts of a tree are signified corresponding things in man. . . By the branches are signified the sensuous and natural truths of man; by the leaves, his rational truths; by the flowers, the first-primitive-spiritual truths in the Rational; by the fruits, the goods of love and of charity; and by the seeds, the last and the first things of man.

—². With those who are in the goods of love and at the same time in the truths of wisdom, there appear fruit-bearing trees, luxuriant with beautiful leaves; but with those who are in the truths of some wisdom, and who speak from reason, and are not in the goods of love, there appear trees full of leaves, but without fruits: whereas with those with whom there are neither goods nor truths of wisdom, there do not appear trees, except those stripped of their leaves, as in the time of winter. A man not rational is nothing else than such a tree.

[R.] 951. 'That their Power may be in the tree of life' (ver. 14) = to the end that they may be in the Lord, and the Lord in them, through love, that is, for the Lord's sake. . . For the Lord as to the Divine love is signified by 'the tree of life'; and by 'Power in that tree' is signified Power from the Lord because they are in the Lord and the Lord in them.

M. 13. The (visitors) replied, We see only one tree, (with) fruits as of gold, leaves as of silver edged with emeralds, and beneath the tree little children with their nurses. The Angel said, in an inspired voice, This tree is in the midst of the garden, and is called by us the tree of our Heaven, and by some the tree of life. . . Their eyes were opened, and they saw trees full of fruits of fine flavour, entwined with tendrilled vines, the tops of which trees, together with their fruit, inclined towards the tree of life in the midst. These trees were set in a continuous series, which went outwards and advanced in endless rings or gyres, as of a perpetual spiral. It was a perfect arboreal spiral, in which species followed species continuously, according to the nobleness of the fruits. The beginning of the gyration was at a considerable distance from the tree in the midst, and the intervening space sparkled with a beam of light, which caused the trees of the gyre to shine with a graduated resplendence from the first to the last. The first trees were the most excellent of all, being luxuriant with the choicest fruits, and were called paradisiacal trees, being such as are never seen, because they are not possible, on earth. . . After these came trees of oil; after these, trees of wine; after these, trees of fragrance; and lastly trees of wood, useful for fabrics. Here and there, in this arboreal spiral, there were seats formed of the young shoots of the trees behind. . . In this perpetual arboreal ring there were gates which opened into parterres of flowers. . . (Continued under GARDEN.)

42^e. From the beds of flowers there rose olive-trees, and trees full of oranges.

77^e. He said, These twigs are from a tree native or proper to our Heaven, the sap of which is fragrant with balsam. . . The twigs turned into shining brass, and their tips into gold, a sign that we had been with a nation of the Copper Age.

135. The third subject of discussion was, What is signified by the tree of life; what by the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; and what by the eating from them? . . . Those from the east said, A tree = a man, and its fruit the good of life; hence, by 'the tree of life' is signified a man who lives from God, or God living in a man; and, as love and wisdom, and charity and faith, or good and truth, make the life of God in man, these are signified by 'the tree of life,' and, derivatively, the eternal life of man. The like is signified by 'the tree of life' in Rev. ii. 7; xxii. 2, 14.

—2. By 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil' is signified a man who believes that he lives from himself, and not from God; thus that love and wisdom, charity and faith, that is, good and truth, are, in man, of him, and not of God; and he believes this because he thinks and wills, and speaks and acts, in all likeness and appearance as from himself. . .

—3. By eating from these trees is signified reception and appropriation; by eating from the tree of life, the reception of eternal life; and by eating from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, the reception of condemnation. . . The love of self is the possessor of this tree; and the men who are in the conceit of Own intelligence from this love are these trees.

—4. They made this conclusion: That by 'the tree of life,' and by 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil'; and by 'eating' from them, is signified that life for man is God in him, and that he then has Heaven and eternal life; and that death for man is the persuasion and belief that life for man is not God, but himself, whence he has Hell and eternal death.

316^e. The avenue by which I entered was formed of fruit trees connected together by their branches, which made on each side a continuous arboreal wall.

353^e. Therefore a wife continually draws to herself her husband's conceit of Own intelligence, and extinguishes it with him. . . This has been provided by the Lord, lest the conceit of Own intelligence should so far infatuate the man, as to lead him to believe that he has understanding and wisdom from himself. . . and should thus want to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. . .

—e. To eat of the tree of life, spiritually, is to understand and be wise from the Lord; and to eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, spiritually, is to understand and be wise from one's self.

354^e. At that moment there appeared a tree near the way, and they were told, It is the tree of the knowledge of good and evil; beware lest you eat of it. Yet all three, infatuated with Own intelligence, burned to eat of it. . .

444^e. Thus man himself is the origin of evil; not that this origin was implanted in him from creation; but that he, by turning from God to himself, implanted it in himself. This origin of evil was. . . when the serpent said, 'In the day ye eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, ye shall be as God.' And then, because they turned themselves away from God, and turned themselves to themselves, as to a god, they made in themselves the origin of evil. To eat of that tree = to believe that one knows what is good and evil, and is wise, from one's self, and not from God.

I. 13^e. A man who is affected with the love of wisdom, is like the garden in Eden, in which are two trees, one of life, and the other of the knowledge of good and evil. The (former tree) is the reception of love and wisdom from God; and the (latter tree) is the reception of them from himself. . .

T. 74³. To these is given . . . the fruit of the tree of life for food. But the rest gather round the tree of the knowledge of good and evil . . .

351⁴. Every tree, bush, shrub, etc. is fasciculated into series. Ex.

361². This state of man may be compared to . . . fruit-bearing trees, and the gardens in which they are.

466. That two trees were placed in Eden . . . signifies that free will in spiritual things was given to man. Gen. art. 489^c, Ex.

—². 'The tree of life' = the Lord in man, and man in the Lord; 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil' = man not in the Lord, but in his proprium, as is he who believes that he does all things from himself, even what is good; and eating from this tree = the appropriation of what is evil.

468. That 'a tree' = man. Ill.

504⁶. A tree cannot receive anything . . . through its roots, unless it grows warm in each of its fibres; nor can the elements rise up through the root, unless its several fibres give out heat . . .

520². By 'the tree of life' is described the looking of that Church to the Lord who was to come; and by 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil,' its looking to self, and not to the Lord. . . These trees are in every man, and their being said to be placed in a garden, = man's free will in turning to the Lord, or in turning from Him.

537². Such are like trees which bear good fruit, but only a few; and they are also like trees which bear noble fruit, but small.

584. There is a correspondence of the regeneration of man with all things in the vegetable kingdom, and therefore, in the Word, man is described by 'a tree'; his truth, by 'the seed'; and his good, by 'the fruit.'

—². That an evil tree can be as it were generated anew, and afterwards bear good fruit and good seed, is evident from graftings . . .

585. In trees, etc. there are not two sexes . . . all are masculine. Ex.

—². The root is a kind of heart; from this it emits sap, like blood, and so makes as it were a body provided with limbs . . . The leaves are for lungs; for as the heart without the lungs does not produce motion and sensation . . . so without leaves the root does not make a tree or shrub vegetate. The blossoms . . . are means for straining the sap, which is its blood, and of separating its grosser from its purer parts, and, for the influx of these, for forming in their bosom a new little stem, through which the strained sap may inflow, and so commence and successively form the fruit, which may be compared to a testicle, in which the seeds are perfected. The vegetative soul, which reigns inmosty in every particle of the sap—that is, its prolific essence—is from the heat of the Spiritual World . . .

586. A tree cannot grow into a tree in one day . . .

600. Compared to a beautiful tree transplanted into filthy ground . . .

663. The Angels said, 'The tree of the knowledge of good and evil' = the belief that intelligence and wisdom are from man; and 'the tree of life' = that (they) are from God . . .

D. Min. 4739. Such are like the excrescences on trees.

E. 109². The reason 'the tree of life' = the good of love and the derivative heavenly joy, is that 'trees' = such things as are with man in his interiors . . . 'boughs' and 'leaves,' those which are of the Knowledges of truth and good; and 'fruits,' the goods of life themselves. This signification of trees originates in the Spiritual World; for trees of every kind are seen there in correspondence with the interiors of the Angels and Spirits . . . beautiful and fruit-bearing trees correspond to the interiors of those who are in the good of love and the derivative wisdom; trees less (so) to those who are in the good of faith; trees bearing leaves only, without fruits, to those who are only in the Knowledges of truth; and foul trees, with noxious fruits, to those who are in Knowledges and evil of life. But with those who are not in Knowledges and who are in evil of life, no trees appear.

—³. Hence it is that 'trees' are so often mentioned in the Word . . . —⁴, Ill.

—¹. 'The tree of knowledge' = the delight of Knowledges apart from any other use than to be accounted learned . . .

131²⁰. 'The tree of life' (Gen. iii.) = celestial love, which is love to the Lord. (= the Divine which is from the Lord in the higher Heavens, which is the good of love and of charity, and the derivative heavenly joy. 277³.)

411²⁶. 'Every green tree'=every falsity which occurs. For 'a tree'=Knowledges and perceptions, here, those of what is false.

420². That 'a tree,' in general, = perception and Knowledge, is derived from the fact that 'a garden'=intelligence, and all intelligence is according to Knowledges and the perception of them. Hence it is that each species of trees=something of knowledge and intelligence.

— As 'a tree,' in general, = perception and Knowledge, it therefore also=the interiors which are of the mind with man, and also the whole man; for a man is such as are the interiors of his mind; and these are such as is the perception from Knowledges.

430⁷. 'The tree of life' (Rev.xxii.)=the perception from the Lord of truth from good.

481². 'He shall be like a tree planted by the waters . . .' (Jer.xvii.7). A man who suffers himself to be led by the Lord is compared to 'a tree,' and to its growth and fructification, because 'a tree,' in the Word,=the Knowledge and perception of truth and good, consequently a man in whom these are. 'A tree planted by the waters'=a man with whom there are truths from the Lord. (The rest of the passage ex.) 518¹².

581². 'To eat of the tree of knowledge'=to reason from sensuous scientifics about Divine things. (=to appropriate the knowledge of natural things; by means of which it is not allowable to enter into the celestial and spiritual things which are of Heaven and the Church; consequently not to enter from the natural man into the spiritual one; which is the inverted way, and therefore does not lead to wisdom, but destroys it. Fully ex. E.617¹⁶.)

629⁸. 'Many trees on the bank of the river, on this side and on that' (Ezek.xlvii.7)=the Knowledges of truth and good, and also perceptions.

654¹³. 'All the trees of Eden in the garden of God'=perceptions of truth from celestial good, whence is wisdom.

— 'Trees'=perceptions, where the celestial man is treated of; and Knowledges, where the spiritual man is treated of.

— 'The trees of Eden'=the Knowledges of good from the Word . . .

734³. For trees in gardens=perceptions and Knowledges of truth.

739⁶. For the two trees placed in the midst of the garden=perception from the Lord and perception from the world, which (latter) is in itself only Knowledge and knowledge.

—⁷. The men of the Most Ancient Church were by no means forbidden to acquire Knowledges of good and evil from Heaven . . . or from the world . . . But they were forbidden to view these Knowledges by the posterior way . . . which is done when conclusions are drawn from them respecting heavenly things . . . Such did those men become when they began to love worldly things more than heavenly ones, and to glory in their own wisdom; from this their posterity became sensuous, and then their Sensuous ('the serpent') seduced them. . . This, therefore, is what is signified by 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil' of which they were forbidden to eat. —⁸. C.204.

—⁸. That they were permitted to acquire Knowledges from the world, and to view them by the prior way, is signified by, 'Out of the ground Jehovah God made to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight and good for food'; for 'trees'=Knowledges and perceptions.

— Knowledges of good and evil from the Lord, from which is wisdom; and Knowledges of good and evil from the world, from which is knowledge, were represented by 'the tree of lives,' and by 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil,' in the midst of the garden.

828^e. A tree=perception.

942². When a man has been admitted into Heaven . . . he is like a tree growing from its seed. His first budding forth is from enlightenment; his blossoming before the fruit is from the affection of truth; the putting forth of the fruit thence is from the affection of good; the multiplication of itself again into trees is from the affection of being fruitful.

988⁶. Families would then be like fruit-bearing trees of various species, from which would come as many gardens . . . This is said because trees=the men of the Church.

1084⁶. A tree corresponds to man; the tree, to man himself; the wood, to his good; the leaves, to his truths; and the fruits, to his uses.

1100⁸. 'A tree from a grain of mustard seed'=a man of the Church, and also a Church, beginning from a very little spiritual good through truth.

Coro. 27. The reason the two trees were placed in the garden . . . was that 'the tree of life'=the Lord, in whom and from whom is the life of heavenly love and of wisdom, which, in itself, is eternal life; and 'the tree of the knowledge of good and evil'=man, in whom is the life of infernal love, and the derivative insanity in the things of the Church, which life, regarded in itself, is eternal death. That it was allowable to eat of every tree of the garden except the tree of knowledge = free will in spiritual things . . .

—². (This signification of 'a garden') is from the correspondence of a tree with man. For a tree, like man, is conceived from seed; it is pushed out of the womb of the earth as man is from that of his mother; in like manner does it grow on high, and propagate itself into branches as into members; in like manner does it clothe itself with leaves, and adorn itself with blossoms, as a man does with natural and spiritual truths; and it also in like manner produces fruits, as a man does the goods of use. Hence it is that man is so frequently likened to a tree in the Word, and, derivatively, the Church to a garden. III.

—³. In some of the gardens in Heaven are seen trees of life in the middle parts, and trees of the knowledge of good and evil at the boundaries, as a sign that they are in free will in spiritual things.

29. By this 'tree' (of which they ate, Gen.iii.) is signified the natural man separated from the spiritual . . .

—². No one can ascend into . . . the spiritual mind, unless he eats of the trees of life in the garden of God. Ex.

—³. (Otherwise) man does what is a mere image of good, within which there is evil, because there is merit; and this is to eat of the trees of the knowledge of good and evil . . . Moreover, those eat of (these) trees who love themselves and the world above all things; and those eat of the trees of life who love God above all things, and the neighbour as themselves. Those also eat of the trees of knowledge . . . who hatch canons for the Church from their Own intelligence, and afterwards confirm them by the Word; and those eat of the trees of life who procure canons for the Church through the Word, and afterwards confirm them by intelligence. Those, again, eat of the trees of knowledge . . . who teach truths from the Word, and live evilly; and those eat of the trees of life who live well, and teach from the Word. Universally, all those eat of the trees of knowledge . . . who deny the Divinity of the Lord and the holiness of the Word, because the Lord is the tree of life, and the Word, from whom the Church is 'a garden in Eden on the east.'

As the Israelitish people represented the Lord's Kingdom... and thus heavenly order, it was commanded that they should be distinguished according to tribes, and according to families, and according to the houses of their fathers (Num.xxvi.); and also that according to this order they should measure out the camp... and should likewise journey according to the same order (Num.ii.2,34).

3858. The twelve tribes... involve so many universal divisions of faith and love... each tribe involving some distinct universal... In general, the twelve tribes signified all things of the doctrine of truth and good... for these, that is, truth and good, constitute the Lord's Kingdom... Fully ill.

3863. The twelve tribes=all things of truth and good, or of faith and love, thus all things of the Church; and each tribe, some universal; thus the twelve tribes, the twelve universals, which comprehend and include in them all things whatever which belong to the Church; and, in the universal sense, to the Lord's Kingdom. The universal which Reuben signifies, is faith. Ex.

3913. For the twelve sons of Jacob=the twelve general or cardinal things by means of which man is initiated into what is spiritual and celestial, while he is being regenerated. For, when man is being regenerated... he is led by the Lord through many states. —¹¹. Two arcana concerning the twelve tribes : 1. That their arrangements in order represented those of the angelic Societies ; whence it is that they represented all things of the Church . . . 2. That the representation of Heaven and the Church is according to the order in which they are mentioned ; and the first name, or tribe, is the index by which are determined the things which follow, consequently the things of Heaven and the Church, with variety. Fully ex. and ill.

433²³. For eleven of the tribes had been scattered, and had become gentiles . . .

438. For the twelve tribes, taken together, represented Heaven and the Church ; and thence they=them in the Word ; and each tribe represented and thence signifies some universal thing of the Church which makes Heaven and the Church.

—². The first three tribes mean those received into the Third Heaven . . . the next three tribes mean those received into the Second Heaven . . . the next three tribes mean those received into the First Heaven . . . and the last three tribes mean the reception of all these into the three Heavens by the Lord.

573⁴. The tribes were called 'armies,' because the twelve tribes, taken together, represented all the truths and goods of the Church ; and each tribe, some universal essential of it.

2218. The Lord's perception from the Divine then, was first concerning the Divine Trine . . .

2329^d. They who are truly men of the Church . . . know and acknowledge a Trine; but still they humble themselves before the Lord, and adore Him alone, because they know that there is no access to the Divine Itself, called 'the Father,' except through the Son; and that all the Holy . . . proceeds from Him.

—⁷. That the whole Trine is in the Lord, is known in the Christian world; but still, in the other life, the Lord is little thought of . . .

4766². If this Divine truth, that the Lord's Human is Divine, is not received, it necessarily follows that a Trine is to be adored, and not one . . . Is the Church anything where a Trine is adored . . . that is, where three are worshipped equally?

—³. But if the Lord alone, in whom is the perfect Trine, is adored . . . then there is the Christian Church. Ill.

7086. For in the Lord is the Trinity.

9303^d. The ideas of the Angels concerning the Trine, etc. differ altogether from those of the men of the Church, because the ideas of (the former) are founded upon One, whereas those of (the latter) are founded upon three. The Angels think that there is one God, and He the Lord, and that the Human is the Divine Itself in a form, and that the Holy which proceeds from Him is the Holy Spirit; thus that there is a Trine, but still a One. (This ex. by the Trine which exists in an Angel.)

— . The three Heavens are a one in ultimates . . . This originates from the Divine itself, in which there is a Trine; namely, the Divine Itself, the Divine Human, and the Divine which proceeds, and these are a one. This Divine Trine and One itself is the Lord.

10617. As the Divine of the Lord is a Trine, namely, the Divine Itself, called 'the Father'; the Divine Human, called 'the Son'; and the proceeding Divine, called 'the Holy Spirit,' it is therefore said here, 'Jehovah, Jehovah, God.' Ex.

This Trine in the Lord is then the Divine Itself, called 'the Father': the Divine Human, called 'the Son'; and the proceeding Divine, called 'the Holy Spirit.'

10831. That the Trine is in the Lord, namely, the Divine Itself, the Divine Human, and the proceeding Divine, is an arcanum from Heaven, and is for those who will be in the Holy Jerusalem. E.224.

N. 306. That the Trine is in the Lord. (Refs. to passages.)

L. 46². The reason the Lord said they were to baptize 'into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit,' is that the Trine, or Trinity, is in the Lord; for it is the Divine called 'the Father,' the Divine Human called 'the Son,' and the proceeding Divine called 'the Holy Spirit.' Ex. W.146.

—³. That the Trine is in the Lord may be illustrated by comparison with an Angel; for he has soul and body, and also proceeding: that which proceeds from him is himself outside of him.

55 That the doctrine of the Athanasian faith agrees with the truth, provided only that by a Trinity of Persons is meant a Trinity of Person, which is in the Lord. Gen.art. R.961^e.

— . The reason Christians have acknowledged three Divine Persons, and thus as it were three Gods, was that there is a Trine in the Lord, and one is called 'the Father,' the second, 'the Son,' and the third 'the Holy Spirit'; and this Trine is mentioned in the Word in a distinct and separate manner, as are also the soul and body and that which proceeds from them, which yet are one. Ex.

57. The Trinity of Person is as follows: That the Divine of the Lord is the Father, the Divine Human the Son, and the proceeding Divine the Holy Spirit. When this Trinity is understood, then man can think of one God, and can also say One God. Otherwise he cannot but think of three Gods, (as) was seen by Athanasius, and therefore the following words were inserted . . . As we are compelled by the Christian verity to acknowledge every person by himself to be God and Lord; so are we forbidden by the Catholic religion to say there are three Gods or three Lords; (which amounts to this: that we must think of three Gods, but must say there is only one.) T.172². E.1103². 1107⁴.

S. 28. Consequently, in every complete Thing there is a trine, which is called first, middle, and last; also end, cause, and effect; and also esse, fieri, and existere.

—c. (Thus) in the ultimate, which is the trine, is the whole, because in it the prior things are together.

F. 35. It is a universal of faith that God is one in Person and in Essence, in whom is the Trinity, and that the Lord is that God. R.67. B.116. T.2.

W. 190. All things which come forth in the world, of which trinal dimension is predicated, or which are called composite, consist of discrete degrees. Examps.

209. In every Thing of which anything can be predicated there is a trine, which is called end, cause, and effect, and these three are related together according to degrees of height.

P. 123². That there is a Trine in one God can be comprehended in the same way as is comprehended the soul and body in an Angel or a man, and the proceeding of life from them; and, as this Trine exists solely in the Lord, it follows that conjunction must be with Him.

R. 294². They who had confirmed themselves in a Trinity of Persons . . . could not say One God. T.111.

623. The beginning of the Christian Heaven, which acknowledges one God in whom is the Trinity, and that the Lord is He. Sig. and Ex.

—'. 'God and the Lamb'=the Lord as to the Divine Itself a quo, and as to the Divine Human, and also as to the proceeding Divine; thus the one God in whom is the Trinity.

S20. In the spiritual sense of the Word it appears . . . that the Lord Himself is the one God, in whom is the Trinity; thus the only God of Heaven and earth.

875⁷. That nothing exists complete and perfect unless it is a trine, is taught also by geometry. Ex.

961⁶. The Angels perceived in my thought the common ideas about a Trinity of Persons in unity, and their unity in Trinity. (Fully quoted under SWEDENBORG.)

962¹². From the deliberations in this Council we have clearly seen . . . that in our Lord Jesus Christ is the Divine Trinity, which is, the Divine a quo called 'the Father,' the Divine Human called 'the Son,' and the proceeding Divine called 'the Holy Spirit.' Thus there is One God in the Church.

M. 24^o. (The angelic priest) spoke to them about the Divine Trinity: that it is in Jesus Christ, in whom dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily.

S2². That there is one God, in whom is the Divine Trinity, and that He is the Lord Jesus Christ, demonstrated. B.43. 117³. T.3.

B. 3. The three creeds which teach a Trinity.

32. That there is a Divine Trinity. Ill.

39. That the dogmas of that theology appear to be erroneous, after the idea of a Trinity of Persons and thence of three Gods has been rejected; and the idea of one God, in whom is the Divine Trinity, has been received in its place. Ex.

T. 4^o. When human reason is convinced from the Word and the derivative light, that there is a Divine Trinity, and that this is in the Lord God the Saviour Jesus Christ; like the soul, body, and proceeding in man.

23^o. The man who worships one God, in whom is the Divine Trinity, and who is thus one Person, becomes more and more alive, and an Angel man.

108². Henceforth all piety which is determined to a divided Trinity, and not to a conjoined one (is rejected).

138. All in holy orders who have cherished any just idea about the Lord our Saviour, on their entrance into the Spiritual World . . . are first instructed about the Divine Trinity . . .

163. On the Divine Trinity. Chapter.

—'. It is necessary to treat of the Divine Trinity, which is known in the Christian world, and yet is unknown—for by this alone can a just idea of God be obtained. Ex.

164. That there is a Divine Trinity, which is the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. Ill.

165. There is no other way (to understand these passages concerning the Trinity) than to go to the Lord God the Saviour, and read the Word under His auspices . . . and then the man will be enlightened . . . But if you do not go to the Lord, though you read the Word a thousand times, and see therein a Divine Trinity, and Unity also, you will never understand but that there are three Divine Persons . . . thus three Gods.

166–169. The Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are the three essentials of the one God, which make one, as the soul, body, and operation in man. Ex. . . The soul of the Saviour was from Jehovah the Father . . . the Son whom Mary brought forth is the body of that Divine soul . . . and the operations constitute the third essential. . . That the three essentials, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, are one in the Lord, like the soul, body, and operation in man, is very evident from the Lord's words. Ill. . . When it is understood that the Divine of the Father which makes the Soul, and the Divine of the Son which makes the Body, and the Divine of the Holy Spirit, or the proceeding Divine, which makes the Operation, are the three essentials of the one God, it falls within the understanding. . . But if these three Divine essentials are called Persons, and to each is attributed His own property; as imputation to the Father, mediation to the Son, and operation to the Holy Spirit, the Divine essence becomes divided. . . Who, then, cannot have a perception of the Trinity in the Lord from the trinity in every man? Ex. . . Human reason is at this day bound in relation to the Divine Trinity . . . when yet the Divine Trinity in the minds of the men of the Church ought to shine like a lamp; since God, in His Trinity, and in the Unity of it, is the all in all the sanctities of Heaven and the Church.

170. That before the world was created there was not this Trinity; but that after the world was created, when God became incarnate, it was provided and made; and, then, in the Lord God the Redeemer and Saviour Jesus Christ. Ex. Can. Holy Spirit i.6.

— The Divine Trinity as recognised in the Christian Church at this day. Ex. . . This is a Trinity of three Gods, and therefore no Divine Trinity. But the Trinity . . . which was made after God became incarnate . . . is a Divine Trinity, because it is of one God.

—². That this Divine Trinity is in the Lord . . . is because the three essentials of one God, which make one essence, are in Him. That in Him is all the fulness of the Godhead. Ill.

171. The Trinity which the present Christian Church has embraced, stated. This Trinity can be conceived of only as a triarchy. (By comparisons.)

172. That a Trinity of Divine Persons from eternity . . . in the ideas of thought is a Trinity of Gods; and that this cannot be abolished by the oral confession of one God. Gen.art.

— That no other Trinity than a Trinity of Gods was understood by those at the Nicene Council (is evident from the Athanasian Creed). And that . . . no other than a Trinity of Gods is understood in the Christian world, is the consequence. Ex. . . But if they had said that the Father has the Divine essence, the Son the Divine essence, and the Holy Spirit the Divine essence, yet that there are not three Divine essences, but that the essence is one and indivisible, then this mystery would be explicable; that is to say when by the Father is understood the Divine a quo; by the Son the Divine Human thence; and by the Holy Spirit the proceeding Divine . . . Or if by the Divine of the Father the like is understood as by the soul in man, by the Divine Human the like as by the body of that soul, and by the Holy Spirit the like as by the operation which proceeds from both . . .

173³. In Heaven no one can say Trinity of Persons each of whom is by Himself God . . .

174. That a Trinity of Persons was unknown in the Apostolic Church; but was first broached by the Nicene Council; and from that was introduced into the Roman Catholic Church; and from this into the Churches which were separated from it. Gen.art.

177. That from the Nicene and Athanasian Trinity a faith arose which had perverted the whole Christian Church. Gen.art. 179.

184. That a Trinity of Gods is fixed in the minds of Christians, although from shame they deny it. Ex.

—^e. Yet the Divine Trinity is like a pearl of great price; but, when divided into Persons, it is like the pearl divided into three parts.

185³. A tablet (in the temple of the boreal Spirits) with the inscription: The Divine Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, who are one God essentially, but three personally.

— The priest then began a sermon on the Divine Trinity . . .

451. All charity which is not conjoined with faith in one God, in whom is the Divine Trinity, is spurious . . . And so is the charity of many other heresies, such as that of those who deny the Trinity, and therefore approach God the Father only, or the Holy Spirit only, or both, leaving out God the Saviour.

D. 4442. On a sublime idea of the Lord. . . I was let into the sublime idea that (the Divine, the Human, and the Holy of the Lord) are one, which idea cannot be described, being possible only in the other life . . . The Divine was for the celestial; the Human for the rest who are beneath, also Divine, but applicable to them; the proceeding Holy was all the derivative sphere.

5241. The Angels told (the Mohammedans) that in Heaven . . . the Trine which is called the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit is in one Person, namely, in the Lord; and that in Him there is a Trine as there is in an Angel . . . the esse of life, which is the inmost and in the world is called the soul from the father; the existere of life, which appears in the human form; and the derivative proceeding, which is the sphere of affection or love by which the Angel is perceived by others at a distance. From this an idea may be had about the Trine in the Lord—the inmost which is the esse of life is what is called the Father; the existere of life is the Human called the Son; and the proceeding is what is called the Holy Spirit. 5513a². 5600². J.(Post.)89.

D. Min. 4623. The most arcane mysteries have their idea remaining after death; for instance, the Trinity. Christians can have no other idea than that of three Gods . . . and it is therefore a matter of the greatest labour to bring back the ideas of Christians to one God, namely, to the Lord, in whom is the whole perfect Trine.

E. 859^e. That only those in truths from good . . . could acknowledge at heart that the Lord is the only God, and that the Trinity is in Him.

956². (Thus) those who are of the Church where the Word is, if they shun evils as sins, see, from the light of Heaven in which they then are . . . the Trine in the Lord.

1025³. In the celestial sense, this commandment involves that the Lord alone is to be acknowledged, and the Trine in Him; namely, the Divine Itself from eternity which is meant by 'the Father'; the Divine Human born in time, which is meant by 'the Son of God'; and the Divine which proceeds from both, which is meant by 'the Holy Spirit.'

1082³. This trine, namely, end, cause, and effect, exists from creation in each Heaven.

1083². As there is a trine, one within another, in every particular of the Word, and this trine is like that of effect, cause, and end, it follows that there are three senses in the Word.

1097². Thought about God the Creator, the Redeemer, and the Enlightener, opens Heaven; for this is the Trine of the one and true God.

[E. 1097]³. Thought about God as a Man, in whom is the Divine Trine, namely, that called the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, alone opens Heaven.

1102. As to the doctrine of the Trinity which was written by Athanasius . . . This doctrine leaves a clear idea that there are . . . three unanimous Gods, but an obscure idea that there is one God. Ex. 1103, Ex. 1106².

1106⁴. There is a Trinity in God, and also a Unity. Ex. . . The Unity in which there is a Trinity, or the one God in whom there is a Trine, does not exist in the Divine called the Father, nor in the Divine called the Holy Spirit, but in the Lord alone. In the Lord alone there is a Trine, namely, the Divine called the Father, the Divine Human called the Son, and the proceeding Divine called the Holy Spirit; and this Trine is One because it is of one Person, and may be called a Trine. In what follows, the agreement with this of all things of the Athanasian doctrine will be seen. 1107², Ex. Ath. 80. 110. 166.

1109². It was of the Divine Providence that everything of the Athanasian doctrine respecting the Trinity and respecting the Lord, is the Truth . . . when, instead of three Persons, there is understood one Person in whom is the Trinity . . . For, at that time, unless they had received a Trinity of Persons, they would have become either Arians or Socinians. Ex.

1111². That there is in the Lord a Trine—the Divine Itself called the Father, the Divine Human called the Son, and the proceeding Divine called the Holy Spirit—shown from the Word, from the Divine essence, and from Heaven.

—³. One Divine by itself is not possible; there must be a Trine. This Trine is esse, existere, and procedere. Ex.

—⁴. The Divine Trine . . . in Heaven, is as follows. The Divine called the Father, and the Divine Human called the Son, appear before the Angels as a Sun; and the derivative proceeding Divine, as light united to heat; the light is Divine truth, and the heat Divine good. Thus the Divine called the Father is the Divine Esse; the Divine Human called the Son is the Divine Existere from that Esse; and the Divine called the Holy Spirit is the Divine Procedere from the Divine Existere and from the Divine Esse. This Trine is the Lord in Heaven. His Divine love is what appears there as a Sun.

1112³. What Trine had God before the Lord assumed the Human? . . . God, then, was in like manner a Man, and had a Divine, a Divine Human, and a proceeding Divine; that is, a Divine Esse, a Divine Existere, and a Divine Procedere . . . but the Divine Human was not then Divine down to ultimates. Ex.

Ath. 14. There is therefore a Trinity, or Trine, or Trinne, in the Lord: the Divine itself . . . the Divine Human . . . and the proceeding Divine. 35.

169. If you think that the substance or essence is what is called Person, there necessarily results one Person and the Trine in that; thus Unity in Trinity and Trinity in Unity.

De Just. 61. On the Trinity of Persons from the Athanasian Creed, before Calvin.

Can. Holy Spirit i. 10. Enlightened reason, by means of Holy Scripture, perceives . . . that there is a Trinity of Person, which is a Trinity of God; but not a Trinity of Persons, because this is a Trinity of Gods.

Part v. On the Divine Trinity.

1. The idea of the common people about the Divine Trinity, is that God the Father sits on high, with His Son at His right hand, and they send the Holy Spirit to men.

2. The idea of the clergy about the Trinity, is that there are three Persons, each of whom is God and Lord, and that the three have one and the same essence.

3. The idea of the wise among the clergy, is that there are three communicable properties and qualities, and that the incommunicable ones are meant by the three Persons.

5. From a Trinity of Persons there inevitably follows a Trinity of Gods.

6. If God is one, a Trinity of God is necessary, and thus a Trinity of Person. 7.

i. That there is a Divine Trinity; namely, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. Chapter.

3. The Trinity of God could not be known except from revelation. Ex.

4. The Trinity of God did not exist actually until the Son of God . . . had been born; and not before was there a Unity in Trinity, and a Trinity in Unity.

5. The salvation of the human race depends upon the Trinity of God, which is at the same time the Unity.

6. By a Trinity of God which is at the same time a Unity is meant the Divine Trinity in one Person.

7. The Lord . . . taught that there is a Divine Trinity. III.

ii. 1. The Divine Trinity . . . cannot possibly be comprehended by anyone, except as the soul, body, and proceeding operation with man; consequently, except the Divine Itself called the Father is the soul; the Human called the Son is the body of the soul; and the Holy Spirit is the proceeding operation.

3. Therefore he who Knows the union of the soul and the body, and the derivative operation, Knows the Trinity and at the same time the Unity of God, in a kind of shadow. (Fully ex.)

iii. That before the world was created there was no Trinity of God. Chapter.

3^o. From this it follows that a Trinity from eternity was not a real Trinity, but an ideal one; and still more so a Trinity of Persons. 5, Ex.

iv. That the Trinity of God was made after the world was created; and, actually, in the fulness of time; and, then, in God Incarnate . . .

v. That the Trinity of Persons in the Divinity is from the Nicene Council, and was thence in the Catholic Church, and after it: it is therefore to be called the Nicene Trinity. But that the Trinity of God in one Person, the Lord God the Saviour, is from Christ Himself, and was thence in the Apostolic Church; and it is therefore to be called the Christian Trinity. And that this Trinity of God is the Trinity of the New Church. Chapter.

4. From these three Creeds it is evident that two Trinities have been handed down: one which existed before the world was created . . . in the Nicene and Athanasian Creeds, and one which existed after it, in the Apostolic Creed . . .

5. These two Trinities differ as much from each other as do the evening and the morning . . .

6. That the Divine Trinity is in the Lord God the Saviour Jesus Christ is taught by Himself. III.

viii. That the confirmation of a Trinity of Persons, each of whom is God from eternity . . . has falsified the whole Word. Chapter.

Coro. 17. It is known that for anything to be perfect there must be a trine in just order, one under another, and an intercedent communication, and that this trine must make a one . . . Such a trine is man (consisting of head, body, and feet): Every kingdom imitates a man in this respect (consisting of king, officials, and country people). In like manner in the Church, a primus infulatus, leaders of the parish, and glauens under them.

—². As every perfect thing must be a trine, in order that it may be a one [and] be held together in coherence, therefore each world . . . consists of three atmospheres . . .

39. As every Church is trinal, celestial, spiritual, and natural . . .

49. It was the Lord our Saviour who appeared to Abraham in His Divine Trinity, which was represented by the three Angels; for the Lord said, 'Abraham rejoiced to see My day . . . ' Further ex.

Inv. 53. When the Divine Trinity is believed to be divided into three Persons, how can the metaphysical term Essence make one out of the three? when the properties of each Person are diverse . . .

Q. iii. Was there not always a Trinity in the Divine nature, to be understood in this manner: namely, Divine Love, Divine Wisdom, and the Quickening Spirit, or Holy Proceeding? Answer. The Divine Trinity in one Person is to be understood as soul, body, and proceeding operation, which together constitute one essence, for the one is from the other, consequently the one belongs to the other. There is a similar Trinity in every individual man, which together constitutes one person, namely, the soul, body, and proceeding operation. But in man this trinity is finite . . . whereas in the Lord the Trinity is infinite, and thus Divine, for the Lord is life itself even with respect to His Human.

vii. May not the Trinity be properly said to be one and the same Lord under three characters, distinctions of office, or relations towards man; namely, as Creator, Redeemer, and Sanctifier . . .? Answer. The most holy Trinity in one Person is to be apprehended as the Divine Esse, the Divine Human, and the Divine Proceeding, and thus as soul, body, and the operation thence proceeding . . . As productions from these, follow in their order, creation, redemption, and regeneration; for creation is the attribute of the Divine Esse; redemption is the attribute of the Divine Human from the Divine Esse; and regeneration is the attribute of the Holy Spirit . . .

3934. 'A troop cometh' (Gen.xxx.11)=in the supreme sense, Omnipotence and Omniscience; in the internal sense, the good of faith; in the external, works. For 'a troop,' here, is a multitude; and, when a multitude is predicated of the Lord's Divine, it is an infinite multitude, which is nothing but Omnipotence and Omniscience... That 'a troop'=the good of faith, is from correspondence; for the good of charity corresponds to the Lord's Divine Omnipotence, and the truth of faith to His Omniscience. That 'a troop'=works, is because these correspond to the good of faith; for the good of faith produces works.

(Rev.xviii.22) has relation to celestial affections. Ex. (=the affection of celestial truth and good. —.) E.1185.

E. 273^e. 'The voice of a trumpet'=Divine truth as to revelation.

357. 'He shall sound with the trumpet' (Zech.ix.14)=a manifest perception of good.

417¹⁰. 'A day of the trumpet and of sounding' (Zeph. i.16)=spiritual combat, which is against falsities and evils.

448¹⁵. 'Sound with the trumpet' (Ps.lxxxii.2)=worship.

449⁷. 'To sound the trumpet' (Jer.vi.1)=combat against that Church from the truths which are from good.

502⁸. 'The sound of the trumpet'=Divine truth making glad the heart. Ill.

—⁹. 'To sound with the trumpet' (Zech.ix.14)=to disperse by means of Divine truth.

—¹⁰. As the evil, where gathered together in the Spiritual World, are, by the influx of Divine good and Divine truth, deprived of the truths and goods which they have simulated in externals, and are let into the evils and falsities which they have cherished within, and are thus separated from the good and cast into the Hells; and as, when this is done, there is heard by those at a distance as it were trumpets-buccinae et tubae-sounding, it was therefore commanded among the sons of Israel that they should sound with the trumpets-tubis-for battle. Ill.

654²³. Convocation to the Church by the Lord, is signified by, 'In that day a great trumpet shall be sounded' (Is.xxvii.13). 741¹⁰.

681. 'Trumpet-tuba et buccina'=Divine truth to be revealed, or which has been revealed.

700¹⁶. The sounding of the trumpets by the priests (at Jericho)=the preaching of Divine truth from Divine good. See A.8815².

A. 4060⁸. 'He shall send forth His Angels with a trumpet and a great voice' (Matt.xxiv.31)=choice by the influx of holy good and of holy truth from the Lord through the Angels. . . 'A trumpet,' and 'a great voice,' =evangelization. E.418⁵.

C. J. 28. (At the Last Judgment) the Lord was seen in a white cloud with Angels, and a sound was heard thence as of trumpets, which was a sign representative of the protection of the Angels of Heaven by the Lord, and of the gathering together of the good from every direction.

R. 37. 'I heard behind me a great voice as of a trumpet' (Rev.i.10)=manifest perception of Divine truth revealed from Heaven. . . It was heard as a trumpet, because, when the Divine truth descends from Heaven, it is sometimes so heard by the Angels of the Ultimate Heaven, and is then manifestly perceived. E.55.

226. 'A voice as of a trumpet speaking with me' (Rev.iv.1)=Divine influx . . . and manifest perception.

(= what is clear and manifest ; for 'a trumpet'= Divine truth manifested and revealed from Heaven. This voice was heard 'as a trumpet speaking,' because it was clearly and manifestly perceived by the Angels. E.262.)

[R.] 391. 'There were given unto them seven trumpets' (Rev. viii. 2) = the exploration and disclosure of the state of the Church and of the derivative life of those who are in faith alone. By 'trumpets' is here signified the same as by 'sounding,' because they sounded with them ; and by 'to sound trumpets' is signified to call together upon solemn occasions, which were various ; here, to explore and disclose the quality of those who are in faith alone, and thus the quality of those who are of the Church of the Reformed at this day. (=influx from them, and the consequent changes of state, and separations. Ex. E.489².) R. 397. 416. 443. E.500.

M. 2. I saw an Angel . . . who had a trumpet in his hand and at his mouth, which he sounded towards the north, the west, and the south. (The effect.)

10. The Angel said, I will sound the trumpet, and hither will come those who have been most renowned for wisdom . . .

42. There was heard from Heaven a voice as of a trumpet, saying . . .

T. 665. One of the elect took a trumpet, and sounded it towards the south, the north, the east, and the west. (The effect.)

E. 55. The reason 'a trumpet-tuba seu buccina'= Divine truth to be revealed from Heaven, is that sometimes Divine truth is so heard when it flows down from the Lord through the Heavens with man ; for it is increased in the descent. Ill. 130⁵.

502. 'To sound with the trumpet'=influx of Divine truth from Heaven, because when Divine truth flows down from Heaven, it is sometimes heard as the sound of a trumpet-buccinae, and as the clang of a trumpet ; and to those who stand below there appear as it were Angels having trumpets.

—³. That 'to sound with trumpets-tubis et buccinis'=the revelation of Divine truth, and the manifestation of it. Ill. (And the consequent changes in the state of the Church. —^e. 531.)

5 M. 19. The trumpets seen in the hands and at the mouths of the Angels, were representations of their speech among themselves from inspiration.

Trustworthy. Fidis.

A. 2982². It is said that the faith itself which saves, is trust ; but this trust is never possible except in the good of life. Without the good of life there is no reception ; and where there is no reception there is no trust, except at some times a certain apparent trust, in sufferings . . . But with those in evil of life, when the crisis is past, that fallacious trust completely vanishes ; for there is a trust even with the evil. But whoever wants to know the quality of his trust, let him explore in himself the affections, and ends, and also the practices of his life.

3451⁴. For when with such there is confidence or trust in the Lord, which they call faith itself, they are then in the affection of love to the Lord, consequently in good as to the life.

3868^e. Few know that faith is trust and confidence ; and still fewer know that trust or confidence is from charity, and is not possible with anyone who has not lived the life of charity.

8240. 'They believed'=faith and trust . . . for he who has faith has trust also. Trust is of love through faith ; consequently, trust in the Lord is possible only with those who are in love to the Lord and towards the neighbour, because with others there is no faith.

8478². Those have care for the morrow . . . who do not trust in the Divine, but in themselves. Des.

—³. It is quite different with those who trust in the Divine ; these, although they have care for the morrow, still have it not ; for they do not think of the morrow with solicitude, still less with anxiety : they are of unruffled mind whether they enjoy the things they desire, or not, neither do they grieve at loss ; they are content with their lot ; if they become rich they do not set their heart on riches ; if they are exalted to honours, they do not regard themselves as more worthy than others ; if they become poor they are not made sad ; if they are low in rank they are not dejected in mind ; they know that with those who trust in the Divine, all things follow on to a happy state in eternity ; and that the things which befall them in time are conducive to that. (Continued under PROVIDE.)

8480³. Those who trust in the Lord continually receive what is good from Him ; for whatever happens to them, whether it appears prosperous or not, is still good, for it conduces as a means to their eternal happiness.

Whereas those who trust in themselves, continually induce evil on themselves; for whatever happens to them, even although it appears prosperous and happy, is still evil, and thence conduces as a means to their eternal unhappiness. Sig.

[A.] 963. The (punishment of the) veil is for those who, although they see the Truth, do not want to acknowledge it.

986³. For man is born again and receives conscience by means of truths of faith; and therefore the Spirits with man are not permitted to excite falsities.

1077. Conscience is formed through truths of faith. Ex. . . Thus unless there are truths of faith, which the man hears, acknowledges, and believes, he can never have a true conscience; for it is through truths of faith, the Lord operating in charity, that man is regenerated . . . Thus truths of faith are the means by which man may . . . live according to the things which faith teaches. Ex.

1321. That none had truth of doctrine. Sig. and Ex. —. When the worship of self succeeds . . . not only is all truth perverted, but it is abolished, and at last falsity is acknowledged as truth . . . For all the light of Truth is from the Lord. Ex.

1458. Knowledges — cognitiones — are celestial and spiritual Truths, which are so many radiations of light in Heaven.

1469. 'Sarai,' as a wife, = truth adjoined to celestial things. Ex. 1489.

— Scientifics and Knowledges . . . are not truths, or Truths, but are only recipient vessels. Ex.

1470. That truth from a celestial origin is delightful. Sig. and Ex.

1495. The progression is from scientifics to rational truths; then to intellectual truths; and finally to celestial truths. . . If progression is made from scientifics and rational truths to celestial truths without intellectual truths as media, the Celestial is violated. Ex.

1496. Regarded in itself, the truth learned from childhood is nothing but a vessel . . . Truth has no life from itself . . . The Celestial is love and charity; all truth is thence, (therefore) it is nothing but a kind of vessel; and so are truths themselves plainly presented in the other life; truths there are never regarded from truths, but from the life which is in them . . . it is from this that truths become celestial, and are called celestial truths. Hence may be evident what intellectual truth is. Scientific truth* is one thing; rational truth is another; and intellectual truth is another; they succeed one another. Scientific truth is of knowledge; rational truth is scientific truth confirmed by reason; intellectual truth is conjoined with an internal perception that it is so.

1685. Truth — verum — is the first thing in combat; for combat is from truth; for from truth it is known what falsity and evil are; and therefore there are no such combats until the man has been imbued with the knowledges and Knowledges of truth and good.

1707³. But by spiritual things, or truths, the Lord inflows with every man.

1802³. They are instructed (there) only in general Truths; and, when they receive these, there are indefinite things which they perceive.

1803². 'Gravel' = truth.

1813². It is a truth of faith, that is, the Truth itself, that the Lord fights (in man).

1832³. These are apparent truths . . . and, as they are not real truths, there is no correspondence; yet the Lord leaves them entire with the man. Ex.

1861³. 'Branch' = Truth.

1911⁶. True because the Lord has said so. 2568¹. 2588².

1928. Truths — vera — from scientifics are said to obtain life when they associate themselves with the truths into which inflows the Celestial of love; the very life of truth is thence. There are conjunctions of . . . Truths like those of the Societies in Heaven, to which they also correspond. . . The Truths which have not been conjoined according to the form of the heavenly Societies, have not yet obtained life.

—². The truths of faith never have any life unless the man lives in charity. Ex.

1936⁶. Therefore truths stripped of fallacies and appearances are rejected by the first Rational.

1950². Truth — verum — separated from good ('Ishmael'). Des. 1951².

1958. 'Kadesh' = truth, and contentions about truths.

2015¹⁰. For government from truths alone would condemn everyone to Hell.

2046. The celestial love which continually inflows from the Lord, cannot be received except in truths; and therefore man is reformed and regenerated through the Knowledges of truth . . . conscience itself is formed through the truths of faith.

2049. Gentiles can be in truths, but not in truths of faith. (Their truths enum.) But the truths of faith are all doctrinal things about eternal life, the Lord's Kingdom, and the Lord. These cannot be known to them, because they have not the Word. . . When they live in charity, they live in truths, for all truths are of charity . . . They who live in these truths readily imbibe the truths of faith . . . because the truths of faith are the interior truths of charity.

—⁴. (Thus) the truths of faith can never be acknowledged as truths . . . unless they are implanted in charity. Ex.

2063³. When man is being regenerated . . . he proceeds to conjunction with the Lord through truth, that is, through the truths of faith; for no one can be regenerated except through Knowledges of faith, which are truths. The Lord comes to meet these through good, that is, through charity, and introduces this into the . . . truths of faith; for all truths are vessels recipient of good; and therefore the more genuine the truths are, and the more they are multiplied, the more abundantly can good accept them as vessels, reduce them to order, and at last manifest itself; so that at last the truths do not appear, except in so far as good shines through them. In this way, truth becomes the Celestial Spiritual. Tr.

2069. Truths—vera—from conjoined truths and goods. Sig. and Ex. . . They are all truths of the Internal Church, or interior truths of faith.

2078. The spiritual are made rational from truth; the celestial, from good.

2088². The celestial . . . did not perceive good from truth, but from the affection of good. 2144.

—³. But charity is implanted through truth.

2089. For the spiritual, by the truths which appear to them as truths, receive charity from the Lord, and, through this, conscience.

2129². (Truths—veritates—combating, heard as a grating noise.)

2146^o. The truths of faith are not holy unless they are from love and charity.

2189². The life of charity . . . is continually growing by means of truths; therefore the more truth there is insinuated, the more is the life of charity perfected; and therefore charity is circumstanced with man according to the quality and the quantity of the truth.

2219⁴. Those in the love of self . . . abominate all the truths of faith; for these are the laws of order themselves in the Lord's Kingdom.

2227. 'Numerous' is predicated of truth.

—^e. Spiritual good is truth.

2234. 'Way' is predicated of truths, because truths lead to good, and proceed from good.

2235. 'Judgment' is predicated of truth. Ill.

2261. It may be supposed that a man cannot but be saved if the truths are full of good. But . . . there are very few truths with man; and if there are any they have no life unless there is good in them; and if there are goods in them, he is saved, but of mercy; for the truths with man are very few; and the good in them has its quality according to the truths and the man's life. Ex.

—². The worst men . . . can learn the truths of faith, and confirm them . . . but still, with them, those truths are dead. The life of truth . . . is solely from the Lord . . . and no one can have part in this who despises others, etc.

—^e. But the case with the truths of faith is that man is regenerated by their means; for they are the veriest recipient vessels of good. Such, therefore, as are the truths, and such as are the goods in the truths, and such as is their conjunction . . . such is the state of blessedness after death.

2268^e. It may be said even of the Angels that they as it were dwell in man's truths . . . when he lives in love and charity . . .

2269³. Evils cannot be insinuated into truths . . .

2272. Temptations exist not only that man may be confirmed in truths, but also that truths may be more closely conjoined with goods; for the man then fights for truths against falsities.

2280⁶. These (both within and without the Church) although not in the truths of faith, being in good, are in the faculty of receiving the truths of faith in the other life. Ex. 2284^o.

2333. 'Way' = truth.

2335. He wished to judge from truth. Sig. & Ex.

—'. 'Street' = truth. 2336, Ill.

2341. Truth—verum—has no communication with falsity. Sig.

2343⁹. Truth—verum—can inflow from no other source than the Lord; and it cannot be inseminated except in the good which is from Him.

2348. 'Old men' = confirmed truths. . . 'Boys playing in the streets' = recent truths.

—^e. 'A little one' = the truths which are first born.

2353³. As all the light of truth is from good. 2425³.

2372. To teach truth is the same as to teach what good is; for all truth looks to good.

2374. To inflict violence on truth. Sig. and Ex.

2383⁴. If instructed in truths, they would not only falsify them, but would also defile them with evils. Tr.

2385. They could see no truth which would lead to good. Sig. and Ex.

2388². The truths of faith are the very receiving vessels of good; and they receive good in proportion as the man recedes from evil. (Continued under Good.)

—'. A man can know truth . . . and even be persuaded that it is truth; but still this truth does not live so long as he is in a life of evil. Ex.

2403. The quality of those who are in the truth of faith, and not in the good of life. Ex.

2411. 'Wife' = the truth of faith.

2410⁶. The Church beginning to think and act from truth. Sig.

2429³. For anyone to have truth in himself, he must not only know it, but also acknowledge, and have faith in it; and he then first has truth, because it then affects him, and remains. Ex.

2434^e. Man calls truth whatever favours (his) good.

2439². That truths which in themselves are truths, are with one more true, with another less true, and with some not true at all, and even false, may be evident from almost all things which in themselves are truths; for they are varied according to the affections of the man with whom they are. Examp.

—^e. Thus there is much of truth with those in the affection of good, and less of truth with those in the affection of truth.

[A.] 2447. (Punishments and condemnations) from the laws of order as to truth, because they separate themselves from good. Sig. and Ex.

2449. That all truths were separated from them. Sig. and Ex.

2454. That truth averted itself from good, and looked to doctrinal things. Sig. and Ex. —⁵, Ex.

—⁵. For when doctrine is separated from life, then, as good is devastated . . . truth also is devastated, that is, becomes a pillar of salt.

2503. As, with the Lord, all truth was from a celestial origin . . .

2516². As the Lord is Doctrine itself, He is called 'the Truth,' etc. 2531⁴, Ex.

2520². Without an idea from worldly things, man cannot think at all; and therefore if truths were propounded nakedly from a Divine origin they would never be received, but would transcend all his apprehension. Examps.

2524². For the truth of the Rational is procured by knowledges and Knowledges . . . Hence there adhere to its truths many fallacies from the senses, which cause the truths not to be truths; but still, when the Divine good inflows into them, and conceives them, they appear as truths, and are acknowledged as truths, although they are nothing but appearances of truth. (Continued under Good.)

2531⁴. When (this Divine) inflows into man's Rational, it is received according to the truths therein, thus variously . . . The more genuine the truths are, the more perfectly is the Divine received.

—³. In the Word of the Lord there are truths themselves; in its literal sense truths which have been accommodated to the apprehension of those who are in external worship; and in its internal sense truths accommodated to those who are internal men . . . Hence it is evident how important it is that interior truths be known and received. These truths may indeed be known, but never received, except by those who are in love or in faith in the Lord. Ex.

2554. Although Divine good is united as by marriage solely to Divine truth, it inflows into lower truths, and conjoins itself with them, but not as by marriage; for it inflows into rational truths, which are only appearances of truth, and conjoins itself with them; it inflows even into scientific and sensuous truths, which are scarcely anything but fallacies, and conjoins itself with them. Unless it did so, no man could possibly be saved.

2557³. As man is hereditarily in all evil and falsity, if truths were to inflow (from within) he would adulterate and falsify them, and therefore it has been provided that nothing of truth shall inflow through the internal of man, but only through his external.

2567⁸. For truths, regarded in themselves, are more fully servants than their goods are. Sig.

2571². For when a man has become spiritual and celestial, he no longer thinks from truths, but from good.

2572³. As the Angels are in love to the Lord and in mutual love, they are also in all truth. Ex.

2588⁸. (Thus it is according to order) to enter from truths into rational and scientific things; but (contrary to order) to enter from scientific and rational things into truths. . . From which it is evident how important it is that truths be known and believed; for man is enlightened by truths, and is blinded by falsities. Ex.

2669⁹. The truth of faith does not make the Church, but it introduces.

2682². Persuasive light induces belief of falsity through truths, and a belief of truth through falsities. . . The light of truth cannot inflow into what is persuasive from proprium.

2686⁶. In the other life, truths separated from goods appear as darts.

2689. A state of the desolation of truth, and also of removal from truths, with those who are becoming spiritual. Tr. 2694.

—⁴. The affection of evil and the thought of truth never conjoin themselves; where they appear to do so . . . there is the thought of truth without the affection of it; and therefore with them truth is not truth, but only something of sound . . . The worst can know such truth, sometimes better than others. With some, too, there is a persuasion of truth, of such a nature that no one can know but that it is genuine. Ex. . . This truth is such as is the principle with everyone; stronger as the love of self or of the world is stronger: it does indeed attach itself to evil, but does not conjoin itself with it, and it is therefore extirpated in the other life. Whereas with those who are in a life of good, real truth has its soil and its heart, and it has its life from the Lord.

2698. They who are in internal suffering . . . from the privation of truth, are elevated and sustained solely through truth. . . With those in the affection of good, the good with them desires good as a hungry man does bread; but with those in the affection of truth, the good with them desires truth as a thirsty man does water.

2704. Instruction in spiritual things, that is, in truths. Sig. and Ex.

2708⁸. Truth devastated by scientifics and the derivative reasonings. Sig.

2709. The man of the Spiritual Church defends himself by truths, and debates about truths. Tr.

2710. The man of the Spiritual Church knows truth only from doctrine.

—⁵. For the celestial are in real truth . . . and can see from it indefinite things which belong to that truth.

2718. By truth [here] is meant no other truth than such as (the man of the Spiritual Church) believes to be truth, although, in itself, it be not truth.

—². They who are in the affection of truth, cogitate, search out, and discuss whether this or that is truth . . . and, when they are confirmed that it is truth . . . they cogitate, search out, and discuss what it is. Examps.

2733³. In the other life the Truth does not admit of reasonings . . .

2760². He is called 'True-Verus' (Rev.xix.11) from truth.

2769⁹. That truth condemns, and good saves. Refs.

2781. 'Wild-ass'=truth separated from good.

2799²¹. Combating truth is represented by sharp-pointed things . . . but truth with good is rounded and gentle.

2803. For the conception and birth of truth are from good. Sig. and Ex.

2826³. 'Truth-veritas' (Jos.xxiv.14)=is predicated of the truth of faith.

—⁷. 'The law of Truth' (Mal.ii.6)=the truth of this good.

2832. For the more anyone consults natural scientifics . . . as to the truths of faith, the more he loses the light of truth, and, with the light, the life also of truth. Sig. and Ex.

—⁸. That there is no truth but what is from good. Refs.

2851⁷. 'Gladness' is predicated of truth; 'joy' of good.

2861. Man is made spiritual through truths of faith conjoined with good of life. The gentiles . . . although in the good of charity, are not truly spiritual until they have been instructed in the truths of faith.

2863². That there are truths among the gentiles. Enum.

—³. These and many other truths are among the gentiles, and conjoin themselves with the good which they have from the Lord, from the conjunction of which they are in a state to receive still more truths, because one truth acknowledges another, and they easily consociate, for there is a connection of Truths, and a relationship between them. Hence those who have been in good in the world, easily receive the truths of faith in the other life. Tr.

2875. Good of life . . . is insinuated by an internal way . . . but truth of doctrine by an external way, into the memory, whence it is called forth by the Lord in His own time . . . and is conjoined with the affection of good.

2904². The truth which is not from Him is not truth. Ill.

2908. Night as to the truths of faith. Sig. and Ex. 2910.

2909. 'Kirjath-arba'=the Church as to truth.

2921⁶. The Lord is called 'Master' as to truth.

2930³. 'Judgment' is predicated of truths; 'justice' of good.

—⁴. 'Soul thirsting for drink'=a longing for truth.

2937. Redemption through truth. Sig. and Ex. 2954.

2954². The understanding of good is what is principally called truth, and indeed the truth of faith.

2967³. 'Silver, iron, tin, and lead'=truths in their order down to the ultimate ones, which are sensuous.

3024⁷. That evil and truth are not to be conjoined; for thence comes profanation. Sig. 3033, Ex.

3033². In this way, truth is deprived of all the essence of truth.

3040⁶. For genuine truth comes successively, and is substituted in place of former things which were not truths in themselves, but only means leading to genuine truth.

3049. For truth, in itself, is good, because from good: truth is the form of good; that is, when good is formed so as to be intellectually perceived, it is called truth.

3057⁴. There inflows through the Rational as it were a dictate that this is true, and that is not true; but in this way—that it is true because it is in agreement with the disposition of the general things; and that it is not true because it is in disagreement: there is no other influx as to truths.

3058⁹. Those who desire to know truths (merely) to know them. Sig.

3066². No one is ever instructed through truths, but through affections of truth. Ex.

3068. For every scientific is a vessel of truth, and every truth is a vessel of good. 3079. 3083.

3074. How truth appears through scientifics, and is elevated by them out of the natural man into the rational. Tr.

3077. For truth is not truth unless it has life, and its life is affection.

3079. Receptions of truth. Sig. and Ex.

—⁴. 'Empty vessels'=Knowledges in which there is no truth; and truths in which there is no good.

3084. (Scientific, truth, and good, the same as the Natural, the Spiritual, and the Celestial.)

—⁵. Then truths are elevated out of the natural man into the rational. 3085².

[A.] 3090. The reciprocity of truth when it is to be conjoined with good. Sig. and Ex. . . On the part of good there is will, and on the part of truth, consent.

3094^e. The first enlightenment of truth by good, and of good through truth. Tr.

3096. 'A fountain' is mentioned when purer and higher truth is treated of; 'a well,' when truth not so pure, and lower. . . Natural truth is lower truth.

3098. For illustration (or enlightenment) is through truths, and according to truths.

— . The first initiation of truth into good is here treated of.

—². But truth itself inflows . . . by an external way into the Natural; the rise of truth is thence . . . but the conjunction of good and truth is . . . in the Rational, and therefore truth is called forth . . . from the natural sphere into the spiritual one; for the truth which is to be conjoined with good is spiritual. Tr. (Continued under Good, at 3101.)

3104². 'Weight' is predicated of good; 'measure,' of truth. Ill.

3105. 'Bracelets' = truth.

3111². The truth which is to be initiated and conjoined with good derives its origin from no other source (than innocence and charity). . . Within the Church, those who have not something of innocence and charity, however much they may know truth . . . never acknowledge it at heart. And outside the Church . . . none receive it in the other life than those who are in innocence and live in mutual charity; for innocence and charity make the soil in which the seeds of truth can take root and grow.

3116. In these three verses it treats of the exploration of the truth which is to be initiated into and thus conjoined with good, and this as to what origin it comes from; for everything depends upon the origin. Ex.

3121. '(Who hath not forsaken) His Truth from my lord' (Gen.xxiv.27)=the influx of charity from the Divine; for 'Truth'=charity. In the proper sense, 'Truth'=the same as 'faith'; and in the Hebrew 'faith' is expressed by some such word, so that what is called 'Truth' in the Old Testament is called 'faith' in the New . . . Hence it is evident that Truth, or faith, in the internal sense, is the same as charity . . . or, what is the same, that all truth, in the internal sense, is good. (Continued under Good.) 3122, Ex. 3157. 4254.

3122. See MERCY, here.

— . For the celestial never thought about the things of faith, or of truth. Ex.

3125^e. In these two verses it has treated of the perception of the quality and source of truth; and at the same time of joy on account of it.

3128². For all good inflows by an internal way into the Rational, and through it down into the sensuous Scientific . . . and by illustration there causes truths to be seen; and the truths are called forth thence, and put off their natural form, and are conjoined with good in the Rational, and at the same time make the man rational, and at last spiritual. Tr. (Further ex. under ENLIGHTEN.)

3131. The desire of the affection of good towards the truth which was to be initiated into truth Divine. Sig. and Ex.

—³. For all truth in its first infancy is not truth, but is that which is apparent of truth; but in process of time it puts off the appearance, and puts on the essence, of truth. Examp.

—^e. Thus the fallacies and appearances, which, in the time of ignorance, are the truths, are dissipated.

3145. Without freedom there is never any production of truth in the natural man, nor any calling forth therefrom into the rational, and conjunction with good there. . . Unless truth is learned from affection, thus in freedom, it is not implanted. 3146.

3158^e. (Thus) the truth of faith never becomes man's until it has been received by the will, that is, initiated and conjoined with the good there.

3161². When truths have been conjoined with good, they are no longer of knowledge, but of life; for the man then no longer learns from truths how to live, but he lives from them, and thus truths are appropriated to him, and become of the will.

3167. The Church is called 'mother' from truth.

—². (Thus) man must learn all truth, and this by an external way . . . and (have it) implanted in his memory. But so long as truth is there only, it is only knowledge. In order that truth may imbue the man, it must be called forth thence, and be conveyed more towards the interiors. (Continued under Good.)

—³. But truth cannot be separated from the natural man . . . without difficulty; for . . . so long as the fallacies, cupidities, and persuasions are there, and adjoin themselves to truth, the natural man detains truth with himself. Sig. . . The reason is that he places truth in doubt, and reasons about it. But as soon as the cupidities, etc. are being separated by the Lord, and the man begins, from good, to be averse to reasonings against truth, and to laugh at doubts, then truth is in a state to depart from the Natural, and to be elevated into the Rational, and to put on the state of good, for then truth becomes of good, and has life. Examps.

—^e. These truths can never be believed, unless the man is in good. Good is that which apprehends; for through good the Lord inflows with wisdom.

3186. Goods are not fructified, and truths are not multiplied, with man, until there is the conjunction of truth and good in his Rational . . .

3190. When truth is elevated out of the Natural into the Rational, it is taken out of the sphere of worldly into that of heavenly light. Ex.

3203². All truth, in its first age, is of knowledge, but as it advances it becomes of life. Ex.

—³. The man then no longer acts from truth, but from good. Ex.

3207. Appearances of truth. Sig. and Ex.

—². Good itself is holy, because it is the Divine which proceeds from the Lord, and it inflows through a higher way or door into man; but truth, in so far as its origin is concerned, is not holy, because it inflows by a lower way or door, and at first is of the natural man; but when it is elevated thence towards the rational man, it is purified by degrees; and, at the first sight of the affection of good, it is separated from scientifics, and puts on the appearances of truth, and thus comes near to good. . . . (But after conjunction with good,) truth no longer looks at good from appearances, but it is looked at from good apart from them.

—³. But neither with man nor Angel are any truths ever pure, that is, without appearances; all and each are appearances of truth; but still they are accepted by the Lord as truths, if good is in them. To the Lord alone belong pure truths. (Continued under APPEARANCE.)

—⁵. It is an appearance that man is reformed and regenerated through the truth of faith; it is through the good of faith. . . .

— . It is also an appearance that truth gives to perceive what good is, because it teaches; it is good which gives to truth to perceive; for good is the soul, or life, of truth. (Continued under GOOD.)

3209². The truth (in the Lord) which was to be elevated out of the Natural, was not Divine, until it was conjoined with the Divine good of the Rational. 3210².

3210. The sanctuary of truth in the Divine Human. Sig. and Ex.

3236. The husband represents good, because it is in the first place; and the wife, truth, because it is in the second place.

—². The spiritual truth adjoined to that good is what is called the truth of faith. . . . But in order that it may be the truth of faith, or faith, to the spiritual man, it must come from the new understanding. . . .

3240. The good the celestial have is of love to the Lord, and the truth is of love towards the neighbour; but the good the spiritual have is of charity towards the neighbour, and the truth is of faith, in so far as it is doctrine concerning charity.

— . In each Kingdom. . . . there are those who are more in good, and those who are more in truth; and hence come the derivations of good, and the derivations of truth. The derivations of good in the Spiritual Kingdom are represented by 'the sons of Jokshan,' and the derivations of truth there, by 'the sons of Midian.' Ill.

3241². In the Lord's Kingdom there are innumerable varieties as to goods and truths. Ex.

—³. Those of the Spiritual Church. . . . acknowledge as truths the things they have learned, and are therefore continually in dispute about them, and reason whether it is so, and each person calls that truth which is of his Church; from this come so many differences.

3242. With those who are in the truth of faith the case is this. . . . They who are in the truth of faith, that is, who profess faith, and call it essential, because they have so learned, and yet are in the good of life. . . . are in the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom, (and are here represented by 'Midian'). Ill.

—³. 'Midian' = those in the truth of simple good.

3267². The Lord's Spiritual Church is spread through the whole world, and everywhere varies as to things of belief, or the truths of faith. . . . The Spiritual Kingdom in the Heavens is also such. Ex.

—². He who is in charity, that is, lives in good, receives from the Lord such truths as agree with his good; and the gentiles receive such as can be bent in the other life into truths of faith. (Continued under GOOD.)

3268². Those not in truth, because not in good. Sig.

—⁷. 'Kedar' = those in simple truth.

3271. For the gentiles have no truths of faith, but have rational and natural truth; and these truths are called 'castles' when the truths of faith are called 'cities.'

3289. The struggle as to the priority of good and truth. (See under GOOD here, and in many subsequent extracts.)

3295. That at first truth shall be superior to the good of truth. Sig. and Ex. . . . The good of truth is good which comes forth from truth, and in its first coming forth it is truth; but it is called good, because it appears as good. (Continued under GOOD.) Examp. 3296, Sig. and Ex.

3298. With good, and truth, the case is the same as with offspring, in that they are conceived, are in the womb, are born, and afterwards grow to maturity. Sig. 3308.

[A.] 3299. That both the good and the truth of the Natural are conceived together. ('Twins'). Ex.

3303^r. For the state of the celestial man is that he is in good, and from good knows all truths, and never thinks and speaks from truths about good, and still less from scientifics. Moreover, celestial men are such that before they put off that state, they are in a Natural so strong as to truth that they can combat with the Hells; for it is truth that combats, and never good, as the Hells cannot make even a distant approach to good. (Sig. by the NAZARITE.)

—7. That truth is represented by 'white,' and good by 'red.' Ex.

3309. 'Hunting' = truths themselves; but truths which are of the natural man from which are goods.

3310². 'A stony place' = truth which has no root in good.

—4. So with spiritual truths, which are called doctrinals, and are still more interior precepts; for doctrinals are the interior truths which belong to the natural man. . . . Doctrinal truths are founded upon scientific truths . . . and scientific truths are founded upon sensuous truths. Sig. and Ex.

3318². These vessels in the rational, and in the natural man, are what are called truths, (which) in themselves are nothing but perceptions of the variations of the form of those vessels, and of the changes of state according to which the variations come forth, which take place in the most subtle substances, in ways inexpressible. Good itself, which has life from the Lord . . . is what inflows and disposes. Further ex.

3321. Man's Rational receives truths before his Natural. Ex.

—2. For the internal man can see truths, and also will them; but the external refuses assent. Ex. . . . There are also cupidities . . . and the things which favour them he calls truths.

3322². To have dominion over truths is said when they are subordinated to good; before this they are called 'enemies.' Ex.

3357. (Appearances of truth fully ex. here, and in many closely following extracts, under APPEARANCE.)

3385^e. Everyone is permitted to believe truths as he apprehends them; otherwise there would be no reception, because no acknowledgment.

3388. It here treats of those who are in doctrinals of faith, and who have no perception of truth from good, but only a conscience of truth from having been so taught. With such the first of confirmation of truth is that it is called Divine . . . But still what is stated must be adapted to their apprehension. Ex.

3390. That when the Divine good had been there for some time, truth was received. Sig.

3398². The profanation of truth. Sig. and Ex.

3402. Truth-verum—is here mentioned in the first place, and good in the second, because it treats of those who are in the Spiritual Church, who can adulterate and even profane truth, but not good.

3404. Interior truths which are from the Lord appearing to the Rational. Sig. and Ex.

3409. 'Service' = all that which is beneath, which is subordinate, and which obeys; thus truth, because this is from good, and ministers to good.

3412. That those in the knowledge of Knowledges did not want to know interior truths. Sig. and Ex.

3413. That those who are not in life, but in doctrine, obliterate interior truths by earthly loves. Sig. and Ex.

3415. That they could not endure interior truths because of the Divine in them. Sig. and Ex.

3416. That the Lord left interior truths. Sig. and Ex.

3417. That the Lord disposed truths, so that they might be adapted to the apprehension and genius of those who are not so much in life, but in the doctrinals of faith. Sig. and Ex.

3419. That the Lord opened those truths which were with the Ancients. Sig. and Ex.

3420. That those who were in the mere knowledge of Knowledges denied these truths. Sig. and Ex.

3431. [Passage] to still lower or more exterior truths . . . which are those that appear in the literal sense. Sig. and Ex. 3432, Sig. and Ex.

3433. 'He called the name (of this well) Rehoboth' = the quality thence as to truth. . . 'Rehoboth' = truths, because it means 'breadths,' which = truths.

3434. Increments of truth thence. Sig. and Ex.

3436². He who is in simple good, and believes the Word simply, according to its literal sense, is gifted with the faculty of perceiving truths when he is instructed in the other life; and in the meantime the few truths which are with him are vivified by charity and innocence; and, when these are in them, then the falsities which had infused themselves . . . are not hurtful, for they are adjoined to good . . . But the case is different with those not in the good of life . . .

3451³. In this case he is not in truth as to doctrine, but still he is in truth as to life.

3459. Such are in the good of truth; for they draw from the Word nothing but what is of faith, thus what is of truth, and scarcely see what is of good, thus what is of life. Ex.

—2. 'Covenant' is predicated of good; and 'oath,' of truth.

3464. That in the doctrinals were interior truths. Sig. and Ex.

3465. The conjunction or confirmed truth by doctrinals. Sig. and Ex.

— It is called the conjunction of confirmed truth, when interior truths conjoin themselves with exterior truths, which are doctrinals from the literal sense.

3470². (Meanwhile) there are at first adjoined to the man truths from another source than genuine truth itself, which are such that they do not adhere, but only serve as means of introducing genuine truths; and, when these have been introduced, the truths not genuine are separated. Ex. —4.

3471². For when truths are introduced into natural good, they at first cause suffering, because they weigh on the conscience, and induce anxieties; for there are concupiscences present against which spiritual truth combats. Sig.

3508. The endeavour of the affection of good to procure truth. Sig. and Ex. . . For it is according to order that regeneration should be accomplished through truth, that is, through the Knowledges of good and truth; for without them the Natural cannot be enlightened . . . The vessels which receive good and truth from the Rational are the truths themselves of the Natural, which are nothing else than scientifics, Knowledges, and doctrinals.

3512. For truths are introduced into the Natural by what is pleasing to it; and those not so introduced do not inhere, and so are not conjoined with the Rational by correspondence. Moreover, truths, like all other scientifics, have their place in the memory of the natural man according to the delights which introduced them. Ex.

3521^e. That truth from domestic good is not appropriated. See 3540.

3538². When the Rational acts from . . . good through . . . truth, the rational mind is called one house . . . Good is signified by the husband, and truth by the wife; for, when there is one house, good is the all therein, and truth, being of good, is also good.

3540. 'Skirts' = external truths.

—². That companions are not to be defrauded of external truths, which are the doctrinals and rituals according to which they live. Sig.

3542. That disjoining truth should not appear. Sig. and Ex.

— . 'Smoothness' is predicated of truth.

3548. A state of perception from the presence of this truth (which) in the external form appears like good and the truth of good. Sig. and Ex.

3550. For the truth appertaining to man before he is regenerated is believed to be good itself. They who have perception know that it is not good; but truth under the form of good. But they who have not perception know no otherwise than that it is good.

3556. The Providence is that good and the derivative truths are so disposed in order with man while he is being regenerated, that they should outwardly appear as if they were genuine good and the derivative genuine truths, when yet they are . . . domestic good and the derivative truths; serving only for the regenerating of man, thus for introducing goods and truths of a grosser nature.

3563. 'Voice' is predicated of truth.

— . All the power and faculty of truth is from good, although it appears to be from truth.

— . It is according to order for good, which is of the will, to be within; and for truth, which is of the understanding, to be without.

3570⁴. The truths there are circumstanced as are the fibres in the body; for truths are formed from good.

—^e. The goods which are of life (this soul) applies to itself . . . and from them forms truths for itself.

3576². That so long as truth is being conjoined with good, good is, in appearance, made to take a lower place; but that it will be in the prior place; and then there will be a conjunction of the Rational with the good of the Natural, and through it with the truth; and thus truth will come to be of good. Sig.

3577. As from good ground out of which is truth. Sig. and Ex.

3581. That the truths of the Church, which are called spiritual truths; and the truths of good, which are spiritual goods, and are called truths only relatively, for the goods of charity are such truths, [will then be possessed by the regenerate man]. Sig.

— . 'To serve' is predicated of truths.

3582. Concerning the apparent dominion of truth over good, at first. Refs.

3583. The Church is called 'mother' from truth and its affection.

3584. That . . . falsities shall separate themselves from truths: and that truths shall adjoin themselves to all other truths. Sig. and Ex.

3586. The first conjunction is with truth. Sig.

3587^e. When reformation has been accomplished by the ministry of truth, (the good of the Natural) has the dominion. Tr.

3593. In the state before regeneration, truths apparently have the dominion; but in the state after regeneration, truths give place, and good receives the dominion. Refs.

3599². For where there is good there must be truth for it to be anything; all that which is of thought, even with infants, is of truth . . .

3603³. In man's third age . . . he begins to think about use, and then . . . the order is inverted, so that truth is no longer put so much in the first place.

— . But in his fourth age, which is the age of his regeneration, he loves the Word and doctrinals from the Word, that is, truth, for the sake of the good of life . . . and thus good comes to be in the prior place.

3607. The inversion and privation of the life of truth from itself. Sig. and Ex.

—². Thus the privation of the life of truth from itself is not the extinction of truth, but its vivification; for when truth appears to itself to have life from itself, it then has no life, except such life as is in itself not life; but when it is deprived of this, it is gifted with real life, namely, through good from the Lord. 3610.

—³. This appears manifestly from those in the other life: with those who are in truth alone, the ideas appear closed, so that the things of Heaven cannot inflow . . .

3610. The case with respect to the life of truth is this: When they who are in truth, or in the affection of truth, do not live according to the truth which they know . . . there is some delight from the love of self or the love of the world which has adjoined itself to the affection of truth, and which appears as good, when yet it is not good, except as regards the use that truths may thus be introduced and learned . . . When truth is in this state . . . it is said to have life from itself, which is not life; (for) there is no life in the love of self and of the world.

[A.] 3614. 'Wrath' is predicated of truth; 'anger,' of good.

3659². For all truth whatever has good in it; for truth is not truth unless it is from good; it is from this that it is called truth.

3669². Good which is from truth is inverse to good from which is truth: in good which is from truth are those who are being regenerated; whereas the same come into good from which is truth when they are regenerate.

3676². External truth . . . is nothing but Knowledges; for these are the truths which are first of all imbibed, and are also accounted as truths by those who are in the beginning of regeneration. But Knowledges are not in themselves truths, but are so from the Divine things which are in them; and when these shine forth, they then first become truths. In the meantime they are like general vessels, by means of which and in which truths can be received.

3680. For all truths are Knowledges of good: the truths which are not from good, or which do not regard good as the end, are not truths. But in so far as they regard doctrine, they are called Knowledges of truth.

3687. The conjunction of natural good with truth from a Divine origin. Sig. and Ex.

3690. Life is said to be more remote when it is in external truths, and we live according to them, as in infancy. Sig. and Ex.

3699². (Jacob's ladder)=the communication of the truth which is in the lowest place with the truth which is in the highest. Ex.

3701⁶. These confirmatory things (the regenerating man) acknowledges as truths; and they are the truths of his new understanding which flow from the goods of his new will. . . He then sees that the truths of his infancy had been relatively inverted . . . and thus that by the truths of his infancy and childhood the Angels of God had ascended . . . and afterwards, by the truths of his adult age, they descend . . .

3703. 'Father'=good, because it is good from which all things are; and it is truth through which they all come into existence . . . Thus good is like a father, and truth is like a mother. Ex.

3704⁵. For truth is to good as a son to his father; for truth is from good.

3708. 'The north'=truth as yet in obscurity; 'the south'=truth in the light.

3720. 'House of God' is predicated of good; 'temple,' of truth.

—². They who place merit in truths, in that they have believed themselves to know truths better than others, and yet have lived evilly, appear to themselves to cut stones.

3726. Truth=verum—is the ultimate of order. Ex. 3727, Ex.

—³. Knowledges and truths are no more abstract Things, (that is) abstracted from the purest substances of the interior man, than sight is abstracted from the eye. Ex.

3727. Man's thought, speech, and action . . . are nothing but truths from good. Ex.

3728. Good is higher or interior; and truth is lower or exterior.

3759. The birth of the four sons of Jacob by Leah, in the supreme sense, = the ascent from external truth to internal good; and, in the representative sense, the state of the Church, which is such that it does not acknowledge and receive the internal truths which are in the Word, but the external truths; and therefore it ascends according to this order: it first has the truth which is said to be of faith; next, practice according to this truth; afterwards charity therefrom; and, lastly, celestial love. These four degrees are signified by Reuben, Simeon, Levi, and Judah. 3860^e.

3762. Elevation to the truths of love. Sig. and Ex.

3778². The truths which appear as truths to the gentiles. Def.

3798². For everyone, from the love in which he is, sees the things which are of that love; and what he sees he calls truths. Ex.

3800. Love towards interior truths. Sig. and Ex.

3804. Acknowledgment through interior truths. Sig. and Ex.

3812³. 'Bones'=truth, or falsity; 'flesh'=good, or evil. Ill.

3819^e. For truths without affection are not truths, because devoid of life.

3820. That affections of external truth are weak as to the understanding. Sig. and Ex.

—². Those in external truths, and those in internal truths, discriminated by examples.

—^e. (This shows) how weak in understanding are those who are in external truths only; and that internal truths are what give them essence and form, and also qualify the good with them. Nevertheless, they who are in external truths, and at the same time in simple good . . . in the other life receive internal truths, and the derivative wisdom; for they are in the state and faculty of reception from simple good.

3824. Internal truths are said to be conjoined with the Natural, when they are learned, acknowledged, and believed. In the Natural of man, or in its memory, there are truths both internal and external; they are there as doctrinal scientifics; but they are not conjoined until the man is affected with them for the sake of use in the life . . . for then good is coupled with them, whereby they are conjoined with the Rational, and consequently with the internal man. By this way there is an influx of life into them from the Lord.

3825^e. By this first conjunction, man is in a state for receiving internal or spiritual truths, which are the means of conjunction of the Natural with the Rational, or of the external man with the internal. Sig.

3849^e. The reason truths appear animated although there is no good of charity, is from the affections of the love of self and of the world.

—^e. The truths which are first learned can only be introduced by the most external affections; genuine affections come in time; but not until the man acts from good.

3851. Internal truth loved more than external truth. Sig. and Ex.

3852. That is called holy study by which internal truths are conjoined with good; for all internal truths regard the Lord, and are conjoined by love to Him.

3857. 'Rachel barren' = that interior truths were not received. Ex.

—^e. The reason interior truths were not received, is that interior truths are such as transcend man's belief, for they do not fall into his ideas, and they are not according to external appearances, or the fallacies of the senses. For example: it is an interior truth that there are no times and spaces in the other life, but states instead . . .

—⁴. As exterior truths are the first truths which man learns, it is provided by the Lord that through them he may be introduced into interior truths. Sig. and Ex. —^e.

3863¹⁰. That it is better not to know and apprehend the truths of faith, than to know and apprehend them and still live a life of evil. Sig.

—¹¹. To know the truths of faith and not to receive them; and also to know and receive them. Sig.

3869^e. So also the truth of faith first becomes the truth of faith in knowledge; then the truth of faith in will; and finally the truth of faith in act, thus charity. Sig. (by Reuben, Simeon, and Levi).

3870. It here treats of the progress of the regeneration of man from the external to the internal, that is, from the truth of faith to the good of charity; the truth which is of faith is external, and the good which is of charity is internal. In order that the truth of faith may live, it must be introduced into the will . . . for truth does not live from knowing, but from willing. . . Unless there be such a progress of faith, truth does not become truth, but becomes something separated from life, sometimes what is confirmative of falsity, and sometimes what is persuasive, thus a something filthy; for it couples itself with the man's evil affection . . . that is, with his Own will, which is contrary to charity. Sig.

3877^e. Charity contains in itself the willing of truth; VOL. VI.

and by this it contains in itself the understanding of truth.

3895^e. The Persuasive of truth. Ex.

3905. That interior truth was not yet acknowledged. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. The truths of faith which are not learned for the sake of doing, but only for the sake of knowing, adjoin themselves to affections of evil and falsity; and therefore they are not of faith with him who has learned them, but are interiorly contrary to faith.

3906. Indignation that (interior truth) was not acknowledged as external truth was. Sig. and Ex. . . The case with those being regenerated is that they learn to know what internal truth is, but do not at first acknowledge it with such faith as to live according to it; for the internal truths have not been conjoined with spiritual affection, which cannot inflow until external truths have been adapted to correspondence with internal ones. Examp. 3907. 3909.

3923⁸. 'A lion,' from its strength, = the truth of the Church; for truth is what fights and conquers.

3926. The second general truth. Sig. and Ex.

3930. That no other external truths were acknowledged. Sig. and Ex.

3933. The acknowledgment of external truth. Sig. and Ex.

3937. The acknowledgment of the second general truth. Sig. and Ex.

3951. It treats here of the conjunction of good with truth, and of truth with good; thus it treats of the good which is appropriated to man; for good is not good with man until it has been conjoined with truth.

3952⁴. The truths of the external man are the scientifics and doctrinals which he has first imbibed through his parents, then through teachers, then through books, and at last by his own study.

3959. The reception and acknowledgment of truth. Sig. and Ex.

3969^e. This conjunction (of the internal and external man) cannot exist until the external man has received and acknowledged the general truths which are signified by the ten sons of Jacob by Leah and the handmaids; and until the good of the natural man has been conjoined with the truths there. 3971. 3993⁴.

3974. The truth which [man has] at first is not truth, but appears as truth; but still it serves as the means of introducing genuine truths and goods . . . and when (these) have been introduced by it, it is dismissed, and the genuine ones are retained. Sig.

3986^e. Even with the man who is within the Church there are few genuine truths; and still fewer with the man outside the Church . . . but still they who are in the good of life are saved. Ex.

—⁴. The good of love to God, and the good of charity towards the neighbour, however various may be the truths and the affections of truth, are still receptive of genuine truth and good. Ex. . . It is otherwise with those who are in the love of self and of the world.

—⁵. 'Laban' = such good as is not genuine, because Y genuine truths have not been implanted in it, but is still such that they can be conjoined with it.

[A.] 3993⁵. 'White-album'=truth. 4007⁴, Ill.

— For truth without good has man's merit in it, because when anyone does what is good, not from the good of truth, he always wants to be recompensed . . . whereas when he does truth from good, that truth is then enlightened by light from the Lord. (Thus) 'spotted'=truth with which falsity is mingled; and 'speckled'=good with which evil is mingled. Ex.

—⁸. In man there is no pure good, with which evil is not mingled; nor pure truth, with which falsity is not mingled. Ex. . . There are evils with which goods cannot be mingled, and there are evils with which they can be mingled; and it is the same with falsities. Examps.

3995². When man is being regenerated, the truth which is of faith apparently precedes, and the good which is of charity apparently follows; but when man has been regenerated, the good . . . manifestly precedes, and the truth . . . manifestly follows. Refs. For when man is being regenerated, he does what is good from the truth he has learned . . . but still it is the good within which operates this. For good inflows from the Lord by an internal way; and truth by an external way . . . and the truth which enters by the latter way is adopted by the good which is within, and is conjoined with it, and this until the man has been regenerated. A change then takes place, and truth is done from good. Hence it is evident what the good of truth is; and what the truth of good.

4007⁴. The truth of faith is not with those who believe that they have faith from themselves, and are wise from themselves; but with those who believe that they have it from the Lord. Ex.

4009. That [the truths and goods which were separated] were given to sensuous truths. Sig. and Ex.

4015. A putting in order by the interior power of truth. Sig. and Ex.

4090. 'A pillar'=a holy boundary, and thus the ultimate of order, and therefore truth.

4094. 'Nativity'=truth.

4099³. Unless the Spirits who are in worldly things are removed, truths are dissipated. . . When worldly and heavenly things are in concord, truths are multiplied in the Natural; but when they are in discord, truths are diminished, and even consumed. Sig. and Ex.

4104. The elevation of Truths and their affections, and their orderly arrangement in generals. Sig. and Ex.

—³. Truths and their affections are elevated when the things of eternal life and of the Lord's Kingdom are set before those of the bodily life. Ex. The contrary happens when (the latter are set before the former), Truths being then either suffocated, rejected, or perverted.

—⁴. The orderly arrangement of Truths in generals. Ex.

4105. 'Acquisition'=truth . . . because it means cattle in general, by which truths are signified in special, when by 'flocks' are signified goods.

4111. A change as to truth of the state signified by Laban. Sig. and Ex. (And as to good. 4112.)

4123. That there was an ardour for conjunction with the Holy of truth. Sig.

4137. 'Gladness and songs' are predicated of truths.

4149. That the truth was not his [Laban's], and that his truth would not subsist in his [Jacob's] good. Sig. and Ex. 4151. 4153.

—². The case is this: Every spiritual good has its own truths; for where that good is, there are truths. Regarded in itself, good is one, but it is made various through truths; for truths may be compared to the fibres which compose an organ of the body: the organ takes form according to the form of the fibres . . . It is thus that good . . . is never the same with one person as with another; and therefore the truth of one can never subsist in the good of another. For all the truths with everyone who is in good communicate with one another, and make a certain form, and therefore the truth of one cannot be transferred into another; but when it is transferred, it passes into the form of him who receives it, and puts on another aspect.

4157. The truths which are signified by 'the teraphim' were not scientifics, but were in them.

4161. Interior truths are said to be among unclean things, when they are among scientifics which do not yet correspond. Sig.

4175. 'Day'=a state of faith or of truth; 'night,' a state of no faith or of no truth.

4190. Such truth as the gentiles have, and the worship from it. Sig. and Ex.

— For the gentiles have such external truths as Christians have; as that the Deity is to be worshipped; that we must not steal, etc.; thus such truths as those of the decalogue. . . Thus the Lord imparts to them the faculty of receiving interior truths, which they also do receive in the other life.

4197. The confirmation of good through truth. Sig. and Ex.

—⁷. One truth does not confirm good, but many truths. Sig. and Ex.

4200⁶. That the affections of genuine truth are to remain within the Church; and are not to be defiled with truths not genuine. Sig.

4205. As truths are what good inflows into, truths are what limit the influx of good. Sig. (For) the truths with a man, of whatever character they may be, enter into his memory by means of affection. (Continued under AFFECTION OF GOOD.) This good inflows from the Lord, but is not fixed except in truths; for in truths good is welcomed, since they are in accord. (Thus) such as the truths are, such is the reception of good. The truths with the gentiles who have lived in mutual charity, are such that the good inflowing from the Lord can be welcomed in them also . . .

4215. The acknowledgement of these Truths, and of the affections of the same. Sig. and Ex.

4234. What is successive of truth, that it might be conjoined with spiritual and celestial good. Sig. and Ex.

4236³. 'A plain'=the truth which is of doctrine.

4241. The truths from which is good, are those which man imbues before regeneration ; but the truths which are from good are those which he imbues after regeneration ; for after regeneration truths proceed from good, for he then perceives and knows from good that they are true. Sig.

4243². The case is this : truth cannot be implanted in good except by media, such as have been treated of in the preceding chapter . . . and in this chapter is described the process of conjunction, and thus the inversion of state, in that order which is followed when truth is being subordinated to good. (Continued under Good.) Those also (are in this good) who have conscience, that is, who no longer reason whether a thing is true, but do it because it is true, thus who have imbued that [truth] in faith and life.

4245². Those (who put the truths of faith in the first place, and the good of charity in the second ; and who thus think much about doctrinal things, and not about the goods of charity) can never know . . . that the truth which is of faith must be subordinated to the good which is of charity. . . If a man were to think from the goods of charity, he would then plainly see that the truths which are of faith are in the second place ; and he would then also see the truths themselves as in light ; for the good of charity is like a flame which affords light, and thus enlightens everything which the man had before supposed to be true ; and he would also perceive how falsities had intermingled themselves, and had put on an appearance as if they were truths.

4247. That good is continually inflowing, so as to appropriate truths to itself. Sig. and Ex.

—². The Divine good cannot be applied to any other vessels than genuine truths ; for they correspond to each other. (Continued under Good.)

— . Heretofore, truth had been in the understanding, but now it is in the will ; and when it is in the will, it is in the man. Ex.

—³. The appropriation of truth by good (is as follows) : First of all the truths which are of faith are insinuated through the hearing or the sight, and are then stored up in the memory ; from which they are successively elevated into the thought, and at last inflow into the will ; and, when they are in this, they proceed thence through the thought into act ; and if they cannot proceed into act, they are in endeavour, which is internal act. . . But still it is good which produces this circle. Ex.

4248^e. Temptations are what unite truths to good. Tr.

4255. That he had little of truth while being initiated into Knowledges, but afterwards had many truths and goods. Sig. and Ex.

4274. Temptation as to truth. (See TEMPTATION, here.)

4278. That truth had not yet the power to conjoin itself altogether with good. Sig. and Ex.

4301. The state of truth in good. Sig. and Ex.

4302. That truths were not yet disposed into such an order that all, together with good, might enter into celestial spiritual good. Sig. and Ex.

—³. As to the order in which truths must be that they may enter into good (it may be said) that all truths, like goods, both as to generals, and as to particulars, even the most minute, have been disposed into such an order in Heaven, that one regards another in such a form as the members, organs, and viscera of the human body, or their uses, have mutual regard to one another. Ex. . . In a word, the order of Heaven is the disposition of the truths which are of faith in the goods which are of charity, and the disposition of these goods in the good which is of love to the Lord.

—⁶. That (on this account) it is better to be in simple good, though in the denial of truth. Sig.

4303. 'Nerves' (or 'sinews') = truths. Ill.

4335^e. Truths—vera—(without any end of use) being without their affection from good, appear indeed as truths in the external form ; but as there is no internal in them, they are phantasms ; and, if there is an evil internal, they are employed to confirm the evil, and thus, by application to evil, they become falsities. Sig. and Ill.

4336. The acquisition of interior truths. Tr.

4337. In the preceding chapters . . . it has treated of the acquisition of truth in the Natural, which acquisition is made in order that it may be conjoined with good ; for all truth is for the sake of this end. 'Jacob' = that truth ; and 'Esau' = the good with which the truth is to be conjoined. Before the conjunction, truth appears to be in the first place ; but after it, good is actually in the first place. Refs.

—². Jacob, here, represents the good of truth ; but, regarded in itself, the good of truth is only truth ; for so long as truth is in the memory only, it is called truth ; but when in the will and thence in act, it is called the good of truth ; for to do truth is nothing else.

—^e. Neither can truth be conjoined with the good which inflows through the internal man . . . until the truth is truth in will and act, that is, the good of truth. Ex.

4341². The good itself which is to be conjoined with truth, is not tempted, but the truth ; and truth is not tempted by good, but by the falsities and evils, and by the fallacies and illusions, and their affection, which adhere to truths in the Natural. Ex.

4342. The disposition of external truths under their own affection. Sig. and Ex.

—². External truths are those which are called sensuous truths, that is, those which inflow immediately from the world through the senses of the body. But interior truths . . . are those which are more interiorly in the Natural, more closely under the view of the Rational, and to which fallacies and their illusions do not so strongly adhere as they do to sensuous truths. For the more interiorly truths go, the more are they purified from worldly and earthly things.

4347³. Thus good cannot be conjoined with truths . . . unless the man humbles and submits himself. Humiliation and submission are predicated of truths, because truths inflow through the external man . . . and what inflows through the external man is attended with fallacies . . .

[A.] 4352². For the truths of faith regarded without love are only words without life ; but through love, and thus through conjunction with the good of love, they receive life.

4353². Truths—vera—are successively conjoined more and more interiorly with good. Ex.

4358². For good cannot have being without what it calls truths ; nor can truths without what they call good. They conjoin themselves of themselves ; but such as is the good, such are the truths it conjoins with itself. It is good which acknowledges them, and couples itself as a husband with a wife. . . That good acknowledges its own truth, and truth its own good, and that they are conjoined. Refs.

4364². When, therefore, man has been led in freedom to good, truths are then accepted and implanted, and he begins to be affected by them . . . Examps.

4368². When, therefore, man is affected by truth, it is not from truth, but from the good which inflows into the truth. Ex.

4377. Truths—vera—which have not yet obtained life Divine. Sig. and Ex.

—². In (the infancy of regeneration) the truths in the man indeed have life, but not yet spiritual life. It is only general truths, without particulars and singulars, with which good is then conjoined.

4383. For this reason no other general truths are conjoined with good in the man who is being regenerated, than such as can have particular truths placed in them, and singular ones in these.

4393. [Arrival at] the interior truths of faith which are those of tranquillity. Sig. and Ex.

—^e. Interior truths are in (the tranquillity of peace) ; that is, those who are in interior truths in faith and life. But so long as they are in exterior truths, and especially when they are coming from exterior into interior ones, the state is one of in tranquillity, for then there are combats of temptations. Sig.

4402⁵. For truth is that of which power is predicated ; for good acts through truth when it exerts power. Therefore, where power from truth is treated of in the Word, the Lord is called 'El' and 'Elohim' ; or 'God.'

4409. As the sight of the eye corresponds to intellectual sight, it also corresponds to truths ; for all things which are of the understanding relate to truth, and also to good. Ex. 4410, Ex.

—². Hence it is that the evil cannot possibly receive truth ; but only the good. Ex.

4423^e. The state of those who are in this thick cloud, is that they cannot possibly see what the truth of faith is, and still less what the good of faith is. This is the state of a vastated Church. Ex.

4425. That the posterity of Jacob extinguished all the truth of doctrine which was of the Ancient Church. Tr. (Thus all interior truths. Ex. 4429.) 4430. 4433, Ex.

4434. Hence adulterations of good are meant by 'adulteries' ; and falsifications of truth by 'whoredoms.' Ill.

4448. Interior truth, in its essence, is nothing else than the good of charity. Sig. and Ex.

—². But the Ancient Church . . . could not attain to charity, except through the truth of faith, of which they had no perception, and they therefore began to investigate respecting truth, as to whether it was so.

4479. For the truths of the Church, when collected into one and acknowledged, are called doctrinals.

4487^e. Celestial truth is truth which has become of the life ; and spiritual truth is truth which is of doctrine. Sig. and Ex.

4504. That they had defiled the truth of faith ('Dinah'). Sig. and Ex.

4526^e. For truths make all of man's understanding. Ex.

4538². For the Lord's glorification proceeded from truth to the good of truth, and finally to good . . . For it pleased the Lord to make His Human Divine in the same order as that in which He makes man new. . . When the Lord makes man new, He first instructs him in the truths of faith ; for without the truths of faith man does not know what the Lord is, what Heaven is, and what Hell is, etc. (Continued under Good.)

4551. Before man by regeneration . . . comes to good, and does truth from good, he has a great many falsities mixed with truths. Ex. . . These remain with the man until he has been regenerated, that is, until he acts from good ; and then good reduces into order the truths he has imbibed up to this time . . . and, when this is done, falsities are separated from the truths, and are removed. Tr.

4552². For truths in the regenerate man are in the inmost of his Natural near to good, which is like a little sun there. The truths which depend on these are distant from them according to the degrees of their relationship to good. Fallacious truths are at the outer circumferences ; and falsities are rejected to the outermost ones. The latter remain with man to eternity, but are in this order when the man suffers himself to be led by the Lord ; (otherwise) they are in the opposite order. Ex.

4574². The truths which are from good are said to be forms of good, because they are nothing else than goods formed. He who conceives of truths in any other way . . . does not know what truths are : truths do indeed appear as if separated from good, and thus as a form by themselves, but only to those who are not in good. Ex. by an examp.

—⁴. Hence it is evident what truths are when they are forms of good ; and what when separated from good ; for when not from good, they are from some evil, and are its forms, however they may counterfeit forms of good.

— e. 'Company', 'congregation,' and 'multitude,' are predicated of truths.

4575. Truths—vera—from the Divine marriage. Sig. and Ex.

4577². 'The Spirit of Truth' = the Divine truth proceeding.

4586. The temptations of interior truth. Sig. and Ex.

4588. For, when interior truths are born, it is the Natural which receives them into its bosom, since it enables them to come forth. Sig. and Ex.

4599². 'The tower in the midst of the vineyard' = the interior things of truth. Ill.

4638². 'Who took their lamps' = spiritual things in which is what is celestial, or truths in which there is good. . . 'Five were wise, and five were foolish' = a part of them in truths in which there was good; and a part of them in truths in which there was no good. . . 'They that were foolish . . . took no oil' = that they had not the good of charity in their truths.

— 7. Those who are in truth in which there is no good, in the other life, more than others make merit of all they have done which appears as good. Sig.

4663^e. For evil does not accord with truth, but the one rejects the other; and if those who are in evil speak truths, they speak them from the lips, and not from the heart, and thus (the evil and the truths) are still far apart.

4677. 'Colours' = the qualities of truths, thus its appearances.

4686². The standing corn in a field = the truth in the Church.

4690. The descendants of Jacob did not know anything about faith . . . but about Truth; for Truth was to them the same as faith is to Christians, and in the Hebrew the same word is used for both. But the Jewish Church understood by Truth the precepts of the decalogue, and also the laws, judgments, testimonies, and statutes, which were handed down by Moses. They did not know the interior things of Truth, nor did they want to know them. 4765.

4692². It is the supreme among truths . . . that the Human of the Lord is Divine.

4712^e. By every coming of the Lord is meant when truth from the Word inflows into the thought.

4715. He who teaches faith, and not charity . . . has nothing to dictate whether this or that . . . is true. But if he teaches charity, he then has good, and this is to him a dictate, and guides him; for all truth is from good and treats of good; or, what is the same, the all of faith is from charity, and treats of it.

4717. That they had fallen away from the general truth of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

— . Those are said to fall away from the general truth of the Church who acknowledge the Lord, but not His Human as Divine; and also those who acknowledge faith as essential, but not charity. Each is a general truth of the Church; and when a man recedes from it, he falls away from general truth; and whoever does this, soon falls away from particular truths. Ex.

4736^e. 'A pit in the wilderness' = the falsities in which there is no truth, because no good . . . For when faith is believed to save without works, truth can indeed exist, but still it is not truth with him, because it does not look to good, and is not from good. This truth is not alive, because it has in it a principle of falsity; consequently, with anyone who has such truth, the truth is but falsity from the principle which rules in it. The principle is like a soul from which all the other things have life. On the other hand, there are falsities which are accepted as truths, when there is good in them . . .

4741^e. For it is the part of a wise man . . . first to see that a thing is true, and then to confirm it. In fact, to see what is true is to see from the light of Heaven . . . but to see what is false as true, is to see from a fatuous light, which is from Hell.

4744. That there was then nothing true. Sig. and Ex.

— e. For truths to them are not truths, because without good.

4748³. That [they carried] their own interior truths from their own scientifics to the scientifics which are signified by 'Egypt.' Sig. and Ex.

— . Interior truths are conclusions from exterior truths, or from scientifics. Ex.

4769. The truths of the external man from which are delights of life, are truths Divine such as those of the literal sense . . . from which truths are the doctrinals of a genuine Church. Sig.

— . Such select from the Word those truths only which agree with the delights of their life, that is, which favour the loves of self and of the world; and all other truths they bring into conformity by interpretations, and hence present falsities as appearances of truth. — 3.

4776. The veriest truth of the Church, is that love to the Lord and love towards the neighbour are the primary things. Cupidities extinguish this truth. Ex.

— 2. That no one can receive the truths of faith—that is, become imbued with them and appropriate them to himself—but he who is in a life of charity, has been made manifest to me from those in Heaven. Ex.

— 3. They who are in love towards the neighbour can receive all the truths of faith, and can imbue them and appropriate them to themselves. . . But those who are in the love of self can never receive the truths of faith (except) for the sake of self-honour and gain; thus they can never imbue them and appropriate them to themselves; but the things which they imbue and appropriate are negations of truth. Ex.

4788. That those in some truth of simple good consulted scientifics. Sig. and Ex.

— 3. Those who are in good are in the affection of doing what is good for the sake of good, and without recompense from others; for it is recompense to them to be permitted to do what is good, since in so doing they perceive joy; but those who are in truth are in the affection of doing what is good, not for its own sake, but because it is so commanded, and for the most part they think of recompense: their joy is from this, and also from glorying. Thus those who do good from good, do it from internal affection; whereas those who do good from truth, do it from some external affection. Hence . . . the former are internal men (and are called celestial); and the latter are external (and are called spiritual). (The former) cannot 'sell' or remove the Divine truth . . . because they perceive truth from good, and therefore neither the fallacies of the senses, nor scientifics, lead them away; whereas (the latter) can 'sell' or remove it, because they do not perceive truth from good, but only know it from doctrine and teachers; and if they consult scientifics, they suffer themselves to be easily led away by fallacies, for they have no inward dictate. Sig.

[A.] 479^{re}. The operation of those who receive with affection exterior truths only, without rejecting interior ones, I felt into the exteriors only of the tongue.

480². There are Spirits who, although they are evil, still in some measure admit the light of Heaven and receive the truths of faith; so that they have some perception of truth. They also eagerly receive truths, not for the end of living according to them, but that they may glory in seeming more intelligent and sharp-sighted than others; for the Intellectual of man is such that it can receive truths; but still truths are not appropriated to any but those who live according to them. Unless man's Intellectual were such, he could not be reformed.

—². In the other life (such) abuse their faculty of understanding truths to acquire dominion; for they know that by means of truth they have communication with some Societies of Heaven, and consequently that they can be with the evil, and exercise power; for truths in the other life have power with them; but because their life is evil, they are in Hell. I have spoken with two such . . . who wondered at being in Hell, when yet they had persuasively believed the truths of faith. But they were told that the light with them by which they understood truths, was a light like that of winter . . . and that as their end in understanding truths had been self, therefore when the sphere of their ends exalts itself towards the interior Heavens . . . it is rejected; and that for this reason they were in Hell. . . When such reason from the life, they speak against truths.

480². 'The holy Angels' = the truths which are from the Lord's Divine good. Ex.

481⁶. 'Man-vir' = truth (or falsity). Ex.

483³. For truth, that it may be truth which has life and produces fruit . . . cannot be conjoined with any other than its own and kindred good. Sig.

484³. Hence 'a daughter-in-law,' being the wife of a son now become a husband, = the truth of the Church conjoined with good. . . But in the Spiritual Church the husband is called 'man-vir,' and = truth; and the wife is called 'woman-mulier,' and = good.

484². 'A widow' = the truth of the Church without its good. Ex. and ill. (=the truth of the Church without good, that is, those who are in truth without good, and still desire to be in good, consequently who love to be led by good; and 'a husband' = the good which should lead. —³.)

—⁴. For the doctrinals of charity teach what good is; and the doctrinals of faith what truth is; and to teach truth without good is to walk as one who is blind; since good is what teaches and leads, and truth is what is taught and led. There is as great a difference between these two doctrinals as between light and darkness; and unless the darkness be enlightened by the light, that is, unless truth be enlightened by good, or faith by charity, there is nothing but darkness; and hence it is that no one knows from mental view whether truth is truth, and consequently not from perception, but only from doctrine imbibed in childhood and confirmed in adult age; and hence, too, it is, that Churches differ so widely that what one calls truth, another calls falsity, and that they are never in agreement.

—¹². (Such) 'widows' = those who are not in truth, because not in good; for wherever there is no good, there is also no truth, however truth may appear with them like truth. But it is like a shell without a kernel. Ill.

485⁹. Internal truths could not appear to the Jews otherwise than as a harlot. Sig. 486⁸, Ex.

486¹. What is intermediate to the truths of the Church and to falsities. Sig. and Ex. . . As external truths, which are of the sense of the letter . . . are enlightened by internal truths, that is, by those which are of the internal sense, they present falsities with those who are in evil.

488⁴. For nothing but truths makes intelligence; for those who are in truths from good are in intelligence. Ex.

—². Truth-verum—with man, is not the truth of intelligence, until it is led by means of good; . . . For truth has not life from itself, but from good, and it has life from good when the man lives according to truth; for it then infuses itself into the man's will, and from his will into his actions, thus into the whole man. The truth which a man only knows or apprehends, remains outside of his will, and thus outside of his life . . . But when a man wills truth, it is then on the threshold of his life; and when from willing he does it, then truth is in the whole man; and when he does it frequently, it recurs not only from habit, but also from affection, and thus from freedom. Ex.

490³. For no one can see from the external alone, whether a thing is false or true, but only from the internal. Ex.

490⁴. Good is produced when truth passes through the understanding into the will, and from the will into act. For the seed is the truth of faith, and conception is reception, and reception is effected when truth which is of the understanding, passes into good which is of the will . . . and when it is in the will, it is in its womb, and is then first produced; and when man is in good in act, that is, when he produces good from the will, and thus from delight and freedom, it goes forth from the womb or is born, which is also meant by being reborn or regenerated.

491¹. (Such) cannot see truth from any other source than self: when it is attributed to themselves, they admit it. Examps.

4973. Scientifics are truths of the natural mind . . . The interior corresponding truths in the Natural are applications to uses; and the interior goods there are uses.

4984. It might be thought that when good appropriates truth to itself, it is truth such as is the truth of faith that it appropriates; but it is the good of truth; truths which are not of use do indeed approach, but do not enter. All uses from truths are goods of truth. The truths which are not of use are separated; and some are retained, and some are rejected: those which are retained are those which introduce to good more or less remote, and are uses themselves; those which are rejected are those which do not introduce, nor apply themselves. In their beginning, all uses are truths of doctrine, but in their progression they become goods; and they become goods when the man acts according to those truths. Action itself thus gives quality to truths; for all action descends from the will; and the will itself makes that become good which previously was truth. Hence it is evident that truth in the will is no longer the truth of faith, but the good of faith; and that the truth of faith makes no one happy, but the good of faith; for this affects the very essence of man's life, namely, his will, and gives to it interior delight or blessedness; and in the other life happiness, which is called heavenly joy.

4988. (The two origins of truth. See NATURAL GOOD, here.)

5006. That truth not spiritual applied itself to the ultimate of spiritual truth. Sig. and Ex. See 5008.

5008⁶. For example: It is an ultimate truth to the spiritual man, that all Divine truths can be confirmed from the literal sense of the Word, and also, with those who are enlightened, by rational or intellectual things. This ultimate and general truth is acknowledged by the natural man also, but he believes simply that everything is truth which can be confirmed from the Word, and especially that which he has himself confirmed from it. In this therefore they concur: that all Divine truth can be confirmed; but this general truth is viewed differently by them. Further ex.

— Confirmed falsity appears more true than truth itself, because the fallacies of the senses accede . . .

5009. That thus truth natural spiritual had not truth by which to defend itself. Sig. and Ex. 5022, Ex.

5010. The separation brought about by ultimate truth being no longer acknowledged. Sig. and Ex.

5022. That (the merely natural man) retained ultimate truth. Sig. and Ex. . . For when ultimate truth is taken away from the spiritual man, he no longer has anything by which to defend himself against those merely natural, and then injury is done him; for whatever the spiritual man then speaks, merely natural men say that they do not perceive, and also that it is not so; and if an internal or spiritual thing is but mentioned, they either ridicule it or call it mystical; and therefore all conjunction between them is broken, and then the spiritual man suffers hard things. Sig. 5028, Sig. 5036⁴, Ex.

5037³. 'Youths' = the truths of faith.

5044. Truth—verum—governing in a state of temptations. Sig. and Ex. (Continued under TEMPTATION.) Other truths also are at such times called to mind; but they do not govern their interiors. Sometimes the truth which governs is not presented visibly before the understanding; but lies hidden in obscurity, yet still governing; for the Divine of the Lord inflows into it, and thus keeps the interiors of the mind in it; and therefore when it comes into light, the person who is in temptation receives consolation and is delivered. It is not this truth itself, but the affection of it, by which the Lord governs those who are in temptations; for the Divine inflows only into those things which are of the affection. The truth which is implanted and inrooted in a man's interiors is implanted by affection . . . and this truth . . . is recalled by affection; and when this truth is so recalled, it presents the affection conjoined with it, which is the man's reciprocal affection.

—³. 'A prince' = a primary truth. Ill.

5047. That He Himself governed truth. Sig. and Ex.

5077⁴. All truths, which are said to be of faith, pertain to the intellectual part; and all goods, which are of love and charity, are of the voluntary part. Consequently it belongs to the intellectual part to believe, acknowledge, know, and see truth, and also good, but to the voluntary part to be affected with and love it; and what man is affected with and loves, is good. But how the Intellectual inflows into the Voluntary, when truth passes into good; and how the Voluntary inflows into the Intellectual, when it acts it . . . will be told in what follows.

—⁵. For everything which is drunk has relation to truth, and therefore to the intellectual part.

—². But they who are not in confirmed falsity, that is, in the persuasion of falsity, easily admit truths, and see and choose them, and are affected with them . . . They are in so much freedom that they can, in view and thought, expatiate as it were through the whole Heaven to innumerable truths. But no one can be in this freedom unless he is in good; for from good he is in Heaven; and from good in Heaven truths are apparent.

—³. Truth—vera—stored up by the Lord in the interior man. Sig.

5117. For in the re-birth, all truth tends to conjunction with good; before this, truth does not receive life, and consequently is not made fruitful. This is represented in the fruits of trees when they are ripening. Ex.

[A.] 5120⁶. When the interiors are full of hypocrisy, deceit, hatred, etc. the truth of faith is solely in the external man . . . and to cultivate and become imbued with the good of faith causes truths to be conjoined with good in the interior man, in which case even fallacies are accepted as truths. Sig.

5128². If a man . . . does not suffer himself to be enlightened, but entirely rejects truths, and without reason obstinately defends falsities, it is a sign that he is a sensuous man.

—³. They who are in the persuasion of falsity . . . cannot see anything at all of truth . . . truths are to them as things of naught, and they also ridicule them.

—⁶. When sensuous things are subject to the Rational . . . they no longer stand in the way of truths being acknowledged and seen. Ex. . . Hereby the man is in a state of seeing and acknowledging truths in their full extent. But when the Rational is subject to sensuous things, the contrary comes to pass. Ex.

5149. 'Birds' = intellectual things, and also thoughts, and consequently the things thence derived; namely, in the genuine sense, truths of every kind; and in the opposite sense falsities. Ill.

5199. Spiritual beauty is the affection of interior truth . . . because truth is the form of good. Good itself which is from the Divine in Heaven is that from which the Angels have life; but the form of their life is through the truths which are from that good. Yet beauty is not produced by the truth of faith, but by the affection itself within the truths of faith, which is from good. Ex.

5207². When the sphere of falsity is near, as is the case at first in all regeneration, then truths seem to be exterminated; but they are [really] stored away in the interior, and are there infilled with good, and are successively let back. Sig. (by Pharaoh's dream of the seven kine, etc.) 5208, Ex.

5210. Spiritual sleep is when truths are in obscurity; and spiritual waking is when truths are in clearness.

5212. Lowest truths, or the truths of the exterior Natural, are called scientifics, because they are in man's natural or external memory, and because they partake for the most part of the light of the world, and thence can be presented and represented before others by forms of words, or by ideas formed into words by means of such things as are of the world and its light. But the things which are in the interior memory are not called scientifics, but truths, in so far as they partake of the light of Heaven, nor can they be understood except by that light, or expressed, except by forms of words, or ideas formed into words by means of such things as are of Heaven and its light.

5219. For where truths are not, there is obscurity, since the light of Heaven inflows only into truths . . . Hence the truths with Angels and Spirits, and also with men, are subsidiary lights; but they have their light from the Divine truth through the good in the truths; for unless truths are from good, that is, unless they have good in them, they cannot receive any light from the Divine. (Continued under Good.)

5237. The truth that might serve primarily for the interpretation . . . of the Word. Sig. and Ex.

5270. 'Seven years of famine' = a failing and apparent privation of truth. Ex.

—². One who cannot be reformed, believes that when he has learned truths and stored them up in the memory, this is sufficient; but he is much mistaken. The truths he has acquired must be . . . conjoined with good; and this cannot be done so long as the evils of the love of self and of the world remain in the natural man. These loves were the first introducers, but with them the truths cannot possibly be conjoined; and therefore in order that conjunction may be effected, the truths introduced and retained by those loves must first be exterminated, (that is) drawn within so as not to appear. Ex. . . The state when man is seemingly deprived of truths is called 'desolation,' and is also compared to 'evening.'

5276^e. See KNOW—cognoscere, here.

5278. The removal of truth and the apparent privation of it in both Naturals. Sig. and Ex. 5280.

5280². For man to be regenerated he must first be reformed, and this is done by means of the truths of faith; for he has to learn from the Word and from doctrine therefrom, what good is. The Knowledges of good from the Word, or from doctrine therefrom, are called the truths of faith, since all the truths of faith spring from good, and flow to good; for they look to good as the end.

—³. Most are introduced into this state (of reformation); yet few are regenerated; for most . . . learn the truths of faith . . . for the sake of reputation and honour, and also for gain; and when the truths of faith have been introduced by these loves, the man cannot be regenerated until the loves have been removed. The man is (therefore) let into a state of temptation . . . and because the combat is concerning truths and goods, the truths which had previously been instilled are exterminated, as it were, by the falsities injected by the evil Spirits . . . And then, as the man suffers himself to be regenerated, the light of truth from good is instilled by the Lord, through an internal way, into the Natural, into which light the truths are let back in order. This is the case with the man who is being regenerated. Further ex.

5323². The royalty is the law, which in itself is the truth of a kingdom, according to which its subjects are to live.

5339. The first states when truths are multiplied in series. Sig. and Ex. . . In regard to the series, the case is this: With the man who is being reformed, general truths are first insinuated, then the particulars of the generals, and finally the leasts of the particulars . . . With the regenerate, these series are according to the ordinations of the Societies in the Heavens . . .

5340. The preservation of the truth adjoined to good which is multiplied during the first times. Sig. and Ex.

—². As few know what truth adjoined to good is . . . something shall be said about it. Truth-verum—is conjoined with good when man finds delight in doing what is good to the neighbour for the sake of truth and good . . . When man is in this affection, the truths which he hears, or reads, or thinks, are conjoined with good, as is usually perceptible . . .

5342. That truths adjoined to good are stored up in the interiors of the natural mind, and are there preserved for use in after life, especially in temptations. Sig. and Ex.

— For 'the seven years of plenty'=the truths multiplied at first; 'the corn put in the cities'=that those truths adjoined to good are stored up in man's interiors; and 'the seven years of famine' and the sustenance then = a state of regeneration by truths adjoined to good, stored up in the interiors. Fully ex.

5343. For all truths joined to good are arranged in series; and the series is such that in the midst or inmost of each one there is truth joined to good, and round about it are the truths proper and suitable thereto, and so on in order to the outermost . . . The series themselves, too, are similarly arranged in relation to one another, but are varied according to the changes of state. That there are such arrangements of truth joined to good, is presented to the very sight in the other life. . . . These arrangements originate from those of the angelic Societies; for . . . so are the series of truths joined to good arranged in the regenerate. Sig.

5345. The multiplying of truth from good. Sig. and Ex. . . For truth in the interiors is never multiplied from any other source than good. The multiplying of truth which is not from good, is not the multiplying of truth, because it is not truth, however much it may appear to be so in the external form. It is a sort of image with no life in it, and, being dead, it does not approach truth; for truth, to be truth in man, must live from good, that is, through good from the Lord; and, when it so lives, multiplying may be predicated of it.

— That the multiplying of truth is solely from good, may be evident from this: that nothing can be multiplied except from something similar to a marriage; and truth cannot enter into marriage with anything but good . . .

5346. That the truth in which is the Celestial from the Divine is without limit. Sig. and Ex.

5355. What the multiplication of truth from good is: When man is in good, that is, in love towards the neighbour, he is also in the love of truth . . . for good is in truth as the soul in its body. As, therefore, good multiplies truth, so it propagates itself; and if it is the good of genuine charity, it propagates itself in truth, and by truth, indefinitely; for there is no limit to good or to truth. . . . In the Church at this day there is rarely any multiplication of truth, because there is no good of genuine charity. It is believed to be sufficient to know the dogmas . . . and to confirm them . . . But one who is in the good of genuine charity, and hence in the affection of truth, is not content with this; but wants to be enlightened from the Word as to what truth is, and to see the truth before he confirms it. He sees it, too, from good, because the apperception of truth is from good; for the Lord is in good, and gives the apperception. When a man receives truth in this way, it increases indefinitely. Ex.

5376. How the case is with the privation of truth in the Natural: The man who is born within the Church, learns, from infancy, what the truth of faith is . . . But when he grows up, he begins either to confirm or deny the truths of faith he has learned; for he then looks at those truths with his Own sight, and thus causes them to be either appropriated or rejected; for nothing can be appropriated to anyone, which is not acknowledged from his Own sight, that is, which he does not know from himself, and not from somebody else, to be so. Therefore the truths he had absorbed from childhood could not enter any further into his life than the first entrance . . . With those who the Lord foresees will suffer themselves to be regenerated, those truths are exceedingly multiplied, for they are in the affection of knowing truths; but when they come nearer to the very act of regeneration, they are as it were deprived of those truths, for they are drawn inward, and then the man appears to be in desolation: nevertheless those truths are successively let back into the Natural, and are there conjoined with good, while the man is being regenerated. But with those who the Lord foresees will not suffer themselves to be regenerated, truths are indeed usually multiplied, for they are in the affection of knowing such things for the sake of reputation, honour, and gain; yet when they advance in years, and submit those truths to their own sight, they either do not believe them, or deny them, or turn them into falsities: thus with them truths are not withdrawn inward, but are cast forth, although they still remain in the memory for the sake of ends in the world, though without life. This state also is called 'desolation,' and is (really such). Tr. and ill.

5385. 'The kidneys'=the things of truth; and 'the heart,' the things of good; because the kidneys purify the serum, and the heart the blood itself.

5396a. (In Gen.xlii.) it treats of the influx and conjunction of the Celestial of the Spiritual with the truths of faith which are of the Church in the Natural. 5400^e. 5574.

5397. It first treats of the endeavour to appropriate these truths, by means of the scientifics of the Church without a medium, with truth from the Divine; but in vain.

5402. A disposition to procure truths by means of scientifics. Sig. and Ex. . . The doctrinals of the Church . . . are nothing but scientifics, before one has seen from the Word whether they are true, and has thus made them his own. There are two ways of procuring the truths which are of faith: by means of doctrinals, and by means of the Word. When a man procures them by doctrinals only, he then has faith in those who have drawn them from the Word, and he confirms them in himself as truths because others have said so . . . But when he procures them from the Word, and confirms them in himself as truths, from the Word, he believes them because they are from the Divine . . . Everyone within the Church first procures the truths of faith from doctrinals, and also must so procure them, because he has not yet sufficient strength of judgment to enable him to see them from the Word for himself; but then those truths are nothing to him but scientifics. But when he is able to view them from his own judgment, if he then does not consult the Word in order to see from it whether they are truths, they remain with him as mere scientifics; whereas if he then consults the Word from the affection and end of knowing truths, he then, when he has found them, procures for himself the things of faith from the genuine fountain, and they are appropriated to Him by the Divine. 5405. 5432, Sig. and fully ex.

[A.] 5409. The ten sons of Jacob . . . = the truths of the external Church; and his two sons by Rachel = the truths of the internal Church.

5411. Truth—verum—from the Divine ('Joseph') cannot have communication with truths in general in the Natural ('the ten sons'), without the medium ('Benjamin') which is called the Spiritual of the Celestial. Sig. and Ex. 5419. 5422.

5422². (For) when internal truths are viewed by external truths without conjunction by the medium, the internal truths appear quite 'strange' to the external truths, and sometimes even opposite; when in fact the opposition is not in the internal, but in the external truths; for without conjunction by the medium these cannot view the former except from the light of the world separated from the light of Heaven. Sig. 5427. 5428, exams. 5430.

5432. It here treats of the truths of the Church, that they are to be appropriated to the Natural, and that they cannot be appropriated to it except by influx from the Celestial of the Spiritual through the medium. 5435, Sig. and Ex. 5505.

5433². Those who learn truths not for the sake of truth and life, but for the sake of gain, cannot but think in themselves that the truths of the Church are not truths. Sig. and Ex. 5439.

— But when a man is in the affection of truth for the sake of truth, that is, for the sake of the Lord's Kingdom, where the Divine truth is, thus for the sake of the Lord Himself, he is then among the Angels; nor does he despise gain . . .

5433⁶. 'To cover the naked with a garment' = to instruct in truths those who desire them.

5434. That although with such, truths are not truths, still they are in themselves truths. Sig. and Ex. 5436. 5437.

5440. For when truths are being conjoined through good, they put on as it were brotherhood among themselves. Sig. and Ex. 5441. 5442.

5449. For the truths of the Church, in whomsoever they are, without conjunction through good with the interior man, have as the end nothing but gain; but when they have been conjoined through good with the interior man, they have as the end good and truth itself.

5464. Those who are in the truths of the Church only for the sake of gain, can, equally with others, declare how the case is with truths: that, for instance, truths are not appropriated to anyone unless they are conjoined with the interior man; and that they cannot be conjoined therewith except through good . . . These and the like things they sometimes see equally as well as others, and sometimes, in appearance, more clearly; but this is only when they are speaking about them to others; but when (by themselves) they see the contrary; and yet though they see the contrary, and at heart deny truths, they can still persuade others that the case is so, and even that they themselves are in truth. The cupidity of gain, honour, and reputation for their own sake adopts all means of persuading, and none more readily than such things as in themselves are truths; for these have in them a hidden power to attract minds. Everyone, not a fool, is endowed with the faculty of understanding whether things are truths, to the end that by means of the intellectual part he may be reformed . . . But when he has gone into perverted ways, and has entirely rejected the things which are of the faith of the Church, then, although he has the same faculty of understanding truths, he no longer wants to understand them, but turns away as soon as he hears them.

5465. That in this way truths will have life. Sig. and Ex.

5477. That from the natural light in which these truths are, it is not believed that all things are apparent in spiritual light. Sig. and Ex.

—². All the truths of faith which man acquires from infancy are apprehended by means of such objects and derivative ideas as are from the light of the world; thus all are apprehended naturally.

5478. That the truths of the Church are apprehended by those who are in good . . . quite differently from what they are by those who are not in good, seems like a paradox, but still is the truth. For truths are spiritually apprehended by those who are in good, because they are in spiritual light; but they are naturally apprehended by those who are not in good, because they are in natural light. Hence truths have truths continually conjoined with them by those who are in good; but they have very many fallacies, and also falsities, conjoined with them by those who are not in good. The reason is that with those who are in good, truths extend themselves into Heaven; whereas with those who are not in good, truths do not extend themselves into Heaven. Hence with those who are in good, truths are full; whereas with those who are not in good they are almost empty. This fulness and emptiness are not apparent to man so long as he lives in the world, but they are to the Angels. Did man but know how much of Heaven there is in truths conjoined with good, he would feel entirely differently about faith.

5481. For the Celestial of the Spiritual, or truth from the Divine, inflows into the truths which are in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

5489². But with the regenerate, the scientifics which are truths of the Church, have adjoined to them such things as are of love towards the neighbour and of love to God, thus genuine goods. These are stored up by the Lord in the truths of the Church with all who are being regenerated; and therefore when the Lord insinuates into them a zeal for good, those truths come forth in their order; and when He insinuates a zeal for truth, that good is present, and animates it.

5490. That [good] would support the truths which they had. Sig. and Ex.

5492. That truths were gathered into scientifics. Sig. and Ex.

5510^o. There are two things in the Natural: scientifics, and the truths of the Church. It has been shown that the Celestial of the Spiritual . . . arranged scientifics in order in the Natural; and now the truths of the Church . . . are treated of. Scientifics must be arranged in order in the Natural before the truths of the Church, because the latter are apprehended from the former . . . Man is not aware that every truth of the Church, which is called a truth of faith, is founded upon his scientifics, and that he apprehends it, keeps it in the memory, and calls it out of the memory, by means of ideas formed from the scientifics with him.

—³. In the other life . . . it appears with what shades, or with what rays of light, men have held the truth of the doctrine of the Church. With some that truth appears among falsities; with some among jests, and scandals; with some among the fallacies of the senses; with some among apparent truths; and so on. If the man has been in good . . . then from that good, as from flame from Heaven, truths are illumined; and the fallacies of the senses in which they are, are beautifully irradiated; and, when innocence is insinuated by the Lord, those fallacies appear like truths.

5527. That in this way truths will be made fruitful from good, and will all turn to use and profit. Sig. and Ex. 5529.

—². For he who is in good is in the faculty of clearly seeing the truths which flow from general [truths], and this in a continual series. From experience.

—^e. But the truths which are made fruitful by good, do not remain truths; but are committed to life, and then become uses.

5530. The orderly arrangements of truths bestowed freely. Sig. and Ex. 5531, Ex.

5563². Truths, being determined according to the form of Heaven, flow as it were spontaneously, freely, gently, and softly.

—^e. (Such) have skulls like ebony, through which no rays of light, which are truths, penetrate.

5566. Fixed stars = truths.

5579. When truths failed. Sig. and Ex.

5580^o. How it is that truths are from scientifics. Sig. and Ex.

5618. The choice things of the Church in the truths of faith. Sig. and Ex.

5620. For every truth, and especially every truth of good, has its delight. Ill.

5623. Truth—verum—received . . . according to the capacities. Sig. and Ex. . . The capacities of receiving truths are altogether according to good. (Continued under Good.)

5624. That by means of the truth given freely in the exterior Natural they were to submit themselves as far as possible. Sig. and Ex.

5626. For when the truth of faith passes into the will it becomes the good of faith; for the truth then passes into the man's life, and (is then) regarded not as something to be known, but as something to be done; consequently it changes its essence, and becomes actual.

5632. That the Church, before these things are done, will be deprived of its truths. Sig. and Ex.

5639. The apperception that there was a spiritual medium with the truths. Sig. and Ex.

— . For the truths represented by Jacob's ten sons were now to be conjoined with the truth from the Divine which is Joseph. 5641. 5645, Ex. 5648. 5698.

5649. That as the truth in the exterior Natural appears to be given freely, they (supposed) that they would be subjected (to the Internal, and would thus lose their freedom, and all the delight of life). Sig. and Ex. 5650. 5651. 5657. 5660, Ex. 5661.

5651. The truths signified by Jacob's sons are in the interior Natural.

5658. Truths—vera—according to the state of each. Sig. and Ex.

5662. The internal sense here treats of a change of state: that they no longer procure truths, and through them good, by their own power; but are gifted with them from the Lord. 5663. 5664.

5664a. That it will seem as truth procured by them. Sig. and Ex.

—². It is known in the Church that truth is given by the Lord . . . but still it appears as if the truths of faith were procured by man; for he is profoundly ignorant that they flow in, because he does not perceive it; for his interiors are closed.

—³. But it is one thing to know the truths of faith, and quite another to believe them. They who merely know the truths of faith, put them in the memory just as they do other matters of any knowledge. These truths man can procure for himself without such an influx; but they have no life, as is evident from the fact that an evil man can know the truths of faith as well as an upright one. . . But when an evil man brings them forth, he looks in them all for either glory or profit to himself; and hence it is the love of self and of the world which breathes into them, and makes a sort of life, such as is called spiritual death; and hence it is that when he brings them forth, it is from the memory, and not from the heart. Whereas he who believes the truths of faith, brings them forth from the heart at the same time as from the lips; for with him the truths of faith are so rooted as to have their root in the external memory, and to grow thence towards the interiors, like fruit trees; and like trees they adorn themselves with leaves, and at last with blossoms, for the sake of the end of bearing fruit. Such a man aims at nothing else through the truths of faith than uses . . . These are the truths which man cannot procure for himself, even in the smallest degree; but they are bestowed on him freely by the Lord, and this at every moment of his life; nay . . . without number at every moment. But as man is of such a nature as to have no perception of their flowing in—since if he had the perception, he would resist, because he would believe that he would lose his proprium, and with it his freedom, and with his freedom his delight, and so become a thing of naught—it is therefore brought about that man does not know but that he procures truths for himself. This is what is meant by its being said that it will seem as truth procured by them. Moreover . . . man must think truth as of himself; but when he reflects, he should acknowledge that it is from the Lord.

[A.]5665. That he adjoined will to truths. Sig. and Ex.

5668. A general influx of truth from the Internal. Sig. and Ex.

5700^e. When scientifics are in inverted order . . . truths are outside, and (therefore) can have no communication with Heaven, where truths reign.

5704. According to the order of truths under good. Sig. and Ex. . . For the truths of the Church . . . do not come into any order except through Christian good, that is, through the good of charity and of love to the Lord; for the Lord is in good, and hence Heaven is in it; consequently, life is in good, thus living active force; but never in truth without good. That good arranges truths in its own likeness. Ex.

5735. A sufficiency of truth anew in the exterior Natural. Sig. and Ex.

5736. Interior truth bestowed on the medium. Sig. and Ex. The medium (also), as to truth, (is) interior truth, thus spiritual truth.

5747. That the interior truth with them was received from the Celestial. Sig. and Ex.

—². The truth which is bestowed by the Lord is first received as if it were not given; for before regeneration man supposes that he procures truth for himself; and (thus) is in spiritual theft. . . But still their being accused of theft (of the silver cup) was that conjunction might be effected; for until man is regenerated, he cannot but so believe. He indeed says with his lips . . . that all the truth of faith and good of charity are from the Lord, yet he does not believe it until faith has been implanted in good. 5749, Ex.

5771. 'The cup found in Benjamin's sack'=that interior truth from the Celestial was with the medium.

5773. Mourning on account of the loss of truths of their Own, which they could no longer claim for themselves. Sig. and Ex.

5774. That truths were brought back from sensuous things into scientifics. Sig. and Ex.

—². Sensuous things are one thing, scientifics another, and truths another. They succeed one another; for scientifics have existence from sensuous things; and truths from scientifics. Ex. . . Every man when a child thinks and apprehends things from sensuous things; when older he (does so) from scientifics; and afterwards from truths. . . These three remain distinct, so that a man is sometimes in sensuous things, as when he thinks only of what strikes the senses; sometimes in scientifics, as when he elevates his mind from sensuous things, and thinks more interiorly; and sometimes in truths which have been concluded from scientifics, as is the case when he thinks still more interiorly. . . Man can also bring down truths into scientifics, and see them in these . . .

5804. Truth—verum (from spiritual good) which is new. Sig. and Ex. . . For the man who is being regenerated is first led to good by means of truth; for man does not know what spiritual good is except through truth or doctrine drawn from the Word. In this way he is initiated into good. Afterwards, when he has been so initiated, he is no longer led to good through truth, but to truth through good, since he then not only sees from good the truths which he knew before, but he also produces from it new truths which he did not and could not know before; for good is attended with this, that it longs for truths; for it is as it were nourished with them, for it is perfected by them. These new truths differ greatly from the truths which he knew previously; for these had but little life, whereas those which he now acquires have life from good.

—². When a man has come to good through truth, he is 'Israel'; and the truth which he then receives from good, that is, through good from the Lord, is new truth, which is represented by 'Benjamin' while he was with his father. By means of this truth, good becomes fruitful in the Natural, and produces numberless truths wherein is good. In this way the Natural is regenerated.

5806. That this new truth is the only truth of the Church. Sig. and Ex. . . The truth which Benjamin represents while with his father, and which is called new truth, is that which alone makes man to be the Church; for in this truth, or in these truths, there is life from good. That is to say, the man who is in truths of faith from good, he is the Church; but not the man who is in truths of faith, and not in the good of charity. For the truths with the latter are dead, even though they are the same truths.

5812. That (this new) truth cannot be separated from spiritual good. Sig. and Ex.

—². This truth is called 'a boy' because it is born last; for it is not born until the man has been regenerated. He then receives newness of life through this new truth conjoined with good.

5820. Unless truth thus becomes good (by being willed and done), it does not benefit the man in any way in the other life; for when he arrives there it is dissipated, because it does not agree with his will . . . He who has learned the truths of faith (here), not for the sake of willing and doing them . . . but only that he may know and teach them for the sake of honour and gain, although he may be considered most learned here, is yet in the other life deprived of all truths, and is left to his own will . . . And, what is wonderful, he is then averse to all the truths of faith, and denies them in himself, however much he had previously confirmed them. To turn truths into good by willing and doing them . . . is what is meant by appropriating the good of truth, which is signified by, 'Buy us a little food.'

5822². For the new truth which Benjamin represents is in the Natural, because it is from the spiritual good from the Natural which his father, as 'Israel,' represents. Ex.

5826². When truth is implanted in the will—which is perceived by this, that one is affected by truth for the end that he may live according to it—then there is internal good and truth; and, when man is in this good and truth, the Kingdom of the Lord is in him, and consequently he is a Church, and together with others constitutes the general Church. (Thus) in order that the Church may be a Church, there must be . . . the good of truth, but by no means truth alone . . . Let everyone think in himself whether truth would be anything unless it had life as the end. Ex.

—5. Moreover, that man may be regenerated, and become the Church, he must be introduced through truth to good; and he is introduced when truth becomes truth in the will and act. This truth is good, and is called the good of truth, and it produces new truths continually . . . The truth which is thus produced is what is called internal truth; and the good from which it is, is called internal good; for nothing becomes internal until it has been implanted in the will. . . So long as good and truth are . . . in the understanding only, they are outside of the man.

5877. That the Celestial Internal gave the faculty of perception to the truths in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

5880. That the truths in the Natural were not yet in a state to speak. Sig. and Ex.

5881. A new arrangement of the truths in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

—The order in which scientifics and truths are arranged in man's memory, is unknown to man . . . They cohere fascicularly, and the fascicles themselves also cohere with one another, and this according to that connection of Things which the man has taken up. . . Scientifics and truths are arranged into these fascicular forms solely by the man's loves; into infernal forms by the loves of self and of the world; but into heavenly forms by love towards the neighbour and love to God; and therefore when a man is being regenerated . . . a commotion takes place among truths, for they then undergo another arrangement. This commotion manifests itself by anxiety. Sig.

—3. I have perceived that when evil Spirits have injected evils and falsities, the Angels have kept me in the truths which had been implanted . . . from which it is evident that the truths which are of faith, inrooted through the affection of truth, are the plane into which the Angels operate; and therefore they who have not this plane cannot be led by the Angels, but suffer themselves to be led by Hell; for the operation of the Angels cannot in that case be fixed anywhere, but passes through. But this plane cannot be acquired unless the truths of faith have been put into act, and thus implanted in the will, and through this in the life. It is also worthy of mention that the operation of the Angels into the truths of faith with a man rarely takes place manifestly, so as to excite thought about that truth; but there is produced a general idea of such things as agree with that truth, with affection. Ex.

5934. A perception that the truths of the Church are present in the Natural. Sig. and Ex. . . In the Natural there are scientifics of various kinds (more and more interior, enum.); but those which relate to spiritual life are the most interior of all; and these are the truths of the Church; which, in so far as they are solely from doctrine with a man, are nothing but scientifics. But when they are from the good of love, they ascend above scientifics, for they are then in spiritual light, from which light they look at scientifics in their order beneath them.

5937³. He who would have perception in spiritual things, must be in the affection of truth from good, and must continually long to know truths. From this his Intellectual is illuminated, and (then) it is granted him to perceive something inwardly in himself. But he who is not in the affection of truth, knows that which he knows to be so from what is doctrinal of the Church he has faith in, and because a priest, presbyter, or monk has said that it is so. . . Hence it is that everyone remains in the dogma in which he was born . . . (and) if the veriest truths were told them, and also confirmed, they would not perceive one whit that they are truths; they would appear to them as falsities.

5939. That they should infill every truth with good. Sig. and Ex.

5951. What spiritual truths in the Natural are, shall be told. The truths of faith, outside of man, Spirit, or Angel, are not the truths of faith, for they have not been applied to any subject, in which they become [them]; but when they are applied to man, Spirit, or Angel, as a subject, they then become the truths of faith, but with a difference according to the state of life of each person. With those who are learning them for the first time they are only scientifics; afterwards, if they reverence them holily, they advance further, and become truths of the Church; and, when they are affected with them, and live according to them, they then become spiritual truths; for the good of love and of charity, which is solely from the Spiritual World, then imbues them, and makes them live; for to be affected with them and to live according to them is from that good.

—2. The truths which are called of faith, with those who do not live according to them, have appeared to me like white threads, and, with those who had these truths, but nothing of good, they appeared brittle; but with those who live according to them, they appeared like fibres from the brain, filled with spirit, and soft ; thus these latter truths were animate ; but the former inanimate ; from which it may be known that the truths with men are circumstanced according to the state of life of each person. The truths which are represented by the sons of Jacob, are truths not yet spiritual, because not yet made of the life ; but the truths which are represented by them as the sons of Israel, are spiritual, because, from their having been made of the life, they have become imbued with the good of love and of charity. These truths are meant here, because it has just treated of the initiation to conjunction of truths in the Natural ('the sons of Jacob'), with internal good ('Joseph'), through the medium ('Benjamin'), and also through spiritual good ('Israel').

[A.] 5952². For the Lord does not teach truths openly to anyone, but leads through good to think what is true ; and also inspires, unknown to the man, an apperception and consequent choice that this is true, because the Word says so, and because this truth is consistent. Thus the Lord furnishes—aptat—truths according to the reception of good by each person ; and . . . this is done according to each person's affection. Sig.

5954. Truths—vera—initiated in good. Sig. and Ex.

— When the conjunction (of the external man with the internal) takes place, then truths are changed and become new, for they receive life from the influx of good. Rep. (by the sons of Israel now changing their garments).

—⁸. He who has not acquired for himself truths—or things like truth, as is the case with the Gentiles—and applied them to life, however much he may suppose himself to be in good, yet is not ; for as he has no truths from the Word, or from his religiosity, he suffers himself to be led by means of reasonings equally by evil Spirits as by good ones, and thus cannot be defended by the Angels. Sig. and Ex.

6000³. The first time of the Church is meant by 'the day,' for then truth is received because they are in good ; and the last time is meant by 'the night,' for then nothing of truth is received, because they are not in good ; for when man is not in good, that is, not in charity towards the neighbour, if the veriest truths are told him, he does not receive them ; for he then does not at all perceive what is true, because the light of truth falls into such things as are of the body and of the world, in which alone is any interest felt, and which alone are loved and esteemed as what is real . . . and hence the light of truth is absorbed and suffocated in thick darkness . . . which is signified by 'the night cometh when no one can work.' Such also is the time at this day. [A.D. 1753.]

6004. That natural truth, with all things belonging to it, must be initiated into the scientifics of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

—³. Truths—vera—initiated into scientifics. (See Know—scire, here, and at 6023.)

6012. That the truths which are spiritual promoted natural truth. Sig. and Ex. . . Natural truth cannot be promoted by anything else than spiritual truth ; for thence comes its life and force of acting.

6013. Without innocence and charity, natural truth cannot be promoted by spiritual truths ; for truth, to be genuine, must derive its essence and life from charity, and this latter from innocence ; for the interior things which vivify truth follow one another in this order : innocence is inmost ; charity is lower ; and lowest is the work of charity from truth or according to truth ; (for) the Third Heaven is that of innocence ; the Second one is that of charity in which is innocence from the Third ; and the First Heaven is that of truth in which is charity from the Second, and in this innocence from the Third.

6017. The truths procured by the prior truths which are of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

6020. Truths—vera, and truths from truths, in their order. Sig. and Ex.

6023. Scientifics are ruled by truths, when truth is acknowledged because the Lord has said so in the Word. (Continued under Know—scire.)

6024². The quality of the truths [which are] from the Spiritual, in order. Sig.

6047². The subject here treated of (in the account of the descent of Israel and his sons into Egypt) is the conjunction of the truths of the Church with the scientifics of it. (But) the beginning is not to be made from scientifics, and an entrance thus made into the truths of faith through them, for the scientifics with man are from sensuous things, thus from the world, from which come innumerable fallacies ; but the beginning is to be made from the truths of faith, in this way : the doctrinals of the Church are first to be learned, and next search is to be made from the Word as to whether they are truths ; for they are not truths because the leaders of the Church have said so, and their followers confirm them ; for in this way the doctrinals of all Churches and religions might be called truths . . . from which it is evident that the Word ought to be searched, and it ought to be seen there whether the doctrinals are truths. When this is done from the affection of truth, the man is enlightened by the Lord, so as to perceive, without knowing whence, what is truth ; and he is confirmed in it according to the good in which he is. If these truths disagree with the doctrinals, let him take heed lest he disturb the Church. (Continued under Know—scire.)

6052². Concerning the conjunction of truths with scientifics, it is further to be known, that the conjunction of the internal man with the external cannot possibly be effected unless truths are insinuated into scientifics. (Continued under Know—scire.) (This subject is further treated of in Gen.xlvii. 6059.) 6071, Ex. 6117^e.

6072. Perception concerning the truths of faith in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

6077. As to the life of truth being in scientifics. (Fully quoted under Know—scire.)

—³. At this day few know that truths and scientifics are distinct from each other. The reason is that few are in the truths of faith from charity ; and the truths of faith in which there is not charity are nothing but scientifics. (Continued under Know—scire.)

6078. That truths nourish the spiritual life. Ex. and Ill.

6084². Scientifics and truths are the objects of the internal sight. (Fully quoted under Know-scire.)

6089. The presence of general truth from the Internal. Sig. and Ex. . . 'Jacob,' here, represents truth in general, because his 'sons' represent truths in particular; and the reason (this general truth) is from the Internal, is that 'Joseph' is the Internal, from which comes the truth in the Natural. General truth is called 'the father' of Joseph, because general truth is that which is first of all insinuated with man, and this general truth is then enriched with particular truths, and at last there comes into existence from the Internal a mental view of these, that is [there come into existence] reason and understanding. This is very evident with man, for his judgment grows from infancy, and the case is the same with spiritual truths and goods when man is being born anew, or regenerated. But after the Internal has come into existence from the general truth in the Natural, the state is changed, and the Internal no longer acknowledges the truth in the Natural as its father, but as its servant, as is shown in Joseph's dream about his father—that the sun, etc. should bow before him; and for the same reason Jacob was so often called, before Joseph, his 'servant,' by his sons. Moreover, Joseph was lord in all Egypt, and so was over his father.

6115. All scientifics, as well as all truths of every kind whatever, in order to be anything, must be referred to a general, and must be placed and contained in a general, and under a general; otherwise they are at once dissipated. (Continued under Know-scire.)

6119. That otherwise, owing to the lack of truth, there would be spiritual death. Sig. and Ex.

— . Spiritual life consists in exercises according to truths, consequently it consists in uses; for they who are in spiritual life ask and long for truths for the sake of life, that is, that they may live according to them . . . and therefore in proportion as they can imbibe truths—according to which uses may come to pass—in the same proportion they are in spiritual life, because in the same proportion they are in the light of intelligence and wisdom. When, therefore, truths fail, as happens when the state of shade comes which is signified by 'evening,' the spiritual life labours . . .

6122. If truth is no longer visible. Sig. and Ex. . . Truth-verum—is said not to be visible, because in a state of desolation truth appears as if it had fled away; yet it is present; for all the truth and good ever given by the Lord to man, Spirit, or Angel, remains, and nothing of them is taken away; but in a state of desolation they are obscured by the proprium, so that they do not appear; but when the state of light returns, they are presented to view as present and visible. 6141.

6146. That scientific truths were referred to doctrinals. Sig. and Ex. . . This follows from what goes before: that truths were referred to the general in the Natural; for doctrinals are the generals to which truths are referred; for the doctrine of the Church is divided into heads, and each head is a general of the Church.

6180. (Israel said to Joseph) 'Do with me mercy and Truth' (Gen. xlvii. 29) = humiliation; for 'to do mercy' = the good of love; and 'to do Truth' = the truth of faith . . . because all truth is of faith, and therefore, in the Hebrew, faith is meant by the same word.

—². The expression 'mercy and Truth,' ill.

6195. Whereas truths do not conjoin, but the affections of truth.

6222. The Intellectual of the Church ('Ephraim') is to perceive from the Word what the truth of faith is, and what the good of charity . . . The things of the literal sense are general vessels which receive truths; and the quality of these vessels does not appear except when they have received truths . . . Thus they are only generals, which must be first imbibed by man, in order that he may be able to receive, adaptedly to them, particulars and singulars. . . For the Intellectual of the Church is, that when a man is reading the Word, and is carefully comparing one thing with another, he perceives thence what is to be believed, and what is to be done. This does not happen except in such as are enlightened by the Lord . . . and this enlightenment does not take place in any but those who long to know truths, not for the sake of reputation and glory, but for the sake of life and use. (Continued under ENLIGHTEN, and UNDERSTANDING.)

—⁵. The Intellectual of the Church consists in perceiving and seeing, before any dogma is confirmed, whether it is true or not, and in confirming it then.

6225^e. Those are in the internal of the Church who are in the good of charity, which is . . . the good of truth, and likewise spiritual good ('Israel'); and those are in the external of the Church who are in the truth of faith, and not as yet manifestly in good, but in whose truth however there is good. This is 'Jacob.'

6256. As the spiritual are relatively in what is obscure, they set the truth which is of faith in the first place, as Israel did here, in setting Ephraim before Manasseh. See 6267. 6269. 6287.

6269³. What a different face the Church would have, if the good of charity were in the first place, that is, if it were the essential; and the truth of faith were in the second place, that is, the formal of it. Des.

6285. 'To grow into a multitude' = extension; for truths . . . extend themselves round about from the inmost as from a centre; and the greater the extension thence is, and the more perfectly it is according to heavenly order, the more perfect is the state.

6289. That the spiritual are in what is obscure, is evident from the fact that, before they have been regenerated, they are in thick darkness as to truth and good; and that, while being regenerated, it is truth such as is in the doctrine of their Church which they acknowledge, in which truth they have faith whether it is truth or not truth; and still this truth is that which becomes good with them when it becomes of the will and thence of the life; and then it is that good which is called the good of truth, also the good of faith, and also spiritual good or the good of the Spiritual Church. . . But still the good from such truth, even with the Gentiles, is accepted by the Lord, when it has as its first principle charity towards the neighbour, and in this charity there is innocence.

[A.] 6295. That truth from good shall also be increased, thus the celestial man. For 'Manasseh,' concerning whom this is said, = the good of the Voluntary in the Natural, born from the Internal . . . and thus the celestial man, but the external celestial man, or the man of the external Celestial Church; whereas 'Joseph' = the man of the internal Celestial Church. Ex.

—². The truth of good which is of the celestial man is indeed called truth, but it is good. Ex.

—^e. For the celestial man is such that he does not reason from truth, nor about truth; for he has perception from good, that is, through good from the Lord, that it is so or is not so; and yet the good of charity with him is that which is called truth, but celestial truth.

6296. 'Nevertheless his younger brother shall become greater than he' = that good from truth will get more of increase, thus the spiritual man. . . 'Ephraim,' here, = good from truth, because he represents the man of . . . the external Spiritual Church; and this man is constituted by good from truth.

—². The reason good from truth will get more increase than the good from which is truth . . . is that the Voluntary of man has been continually depraved, . . . and the Lord has provided that man may be regenerated as to the intellectual part. Ex.

6297. That the truth which is of faith shall reign. Sig. and Ex.

6364. 'The brethren' (of Judah) = the truths which are of the Celestial Church.

6366. That truths will of themselves submit themselves. Sig. and Ex.

6372. Of this truth (from good) it is said that it should be removed 'when Shiloh came,' that is to say, its Power should be removed . . . for at that time the Celestial Kingdom exercised its Power through this truth, and therefore this truth is called 'a lawgiver.' Ill.

6374. That from His Divine Human should proceed truths which could be received. Sig. and Ex.

6384. Life where there is the conclusion of truth from scientifics. Sig. and Ex. (See Know-scire.)

6396. 'Dan' = those who are in truth and not yet in good; (that is) those who are in some good of life from truth, but not yet from good. For the man who is being regenerated is first in truth, and not in any good of life from truth; next, he is in the good of life from truth, but not yet from good; afterwards, when he has been regenerated, he is in the good of life from good, and he then apperceives truth from good, and multiplies it with himself. These are the degrees of regeneration.

. . . The good with those who are in the good of life from truth lies hidden in truth, deeply stored up; and it gives them the affection of truth, and impels them to live according to truth. These are in the Lord's Kingdom, but as they do not do what is good from good, but from truth . . . because it is so commanded, they are among those who are in the First Heaven. Rep.

6397. That this truth, here called 'Dan,' is one of the truths in general which are represented by the tribes of Israel. Sig. and Ex.

—'. 'To judge' = truth in its office. Ill.

6401. 'To fall backward' = recession from truth.

6405. That works without judgment will deprive [those who do them] of truth. Sig. and Ex. . . For those who do works from truth, and not yet from good, have the understanding obscured. (Continued under Good.)

—². 'Gad,' here = those who hallucinate about truth, and yet do works from it; thus the works are not of truth, and still less works of good; and by works from this source they are deprived of truth; for as soon as a man who is in truth and not yet in good carries anything into act from a religious principle, he afterwards defends it as if it were the veriest truth, and remains in it; nor does he admit amendment except in so far as he comes into good . . . Thus works deprive him of truth; besides that he believes to be truths things which are not truths; for these persons also, like those signified by 'Dan,' judge from what is sensuous, thus without judgment. Examp. These also are in the Lord's Kingdom, but at the threshold. . . In a word, by 'Gad' are represented those who call that truth which is not truth, and from this non-truth do works; and hence their works are as the truths. . . What saves them is the intention of doing what is good, and something of innocence in their ignorance.

6406. They who do works from truth, and not yet from good, cannot but occasion a want of order in their Natural . . . and if this be without order, the things which inflow from the interiors also become devoid of order; and the things which are devoid of order are dark and opaque, and therefore they cannot see what truth is, but in that opacity and darkness they seize upon as truth that which is not truth, and from this non-truth they perform works.

6410. Pleasantness from truth. Sig. and Ex. . . Activity with those in Heaven consists in performing uses . . . and in relishing truths with uses as the end; and this is the pleasantness of truth to them.

6418. Fruitfulness from the truth which is from the Word. Sig. and Ex.

6419². 'A wall' = the truths of faith which defend.

6423. That he is safe by the combating truth of doctrine. Sig. and Ex.

6427. The Spiritual Kingdom consists of those who are in the truth of faith, but who make this truth of the life, and thus good. . . The truth of faith in the Lord's Spiritual Church is various; for that is said to be truth in one Church which in another is said not to be truth, and this according to the doctrine of each; thus doctrinals are what are called truths: these truths are what are conjoined with good, and make the good of the Spiritual Church : hence the good becomes such as is the truth ; for good has its quality from truths. (Thus) the good of the Spiritual Church is impure.

6432⁵. 'To strip naked' = to deprive of all truth.

—, 'To make her as a wilderness, set her as a land of drought, and slay her by thirst' = to extinguish all truth.

6435. Those in the Celestial Kingdom are . . . not in the truth which is called the truth of faith, for this is in the good of that Kingdom, inasmuch that it cannot be seen separated from good . . . and instead of the truth of faith they have the good of mutual love. But . . . the external of the Spiritual Kingdom is the truth of faith.

6502^e. 'The leaf which was for medicine' = the truth of faith.

6524². 'Congregation' is predicated of truths.

6534². 'To ride upon the word of Truth' (Ps. xlv. 4) = to be in the understanding itself of truth.

6553. The life of the truths of the Church in scientifics. Sig. and Ex.

6609. Truths—vera—were represented (in clouds) by an azure colour mingled with a beautiful shining whiteness ; the appearances of truth, by an obscure whiteness.

6623. The Angels know the quality of a Spirit or a man from one word which comes forth from the thought. When the word truth was spoken by a number of Spirits in succession, it was at once heard whether it was hard, harsh, soft, infantile, affectionate, innocent, full, empty, containing what is false, simulated, closed, or open, and of all these in what degree.

6628. In the Ancient Churches . . . they acknowledged as men of the Church all who lived in the good of charity, and called them brethren, however they might differ in the truths which at this day are called of faith. In these the one instructed the other . . . and they were not indignant if the one did not accede to the opinion of the other, knowing that everyone receives truth in proportion as he is in good. N. 9.

6635. (Ex. i.) treats of the infestations of these truths of faith by the falsities and evils in the Natural . . . and of the consequent implantation and confirmation of truth from good.

6637. He who is not in spiritual good . . . and in spiritual truths . . . is not of the Church, however much he has been born within it. Ex.

6638. After truths had been initiated into scientifics. Sig. and Ex.

6639. For however much truths have been initiated (into scientifics), and the Church thus established with man, still scientifics and falsities are continually rising up and attacking the things which are of the Church with him. Rep. (by the Egyptians afflicting the sons of Israel.) 6652².

6641. All things which were from general truth. Sig. and Ex.

6652. For he who does not 'know' truth, and does not want to know it, is alienated from the truth of the Church. Sig.

6653. The reason truths are spoken of abstractedly, is that Spirits and Angels so think and speak. Ex.

6654. That the truths of the Church prevail over the alienated scientifics. Sig. and Ex.

6663. That the truths grew in proportion to the infestations. Sig. and Ex.

6664. That the truths were strengthened. Sig. and Ex.

6676. That if it were a truth they should destroy it as best they could. Sig. and Ex. . . (It is said) as best they could, because the evil cannot destroy the truths which the good have.

6682. Anger that truths were not being destroyed. Sig. and Ex.

6688. That truths were produced therein continually. Sig. and Ex.

6693. That they should immerse in falsities all the truths which appeared. Sig. and Ex.

6713. (Ex. ii.) treats of truth Divine ; of its beginnings and successive states with the man of the Church. 6716^e.

6716. The origin of truth [as being] from good. Sig. and Ex.

6717. How it is to be understood that truth, whose origin is from good, is conjoined with—conjectum sit—good. The truth which is insinuated by the Lord with a man who is being regenerated derives its origin from good. (Continued under Good.) But this truth, which is received . . . before regeneration, is not the genuine truth of good, but is the truth of doctrine ; for the man does not then consider whether it is truth, but acknowledges it because it is of the doctrine of the Church ; and so long as he does not consider whether it is truth . . . it is not his, and therefore neither is it appropriated to him. This state is the first state of the man who is being regenerated. (Continued further under Good.)

—³. But the truth which is being conjoined with good, which is here signified by 'there went a man of the house of Levi, and took to wife a daughter of Levi,' is not such truth as is received by man in the first state ; for that is the truth of the doctrine of that Church into which he was born ; but it is truth itself. Ex.

6732. The apperception of truth that it was cheap—vile—among the false Scientific. Sig. and Ex.

6734. Inquisitiveness to know the quality of that truth. Sig. and Ex.

6735. Investigation into its quality, and apperception that it was truth from the Divine. Sig. and Ex.

6739. The truth of the Church near to the religiosity there. Sig. and Ex.

6742^e. 'Singers' are predicated of the truths which are of the Spiritual Church.

6751. 'He was unto (Pharaoh's daughter) as a son' = that hence the affection of scientifics had the first truths . . . for 'to be unto her as a son' = to be in the first truths through scientifics ; for the first truths are born from scientifics, and thus are as the sons from a mother who is the affection of scientifics. The Scientific is the plane for the truths which are of the understanding and of faith. Man advances in the things of faith when being regenerated, almost as he does in the truths not of faith when he is growing up. Ex.

[A.] 6756. 'He went out unto his brethren' = conjunction with the truths of the Church.

6758. The alienated Scientific endeavouring to destroy the truth of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

6765. For within the Church there are those who are in the truth of faith, and those who are not in truth, as may be evident from the various heresies. Those who are in heresy, or not in the truth of faith, are here meant by 'him that was bad'; (whereas) 'a companion' = one who is in the truth of faith.

—². The case is this: When man is being regenerated he is let into combats against falsities, and is then kept by the Lord in the truth, but in that truth which he had persuaded himself to be truth; and from this truth the combat is waged against the falsity. Combat can be waged from truth not genuine, provided it is such that in some way it can be conjoined with good; and it is conjoined with good through innocence. . . . Hence it is that men within the Church can be regenerated from any doctrine whatever; but those pre-eminently who are in genuine truths.

6766. The perception that he was not yet so far advanced in the truths of faith as to settle disagreements within the Church. Sig. and Ex.

—². In the internal sense it here treats of the progress of Divine truth with the man who is being regenerated. The progress is such that the man is first able to discriminate between falsity and truth, for from the truth in which he is he can see what is false, because it is opposite; but he cannot, in this first time, settle disagreements among the truths of faith within the Church . . . for man is enlightened successively. . . . The man to whom this can be given must be of more advanced age, the interiors of whose understanding have been enlightened.

6769. That he was among alienated scientifics, and not yet in truths, so as to be safe. Sig. and Ex. . . . For they who are in truths are in safety wherever they go, even in the midst of the Hells. The reason those not in truths are not in safety, is that non-truths communicate with evil Spirits.

6771. That the false Scientific, perceiving this, wanted to destroy the truth which is of the law from the Divine. Sig. and Ex.

6772. Here begins the fifth state of the progression of truth Divine with the man who is being regenerated, which is one of separation from falsities, and of adjunction to the truths of simple good. Sig.

6780. Aid from the truths which are of the law from the Divine. Sig. and Ex.

6784. 'Moses' here represents truth such as is with those who are in the truth of simple good, which is signified by 'the daughters of the priest of Midian.' They are in such truth because they are men of the external Church.

—^e. If in the ignorance there is anything of innocence, this falsity from ignorance is accepted by the Lord as truth; for they who are in such receive truth.

6789. How, without this truth, could they be conjoined with the good of the Church? Sig. and Ex. . . . The scientific truth which is here represented by 'Moses' is the truth of the external Church. This truth comes forth from the truth which is of the law from the Divine, which also is 'Moses'; and the truth which is of the law from the Divine is the truth of the internal Church. External truth, unless it is from internal truth, cannot be conjoined with good. Examps.

6794. The truths thence derived. Sig. and Ex.

6800. Suffering on account of the attempt to subjugate the truth of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

6822. Charity is exercised when, by means of the truth which is of the Church, the neighbour is led to good. If in the Church anything is called truth which leads away from good, it is not worthy of mention, for it is not truth. Everyone ought to acquire truth for himself first from the doctrine of the Church, and afterwards from the Word of the Lord; and this must be the truth of his faith.

6827. That the law from the Divine instructed those in the truth of simple good. Sig. and Ex.

6828. After those in the truth of simple good had undergone temptations. Sig. and Ex.

6904. The life of truth in a state entirely removed from falsities, although in what is obscure. Sig. and Ex.

6959. The profanation of truth. Ex.

6960. The appropriation of truth. Sig. and Ex.

6978. The falsification of all truth, and its consequent privation in the Natural. Sig. and Ex.

6982. The truth which proceeds immediately from the Divine ('Moses') cannot be heard even by any Angel. Sig. and Ex. 6985. 7270, fully ex. under DIVINE TRUTH.

7009. The truth of doctrine ('Aaron'), which also proceeds from the Lord, but mediately. Sig. and Ex.

7011. The Divine power in truths. Sig. and Ex.

7012. The derivative enlightenment and confirmation of Truths. Sig. and Ex.

—². Everyone has enlightenment according to the quality of his affection of truth; and the quality of the affection of truth is such as is the good of life.

7037. That they should abstain from the infestation of the truths of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

7039. In the other life, the evil are completely devastated as to truth; the reason is, lest truths should serve them as means to evils. Sig. and Ex.

7044. Purification is effected through the truths of faith. Ex.

7055. There may be with man the truth which proceeds mediately from the Divine ('Aaron'), and yet it may not be conjoined with the truth which proceeds immediately from the Divine ('Moses'). For example: Those who think and teach according to the doctrine of their own Church . . . and do not know whether the things they think and teach are truths from any other source than that they are from the doctrine of their Church . . . may have truth which proceeds mediately from the Divine ; but it is not conjoined with the truth which proceeds immediately. If it were conjoined, they would have the affection of knowing truth for the sake of truth, and especially for the sake of life, and from this they would be endowed with a perception as to whether the doctrinals of their own Church were truths before they confirmed them, and they would see in every particular whether the confirmatory things were in agreement with the truth itself. (Another examp.) Such a conjunction (of the truth which proceeds mediately with the truth which proceeds immediately) rarely exists with man, but it exists with all in Heaven . . . nor is it possible with man, unless he has been so far regenerated that he can be elevated from what is sensuous towards his Rational, and thus be presented in the light of Heaven. Further ex. 7270, Ex. 7291.

7056. The conjunction (of the truth which proceeds mediately from the Divine with that which proceeds immediately) in the good of love. Sig. and Ex. . . This conjunction is not possible except in good ; for good is the soil itself, and truths are the seeds, which cannot grow anywhere else than in good as their soil . . . The truth which proceeds immediately from the Divine is called truth, but in itself it is good, because it proceeds from the Divine good ; but it is the good to which all Divine truth has been united. It is called truth, because in Heaven it appears as light . . . Consequently (this conjunction) is impossible unless the man is affected with truth for the sake of truth, especially for the sake of good, thus for the sake of life ; for then the man is in good.

—³. Further: The truth proceeding immediately from the Divine enters into the will of man : this is its way : whereas the truth which proceeds mediately from the Divine enters into the understanding of man, and therefore no conjunction can be effected unless the will and the understanding act as one ; that is to say, unless the will wills good, and the understanding confirms it through truth. When, therefore, there is the conjunction, the Lord appears as present ; and His presence is also perceived ; but when there is not this conjunction, the Lord is as if absent ; but His absence is not perceived, unless it is known from some perception what His presence is.

7068. They who are in truth are as if they were rigid, and stand erect as if they were hard, and when they have to humble themselves before the Divine, they bend the body only a little ; whereas they who are in good are as if they were soft, and when they humble themselves before the Divine, they bow themselves down to the earth. For truth without good is quite rigid ; but when it regards good as the end, the rigidity begins to soften ; whereas good in itself is soft, and the truth which is insinuated, because it becomes good there, also grows soft. The reason is, that truth cannot be ordained into the heavenly form except by good, and hence in itself it is hard . . .

7075^e. For every truth appears by relation to its opposites.

7090. Exhortation to those who are against the truths of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

—³. Those of the Church who have caused the truths of faith to be adjoined to worldly and earthly things, are let down to the Lower Earth, and are in combats there until those worldly and earthly things have been separated from the truths of faith . . .

7097^e. Lest the infernals should abuse the truths of faith, they are deprived of them, and then they eagerly seize on falsities which are entirely contrary to the truths of faith, and by means of the falsities they infest those who are in truths.

7107. The will of those who infest the truths of the Church. Sig. and Ex. . . That is, who infest those who are of the Spiritual Church ; for these are said to be in the truths of the Church.

7110. The cupidity of infesting the truths of the Church while in that state. Sig. and Ex.

7122. Lest they turn themselves to truths. Sig. and Ex.

— The reason this infestation is permitted, is that falsities may be removed, and truths insinuated. Ex.

7147. Near the end (of the infestation) truths are withdrawn from them, and mere falsities are permitted to infest them even to despair. Ex.

7162. Hence such an ardour to destroy the truths of the Church through falsities. Sig. and Ex.

7164^e. Hence there is complaint from the truth which is of the law Divine, that those in falsities have such dominion over those in truths. Sig. and Ex.

7225^e. Hence the truths of doctrine are perceived by such as impure. Sig. and Ex.

7233³. The internal sense is . . . also that sense which results from a number of passages of the sense of the letter rightly compared with each other ; and is apperceived by those who are enlightened by the Lord as to the understanding ; for an enlightened understanding discriminates between apparent truths and truths themselves, and especially between falsities and truths, although it does not judge concerning truths themselves in themselves. But the understanding cannot be enlightened unless it is believed that love to the Lord and charity towards the neighbour are the principal and essential things of the Church. He who proceeds from an acknowledgment of these, provided he himself is in them, sees innumerable truths, nay, very many arcana, disclosed to him, and this from interior acknowledgment, according to the degree of his enlightenment by the Lord.

7236³. The reason truth is so manifold and various as to be able to give so great a variety to good, is that truths are innumerable, and interior truths are in a different form from exterior ones, and also because the fallacies of the external senses adjoin themselves and also the falsities which are of concupiscences. As, therefore, truths are so innumerable, it is evident that by conjunctions so many various things come forth that one thing can never be the same as another. This is clear to him who knows that from twenty-three letters, by different conjunctions, the words of all languages can be produced, and this with perpetual variety even if there were thousands of languages. What then may not be produced from thousands and myriads of varieties, as there are of truth !

[A.] 7265. That with (the infesters) truths became falsities, and falsities truths. Sig. (by the waters being turned into blood.) 7317.

7297². 'Sorceries' = the arts of presenting truths as falsities, and falsities as truths. Ill. 7298, Ex.

7298². It is according to the laws of order that no one should be persuaded about truth in a moment, that is, that the truth should be in a moment so confirmed that no doubt is left: the reason is that the truth which is impressed in this way, becomes persuasive truth, and is devoid of any extension, and also of any yielding quality. In the other life such truth is represented as hard, and as what does not admit good into it so as to become applicable. Hence it is that as soon as any truth is presented before good Spirits by a manifest experience, there is presently presented something opposite, which causes doubt. In this way it is given them to think about it and to consider whether it is so, and to collect reasons, and thus to bring that truth into their mind rationally. By this there is effected an extension of the spiritual sight as to that truth, even to its opposites; and hence it sees and perceives with the understanding all the quality of the truth, and hence can admit influx from Heaven according to the states of the Things; for truths receive various forms according to the circumstances. This is the reason why the magicians were allowed to act in a similar way to Aaron.

7318^e. For there is not a single truth which cannot be falsified. Examps.

7319. In the other life nothing stinks more intolerably than profaned truth . . . for falsity has no smell unless it is applied to truth . . . Profaned truth is falsity conjoined with truth; and falsified truth is falsity, not conjoined, but adjoined, to truth, and ruling over truth.

7320. 'To drink' = to be instructed in truths. Refs.

— That those in falsities from fallacies want to know scarcely anything of truths, thus are averse to them; the reason of which is that the truths which are perverted by falsities still fight secretly and tacitly, and labour to shake off the falsities and thus fight; for if the falsities are removed a little . . . truths condemn. Sig. 7327.

7332. The reason (the evil) in the other life are permitted to falsify truths, is lest by the truths which are of faith they should have communication with those who are in Heaven, and by the evils which are of life, with those in Hell, and hence by truths should acquire something of light from Heaven . . . and should cause them to serve the evils which are of life . . . and also lest they should seduce simple upright Spirits, with whom they have communication through truths. Moreover the evil in the other life with whom truths have not as yet been falsified, acquire dominion by their means; for there is power in truths so great that it cannot be resisted; and in this way, also, they would abuse truths. Besides, truths with the evil have not the least effect in amending their lives; but the evil use them only as means to do evil, and without this use they utterly ridicule truths.

7342². If a man's affection is of self and the world . . . the principles of truth effect nothing; for if (that) affection dominates, it draws truth over to its own side, and so falsifies it; and, if it does not fully favour it, it rejects it. Hence it is that principles of the truth of faith have no efficacy whatever with man, unless the Lord insinuates the affection of . . . love towards the neighbour; and, in proportion as man receives this affection, in the same proportion he receives the truths of faith. (Thus) man never sets his heart to any truth if the will resists; and hence it is that the infernals . . . cannot receive the truths of faith, and consequently cannot be amended; and hence also it is, that the infernals falsify the truths of faith in so far as they can.

7343. He who is in the affection of truth, applies truths to himself according to the state and quality of the affection. He who is in the affection of falsity, when he applies truths to himself, perverts and falsifies them. Ex. Hence it is that by 'the Egyptians digging about the river' is signified the investigation of truth that they might apply it to falsities.

7344. That truths cannot be applied to mere falsities, that is, cannot be falsified by mere falsities. Sig. and Ex.

7351. Moreover, real truths reject falsification from themselves; for they cannot be together with falsities; and, so long as they are so, they fight with them, and at last loosen and separate themselves from them; and hence it is that after a man has falsified truths, he at last entirely denies them; otherwise falsities would dominate over truths. Hence it is that the evil in the other life, after they have been cast into Hell, are not allowed to reason from falsified truths, but from mere falsities. Sig.

7357^e. When the evil speak truths, the truths they so speak are falsities in them; whereas they who are in truth from good, cannot do otherwise than speak truths.

7381. The internal law ('Moses') is truth Divine itself such as is in Heaven; and the external law ('Aaron') is truth Divine such as is on earth; thus the internal law is truth accommodated to the Angels; and the external law is truth accommodated to men. . . Truth accommodated to the Angels is for the most part incomprehensible to men. Examp. This may in some measure show the nature of internal truth, or truth accommodated to the Angels, which is called the internal law; and that of external truth, or truth accommodated to men, which is called the external law; and whence it is that what the Angels speak among themselves is incomprehensible to man, and, moreover, is unutterable.

7382. The power of internal truth through external truth. Sig. and Ex.

7442². If the Sensuous is filled with phantasies from fallacies and appearances, and still more if from falsities, the truths which inflow are turned there into the like things; for they are received there according to the form which has been induced; and, in proportion as truths are turned into falsities, in the same proportion the interiors, through which the passage takes place, are closed. . . Hence it is necessary that the Natural should be regenerated down to the Sensuous. Ex.

7449. That the natural mind was corrupted as to all truth. Sig. and Ex.

7505. 'Pestilence' = the devastation of truth. Ill.

7668. That those should be left (by the infesters) who were in confirmed truths. Sig. and Ex.

7689. The evil have no truth in faith; but only the knowledge of the truth which is of faith. Some of the evil who are in the Church persuade themselves that they are in truth in faith, but they are not: they are in falsity, and are against the truth of faith . . . and this falsity manifests itself in the other life, when they are being devastated as to the truths of faith which they had known. Sig. 7691, Sig.

7735. The passionateness of anger against truth then. Sig. and Ex.

7738. The more the infernals are in falsities from evil, the more they have an aversion to truth, and so much at last that they do not want even to hear anything of truth; for truth is contrary to falsity, and falsity is pleasant to them, because evil, from which is falsity, is the delight of their life; and therefore they completely reject truth from their mind, because it is against the delight of their life; and, if they hear it, they are tortured. Sig

7780^e. As to the truths of faith which are in the first place, and those which are in the last place, it is to be known that those truths of faith which proceed immediately from the good of charity are those which are in the first place; for they are goods in form; whereas the truths which are in the last place are mere truths; for when truths are derived in succession, they recede from good in each degree, and at last become mere truths. Sig.

7790. That all truth Divine departs from those who have infested the upright when they are being condemned; for they are then in the state of their evil. Sig. . . Previously they had indeed known the truths of faith, but still had not had truths in them; for truths were then in their mouths but not in their hearts; and therefore when they have been devastated as to those truths, evil remains, and then the falsity of evil comes forth . . . for although they had professed truths, still they had not been in them, but in falsities. Nor had the very profession of truth descended from its first principle, that is, from good, but from evil; for with them it had been for the sake of gain, honours, and reputation, thus for the sake of self and the world. The truths which descend from such a first principle adhere on the surface, and, when they are being devastated, they fall off thence like scales, and leave stinking and putrid places from the falsities which there exhale from evils. Such is the lot of those who have known the truths of faith, and yet have lived contrary to them.

7838. For the truth of faith is not the truth of faith unless it is with, and especially from, the good of charity.

7839. The state is said to be full, when the good is such that there is nothing wanting for the reception of innocence: the truths of faith conjoined with the good of charity cause good to be such; for spiritual good receives its quality from the truths of faith. . . But the state is not full so long as truths have not qualified good so that it can receive the corresponding state of innocence. This state becomes full when truths are looked at from good; and it is not as yet full when good is looked at from truths. In the latter state are those being regenerated; in the former are those who have been regenerated. The former are in truth through which is good; the latter are in the truth which is from good; in other words, the former are in obedience to truth, whereas the latter are in the affection of doing truth; and therefore the former are men of the external, and the latter are men of the internal Church.

7877. What the truth of the good of innocence is. Ex. . . The truth of the good of innocence, which belongs to those in the Third Heaven, is not the truth of faith, but is the good of charity; for they do not know what faith is, thus neither what its truth is; for they are in the perception of the truth which is of faith, from which they instantly know that [the truth] is so, and they never reason about it, as to whether it is so, still less do they dispute about it. That which is in perception in this way does not fall into knowledge. It is different with the spiritual, who are in the Second Heaven: these are led by means of the truth which is of faith to the good which is of charity, and therefore they reason as to whether a thing is true or not, because they do not perceive it; hence, with them, truths become knowledge, and are called the doctrinal things of faith.

7902. The appropriation, by good, of truth purified from falsity. Sig. and Ex. . . For truth is appropriated by good; and good has its quality from truth; and therefore, in order that truth may be appropriated, it must be appropriated by good; and in order that good may be appropriated, it must be appropriated through truth.

—². As to truth purified from all falsity, it is to be known that there can be no pure truth with man, both because falsity is continually flowing forth from the evil in which he is, and because truths have a connection with each other, and therefore if there is one falsity, and still more so if there are more, all the other truths are thence defiled, and derive something from the falsity. But truth is said to be purified from falsity when the man can be kept by the Lord in the good of innocence. Ex.

7906². The purification in man of truth from falsity can never take place without a so-called fermentation, that is, without a combat of the falsity with the truth, and of the truth with the falsity. (Continued under FERMEN.)

— . While man acts from the truth of faith, his state has not yet been purified; but it has when he acts from the good of charity.

7918. 'Hyssop' = external truth which is a means of purification. Ill.

7919. The holy truth which is of the good of innocence. Sig. and Ex. 7927.

[A.] 7935. An interior perception of truth which is of conscience. Sig. and Ex.

—². The truths of the Church in which they were born . . . are seated in the interior memory as if inscribed on it, and finally like those things which have been impressed in infancy, which afterwards appear quite familiar, and as it were innate. Ex. . . This is called conscience . . . and is to be valued in proportion as the truths from which he thinks are genuine truths of faith, and as the goods from which he acts are genuine goods of charity.

7950². He who believes that they who are in evil of life can be also in enlightenment as to the truths of faith, is terribly mistaken. They can be in a state of confirmation, that is, they can confirm the doctrinal things of their Church . . . but they cannot see whether the things they confirm are truths or not. . . Therefore he who is in evil as to life is also in the falsity of his evil, and does not believe truth however much he may know it . . . That he does not believe it will be granted him to know in the other life, when his perception is reduced into accordance with his will: he will then disown, hold in aversion, and reject truth, and will acknowledge as truth what is contrary to it, that is, falsity.

7967. All truths which enter man are conjoined with some delight; for truths without delight have no life . . . If the delights are those of evil affections, the case is bad (with the truths in the man); but if the delights are those of good affections, it is well; for the Angels who are with a man are continually inflowing with good affections, and are then exciting the truths which have been conjoined with them . . . and if the truths have not been conjoined with good affections, the Angels labour in vain to excite the things which are of faith and charity. Sig.

8013². (Those in the state of regeneration) see truths, and confirm them from enlightenment; but those (in the state before regeneration) do not see truths and confirm them from enlightenment, but from a persuasion concerning the doctrinal things of their Church, that they are truths; and, as they do not see them from enlightenment, they can confirm falsities equally as well as truths; and, after they have been confirmed, they see them exactly as truths.

8063. In so far as the truth which is from good extends itself. Sig. and Ex. . . For all truth has its extension, which is sometimes manifested by a sphere; and, since it has its extension, it has its boundaries. The sphere of extension of truth is according to the quality and quantity of good; for good is like a flame, and truth is like the light. Ex. . . Falsities are outside the sphere; for they begin where truths cease . . .

8080. That the truths of faith are not to be ascribed to the Lord, but the goods of faith. Sig. and Ex.

—³. The reason the truth of faith, regarded in itself and without its good, is not to be ascribed to the Lord, that is, given Him, or acknowledged as being from Him, is that all the truth of faith has no life in it until it becomes the good of faith; and the truth of faith becomes the good of faith by willing and doing it; and when it becomes the good of faith it is acknowledged by the Lord to be His; for the Lord gives faith mediately through its good. Moreover all the truth of faith with the man of the Spiritual Church becomes the good of faith when he is being regenerated; and then for the first time it becomes the Lord's.

8087. If a truth is presented (with those not in charity), the evil of life causes it to conform itself, by a wrong application, and thus falsifies it.

8093. That it was provided by the Divine that they should not pass to truth of faith which is not from good. Sig. and Ex.

8094. Evil of life is attended with its own falsity, which lies stored up . . . but as soon as the man thinks about the truths of the Church . . . that falsity comes forth and manifests itself, and if it cannot deny the truth itself as to its general [meaning], it explains it in favour of its own evil, and thus falsifies it.

— Thus it is evident that the truths of faith are 'near,' but not the goods of faith; that is, that the former come into notice first. Sig.

8096. That they would decline from the truth through assaults. Sig. and Ex.

8148². Persuasive faith is a persuasion that all things of the doctrine of the Church are truths, not for the sake of truth, nor for the sake of life . . . but for the sake of gain, that is, for the sake of acquiring honours and wealth, and for the sake of reputation on their account . . . It is therefore all the same to them whether doctrinal things are truths or falsities . . . for they are in no affection of truth for the sake of truth; and they confirm them whatever may be their quality; and when they have confirmed them they persuade themselves that they are truths, not considering that falsities can be confirmed equally as well as truths.

8149. The doctrinal things of the Church, with those who are in evil of life, are called doctrinal things of falsity, although they may be in part, less or more, truths; the reason is, that truths with those who are in evil of life, in so far as they are concerned, are not truths; for, by application to the evil which is of life, they put off the essence of truth, and put on the nature of falsity; for they look to evil, and conjoin themselves with it; and truths cannot be conjoined with evil unless they have been falsified, which is done by means of wrong interpretations, and thus perversions. Hence it is that the doctrinal things of the Church with such people are called those of falsity, even although they are truths. For it is a canon that truths with those in evil of life are falsified; and that falsities with those in good of life are made true—verificentur. The reason why falsities are made true with the latter, is that they are applied in such a way as to be in accord with good . . . 8311, Examp.

8179². This combat (of temptation) is carried on by means of the truths of faith: these afford assistance, because they confirm goods and truths against falsities and evils.

8307². The Lord gives man the faculty of understanding truth; but the reason he does not understand it, is that he does not want to understand it, and this on account of the evil which is of life; for falsity defends evil, and truth condemns it.

8313⁴. For in the other life everyone retains the principles of his faith . . . and none change them into truths except those who have been in the good of life; for good longs for truth and receives it willingly, because it is homogeneous with it. But those who have been in evil of life . . . are as were it hard, and reject truths, and besides they are in obscurity, so that they even cannot see them: they see only the things which are confirmatory of their principles, and not one whit what is contrary to them.

8330. The Heaven in which are those who are in the truth of faith from the Lord. Sig. and Ex. . . This is the Heaven in which are the exterior Angels of the Spiritual Kingdom, who do what is good from obedience.

8347. That truths failed, and at last entirely. Sig. and Ex.

8349. That truths appeared undelightful to them, because they were devoid of the affection of good. Sig. and Ex.

8352. That they cannot endure truths, because they are undelightful from there being no affection for them. Sig. and Ex. . . This temptation consists in their complaining and suffering because the truths which had previously been delightful to them, and which had thereby constituted their spiritual life or life of Heaven, now appear undelightful to them, so much so that they can scarcely endure them. The merely natural man would believe that such a thing could not cause any suffering; for he thinks, What does it matter to me whether truths are delightful or undelightful? if they are undelightful, let them be rejected. But the spiritual man thinks very differently: it is the delight of his life to be instructed in truths . . . and therefore when they fail, his spiritual life labours and suffers. Ex.

—³. In the temptation which exists through a deficiency of truth . . . it is as if there were a deficiency of spiritual drink, causing suffering like that from thirst.

8357. The truth of order then revealed. Sig. and Ex. . . For 'a statute'=the external truth of the Church; and 'a judgment'=the internal truth of the Church; hence 'to set for anyone a statute and a judgment'=to ordinate according to truths, consequently to reveal them.

8362. A life according to the goods of faith (that is, according to those) truths of faith which are the interior truths of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

8363. A life according to those truths of faith which are the exterior truths of the Church. Sig. and Ex.

8364⁵. 'Leprosy'=the profanation of truth.

8367. For after every spiritual temptation there come . . . pleasantness from enlightenment through truth, and delight from the affection of good. Sig.

8368. That they had truths in all abundance there. Sig. and Ex.

8370. That after temptation the truths of faith were arranged in order through the good of love. Sig. and Ex.

—². Hence, when the Angels are presented to view, a sphere of the good of love pours out from them . . . and the truths of faith shine forth from their faces.

8408^e. 'Meal'=truth from the Word, whereby this falsified thing, called 'death in the pot,' becomes good.

8426². When it is noon (there) they are in light or in truth; but when it is evening they are in obscurity as to truths . . .

8427³. For the Lord is present in the truth which is from Him.

8441. For the Divine influx with man is into the truth in which he has been instructed. Sig.

8443. The presence of the Lord in truth accommodated to apprehension. Sig. and Ex. . . The Word in the letter is such truth. Ex.

8455. The truth of peace adjoining itself. Sig. and Ex. . . This truth, which is called the truth of peace, is the Divine truth itself in Heaven from the Lord, which universally affects all who are there, and makes Heaven to be Heaven. Ex.

8456. The insinuation of truth. Sig. and Ex. . . For the truth of peace . . . being inmost, insinuates itself into the truth which is beneath, and vivifies it, as the dew does the grass . . . and when the truth which is beneath has been vivified by it, then the truth of peace 'goes up,' that is, as to the appearance, ceases; and the truth which has received life from it comes into view; and thus is born the truth of faith. For no truth of doctrine or of the Word becomes truth with man, until it has received life from the Divine; and it receives life by means of the insinuation of the truth which proceeds from the Lord, which is called the truth of peace. This truth is not the truth of faith, but is the life or soul of the truth of faith, and it disposes all things which are in the truth which is called the truth of faith into a heavenly form; and also, afterwards, the truths themselves among each other. . . Moreover the more exterior things with a man who is being regenerated, receive life from the more interior ones in succession; thus the truth of faith from the truth of peace; and this from the Lord Himself.

8457. A new Voluntary through the insinuation of truth. Sig. and Ex.

8458. 'Small' is predicated of truth.

—². Truth—verum—is presented there in a distinct quantity, thus as much, or little, according to the quality of the truth: truth is also presented as angular in various forms; and also as white.

[A.] 8459. Truth—verum—in the form of good holding together and flowing. Sig. and Ex.

— 'Snow,' from being small and white, is predicated of truth; but 'hoar-frost,' from being continuous, is predicated of truth made good, which is the good of truth. Ill.

8468². 'A homer' is predicated of good, because it is a measure of wheat and barley . . . and 'a bath,' of truth, because it is a measure of wine and oil. Ex. and Ill.

8491. Reflection from primary truths. Sig. and Ex.

8496. Preparation for the conjunction of truth. Sig.

8510. He who acts from the truth which is of faith is not yet in the order of Heaven; but he who acts from the good which is of charity is in that order. Ex.

8516. That therefore up to the end of the prior state (of regeneration) the Lord gives so much of good by means of truth as that conjunction may be afterwards effected. Sig. and Ex.

— 'The Sabbath' = the conjunction of good and truth, and by the manna not being found on the seventh day, is signified that when a man is in this conjunction, he acts from good, and no longer from truth, and also that he ought not to act any longer from truth. To explain this further: Everyone ought to be led to Christian good, which is called charity, by means of the truth of faith; for the truth of faith must teach what charity is. Ex. . . (But still) truths do not enter into good from themselves; but good adopts truths, and adjoins them to itself; for the truths of faith lie in the memory as in a field extended beneath the interior sight; and the good from the Lord inflows through that sight, and chooses from those truths and conjoins with itself those which are in agreement with it. The truths which lie beneath cannot inflow into the good which is above. Ex.

—³. (Thus) when a man has been regenerated, he must act from good, and not from truth; that is, he must be led by the Lord by means of good, and no longer by means of truth; for he is then in charity, that is, in the affection of doing that good. All in Heaven are led in this way, for this way is according to Divine order, and therefore all things they think and do, flow as it were spontaneously and from freedom. It would be quite different if they were to think and act from truth; for then they would be thinking whether they ought to act in this way or that way, and so would stick fast in everything, and would thereby obscure the light which they have, and at last would act according to what they themselves love, and thus according to an influx from those things which favour their loves, which is to be led by self and not by the Lord. This shows what is meant by its being said that good must no longer be acquired through truth.

8517. When man is in a state of peace, he is led by the Lord through good; and if he were then to lead himself, even through truth, he would dissipate the state of peace, and consequently there would be no conjunction. Sig.

8521. That the truth therein was pure. Sig. and Ex.

—². The good of truth, with those in the Spiritual

Kingdom, is implanted in the intellectual part; for in this part a new will is formed by the Lord, which is that the man wills to do according to the truth which he has imbibed from the doctrine of his Church; and, when he wills and does this truth, it becomes good with him, and is called spiritual good, and also the good of truth. That this is truly truth, he indeed believes, because he has faith in his doctrine, but he has no perception whether it is truth, except that he seems to himself to have it from his having confirmed it with himself, partly from the sense of the letter of the Word, and partly from the fallacies of the ideas which favour the opinions he has received . . . From this it is evident what is the quality of the truth which is turned into good with many who are of the Church. Of these no others can see whether the doctrine of their Church is truth except those who are in the affection of truth for the sake of the uses of life: they who have this end in view are continually enlightened by the Lord, not only while they live in the world, but also afterwards; it is only these who can receive it, for the Lord leads them by means of good, and thereby gives them to see truth, and thus to believe. From this it is evident whence and of what quality is the good possessed by those who belong to the Lord's Spiritual Kingdom. But the good possessed by those who belong to the Lord's Celestial Kingdom is implanted . . . in the voluntary part; and they who are in this good, from internal perception which is from the Lord, know whether [anything] is truth.

8522². Spiritual good is here described . . . that in its first origin it is truth, and that it becomes good by its coming into act from the will . . . for whatever a man wills from affection, he perceives as good; but this good can come into existence only by means of the delights which belong to the natural man. Sig. and Ex.

8529. For the Divine influx takes place through the truth which proceeds immediately from the Lord, into the truth which proceeds mediately. Sig.

8530–8533. (That the truth which has in it all the good it can hold, is in the Divine presence, and is to be the standard measure for those of the Spiritual Church.) Sig. and Ex.

8530. That truths are vessels which contain good, may be illustrated by various things in nature, as by light which contains the heat of the sun . . . and so are related a garment to the body, and the body to the soul; and also a blood-vessel and a fibre to the enclosed blood and animal spirit; and the lungs to the heart, consequently the respiration to the pulsation; in a word, every organic form of the body to the life which is in it. From these comparatives it may be evident what is the quality of truth without good . . .

8541. (The Lord instructs the inhabitants of Jupiter) concerning Truth. . . And it seems to them that they have doctrine inscribed on their minds . . . because they at once perceive and acknowledge, as from themselves, whether anything is truth or not which is said by others about the life of Heaven with man.

8554. In Ex. xvii. it treats of the fourth temptation, in that truth was lacking . . . and therefore the truth of faith was given by the Lord, which is signified by water from the rock of Horeb. 8562.

8557. That spiritual life grows by temptations, is because the truths which are of faith are confirmed by them, and are conjoined with the good which is of charity.

8561. The orderly arrangement of the interiors to undergo temptation as to truth. Sig. and Ex.

8564. An ardent longing for truth. Sig. and Ex.

8568. An increase of the longing for truth. Sig. and Ex.

8578. (To teach and lead them) from primary truths. Sig. and Ex. 8585.

8581. The Lord as to the truths of faith. Sig. and Ex.

8583. That the truths of faith are from Him. Sig. and Ex.

8585. For faith is given through primary truths, for enlightenment is effected from them, so that the truths which flow from them, and which are called secondary truths, are clearly perceived.
